Mr. Higinbotham continued his remarks by stating that the reductions made were nowhere near what had been asked. Some of the ratepayers, he said, had advocated the abolition of the manual training school, and the firing of the superintendent and the secretary. One man, a lawyer, had gone so far as to advocate the doing away with the high school, giving as his reason, "where will we get our servants if everyone is given higher education?" The reductions were made, he said, very reluctantly, and every member was extremely sorry that the action was necesary.

The mater closed here and the report of the management committee was adopted.

$75,000 IN SHORT TERM DEBENTURES

Seventy-five thousand dollars worth of the city's short term debentures have been sold. Practically all have been purchased by residents of the city.

ASSESSMENT IS DISCUSSED BY MERCHANTS

Retailers Want Rigid Enforcement of Transient Traders Bylaw

A large representative meeting of the merchants of George Street and throughout the city was present at the Y.M.C.A. last night to discuss the present high assessment of merchants of George Street, who see ahead of them a third or more on their tax bill.

After discussing this matter the merchants appointed the executive of the Retail Merchants' Association to act in the matter.

If the increased taxation is general and not limited to the George Street merchants less opposition will be put up by them, and in all probability the tax rate will stand as it is. The present year is not by any means a normal business year, conditions before the war broke out were not any too good, but since the outbreak of the war, business has not been anywhere near its normal stand and this, coupled with an increased tax rate, makes the merchants rather resentful.

The matter of the council lowering the transient traders' fee from $100 was also discussed. The merchants do not look with disfavor upon local people starting in business but have a just fear, in the event of the rate being lowered, of incoming transient traders. It was agreed that the Chief of Police should rigidly enforce the by-law.

LINDSAY WANTS BRAND NEW G.T.R. STATION BUILT

The Best None Too Good Considering the Town's Importance

Lindsay town council (and that means the citizens as a whole) wants a new G. T. R. station to replace the present structure, which was practically gutted by fire on Monday. The question was introduced in the council meeting last night, and it was felt that a town of such importance as Lindsay, and also in view of its importance as a railway centre, that a modern and up-to-date station should be erected.

On motion of Ald. Baker and Deputy-Reeve Smale, the following resolution was passed: "That in view of the recent fire at the G. T. R. station at Lindsay, and in view also of the great importance of said company's business at Lindsay, and the disposition of the town at all times to co-operate with the said company in all matters in which the town and company are mutually interested, that this council hereby memorialize the company to provide a new station that will more adequately provide for their business at this point."

A copy of this resolution will be handed to Trainmaster J. D. MacMillan, with a request that it be forwarded to District Superintendent Coyle.—Lindsay Warder.

BIG CROWD AT PICNIC HELD BY FATHER McGUIRE

Father McGuire's picnic at Hurlihey's Grove at Downeyville yesterday was a splendid success. The weather was ideal and the crowd exceedingly large. Although the sum realized is not at present known it is sure to be away above anticipations. Among those present were, His Lordship Bishop O'Brien, D.D., Dean McColl, Rev. Father J. J. O'Brien, Rev. Father Fitzpatrick, Rev. Father McAuley, and Rev. Father Cote,

CHECKS BEING SENT OUT TO THE WIVES OF SOLDIERS

Checks for $20 are being sent out by the Paymaster-General of the Militia Department at Ottawa to the wives of all the Canadian soldiers now at Valcartier. This is the first of the monthly allowances decreed by the order-in-Council of September 4th.

The Imperial Pension Office at Ottawa has charge of the distribution of allowances to the reservists. For a wife and three children, as an example, $17.10 is paid out monthly. From the French Consul-General at Montreal each French reservist's wife is receiving 25 cents a day for herself and 10 cents a day for each child.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

THE NECESSITY OF WAR.

Editor of The Review:

Will you kindly give space to the following:

In Plato's "Republic" an account is given of the development of a state which from the simple beginning of the husbandman and then on to mechanics, sailors, shop-keepers, cooks, confectioners, physicians, financiers, etc., gradually evolves into a well-ordered system of business. The pre-eminent feature of order (civilization) is expansion of population, notwithstanding the case of France. Expansion of population ultimately means coming in conflict with those already in possession of homes and estates of their own. This means war. The increase of population must always ultimately and logically mean war, thus following the analogy of Nature where expansion is limited only by the expansion of others, resulting in a state of what is known to us as war. There is nothing in the heavens above or in the earth beneath to indicate that peace and meekness are the order of the Universe. The doctrine of Malthus is incontrovertible. It is true that he intended it to apply simply to the statement that population tends to increase at a greater rate than the means of existence, but even if this difficulty be met, there is the other insuperable difficulty, namely, that the earth is limited. If the tendency to indefinite expansion of population exists, the time must come when the earth will not be able to sustain its tremendous population, in which event the difficulty can only be corrected by war, a common, cruel war of extermination. We may preach and we may pray, but there is no way out of this difficulty, and those who deny the doctrine of Nietsche are, nevertheless, up against an equally simple proposition which they profess to be able to solve, but which no one can solve except by the cruel method of war. Such then being the ultimate object or condition of humanity, and necessarily so, what must we say? We must either say that it is proper or improper. If we say that it is improper, we presume to criticize the Creator. If we say that it is proper, we endorse war, that very war, that very system of strife which we so illogically condemn from day to day without, as we see, knowing really why. The wise man, therefore, in the last analysis, will prepare to overcome his fellow. The strong and the fit will survive. The principle of Christianity that the weak should be even more carefully looked after than the strong is a very plain fallacy to those who look facts fairly in the face. It is surely time that we give up theories and idealisms which have no warrant whatever in fact. Humanity would work itself back to the condition from which it sprang, that is, to being a little better than, yet upon the same plane as, the lion and the tiger. Facts decree that Man is just that and nothing more, in a word, that he is simply the noblest animal of them all. It is difficult to confute this statement, and except by importing into the matter the miraculous, it is indeed impossible. If, therefore, we follow the tendency of the time and exclude the objective miraculous or the plain intervention of Providence we are up against naturalism pure and simple. Which, then, shall it be —war, as it is, or a seemingly vain and impossible philosophy of peace?

Thanking you for space in your valuable paper, I am,

Yours,

THE SLAVES OF THE LAMP.

Editor Review,

Sir,—People have two kinds of relation, their relation to other people in a national or public way and their private relation. As an example of the latter let us take the choosing of a bride or groom. That is a private matter, yet even here public policy demands interference sometimes. But the moment our relations "with others" that is in a general unnamed public way arise then the committee appointed by the State, known, as Parliament, steps in and makes regulations called laws. This principle of State Control is admitted. How far should that principle be extended ? That is the question. Manifestly just so far as "the people" say. True, but we are now conducting a supposed inquiry into how far the people should "say." That is to say, "How far should the people as a unified or corporate body go in their dealings with the people as individuals ?" Evidently so far as to bring order out of chaos and justice out of injustice. Surely it is not improper for a people to put its activities whether of a benevolent or business character on scientific and sensible basis. The right of eminent domain or supreme power existing in parliament to the end that the latter may act for the welfare of the people as a whole is not modern. It is an ancient, but little used or rather little appreciated power. In a word the guiding power of a people in all its affairs is acknowledged. Then why do we not get more of it ? That we do not get more of it is the fault of the people themselves. Who is it that profits by the disordered conditions of human affairs, considered in all their relations with each other ? Those who so profit seek to maintain them. Permit me to say further that those people who deliberately permit the continuance of the rule of greed and chaos are the most guilty ones. There is no party politics in it. The needy ones use their politics to help each other when the chance comes, to fleece the people. The people like lambs present themselves for the fleecing. It is high time that the money interests ceased to rule and to put their spies in the ranks of all parties for that purpose. Naturally in the case of labor the employers and the employees are rivals. The mutual affairs of these two however, are easily settled. It is Money that is behind all and over all, that has no gods but money, that sacrifices to its own greed, parties, politics, labour, the bourgeois and the wage-earner alike. Money is the autocrat and unscrupulous tyrant by which all that we love, cherish and hope for is trampled under foot—not wholly, since the earning power must remain — the slave survive — but largely so largely, in a word, as is possible. He who invented a sole medium of exchange and therefore of control must have been a devil. We are the slaves of the lamp

SOLDIERS OF THE KING

The 57th Regiment held their weekly drill last evening, with a large turnout, there being 235 men in uniform. The volunteers are looking ahead with great expectation as the winter draws near. They will have an interesting season of indoor sports, and the armouries will be a very popular place.

Orders were read as follows :

Headquarters, Peterboro, Sept. 15.

Orders by the officer commanding 57th Regiment, Peterborough Rangers :

1. The following are taken on the strength of the regiment from Sept. 10, 1914 :

A Co.—Pte. I Wedlock.

C Co. — Ptes. J. Raybould, J. Smith and W. J. Gash.

D Co—Ptes. W. Theobald, C. McGrath and W. Crouter.

E Co—Pte. R. Lindsey.

G Co.—Pte. J. E. Munro.

2. Leave of absence from parade is hereby granted to Captains McLean and Loch.

3. All rifles and sidearms not already in the armouries must be turned in immediately.

4. The commanding officer has been pleased to make the following promotions :

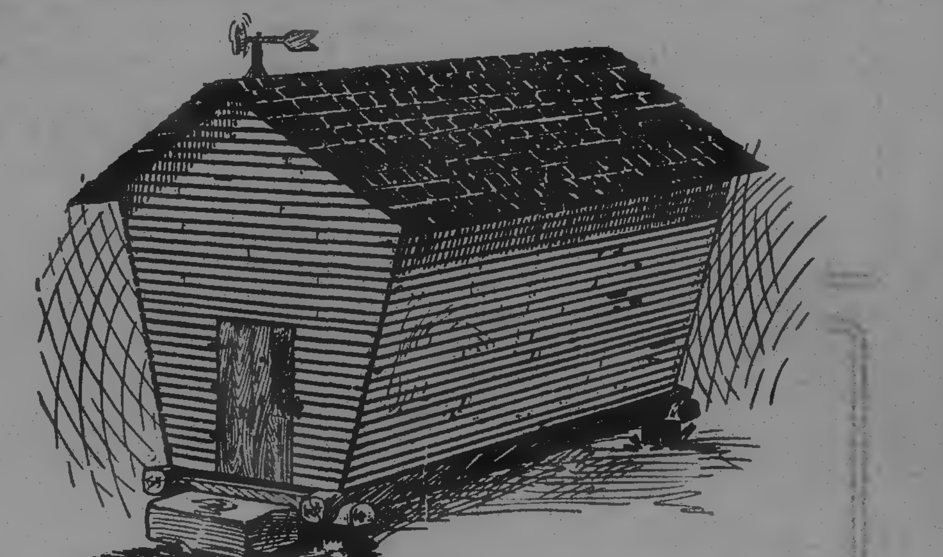
A Co—To be sergeant provisionally, Corp. George McGreggor, vice Sergt. Brown.

To be corporals, provisionally—Ptes. G. Hawkins, A. Wagstaff and O. White.

By order,
D. WALKER, Major,
Adjutant.

MISSION CIRCLE RALLY TO-NIGHT

The Ladies' Mission Circle of Murray St. Church is holding its annual rally tonight. Rev. Harry Stillwell of India, will deliver the address and Mr. M. H. Park will sing. Refreshments will be served at the close. The offering taken will be devoted to missionary purposes. For the information of those enquiring we are asked to say that the meeting is open to the public and that Mr. Stillwell has consented to relate some of the experiences among the Telegus which were so interesting to those who heard them at the associational gathering at Picton in June.



True Toasted Corn

is as different from commonplace corn flakes, as succulent green sweet corn is different from the hard, flinty, yellow grain of the farmer's corn crib.

In spite of the numerous "corn flakes" marketed, few persons really know the rich sweetness of choice corn when skilfully cooked, flavored and toasted.

This true toasted corn—distinctive in its rich, rare flavor—is called

Post Toasties

A call for "corn flakes" often brings some one of the many brands of ordinary flakes. To avoid disappointment ask for, and insist upon Post Toasties

This food can be distinguished by the original yellow package; by the rich, true corn flavour imprisoned in the making; and by the size and tender crispness of the golden brown flakes.

Toasties are ready to serve hot or cold, with cream or good milk—also with fresh fruit in season. A further delicate flavour may be released by heating a few minutes in oven before serving. And it's a flavour worth knowing!

Stories of Fighting From Battlefields

ONE OF THE CROWNING CATASTROPHES OF THE WORLD.

LONDON. — The Times correspondent, from a point near Melun, on Sunday, wires a vivid description of the rout and retreat of the Germans during a hurricane and torrents of rain, which turned the roads into riverways so that the wheels of the artillery sank deep in the mire. He described how the horses strained and struggled, often in vain, to drag the guns away, and continues:

"I have just spoken with a soldier who has returned wounded from the pursuit that will go down with the terrible retreat from Moscow as one of the crowning catastrophes of the world. They fled, he declares, as animals flee who are cornered and know it.

"Imagine a roadway littered with guns, knapsacks, cartridge belts, maxims, and heavy cannon even. There were miles and miles of it, and the dead, those piles of horses and those stacks of men. I have seen it again and again, men shot so close to one another that they remained standing after death. The sight is terrible and horrible beyond words.

"The retreat rolls back, and trainload after trainload of British and French are swept towards the weak points of the retreating host. This is the advantage of the battleground which the allies have chosen. The network of railways is like a network of spider's web. As all railways centre upon Paris, it is possible to thrust troops upon the foe at any point with almost incredible speed, and food and munitions are within arm's reach."

JOINT MISTAKE OF AUSTRO-GERMAN STRATEGY.

PETROGRAD, via London. — Col. Shumsky, the military correspondent of the Bourse Gazette, in a long criticism of what he terms the joint mistake of Austro-German strategy, the effects of which, he says, are now being revealed on both fronts, considers that the Galician victory was obtained at an opportune moment, and that the transfer of German troops from the western to the eastern frontier has not yet attained its object.

He says it is fair to conclude that the Russian successes on the Austrian front and the Russian movement in East Prussia were the primary causes of the victories of the Anglo-French army. The shocks administered by the Russian army, he declares, have been so powerful that the Germans were obliged to recall a portion of their troops from France, thereby facilitating the French task.

Col. Shumsky thinks the Germans will attempt to seek consolation in a useless blow which they are striving to deliver in East Prussia, where there are no serious military objectives for decisive operations. He says that German strategy is revealing symptoms of a strange anaemia which has always had a fatal issue. The German fleet hitherto has distinguished itself in empty places where there was nothing to fight, and the army in East Prussia, he says, is now engaged in a similar operation.

AUSTRIAN OFFICER SUICIDES WHEN RUSSIANS TAKE STANDARDS.

LONDON. — A despatch to the Chronicle from Petrograd says: "The fiercest fighting of all that preceded the Russian victory at Lublin was in a gorge near the village of Mikolaiff, which the Russian soldiers reverently named the 'Valley of Death.'

"The gorge was full of dead men, lying in heaps, according to a soldier who reached here. 'When we attacked at three o'clock in the morning,' he said, 'the gorge contained fifteen thousand Austrians, a large proportion of whom were mowed down by the artillery fire which ploughed through the valley in the darkness.

"'The Austrians surrendered, and we entered the gorge to receive their arms, while their general stood quietly on a hill watching the scene. Eight of his standards being turned over to the Russians was more than he could bear, for he drew a pistol and shot himself.'"

GERMANS FLED AS ANIMALS FLEE IN FRIGHT.

LONDON. — A correspondet of the Chronicle wiring from Flamboin, behind the allies' lines, under Friday's date, quotes a British officer's description of the fighting along the River Ourcq:

'Early on Sunday, Sept. 6th, Germans approached in considerable numbers, with the apparent intention of outflanking us, for they poured in on our extreme left. 'Hold the position,' was the order we received, and I can tell you it was just the order we wished, for how they swarmed towards our position! Wave after wave approached, turned, slowed down, and fell away before the hurricane of lead with which we greeted them.

"God, but thy were brave! One can't deny them that tribute. But their artillery for once did not seem to be as effective as usual, and their rifle fire was strangely erratic.

"German soldiers, by the way, do not aim at all times. They come near enough to allow us to see through our glasses the curious methods of the German rifleman. They do not put their rifles to their shoulders and take aim. They put the butt of the rifles under their arms and simply fire away, trusting to the effectiveness of volleys. In the evening we received reinforcements from the dirction of Meaux, and as darkness fell we had pushed back for the time being the forces which had been thrown against us."

Another officer, who was also wounded in the fighting somewhat further from the extreme left near La Ferte-Gaucher said that the general engagement there was an extremely hot one. It went on with varying results during the whole of Sunday night, but the most severe fighting took place on Monday morning.

"Then," he said, "the enemy's resistance collapsed in a strangely sudden manner. Just as we began to advance I was knocked down, but I am told we advanced something like twenty miles, driving an enemy before us which did not put up even a show of fight. They seldom turned even to treat us to a volley. It looked as though they had sudenly run completely out of ammunition."

I must pay a tribute to the high excellence of the French army medical service. The wounded are gathered with extraordinary rapidity from the field, and, in spite of the great number of wounded, it is seldom that a soldier has to wait long for first aid, and in trains of men I saw fresh from the battlefield, every wounded man without exception had been properly bandaged and was being well cared for.

At all the stations were great stores of provisions of all sorts. Cigarettes are distributed. People are ready with postcards for sending messages to relatives and friends of the wounded. The whole system is a magnificent piece of organization.

ARE RUSHED TO PRUSSIA

Entire Fighting Force of Russia Goes to Meet Germans.

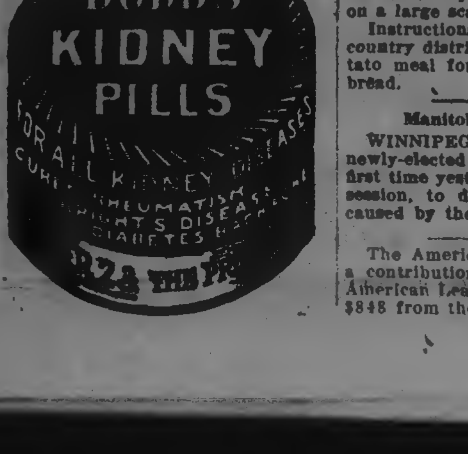
PETROGRAD, Sept. 16.—The entire fighting strength of the Russian army, with the exception of the proportionately small forces now operating in Galicia, is being rushed to the East Prussian border as fast as it is mobolized.

The entire Russian field army, of the first and third line of troops, will be devoted to the invasion of Germany. The Czar has declared that he will ride into Berlin at the head of his troops.

The Germans are centering their forces in East Prussia, while across the border the Russian soldiers are massing to resist them.

The Russians are now besieging Koenigsberg, but are sending all the new troops that are raised further to the south, where their left flank is operating toward Breslau.

The main advance will be directed through Silesia, where it will be free from danger of harrassment from any Austrian force.



RUSSIAN ARMY DRIVES AUSTRIANS ACROSS RIVER

Russians Also Operating in Bukowina District

LONDON, Sept. 16.—The Russians are said to be continuing their successes in Galicia and Poland. The armies of Gen. Dankl, which had the support of some German divisions, have been driven back across the frontier, which they crossed while the Russians were advancing on Lemberg, and are now, according to Petrograd reports, in the angle between the Rivers San and Vistula, a trap into which Russian troops had been trying for some days to drive them. Their flanks are supported by the fortresses of Cracow and Przemysl.

Przemysl is being approached by the Russian army which captured Lemberg, and which will now operate against the right wing of Gens. Dankl and Von Auffenberg. Meanwhile the Russian army is free to move westerly toward Thorn, Prussia, a town of some 27,000 inhabitants, on the right bank of the Vistula, 26 miles southeast of Bromberg, and Gen. Rennenkampf can look for reinforcements for his army, which had to fall back with the German advance in East Prussia.

The Russians won their victory in Galicia and Poland not only because they had a superior force, but because, according to correspondents, their artillery was superior to that of the Austrians and the Germans.

Petrograd hopes that when Gen. Rennenkampf gets his reinforcements he will be able, to defeat the Germans.

The Servians and Montenegrins, according to a Rome despatch, after the capture of Visbegrad, Bosnia, by the Servians, and of Fatcha, Bosnia, by the Montenegrins, joined forces and are now advancing along the entire front. All these troops are veterans with long fighting experience, and are expected to give a good account of themselves.

Besides invading Galicia, the Russians are now said to be operating extensively in Bukowina, the chief town of which is Czernawitz, they occupied some weeks ago. It is thought to be the intention of the Russians to go as far as possible south of the Carpathian Mountains, and, in case the allies are successful, to demand a new frontier in that direction when the war is over.

The Russian general staff has said nothing, except that the Russians were compelled to withdraw before superior forces. The Germans, however, claim another big victory for Gen. Hindenberg's army in the fighting which raged for four days over the entire front. They say that the Russians lost heavily, especially at the battle of Lyck, nine miles north of the Russian frontier, while the German losses were inconsiderable.

A Petrograd despatch to Reuter's says:

As an instance of Polish solidarity with Russia it is noteworthy that youths of Polish aristocracy have raised a troop consisting of themselves and their retainers. This body is now attached to one of the Russian guard regiments, with which it is fighting side by side.

The Novoe Vremya warns the public that great trials and further sacrifices are probably in store, but says that troops, flushed with victory, are coming from Galicia, and the allies are far from dosing as shown in all the despatches.

Lull In East Prussia.

PARIS, Sept. 16.—The Russian official statement issued at Petrograd and transmitted to the Havre Agency says:

"No fighting occurred in East Prussia to-day. Our troops extricated themselves from a difficult position and are now awaiting further movements.

"The preliminary engagements have cost the Germans dearly. They threatened to turn the Russian wings, but the covering troops drove them off."

BRITISH GENERAL KILLED IN ACTION

LONDON, Sept. 16. — Brig.-Gen. Neil Douglass Findlay, Royal Artillery, has been killed in action, according to an official announcement made last night.

Brig.-Gen. Findlay, created a Commander of the Bath in 1905, commanded the first division, Royal Artillery, since 1910. He was born at Easterhill, Lancashire, in 1859. He entered the army in 1878, and became captain in 1887, major in 1896 and lieutenant-colonel in 1900. He served at Hazara in 1888 and was mentioned in the despatches, and he also served in South Africa in 1899 and 1900, when he was twice mentioned in the despatches. He had conferred upon him at that time the Queen's medal, with six clasps.

German Grain Crop Short.

LONDON, Sept. 16.—A special to The Daily News from Rotterdam says that the German Minister of Agriculture has issued a circular declaring that the cereal crop is not so good as expected, ordering the manufacture of alcohol cut down 40 per cent., and recommending that farmers conserve the food supply by drying potatoes on a large scale.

Instructions are being given in the country districts as to the use of potato meal for the manufacture of bread.

Manitoba House Meets.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 16.—Manitoba's newly-elected Legislature met for the first time yesterday, in an emergency session, to deal with the situation caused by the war.

The American Red Cross received a contribution of $1,200 from the American League Baseball clubs, and $848 from the National League.

LATEST NEWS PARAGRAPHED

The Wabash station at Tillsonburg caught fire from sparks flying from west bound train No. 5 at 11 a.m. yesterday. The building was destroyed.

With maps of Petawawa Camp and surrounding district in his possession, a German spy was arrested at Morrisburg yesterday while heading for the United States and was captured.

Fenwick W. Parker, formerly one of Canada's best amateur skaters, holding the international amateur championship for the mile, died yesterday in St. John, N.B., aged 32 years.

Among the gifts yesterday to the Montreal branch of the Canadian Patriotic Fund was $6,000, subscribed by three Germans, who said they were German by name, but British at heart.

The Japanese Government yesterday ordered The Herald, a German controlled newspaper published at Yokohama, and The Deutsche Japan Post, a German news agency, to cease publication.

Lord Robert Edward Innes Ker, of the Grenadier Guards, who previously had been reported as missing after the fighting to the east of Paris, is safe in a Paris hospital. He was wounded in the legs.

A bylaw to grant a franchise for 20 years to the Cornwall Street Railway, Light & Power Co., will be voted on by the ratepayers on Oct. 14.

That St. John, N.B., is to be strongly fortified is the report current in that city.

Oklahoma's coal output for the year ending June 30 was 3,685,806 tons, a decrease of 112,093 tons over last year.

SERVIANS IN HUNGARY

Austrians Busy Entrenching the Strategic Points on the Road to Budapest.

LONDON, Sept. 16.—According to a statement issued here yesterday by the Servian Legation, there are now in Hungary at least 150,000 Servian troops, successfully pushing an offensive movement against the forces of the dual monarchy.

The Austrians are entrenching at all strategic points on all the roads leading to Budapest. A large Servian army is marching toward Frushkagora, a position of great importance, the purpose being to render secure the Servian left flank. Continuing, the Legation declares that in Bosnia the Servians are besieging Vishnegrad, and that their advance line is nearing Sarayevo, which is strongly fortified, and where desperate fighting is expected.

The prediction is made that a junction soon will be effected with a Russian army sweeping to the westward.

Austrians Repulsed.

ROME, Sept. 16.—(Via Paris.)—A despatch received here from San Giovanni, Albania, says the Montenegrin troops have joined the Servians and, fighting under Servian generals, headed by Gen. Vukotich, have repulsed the Austrians all along the Bosnian frontier.

There was fighting Saturday, Sunday and Monday, the despatch continues, "and the Servians are now pursuing the enemy. The Austrian casualties amounted to 4,000. Seven hundred men were taken prisoners and another 500 men of Slav nationality, including several officers, deserted the Austrians, and, with their arms and ammunition, joined the Servians."

Enemy Dreads Bayonet Charge.

NISH, Servia, Sept. 16.—An official announcement, giving an account of the fighting on Sept. 8th and 9th in the angle formed by the confluence of the Drina and Save rivers, says:

"All attempts of the Austrians to cross the Drina at other points failed, the enemy being repelled in disorder. The Austrians sustained enormous losses, and their troops could not stand our bayonet charges. The 7th and 9th Austrian regiments alone lost 3,000 men. Many bodies are being carried along the current of the Save. Along the entire front the Austrian casualties were 10,000 men.

ITALY AND ROUMANIA

Common Action Against Austria Will be Discussed at Rome.

ROME, Sept. 16.—(Via Paris.)—It is stated here that Roumania is making advances to Italy for common action towards Austria, and that Roumanian politicians are expected to arrive here shortly to arrange a concrete understanding between the two countries.

The Radical party yesterday passed a resolution of sympathy with Roumania, and expressed the hope that Italy and Roumania would proceed together "for the triumphs of Latin civilization."

The Radicals also passed another resolution, in which it was stated that it was hoped the Italian Government would consider the questions whether the moment had arrived to change its policy of neutrality to one of actual participation in the European conflict.

The anarchists, at a meeting, voted to stand with the French, British, Russian, Belgian and Servian peoples in the controversy, and to oppose the Italian Government's neutral position.

Col. Von Reuter Killed.

ROTTERDAM, Sept. 16. — (Via London.)—A special to The Rotterdam Courant announces that Col. von Reuter, widely known through the part he played in the Sabern affair, was recently killed in action. The Russian Gen. Kaulbars, according to the Sofia newspaper Outro, has been executed at Odessa on a charge of espionage.

Cape British Capture Germans.

LONDON, Sept. 16. — A despatch from Cape Town to Reuter's Telegram Co. says that the Fourth South African Mounted Rifles commanded by Col. Daetson, after two night marches, surprised the German force which had occupied a drift 60 miles from Steinkopf, in the Namaqua Land. After a sharp skirmish the Germans were compelled to surrender.

Another Cape Town despatch reports that the action took place at Raman's Drift, an important strategic position.

The Steinkopf country is about 60 miles from the Atlantic coast, and perhaps a little farther away from the Orange river, on the north side of which is German West Africa. It is mostly unsettled country.

U. S. Troops To Leave Mexico.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—American troops have been ordered withdrawn from Vera Cruz.

The following statement was given out at the White House yesterday afternoon:

"The troops have been ordered withdrawn from Vera Cruz. This action is taken in view of the entire removal of the circumstances which were thought to justify the occupation. The further presence of the troops is deemed unnecessary."

COMMENT

As You Like It

It is generally rumored around the big league centres that squeaky-voiced Dunn of the Baltimore International League team is to succeed Frank Chance as pilot of the Yankees. Our fellow sufferer, Charlie Good, on the News once again comes through with a slam at the man who is steadily climbing the ladder. In the column, which is taken up mostly by a cut of genial Charlie, the following appeared last evening:—

"The Baltimore owner is now spoken of as the likely successor of Frank Chance as manager of the New York Yankees, a $20,000 job, and they say that "virtue is its own reward." Baseball does not owe Dunn anything, least of all organized baseball. It was not his fault that the International League did not go up with a large bang in the middle of the season. Mr. Dunn did all in his power to wreck the league when the Feds began to press him a little hard at Baltimore, by selling all his star players, and though the organization weathered the storm, the majority of the clubs will be heavy losers. Dunn's action undoubtedly had much to do with the general falling off in attendance. Interest in the race was destroyed, and the prestige of the league suffered considerably."

Up till a few weeks ago when Boston suddenly impressed the followers of the National League that they were up at the top to fight and fight hard the name of Gowdy was practically unknown. Now the fans have the plucky backstop's first name "Hank" on the end of their tongues. Here's what Clark Griffith of the Washington team thinks of him:—

"There is one player who is generally overlooked by the fans, when they are looking for reason for the great spurt of the Boston Braves. That is Hank Gowdy. There are other stars in the club, and there must be in every winning club, but to my way of thinking the man who has done the most to make the club a consistent winenr is Gowdy. With steady work he has improved wonderfully, and I now consder him to be the best catcher in the National League. He is a good backstop, has a fine throwing arm, and competent baseball men tell me he uses great judgment behind the bat. He is also a dangerous hitter, and his long drives have broken up many a game. Don't make any mistake about this fellow being a second-rate catcher. He is just at the age where great catchers shine, and he is shining. I don't know but what I would just as soon have Gowdy on my club as any catcher in the major leagues."

The fact that the other National League magnates are willing to assist Stallings in conquering McGraw has been stinging the little Napoleon so it would certainly be worth a month's salary to be standing near him when he hears that Red Dooin the bricktop leader of the Phillies may join the Braves. President Bakers of the team from Quakerville is about "fed up" on Dooin's efforts to keep in the fight and as it is known that this is Red's last year with the team it would not be improbable to see him transferred before the end of the season. Dooin is anxious to go to Boston and Baker would like to see the Braves win out hence the dope that the manager of Philadelphia will be with the Boston aggregation. This would give Stallings two ex-managers as he already has Evers on his roster.

Played With Four Winners.

Evers—Chicago, National League, 1906, 1907, 1908, and 1910.

Moran—Dubois, Interstate League, 1907; Atlanta, Southern Association, 1909, and Rochester, Eastern League, 1910 and 1911.

Played With Three Winners.

Mitchell—Philadelphia, American, 1902; Toronto, Eastern League, 1907, and Rochester, Eastern League, 1911.

Played With Two Winners.

Devore—New York, National League, 1911 and 1912.

Crutcher—Frankfort, Blue Grass League, 1908, and Enid, Western Association, 1909.

Hess—New Orleans, Southern Association, 1910 and 1911.

Rudolph—Toronto, Eastern League, 1907, and Toronto, International League, 1912.

Whaling — Seattle, Northwestern League, 1909 and 1912.

Gilbert—Victoria, Southwest Texas Leauge, 1910, and Milwaukee, Western Association, 1913.

Played With One Winner.

Schmidt — Baltimore, Eastern League, 1908.

Gowdy — Dallas, Texas League, 1910.

Dugey — New Orleans, Southern Association, 1910.

Mann—Seattle, Northwestern League, 1912.

James — Seattle, Northwestern League.

James Bluejacket, pitching for the Brooklyn Federals, got credit the other day for beating Pittsburg, although he did not pitch a ball.

Bluejacket went in as a relief hurler in the ninth inning with his team behind. There were two out. Yerkes was on first base. Bluejacket threw to first and caught Yerkes off by two feet, making the third out and retiring the side. His own team went to bat and pounded out a victory. Bluejacket must, under the rules, be credited with winning the game, as he went in when his club was behind in the score.

The game opened with Molasses at the stick and Fever catching. Cigar was in the box, with lots of smoke. Horn on first base and Fiddle on second base, backed by Corn in the field, made it hot for Umpire Apple, who was rotten. Ax came to bat and chopped. Cigar let Brick walk. Sawdust filled the bases. Cob made a hit, and Twenty made a score. Cigar went out and Balloon started to pitch, but he went up in the air. Then Cherry tried it, but was wild. Old Ice kept cool in the game until he was hit by the pitcher, then you should have heard Ice scream! Cabbage had a good head, but got stewed and was put out of the game.

Grass covered lots of ground in the field, and the crowd cheered when Spider caught a fly. Bread loafed on third and pumped organ, who played fast and put Light out. In the fifth inning Wind began to blow about what he could do. Hammer began to knock and Trees began to leave. The way they roasted Peanut was a fright. Knife was put out for cutting first base. Lightning finished pitching the game and struck out six men. In the ninth Umpire Apple told Fiddle to take his base. Corn was shocked when Cob made another hit. Trombone made a slide, while Meat was on the plate.

There was lots of betting on the game and Soap cleaned up the gang. The score was 1 to 0. Door pitched and shut them out.

Montreal Star: Although the Nationals had the most wonderful season any local senior lacrosse club has ever had, winning all their matches but one, they lost between three and four thousand dollars.

Their salaries cost $10,400; their trips to Toronto $2,500. These, with equipment and general expenditures, amounted to $14,500. Against that their receipts upon one occasion were as low as $125.

During the meeting of the National commission in Chicago last week it was tentatively agreed to fix Saturday, October 10, for the first game of the world's series whether the Giants or Braves meet the Athletics for the big title. If the Braves are successful the series will begin at Fenway Park. If the Giants prove the winwinners the Athletics will open at the Polo grounds.

The other dates fixed by the commission are October 12, 13, 14, 15, and 16, if the series requires seven games. In case the Braves participate it is planned to play the first two games in Boston on October 10 and 12, with an overnight jump to Philadelphia for two games on October 13 and 14. But as in former years, in case of drawn games or rain, the contending teams must remain in the city until the postponement has been played off.

The American and National league schedules wind up on Wednesday, October 7. The Athletics play the Yankees in Philadelphia on that day, while the Giants meet the Phillies at the Polo grounds and the Braves wind up the campaign with the Dodgers at Ebbets field. According to the commission's plans, the participants in the world's series, therefore, will have two days of rest before beginning the big struggle.

The receipts will be cut up under former conditions. The players' share will be 60 per cent. of the money taken in for the first four games, to be divided on the basis of 60 per cent. to the winners and 40 per cent. to the losers. Of the balance, 30 per cent. will go to the club owners, equally split, and 10 per cent. to the commission. In the remaining games, 90 per cent. of the coin will be divided fifty-fifty by the rival magnates, as usual.

A meeting of the executive of the Mercantile League was called last evening to discuss the protest entered by the De Laval over the De Laval-Bankers game. There wasn't a sufficient number to form a quorum so the protest did not stand. Thus the Bankers are champions with the following lead:—

Indoor Baseball Schedule Will Get Underway on Thursday.

The indoor baseball league of the 57th Regiment was organized last night in the armouries. Each company met after the drill and arranged their teams. Much enthusiasm was manifested, some making their initial practice then. It is hoped that the men will keep the plan going, so that good games will result.

The recreation room is in full swing, gramophones having been installed. The magazines will shortly arrive, and the bowling alley will also be ready for games very soon.

The following is the schedule for the indoor baseball:

Sept. 17—G v. B. B.

ALLIES NOW IN RHEIMS

Germans Are Being Pushed Back to Position on the Aisne.

Retreat of German Army Continues and Possibility Is That Crown Prince's Army Will Be Cut Off In the North—Report of Gen. Von Kluk's Surrender Unconfirmed — Germans Are Rallying.

LONDON, Sept. 16.—In an eight-word statement made yesterday by the British war press bureau, official announcement was made that the Anglo-French forces had occupied Rheims after driving the German army further back from the recent battlefields in France.

Closely following the statement came unofficial reports from the theatre of war that the Kaiser's army was still retreating, hotly pursued by the entire French and English troops, and that thousands of prisoners were being taken.

Boundless joy was created by the publication of a report from Diepe that the British forces, in executing a circling movement through Royok on the Arve, and Ham, near the River Somme, had cut off the army of Gen. Von Kluk, compelling his surrender, and from 15,000 to 25,000 of his men, together with their equipment and field guns. The report could not be confirmed. It is believed that it may be another version of the capture Monday by the British of three regiments of Germans who were cut off while trying to reach St. Quentin.

Analysis of the despatches from the front indicates that the allies, despite stubborn resistnace by the retreating Germans, are dealing terrific blows against the Kaiser's vanquishing foes. The Anglo-French forces are steadily pressing them back to the protected line on the Aisne river, where the Germans are making a desperate stand to permit the escape of their armies from France before they are separated or annihilated.

Keenly remembering the Prussians' investment of Paris, which began 44 years ago, the French are taking sweet revenge against the Germans. Since the Germans were turned back from the gates of Paris the fierce and continuous attacks of the allies have been such that military observers assert that the enemy cannot recover strength enough to make a stand on French soil, which would turn the tables on the allies. It is estimated that the German losses are five to one greater than those of the allies. In addition the Kaiser's men have been forced to abandon a great number of artillery pieces and large quantities of supplies and ammunition.

The French are cutting off the crown prince's army from fleeing to the east. His position is said to be most critical, and his army is being pushed to the north of Rheims.

The British press bureau gave out the following statement:

"The enemy is still occupying a strong position to the north of the Aisne and fighting is going on along the whole line.

"The crown prince's army has been driven further back, and is now on the line of Varennes, Consenvoie and Orenes.

"The allied troops have occupied Rheims.

"Six hundred prisoners and twenty guns were captured yesterday by the corps on the right of the British.

"Rain has made the roads heavy and is increasing the difficulties of the German army in its retreat."

The belief is growing more and more firm here that the Crown Prince Frederick Wilhelm is gathering the Kaiser's armies in France for a final stand in the vicinity of Mount Fancon and Verdun. His position will put his forces in the region between the Aisle and the Meuse, with his line of communication and his line of possible retreat to the east through Luxemburg. The beaten German forces around Nancy will move back again and the armies of the German right will affect a juncture with the crown prince's force and the result will be a massive, but coherent column, which will be able to hurl an enormous weight of men against the French centre or to cover an orderly retreat along the defile between Verdun and the Ardennes. The terrific battle that is on there to-day is one of tremendous importance, if it does not turn out to be the decisive action for the German campaign in France.

The combined forces of five of the seven German armies operating in France are concentrated in a comparatively short battle line. Intrenchments have been constructed along a secondary line as defensive. The centre of the concentration is on the highest land northeast of Rheims.

The allies are already occupying most of the territory up the River Aisne and have secured footholds on the north bank in several places, where crossings can be affected.

The reports received from the allies as well as that from Dieppe of the surrender of Gen. Von Kluk and 25,000 men, are more favorable to immediate success for the allies than any received since the first retirement began nine days ago.

An attempt was made by the German crown prince's army to break through the allies' centre between Verdun and Toul, which was repulsed. The troops of the allies' armies are in better condition than those of the enemy. The allies' left wing has been re-enforced by the army of 506,000 fresh troops. All the lines of communication from the French bases are well organized.

Why the Boiler Rumbles.

That noisy rumbling and clattering in the kitchen boiler after the gas water heater has been lighted for some time has scared many a woman. The editor of the Monthly Gas Chat says it need alarm no one, as it is caused by the expansion of the water as it is heated from the top of the boiler. The colder water below, rushing up to displace the expanded water above, will often cause a concussion.

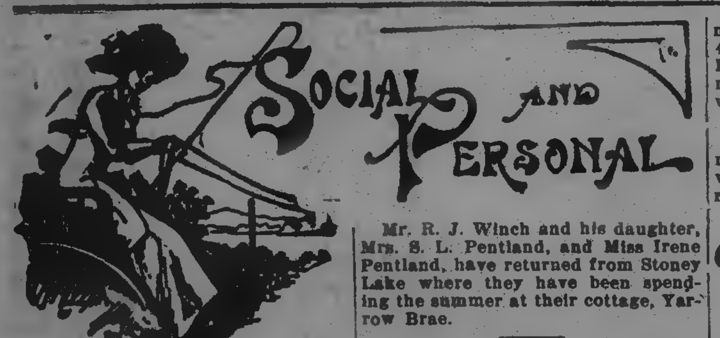
The most authentic fashions, the best efforts of master artists, each model chosen with the tasteful care for which our selections are always noted, and the extremely desirable prices, make this display of unusual interest to every woman. We extend an invitation to our every customer to visit this splendid style show. Come—look—buy only when you find what you like. We will take a great deal of pleasure in showing you these handsome garments.

EXHIBIT DAYS
Thursday, Friday & Saturday

The Reid Co.
Where the Styles Come From.



Mr. K. R. McLennan, Montreal, is here on business.

Mr. A. L. Andress, Cornwall, is in the city for a few days.

Mr. Peter O'Connor, Lindsay, is a guest at the Snowden House.

G. W. Miller and W. R. Bond are registered at the White House.

C. K. Stewart, Montreal, is the guest of friends in the city.

Mr. Richard Kingdon has returned to the city after spending a week in Toronto.

Mr. R. E. Wood, County Crown Attorney, who is at St. Joseph's Hospital, suffering from paralysis, is reported no better.

Owing to ill health, Mr. H. R. Rhines, physical director of Kingston Y.M.C.A. has resigned. He will be replaced by Mr. C. R. Powers, of Kingston.

Mr. R. J. Winch and his daughter, Mrs. S. L. Pentland, and Miss Irene Pentland, have returned from Stoney Lake where they have been spending the summer at their cottage, Yarrow Brae.

Rev. W. F. Fitzgerald, M.A., and Mrs. Fitzgerald arrived at their home in Kingston yesterday after an extended trip to England and Ireland. Rev. Mr. Fitzgerald says a close interest is being taken in the war in England, but at the same time, business is not being neglected.

A cablegram from Miss Killmaster states that she has sailed for Canada and she will reach Peterborough in the near future and resume her duties on the teaching staff of the local conservatory of music. Miss Killmaster was in Berlin for some time and, with other Canadians, was able to leave through the efforts put forth by the Hon. Mr. Perley, acting high commissioner.

At the regular meeting of the Kitchener Red Cross Club last evening, Miss Peacock, General Secretary Y. W. C. A. addressed the club.

Miss Peacock was highly pleased with the progress and spoke very encouraging to the club. Members desiring to obtain wool for knitting may do so by calling at Mrs. Knox's, 481 Gilmour Street. The Kitchener Red Cross Club will have a refreshment booth at the Exhibition and will no doubt be well patronized.

Major Eastwood returned this morning after a trip to Val Cartier, where he reports everything is running smoothly.

CANVASSERS FOR FUND IN NORTH

The undersigned beg to announce to the residents of Peterborough residing in that part of the city situated north of Smith street and west of the river, that they will make a general canvass for contributions to this fund during the next ten days.

The object of the fund is to relieve not only the families of those who have enlisted for active service during the present war, but all who may be in need of assistance owing to lack of employment.

The undersigned wish to emphatically point out that all the money collected for this fund is absolutely for distribution in Peterborough only.

A generous and hearty response to the appeal is requested.

Motors Make Dear Tea, Says London Paper

Tea, all except China, has gone up in price from twopence to fourpence a pound since this time last year. The finest Indian has gone up fourpence, ordinary Indian and Ceylon teas twopence a pound.

The reason, curious as it may seem, is the fact that more and more people are buying motor-cars every year.

Brisk selling in the motor world means a growing demand for rubber for wheel tyres. This led in the time of the rubber boom to a sharp rise in the price of rubber. It so happens that rubber and tea are two crops that require exactly the same conditions of soil and climate, with the result that ever since the beginning of the rubber boom more and more tea planters have dropped tea for rubber. The effect of the shorter supplies of tea is just beginning to be felt in the present rise of price.

So that is why our tea is dear. If your tea merchant is not raising his price he is giving you poorer quality for your money. The cost of your cup of tea is going to rise further, too.

$1000 FOR SON'S DEATH

Assize Jury Brings in Verdict for Plaintiff

After being out 50 minutes, the petit jury in the civil action of John A. Sharpe against the C. P. R. and T. H. & B.R. for $5,000 damages for the death of his son, Thomas L. Sharpe, on March 19, 1913, returned with a finding which awarded the plaintiff $1,000. The following was the finding, based on questions asked them by Hon. Mr. Justice Britton, the presiding judge:

Q—Were the defendants, the T. H. & B. R., guilty of any negligence which occasioned the death of Thos. Sharpe?

A—Yes.

Q—If so, what was that negligence?

A—The absence of a white light on rear of tender and lack of proper fence.

Q—Were the defendants, the C. P. R., guilty of any negligence which contributed to the death of Thos. Sharpe?

A—Yes.

Q—If so, what was that negligence?

A—Allowing their workmen to walk the tracks to boarding car.

Q—Was the use of the track and right of way of the defendants, T. H. & B. R., by the workmen and repair men of the C. P. R. known to and acquiesced in by the C. P. R.?

A—Yes.

Q—Was the user known to and acquiesced in by the T. H. & B. R. Co.?

A—Yes.

Q—Was the deceased at the time of the accident in the employ of the C. P. R.?

A—Yes.

Q—Was the deceased at the time of his death under the direction and control, as to his work and return to the sleeping car, of Fred Bunker?

A—Yes, until the tools were placed in the car.

Q—Was Fred Bunker at the time of the accident a person in the employ of the C. P. R., to whose orders the deceased was bound to conform?

A—Yes.

Q—In starting for the sleeping car on the night of the accident, did the deceased, Thomas Sharpe, conform to the orders and directions of Fred Bunker?

A—By his presence he was directed.

Q—Did the accident to Thomas Sharpe and his death result from his so conforming?

A—Yes.

Q—Was the deceased, Thomas Sharpe, guilty of contributory negligence?

A—No.

Q—Damages?

A—$1,000.00.

GILBERT HOWSON,
Foreman.

The plaintiff was represented by F. D. Kerr and J. V. McElderry, while J. D. Spence and G. W. Walroad, of Toronto, acted on behalf of the C. P. R., and J. A. Sproule for the T. H. & B. The judge's decision as to costs will be made known at a later date.

This civil action was the only case at the fall assizes.

WILL SING TOMMY ATKINS' SONG

At Patriotic Concert Next Monday Night

Tommy Atkin's song, "It's a Long Long Way to Tipperary" will be sung at the patriotic concert, to be held in the Grand Opera House, next Monday night. Here are the words:

Up to mighty London came an Irishman one day,
As the streets are pav'd with gold sure everyone was gay;
Singing songs of Piccadilly, Strand and Leicester Square,
Till Paddy got excited, then he shouted to them there:—
Chorus:—
It's a long way to Tipperary, it's a long way to go;
It's a long way to Tipperary to the sweetest girl I know!
Good-bye Piccadilly, farewell Leister Square,
It's a long long way to Tipperary, but my heart's right there.

Paddy wrote a letter to his Irish Molly O',
Saying, "Should you not receive it write and let me know!
If I make mistakes in spelling Molly dear," said he,
"Remember it's the pen that's bad, don't lay the blame on me."

Molly wrote a neat reply to Irish Paddy O',
Saying, "Mike Maloney wants to marry me, and so
Leave the Strand and Piccadilly or you'll be to blame,
For love has fairly drove me silly—hoping you're the same."

FINE REHEARSAL OF JUDAS MACCABAEUS

The Peterborouh Choral Society had a splendid rehearsal of Handel's oratorio "Judas Maccabaeus" in the Collegiate Institute last night when sixty voices assembled under the baton of Mr. R. J. Devey, musical director. Mr. R. Gliddon has promised to come in again with the conservatory orchestra and a combined rehearsal may be looked for next Tuesday. The work will be given next month in aid of the Patriotic Fund.

The Union Bank of Canada has generously contributed $25,000 to the National Patriotic Fund.

Late War News

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Sept. 16.—The official press bureau to-day gave out a statement which says: "The general position along the Aisne river continues very favorable. The enemy has delivered several counter-attacks, especially against our first army corps. These have been repulsed, and the Germans have given way slightly before our troops and French armies on the right and left.

"The enemy's loss is very heavy and we have taken 200 prisoners."

PETERBOROUGH, ONT., THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 17, 1914

Attractive Program at Fair Grounds To-night

All is in Readiness for Initial Open Air Performances, of Vaudeville, Band Concerts and Fireworks

Graced with ideal autumn weather and boosted along by energetic directors and officials, the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition is under way for the approval of its thousands of patrons.

By this evening many of the rough edges will have disappeared and everything made ready for the first performances by the vaudeville artists, the bands, and the experts who are in charge of the display of fireworks.

It will hardly be a case of the same old thing, as care has been taken to insure a program both varied and entertaining and different from other years. The open-air performers come highly recommended. Attractions above the average may be expected on the midway. The provincial authorities have been on the alert to put a stop to objectionable shows and this has had a good effect. Tonight the midway will be doing business to the music of the little brass band, the silver-toned spieler, and others too numerous to mention.

Double Bill Tomorrow.

Tomorrow the exhibits will be in their places, the cream of the horses and cattle from this and other counties will be on parade; the prize birds from the barnyard will be on exhibition in the large tent just inside the grounds, and the race horses will be sent away from the wire.

The complete program of entertainment will be given in the afternoon and repeated at night. The Street Railway Company are making a big effort to give the best possible service, and since their new time schedule is now in force, the street car accommodation should be very satisfactory.

Big Crowds Wanted.

The citizens are asked to lend their support towards making the Exhibition a success. Patronage is needed and record crowds should reward the hard efforts of the directors.

INCLEMENT WEATHER MAKES GERMAN OPERATIONS DIFFICULT

Paris, Sept. 17.—Cold and heavy rains are falling to-day throughout the fighting zone in Northern and Northeastern France. Military observers are of the opinion that this inclement weather will add to the difficulties of the Germans in a greater degree than to the French.

It will make the use of their heavy field artillery impossible, except on the best roads, and the progress of the German supply trains, encumbered with men made sick through exposure, will be interfered with.

FOE MADE BARRIER OF THEIR DEAD

Terrible Tales From the Battlefields Reach Paris

London, Sept. 17.—The correspondent of the Times at Paris sends this story of the fighting on the river Aisne: The enemy has found a means to arrest his retreat for the time being and is offering a stubborn resistance on the line which he has prepared strongly for defence. He has received considerable reinforcements, probably from Lorraine, where he seems to have abandoned the offensive.

The fighting is hottest around Soissons, where the British army is in action. Terrible stories are reaching Paris of the piles of dead and wounded which encumber the battlefield of the Marne, and the Red Cross is working night and day. At one place, it is stated, the Germans erected a barrier six feet high of corpses, behind which to resist the French. The barrier was carried after a terrific struggle, by French Turcos, leaving 7,500 dead on the battlefield.

GERMANS SLOWLY GIVING WAY BEFORE THE ALLIES IN BATTLE ALONG AISNE

KAISER STRENGTHENING HIS FORTIFICATIONS AT HOME

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

FRENCH OFFICIAL STATEMENT

Paris, Sept. 17.—The Germans are slowly giving way in the great battle that continues to-day all along the line of the river Aisne, according to an official announcement made in Paris this afternoon.

Paris, Sept. 17.—The official announcement is as follows:

First—On our left wing the resistance of the enemy on the heights to the north of the river Aisne has continued, in spite of the fact that the enemy gave back slightly at certain points.

Second—On the centre between Berry-au-bac, on the river Aisne, and the Argonne, the situation shows no change. The enemy continues to fortify himself along the line previously indicated between Argonne and the Meuse. The Germans are entrenching themselves in the vicinity of Mont Faucon. In the Woevre district we have come in contact with several detachments of the enemy between Etant and Thiaucourt.

Third—On the right wing in Lorraine and the Vosges there has been no change.

Summing up, the battle is being continued along the entire front between the river Oise and the river Meuse. The Germans occupy positions organized for defence and are armed with heavy artillery. Our progress is of necessity slow, but our troops are giving evidence of vigor and enthusiasm. They have repulsed with success counter-attacks undertaken by the enemy both during the day and night.

Berlin, Sept. 17.—The official report given out at the army headquarters at midnight Wednesday says the French front remains unchanged.

GERMAN WOUNDED ARE IN BAD STATE

Uniforms in Rags and Their Hats Missing

BORDEAUX, Sept. 17. — Among those who arrived here yesterday in two train loads of German wounded was a man who has a big wine business in Bordeaux. A few days before hostilities broke out he left Bordeaux to join the German colors.

All the wounded were in a pitiable plight. Their uniforms were rags and many were without hats. The faces of all the men were black with dust and their clothes clotted with blood. Some of them were so feeble that they had to be undressed by the sisters of charity, who are acting as nurses.

Kingston Man Killed.

KINGSTON, Sept. 17.—In his excitement when out in a boat duck hunting, Mark Hill, 20, Seeley's Bay, grabbed a gun by the muzzle. The trigger caught on the side of the boat and it was discharged, blowing off part of his head. He died instantly.

TWO MEN HELD AS SUSPECTS

Westwood Man Was Assaulted But Assailants Left Money

County Constable Dickson, of Westwood, has rounded up the two men who are supposed to have assaulted Mr. J. Cook of Westwood on Sunday evening last. It will be remembered that while Mr. Cook was driving his cattle to the pasture field on Sunday evening, and when passing through a lonely spot two men stepped up to him and demanded his money. He told them that he did not have any money on him. Immediately one of the men drew, what is thought to be, a piece of piping, and struck him on the temple, knocking him down and rendering him insensible.

Did Not Take Money.

The queer circumstances in connection with the assault are, that, although Mr. Cook had nine dollars in his pocket the men did not take it. It is thought that the men, awed with the rash deed they had done in striking him, did not take time to go through his pockets, but made a hasty retreat for a nearby woods.

The county constable was suspicious of the the men, whose names are Louis Perry and James Wallace, and on having his suspicions substantiated by several people, he promptly arrested them near the Westwood railway station. The case was remanded one week in which time the police will make a thorough investigation into the matter.

ITALY SEEMS ON POINT OF JOINING THE CONFLICT

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Sept. 17.—Telegraphing from Maestricht, the Reuter Telegraph Co.'s correspondent says despatches which have arrived in Maestricht from Cologne, Dusseldorf, Wesel and Duisburg indicate that these points are strengthening their fortifications to meet a possible advance of the allies.

London, Sept. 17.—Italian and Roumanian activities seem to-day to point to decisive action in the near future. Should these countries take the field against Austria-Hungary, it is argued here that Russia would have her hands freed and Germany would be thrown entirely on her own resources to repel the Muscovite hosts thus strongly reinforced.

Italy seems to have called her reservists to the colors and to be apparently on the point of occupying Avlona in order to safeguard her interests in the Adriatic.

GERMAN LINES FALL BEFORE ONSLAUGHT OF ALLIED TROOPS

First Day of Struggle on Banks of River Aisne Results in the Rolling up of the Crown Prince's Line---His Retreat to Metz is Cut Off---Germans Again Retreating From Entrenched Positions.

LONDON, Sept. 17. — While London awaited details of the further advance of the Anglo-French troops in their pursuit of the retreating German armies, semi-official news filtered from the front indicating that success again crowned the efforts of the allies in their attempt to either annihilate the Kaiser's forces or force them to surrender large numbers of their men.

No longer able to resist the terrific onslaught of the British and French offensive, the Germans, despite strongly entrenched positions along the River Aisne, began giving way yesterday. The invaders suffered heavy losses in unsuccessful counter-attacks after they had taken up new positions and had marshaled their forces for the second great battle of the war in progress all along the firing line. The British captured 200 prisoners in the opening skirmishes of yesterday's engagements.

The army of the crown prince, to the eastward, was routed from Varennes, and was rolled back along the River Meuse toward Luxemburg by a triumphant French force, which now holds the roadways to Metz, by which the crown prince might have retreated to Germany. He was assigned the all-important task of further breaking through the French lines at the centre of the battle or holding the opposing forces in check. His failure to accomplish his purpose forced the Germans to give battle yesterday all along the line from a point north of Verdun to Noyon, 55 miles east of Paris. The fighting front of the new battle was 110 miles long.

At 5.30 o'clock yesterday afternoon the British war press bureau issued the following statement:

"General position of the allies along the River Aisne continues favorable. The enemy has delivered several counter-attacks, especially against the British first army corps. These attacks have been repulsed, and the Germans have given way before our troops and the French armies on our right and left.

"The enemy's losses have been heavy and we have taken 200 prisoners."

Despatches from Paris officially announce that the crown prince has evacuated Varennes, where he made his stand against the French after his defeat at Vitry-le-Francois.

It is said here that 70,000 East Indian troops have been landed in Europe and have joined the allies. When the veil now surrounding the movements to the northwest is lifted it probably will be disclosed that the offensive movement participated in by the entire British expeditionary forces, supported by the French and new reinforcements, is in full swing.

A despatch from Paris says The Petit Journal states it has learned that the Kaiser has decided to go to East Prussia to inspect the eastern theatre of war.

Berlin Admits Defeat.

BERLIN, Sept. 17.—Reports issued by the German War Office say the French troops in the battle [illegible] 25 attacked and destroyed a German field hospital, killing the surgeons and nurses and several wounded German soldiers.

German prospects are said to be favorable in official reports dealing with the battle of the Marne. The general staff says the Anglo-French forces now along the entire battle front have won a decided victory. No details of this engagement are published, however.

An official statement made at the War Office yesterday lays much stress on the assertion that the Germans have succeeded in checking the entire offensive movement of the allies in France. The announcement states that the German army is now entrenched in new and strong positions, and that at several points the Germans drove the French lines back on their supports. Regarding the situation in France, the general staff declares that the new plan of campaign is turning out satisfactorily.

WHO WILL HELP TO BUY A HORSE

A local man whose physical condition keeps him from doing very tedious work, has been forced to seek a livelihood by collecting old clothes, ashes, etc. The horse which he has been using died, and the man's wife, being desirous of having him earn a living instead of being subject to charity, is calling on citizens, asking for donations to enable her to purchase a horse. Mayor Buller and City Relief Officer Miller have given her permission to do this, as well as assisted her generously, and should other citizens be called upon, it is hoped they will respond according to their means.

ITALIANS CHAFE AT NEUTRALITY

ROME, Sept. 17.—(Via Paris.)—Despite the most energetic measures taken by the Government, demonstrations in opposition to Italy's attitude of neutrality continued in the larger towns yesterday. The police being insufficient, troops are being employed to repress the demonstrators, re-establish order and protect foreign embassies and consulates.

RAMBLES IN EMERALD ISLE

Mr. David Moore Sends Interesting Account of His Trip

The many friends of Mr. David Moore, of The Review staff, who has been travelling in Europe, have been asking one another if they have heard from him. Apparently Mr. Moore has been having too busy, too strenuous or too pleasant a time sight-seeing to devote much time to letter-writing. However, his friend, Mr. R. J. Winch, on his return from his summer home, was agreeably surprised to receive a twenty-four-page letter giving a sketch of what he has seen and heard. Believing it would be of interest to his many friends, Mr. Winch has kindly allowed us to make some extracts from his letter. After visiting the great shipyards at Liverpool, he went to Southport, a seaside resort, and saw at close range an aeroplane do some of its tricks. While on the Isle of Man he ran into a big Scotsman's gathering and they didn't seem to sleep night or day. "There was something doing all the time, and the place (Douglas) is a regular Coney Island." Continuing, Mr. Moore writes:

Relics in Chester Cathedral

"I went also to the old city of Chester where, in places, the walls are still in existence built by the Romans away back in the first century, and where there are many houses of ancient and quaint appearance. In the old Cathedral there I saw an interesting relic, the old flags borne by the Chester regiment when, with Wolfe the night he scaled the heights of Quebec.

Leaving Chester, which is in the place where Cheshire cheese comes from, I had a nice little trip through a part of Wales, and sailed from there to Kingstown in Ireland. I went from there to Dublin, and was in Dublin the day after the shooting affray took place there. The people were in a great state of excitement, and I stood one morning and watched the thousands going and coming out of the pro-cathedral where the bodies lay in state. I witnessed the great funeral of the three victims from the top of a tramcar right across from the spot where the shooting had taken place. It was an atrocious blunder on somebody'spart and only serves to keep the bad feeling stirred up.

Dublin is in many ways a beautiful city, but it is not managed right, and one can readily understand why the Belfast people do not want to be governed from there, when the difference is seen between Belfast and Dublin, in the cleanliness, etc., of Belfast compared to Dublin. I went from Dublin to Killarney and saw the pride of Irish scenery, the Lakes of Killarney. They were beautiful, all right, the surrounding mountains against the tops of which the clouds were breaking, lending much to the beauty of the scene. There have been other places that I liked better that I have seen since. The scenes from the summit of Howth pleased me better. This is the place where the gun-running took place on that fatal Sunday. Dublin Bay is also a pretty picture, and it stirred Lady Dufferin to immortalise its beauty in verse at one time.

Awakened by the Sound of War.

I went from Killarney, where I met three New Yorkers, a detective, a lawyer, and a retired old chap who does nothing but travel from one place to another, and with whom I had a very good time; I say I went from there to Cork. The first night I was there I was awakened several times by the sound of sheep and cattle being driven through the street, and before the people here had awakened to it I had suspected something was doing. The old lion was not sleeping, and even before war was announced Britain was preparing for an emergency. That cattle were to feed the men that are going to the front. It has been great at times to watch the preparations for the big fight that is bound to change the map. I was in Cork the morning war was declared, and saw the first embarkation of Irish troops on board the steamer Inniscarra, and a big Australian and I stood up on boxes and gave the starting of the cheer that sent them on their way to fight for the old flag.

Bells of Shandon.

We also went over to Shandon Church, where there is a chime of bells celebrated the world over, and I had the verger ring some appropriate music, "The Minstrel Boy to the War Has Gone," "Lead, Kindly Light," and "God Save the King." The chimes are certainly sweet, and "Father Prout's" poem will always have a new charm for me:

"'Oh bells of Shandon,
That sound so grand on
The pleasant waters of the River
Lee.'

That night we saw the first boat load of reserves and enlisted men who sailed from Ireland to the war. Since then, every place I have gone there have been soldiers, soldiers everywhere. Belfast is a regular military base, and yesterday three big boat loads of soldiers went from here while thousands of horses go through the streets every day.

This war seems in places to have greatly upset the people, and business, I fear, will suffer greatly in

PETERBOROUGH, THURSDAY, SEPT. 17, 1914

MR. ROWELL'S MISTAKE.

A PETERBOROUGH MAN, travelling to the Pacific Coast, has sent us a copy of the Vancouver Daily News-Advertiser, containing an interview with the Hon. Richard Harcourt. For thirty years he sat in the Ontario Legislature, from 1878-1908, and was a minister of the late Liberal Government for fifteen years. He spoke of the loyalty of Canada, manifested as it had been by every province, and believed the European War would consolidate the Empire.

Speaking of political conditions in Ontario, Mr. Harcourt said that the present Liberal leader, Mr. N. W. Rowell, had made a mstake in committing his political fortunes. The "Abolish-the-Bar" policy was considerably in advance of the time. The province was not ready for it. The temperance movement had made immense strides in Ontario in the last thirty years, but public sentiment on the question could not be forced. This would only do harm.

This statement by a former Liberal minister is significant in view of the recent election in Ontario. It is the opinion of a man of long and tried experience in the political life of Ontario, one who has had the training and capacity to understand public sentiment. The Liberals in the last election attempted to violate one of the principles of representative government, for under such government, questions are not decided by wise men on the basis of what they think is good or bad for the people, but by the people themselves. Reform questions must have public support to carry, and that means an educative policy. To run ahead of that process, to try to anticipate public sentiment, is bad politics, and fatal to the question so improperly handled. The rightness of the question should never be so over-emphasized that its politics are ignored.

BETTER WAIT A WHILE.

IT is common to hear the European war described in superlative terms. Although little authentic information is obtainable, although much data labelled official must be discounted, people speak of it as the greatest war, or of battles as the greatest and bloodiest, and so on. The immense number of men under arms is undoubtedly a fact, as well as the efficiency of modern guns, and these give weight to the stories of slaughter. Still, it would be well not to speak in superlative terms on the facts at hand, because of possible eroneous impressions that might be created.

The Civil War in the United States was noteworthy in several particulars and furnishes interesting facts at this time. About 3,000,000 men were engaged during the Civil War. The number of Federal soldiers actually in the field was 2,666,999. The Confederate statistics lack completeness, but the entire available force capable of active service was about 500,000. The casualties in the Federal army numbered 359,528; 110,070 men were killed in action or died of wounds, and 249,458 men died from disease, accident or other causes. The Confederate loss in killed and wounded was about 95,000 men; that from disease, accident and other causes is unknown.

HOUSING WOMEN WORKERS IN CITIES.

THE PROBLEM of providing housing for women workers in cities so that they can live properly on the salaries they receive is one of the most important relating to our industrial life. The lack of proper places in which to live has been the cause of much shame and crime among women workers in large cities. Usually they do not receive high salaries, and hence they cannot afford to live in expensive places, or even apartments that are not considered expensive. Yet women of all creatures crave respectability, and hence the problem that high cost of living has brought to those who cannot afford to pay for the high cost.

What is being done in Toronto should not be lost sight of by other cities, where the same problem exists, perhaps not now in a virulent form, but which may soon develop to an alarming size. A novel scheme has been agreed to by the Social Council of Women and the Toronto Housing Company. For a long time the council have considered the question of providing suitable accommodation for self-supporting business women and girls. At first it was suggested that a large residence was the suitable way to make provision, but already in Toronto there are several institutions operating on that plan. There seemed no real need to duplicate them. It was finally decided that a group of self-contained flats would have an advantage over the single large building, and the council then approached the housing company. The result of the conference is the following agreement:

Six large buildings especially designed to accommodate 150 women as the council planned will be erected and rented to the council, who in turn will rent the separate apartments to the different applicants at reasonable rates. Each flat will have a living-room, bath-room and kitchenette, and the bedrooms will vary from two to five to the one apartment. The rates will be $6.50 to $9.00 per month if only one occupies a bedroom, and will be only half that sum if two share their room. The council will govern the whole, but the occupants of each apartment will be allowed one representative on the committee, so that the houses will be really self-governed.

The rates appear to be exceptionally reasonable for the accommodation offered, and should go far to providing a remedy for the problem that the conditions of our industrial life have caused.

THE CASE OF RUSSIA.

SOME ONE MAY ASK why the same reasoning does not apply to Russia as to Germany, says Collier's. Perhaps it does, but we do not see it that way. Both countries have medieval forms of government, but the anomaly is twice as striking in Germany's case, the paradox twice as unforgivable. Germany is a modern and progressive country in everything except its headship; Russia remains in many ways as a child of the white plains, in need of fathership. Moreover, in the event of success on the allies' part, we believe a reduction of armament all around will be enforced by the powers of France and Great Britain. This will affect Russia as well as Germany. If Germany conquers, on the other hand, it will not only mean a survival of the military spirit, but the iron heel will crush whatever remains of freedom in Europe—political, economic, moral. Prince Kropotkin, perhaps the best known of Russian anarchists, supports his government in this war precisely because "the Russian military autocracy will not gain, but all progressive and liberalist forces will be immensely strengthened." Already the Russian government has found it expedient to promise home rule to Poland, and Kropotkin looks for concessions to Finland and to the Jews and to the people of the Caucasus. All this is only repeating history. Emancipation of the Russian serfs followed the Crimean war, a grant of representative government followed war with Japan. It is true that Russia, like Germany and Austria, is ruled by an emperor, and that this war was declared without reference to the people on whom it weighs most heavily. We believe the war will, all the same, let in the light in Russia just as it is putting the light out in Germany.

TRUTH WILL PREVAIL.

THERE IS an old saying, "Truth will prevail." This proverb has been so generally accepted that it is almost a truism. The German Emperor, however, seems to think otherwise, for falsehood and misrepresentation have been used by his agents and himself to create impressions favourable to his cause. The German ambassador in the United States, Count Von Bernstorff, undoubtedly acting on instructions from the Kaiser's government, has not scrupled to issue the most false and contradictory statements, as he deemed the expediency of the occasion demanded. The Toronto Telegram gives, in the following paragraph, one example of the Count's immoral efforts to hoodwink the American people:

> "At ten o'clock one morning he announced that he had no news. At noon word was received by a Washington newspaper of a great Russian victory. This was immediately translated by the official ananias into a crushing reverse, in which the Russians lost 70,000 men, two generals, 300 officers, and all their artillery. Such a blatant lie many American newspapers refused to stomach. They bluntly unmasked the German ambassador as a thorough-paced prevaricator, and, so far, he has made no attempt to disprove the most serious charge which could be made against the representative of a supposedly civilized government. The Count goes on lying, but he has lost, in large part, the market for his wares."

If truth will prevail, it seems that the Kaiser and his men are in league with the Prince of Darkness, for they have tossed a good many Christian principles to the winds. The fortune of the war up to the present time seems to show that they are backing the wrong horse.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

WE have received a blotter from the Monetary Times bearing the motto, "If every Canadian will get down to business, business will get down to every Canadian." In view of present trade conditions, that is a singularly appropriate saying.

REMEMBER — the City of Peterborough is putting on one of the best Exhibitions and Fall Fairs that can be seen in Canada. Everybody should see the big show here.

IN words approximating those of our friend, H. F. G., of Saturday Night, The Reverend Editor of the Globe is going to have peace if he has to knock the heads off his opponents.

To the Pillory.

(La Patrie.)

In England, Zangwill, a well-known author and the editor of a newspaper, has attempted to create agitation against the war by claiming that Great Britain seeks to aid tottering Czarism. On his return from a public meeting where he had failed to persuade his audience to accept his astounding doctrine, Zangwill was arrested by order of the government and confined in prison, where he will have time to, at his ease, review and reconsider his anti-patriotic principles, and where, at any rate, he will be beyond the danger of doing any further harm. From Zangwill to Henri Bourassa the distance is insensible, truly the last articles of Mr. Bourassa justify the federal authorities accusing him of high treason. But it is not likely that the Canadian Government will deem it necessary to deal severely with this defamer of the Empire, and of its statesman, because of the conviction that the sophisms of Mr. Bourassa no longer find dupes.

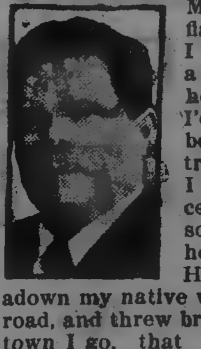
Relying on Britain.

(Echo de Paris.)

We have never doubted the decisions taken in London. They mark one of the greatest events of history. Rarely has Great Britain been seen to interfere with all her forces in a war between the peoples of the Continent. That only happens about once in a century, and when she has intervened the conflict has never terminated until the power which she was fighting for supremacy has been beaten and the equilibrium of Europe restored.

THE WARRIOR'S LAMENT

By Walt Mason



The glory and the pomp of war are mostly in the poet's song. Ah, what was I enlisted for? To dig a ditch some ten miles long. My dreams were all of dress parade, of flaunting plumes and banners gay, and here I labor with a spade, and dig for sixteen cents a day. When first I heard my country's cry, her call for men to guard her shore, I said I'd gladly bleed and die and steep my marrow bones in gore. I always loved the soldier's trade, I ever yearned to join the fray, and here I struggle with a spade, and dig for sixteen cents a day. I saw myself returning home, all scarred and wounded, yet superb, a captured helmet on my dome, and trophies torn from Hun or Serb; in dreams a conqueror I stood adown my native village street, while women kneeled along the road, and threw bright blossoms at my feet. But if to that dear town I go, that town of noble sons bereft, the only scars I'll have to show are those the doggone shvel left. Ah, not for me the shining blade, it is not mine to charge or slay, for I must labor with a spade, and pull down sixteen cents a day.

Polish Girls Killed.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Sept. 17. —Two Polish girls, Josefin Nederek, 18 years of age, and Anna Dzieronowska, 19 years, were instantly killed by a rock blasted from the Queenston quarries. The girls were employed at the canning factory, and having an afternoon off went to visit friends at the quarries. They were warned of a blast, and sought refuge in a shed with other people 200 yards away. A rock was hurled through the building, striking them on the heads and fracturing their skulls. Their homes are in Buffalo, N. Y.

Submarine Cheered.

HARWICH, Eng., Sept. 17.—The submarine E9, which sank the German cruiser Hela off Heligoland on Sunday morning, arrived here yesterday, and was cheered by the crews of the warships as she entered the harbor.

The submarine fired two torpedoes at the Hela, one striking her bow and the other hitting her amidships. The cruiser immediately burst into flames.

A TIME EXPOSURE.

I TURNED the family album's page
And noted with a smile
The efforts of a bygone age
At photographic style.
There, peg topped, grandpa could be seen,
While grandma beamed, contented
To know her brand new crinoline
The latest thing invented.

And there Aunt Mary's looks belied
Her gravity of dress.
That great poke bonnet could not hide
Her youthful comeliness.
There, too, was father when a boy
And elsewhere in the series
A youthful cousin (Fauntleroy),
An uncle in Dundrearies.

And then before my scornful eye
A smirking youth appeared,
Flaunting a loose aesthetic tie
And embryonic beard.
With laughter I began to shake,
Noting the watch chain weighty
And all the things that went to make
A "nut" in eighteen-eighty.

I looked upon the other side,
Still tittering, to see
What branch the fellow occupied
Upon our family tree.
A name was scrawled across the card
With flourishes in plenty,
And, lo, it was the present bard
Himself at five and twenty!

A CURIOUS REVIVAL

By F. A. MITCHEL

One day a man of uncertain appearance, so far as age was concerned, called at a dwelling that is considered a landmark on the northern end of Manhattan Island and asked for the lady of the house. Mrs. Van Valkinburgh, the occupant, asked her daughter Edith to go down and see what he wanted. She did so, and the moment she looked at him she started.

He was of medium height, very thin and of a leathery complexion. His eyes were deep set in his head and had a peculiar glitter, such as is seen in the eyes of one who has gone a long while without sleep. As to his age, he might have been twenty-five, and he might have been seventy-five.

"Pardon the intrusion," he said. "Many years ago I left this house, which was then my home, to attend lectures at a university in Germany. I have not been here since."

It seemed to Miss Van Valkinburgh that she listened to a Punch and Judy figure. Never had she heard or dreamed of such a voice. The vocal tubes seemed to be dry and stiff. The lady involuntarily cleared her throat, as if to limber that of her visitor.

"Will you be seated?" she said.

"Thank you," replied the man, who was dressed like a gentleman of fashion of half a century ago. As he spoke he looked about him.

"You rent the house, do you not?" he said.

"Yes, but why do you infer that?"

"The furniture is changed, but some of the pictures that were hung on the walls hang there now. That"—pointing to a portrait—"is my father."

The picture referred to represented a man of sixty.

"Indeed!" said the lady, beginning to quake inwardly at being alone with this singular person.

"Yes; when I went abroad I bade him goodby in this very room. We little thought that we should never meet again."

These last words were intended to be spoken in a sad tone. They sounded like a street organ playing "Annie Laurie," the pipes refusing to respond at the words "I'd lay me doon and dee," giving instead a series of croaks. Miss Van Valkinburgh was glued to her chair in terror.

"It was my craze for science," he continued in tones something like those of a boy whose voice was changing—the first part a high squeak, the last a subterranean rumble. "That was a time when thinkers were beginning to wonder if life might not be preserved in a subconscious condition. The man with whom I studied, Dr. Schnickelfriedheim"—

The last syllable of this extended name was cut off by a violent fit of coughing. It sounded to Miss Van Valkinburgh as if a cat had been caught in a leather pipe and was strangling. She did not know whether to cry for help or to take up a bellows that stood beside the fireplace and blow a passage through his windpipe. Before she could decide the paroxysm was over. The gentleman leaned back in his chair, holding his handkerchief to his mouth. There was every evidence of tears from the violent coughing except the tears. His eyes seemed as dry as his throat.

"I was speaking," he said presently, "of Professor Schnick"—

"Yes, yes, I know whom you mean; don't try it again," interposed the listener.

"He was a wonderful man."

"He must have been," Miss Van Valkinburgh hastened to put in, dreading lest another mention of his name might bring about another paroxysm.

"Half a century before our wonder workers of the Institute For Original Research learned how to introduce the organs of one living being into another, Professor"—

"I know whom you mean."

"Succeeded in extracting life's potentialities from the human system, leaving life itself to resume those po"—

At the difficult word the visitor's vocal organs again showed signs of collapse.

"Potentialities," supplied the lady.

"Whenever a successful process of revival was applied."

There was a weird look in the man's eyes, the look of one about to tumble into a grave, that proved the limit of Miss Van Valkinburgh's endurance.

"Excuse me for one moment," she said and hurried out of the room.

She hunted for the butler to go and get the visitor out of the house before he collapsed, but the butler had gone out on an errand. She spent some time telephoning for assistance; but, not knowing just what she wanted, there was no result. Then she took a peep into the parlor to find it vacant. The visitor had gone.

The next morning in the loft of the stable the coachman discovered a leathery looking thing resembling an Egyptian mummy. On searching it a paper was found pinned on the vest under the coat, buttoned over it, on which was written:

> The body of Edward Warren Schermerhorn. Desecrated by Professor Carl Schnickelfriedheimer Dec. 10, 1858.

Fortunately for science, a worker in the Institute For Original Research got wind of the matter and succeeded in getting possession of the mummy. It is not yet known what disposition has been made of it.

Now, who revived Mr. Schermerhorn, and how did he manage to get back to the home of his youth? That is the mystery of this story.

GIRLS' TIES.

Those of Windsor Silk In the College Colors Will Be Popular.

PLAID WINDSOR TIE.

Plaid silk windsor ties knotted under a roll collar of white pique are striking and please the fancy of the school or college girl. They harmonise admirably with the semitailored gowns which are suitable for classroom wear. When seeking something that will be a chic and appreciated addition to the college girl's wardrobe do not forget the utility of the windsor tie. Choose it of the school or college colors.

SEEN ON THE BEACH.

Bathing Costumes That Follow Fashions Approved For Ordinary Wear.

Bathing suits have lost their old time conventionality and adopted all the whims of the season—the tunic, ruffles and even the many colored striped materials.

Not to be outdone by other styles and fashions, those that govern bathing attire have taken cognizance of Roman striping and Scotch plaids.

Many of the caps show visors or trimming bands or puffed crowns of stripes or plaids. Some of the new bathing suits, too, are trimmed with girdles and waistcoats of stripes or plaids.

Bathing caps that are especially desirable have visors of rubberized silk mounted on stiff frames. These caps save much discomfort from the bright sunlight of the seashore. Some very pretty bathing caps made of rubberized silk are shirred into a rosette over each ear.

The small corsage bouquets of rubber flowers that made their appearance last year are still in evidence for the bather, and sometimes rubber flowers are used as trimming for bathing caps.

The slippers most popular for bathing are in the tango style, laced up the leg.

Combination Salads.

A delicious combination salad is the following: Shred fresh, crisp lettuce and on it arrange thin slices of beets and the whites of hard boiled eggs chopped fine. Add finely chopped gherkins and a little minced onion. Serve with mayonnaise dressing which is flavored with mustard.

Whatever sort of combination salad you make, prepare it daintily. Garnish it with slices of hard boiled eggs or minced white and yolk of hard boiled egg, olives, parsley, slices of pickles, slices of ripe tomato, nut meats or cheese balls.

Have the lettuce with which it is served always crisp and chilled. Then, no matter what sort of vegetables you utilize, the salad resulting will be worth eating.

Putting Away Dried Fruit.

Any dried fruit if put away with a little sassafras bark, about a handful to a bushel, will keep unmolested by worms. Dried fruit will have a better flavor if soaked before cooking in warm water to which a pinch of salt has been added.

THE MARKETS

Latest Quotations in Grain, Dairy Products, Live Stock, etc.

CHICAGO, Sept. 16.—Wheat went soaring today, largely because of reports of Austro-German advantages that made the end of the war appear remote. After a rise of as much as 5c a bushel the market closed nervous with gains of 4 1-8c to 4 5-8c net. Corn wound up 1-2c to 1 3-4c higher and oats at an advance of 1 3-4c to 1 7-8c. In provisions the outcome ranged from 10c decline to 20c of extra cost.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Sept. 16.—There was some demand from London for old crop Manitoba spring wheat, and sales of a few ordered loads were made for shipment to London at 44s 6d for No. 1 northern, which is 9d higher than the prices bid yesterday. There was no improvement in the demand on spot for coarse grains, and the market is very quiet. New crop, No. 2 Canadian western oats were offered for shipment within ten days at 55c per bushel afloat, without meeting with buyers. There was an increased demand from foreign buyers for spring wheat flour, and millers in some cases turned down orders for some round lots for October-November shipment on account of the prices bid not being up to their views. The local trade was more active today and the feeling much firmer on account of the renewed strength in the wheat markets. In mill feed the feeling is firm under a good demand. In butter business is rather quiet, and the tone of the market is easy. The demand for cheese is quiet. Eggs active and firm.

DULUTH GRAIN MARKET.

DULUTH, Sept. 16.—Wheat—No. 1 hard, $1.13½; No. 1 northern, $1.12½; No. 2 do., $1.08¼; Sept., $1.12; Dec., $1.13.

CATTLE MARKETS

UNION STOCK YARDS.

TORONTO, Sept. 16.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Yards were 58 cars, comprising 888 cattle, 1936 hogs, 1190 sheep and lambs and 85 calves.

Butchers' Cattle.

Choice steers sold at $8.50 to $8.70; loads of good, $8.25 to $8.50; medium to good, $7.75 to $8.15; medium, $7.50 to $7.75; common to medium, $7.25 to $7.50; inferior heifers, $6.50 to $7; choice cows, $6.75 to $7; good cows, $6.25 to $6.50; medium cows, $5.75 to $6; common cows, $3 to $4.50; choice bulls, $6.75 to $7.50; common bulls, $5 to $6.25.

Stockers and Feeders.

There was a fair supply, but quality was not up to the requirements of the demand. Choice steers, 800 to 900 lbs., sold at $7.25 to $7.50; good steers, 600 to 700 lbs., at $6.75 to $7; stockers at $5 to $6.50.

Milkers and Springers.

Receipts of milkers and springers were moderate, with prices firm. Choice cows sold at $80 to $90, and $100 for something extra. Medium to good cows sold from $50 to $70 each.

Veal Calves.

Receipts were light and prices very firm. Choice veal calves sold at $10 to $11; good at $8.50 to $9.50; medium at $7.50 to $8.50; common at $6.50 to $7.50; inferior at $5.50 to $6.50.

Sheep and Lambs.

Receipts of sheep and lambs were fairly large. Sheep, light ewes, sold $6 to $6.50; heavy ewes and rams at $4 to $5; culls, $2.50 to $3.50; lambs, $7.50 to $7.85, the bulk going at about $7.75; cull lambs, $6 to $6.50.

Hogs.

Selects fed and watered sold at $9.50, and $9.75 weighed off cars, and $9.15 to drovers at country points f.o.b. cars.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, Sept. 16.—At the Canadian Pacific live stock market the receipts of live stock for the week ending September 12th were [illegible] cattle, 2500 sheep and lambs, 1900 hogs and 900 calves, while the offerings on the market this morning for sale amounted to 1300 cattle, 4000 sheep and lambs, 1400 hogs and 500 calves.

There was no actual change in the condition of the market for butchers' cattle owing to the fact that supplies of such were not in excess of the requirements, but the tone of the market for canning stock was weaker on account of the liberal offerings, and prices declined 50c per 100 lbs., which went hard with the drovers, as most of them stated that they lost money, as they had to pay high prices in the country for the stock. There was a good demand from packers at the above reduction, and sales of cows were made at $3.25 to $3.75 and bulls at $4.50 to $5 per 100 lbs. The trade in butchers' cattle was fairly active, with sales of good steers at $8 to $8.25, fair at $7 to $7.75 and medium at $6.25 to $6.75, while butchers' cows brought from $5 to $7.50 and bulls $5.75 to $7.50 per 100 lbs.

Owing to the recent weakness in the Toronto market for hogs and the further reduction in prices of 25c per 100 lbs., a weaker feeling developed in the local market, and prices declined 10c to 25c per 100 lbs. The demand from packers for selected lots was good and sales were made at $9.75 to $10 per 100 lbs., weighed off cars, but the trade in heavy hogs was slow. There was a good demand for sheep and lambs, and an active trade was done at steady prices. Sales of Ontario lambs were made at $7.50 to $8 and Quebec stock at $6.50 to $7, while ewe sheep brought $4.75 to $5 per 100 lbs. Calves met with a good demand at prices ranging from $5 to $20 each, as to size and quality.

EAST BUFFALO LIVE STOCK.

EAST BUFFALO, Sept. 16.—Cattle—Receipts, 125; steady; prices, unchanged.

Veals—Receipts, 25; active; steady; $5 to $13.

Hogs—Receipts, 1600; active, higher; heavy, $9.60 to $9.90; mixed, yorkers and pigs, $9.90 to $10; roughs, $8.50 to $8.15; stags, $6.50 to $7.75.

Sheep and lambs—Receipts, 1000; active and steady; lambs, $5 to [illegible]; yearlings, $4.50 to $7.25; wethers, $6.25 to $6.50; ewes, $2.50 to $5.75; sheep, mixed, $5.75 to $6.

SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Lesson XII.—Third Quarter, For Sept. 20, 1914.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Matt. xxv, 31-46. Memory Verses, 34-36—Golden Text, Matt. xxv, 45—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

To understand this lesson as to the interpretation of it, the time when and the parties concerned, we must notice carefully the first verse and the words, "When the Son of Man shall come in His glory and all the holy angels with Him, then shall He sit upon the throne of His glory." That defines clearly the time when, and also that the judgment referred to is not the judgment of the saints, His redeemed ones, for when He shall come in His glory they shall come with Him, the Old Testament as well as the New Testament saints, if we may make that distinction. Let the Holy Spirit tell you about this as you read Zech. xiv, 5; Col. iii, 4; I Thess. iii, 13; Rev. iii, 21.

Then, as to the people to be judged, note the second verse of the lesson, "Before Him shall be gathered all nations." Could anything be more clear and plain in this connection than the statements in Joel iii, 1-2, that in connection with the restoration and deliverance of His people, Israel, He will gather all nations in the valley of Jehoshaphat and judge them because of their treatment of Israel? In Zeph. iii, 8, He says that it is His determination to gather the nations and pour upon them His indignation, and in the rest of that chapter He calls upon Israel to be glad and rejoice, for He will be mighty in their midst and get them praise and fame in every land where they have been put to shame.

In Zech. xiv, 2, He says that He will gather all nations against Jerusalem to battle; in verse 4 that He will stand again upon the Mount of Olives, and in verse 9 that after that He will be king over all the earth. Let us then be clear about this—that in this judgment among those to be judged will not be found His body, the church, for she shall be with Him, nor Israel, for she is not reckoned among the nations (Num. xxiii, 9). There is no mention of any resurrection of the dead, just or unjust, so it is not the judgment of the saints who shall never come into judgment for sin (John v, 24), because that was settled on Calvary, but shall be judged for their works after the first resurrection at the judgment seat of Christ for believers only (I Thess. iv, 16-18; I Cor. xv, 51, 52; Rom. xiv, 10; II Cor. v, 10).

It is not the great white throne judgment of Rev. xx, 11-15, where the unrighteous shall appear after their resurrection a thousand years later than the resurrection of the just (Rev. xx, 5-6).

It is simply, as the record says, a judgment of nations, as such, by their respective armies, and the question is their good or ill treatment of His people, Israel. As all individual salvation is through Jesus of Nazareth of the tribe of Judah and king of the Jews, so the salvation of nations will be through Him also, but in connection with a righteous Israel, who will receive Him as their Messiah when they shall see Him coming in His glory to the Mount of Olives for their deliverance. They shall then say, "Lo, this is our God; we have waited for Him, and He will save us; this is Jehovah, we have waited for Him; we will be glad and rejoice in His salvation."

After that "Israel shall blossom and bud and fill the face of the earth with fruit" (Isa. xxv, 9; xxvii, 6). Then shall the saved nations who shall hear Him say, "Come, ye blessed," inherit the kingdom when the kingdoms under the whole heaven shall have become the kingdom of our Lord and of His Christ and shall walk in the light of the new Jerusalem and bring their glory and honor into it (Rev. xi, 15; xxi, 24).

The others shall hear Him say, "Depart, ye cursed," and shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord and from the glory of His power (II Thess. i, 7-9).

Any one who denies the truth of everlasting punishment, according to the last verse of our lesson, must reject the plain words of the Lord Jesus in this passage and elsewhere, as in Mark ix, 43, 45, 47.

In this last verse of our lesson the same word is applied to punishment as to life (revised version). I have endeavored to show the teaching of the Bible concerning the judgments in a tract entitled "The Four Judgments," which may be obtained from Mr. Fred Kelker, box 216, Harrisburg, Pa. If you send for it ask also for "The Secret of Missionary Interest" and see how God honors the simple exposition of His word.

If this lesson does not refer to the church except as seen with the Lord on His throne, where is the heart lesson for the believer? Here is one, at least, the great "inasmuch" principle, which always holds good. Whatever any believer does in His name He counts as done to Himself and will reward it accordingly. Opportunities missed will bring us loss.

Numerous Fairy Tales Are Made in Germany

Proofs are constantly accumulating as to the absolute unreliability of the war news communicated to the press by the German government either directly and officially or through the Wolff and Havas press agencies, which are subsidised and directed by the German authorities. It is necessary to compare the reports emanating from these sources with facts as subsequently revealed to prove this.

The paragraphs of alleged British news circulated by the official German news bureau and the Wolff and Havas news agencies are simply grotesque in their absolute untruthfulness. On August 23rd, for instance, the "Pester Lloyd" announced on official authority: "The efforts of the British Government to raise an emergency army of half a million men have failed completely, only two thousand reporting themselves for military service. In spite of this, however, the War Office declare that 100,000 men have been enrolled in two weeks."

On the same date the people of Berlin were told by their papers on the same authority: "Abnormal conditions continue to reign in the British money market, notwithstanding the intervention of the Government and of the Bank of England. Even the leading houses are refusing to meet bills of exchange in London, as well as bills of lading and confirmed credit."

The following veracious item of war news, issued officially at Berlin August 22nd was circulated through the German wireless stations and received by the Marconi Company: 'It is reported from Constantinople that Turkish students arriving there from England describe the situation in that country as bad. Opposition to the war is growing, and rebellion is feared among the working-classes."

The Hamburger Fremdenblatt of August 30th published the following telegram from the Wolff bureau in Berlin: "The two small cruisers Stralsund and Strassburg in the last few days have made a forward movement in the southern part of the North Sea. During this operation the Strassburg sighted on the British coast two hostile submarines, one of which she sank with several shots, at long range. The Stralsund was engaged with several torpedoboat destroyers at long range. Two destroyers were damaged. The two German cruisers were quite undamaged."

The fighting referred to was described in the following brief report issued by the British Press Bureau early on the morning of August 19: "Some desultory fighting has taken place during the day between the British patrolling squadrons and flotillas and German reconnoitering cruisers. No losses are reported or claimed. A certain liveliness is apparent in the southern area of the North Sea."

As a matter of fact, no British submarine was sunk and no destroyers were damaged.

The Kolnische Zeitung of August 21 published an official list of the officers and men who lost their lives through the sinking of the German submarine U 15 by the British light cruiser Birmingham on August 9th, but the circumstances under which the submarine were sunk were carefully suppressed, the report merely stating: "Submarine U 15 did not return on August 12 from a submarine reconnaissance. The dead are twenty-three in number and include Kapitan-leutnant Zerrath, and Marine-oberingenieus Grundler."

An outstanding illustration of the utter unreliability of the "officially" communicated news published in Germany and sent to neutral countries was the famous story that forty pounds sterling a month was being offered to sailors on board German fishing smacks to join the British navy.

Prior to the acknowledgment of the Russian advance into East Prussia, on various dates German semi-official communiques had told the public that the German troops in Russia had defeated the Russians at Stalluponen and had then driven them from Gumbinnen, taking 8,000 prisoners and eight guns. Similar communiques reported other German successes, which in each case were said to have forced the Russians to retreat towards the frontier. It being possible no longer to conceal the truth, on August 23rd a communique issued admitting that Russian troops were in possession of Gumbinnen. This incident alone is enough to demonstrate the worth of these German semi-official military communiques.

A well-known correspondent of a London daily in Switzerland lately drew attention to the fact that the press of Switzerland and of all the neutral countries, including that of Sweden and Norway, was being worked from the official German press bureaus to engender a pro-German propaganda. The Wolff press agency, according to this correspondent, is a mere creature of the official German press bureau. He writes under date of August 27th: "I do not see in the English papers which I have as yet received any news from the 'Agence Wolff' of Germany, and for obvious reasons. Wolff, however, is exceedingly busy in the Swiss press, and, indeed, I believe in that of all neutral countries. One day we were told by this assiduous educator of public opinion that all the German Socialist members of the Reichstag waited on the Emperor recently, together with the other members of that body (to tender an assurance of their loyalty and devotion). Unfortunately, however, presently comes a copy of the Berliner Tageblatt, which states that no Socialist members were present. Quite recently I read Wolff's solemn assurance that no British troops had landed in Belgium. A day or two afterwards the same veracious agency reports that 'General French has left for Belgium to take command of the English troops there.' On the same day I read an article by, I think, a Swiss, at any rate by an independent witness who knew nothing of Wolff, describing the landing of British troops in Belgium and France."

Her Art Not Appreciated.

Varnishing day at the Royal academy is always an important and interesting function. Canvases and panels that have been thirsty enough to absorb the oil from the whole or portions of the pictures painted upon them have once more the luster of their first painting restored by these pick-me-ups.

Members of the year's hanging committee are always at hand on these occasions to consider suggestions and complaints about their recent labors. The chief complaint was by a lady who found her work had been hung horizontally instead of vertically. Unkind friends cautioned her that possibly it had been accepted on the horizontal understanding.—New York Sun.

DESTRUCTION OF GERMAN CRUISER HELA BY SUBMARINE; ONE OF CREW TELLS STORY

London, Sept. 17.—The Harwich correspondent of the Daily Telegraph sends a story of how the German cruiser Hela was destroyed, as told by one of the crew of submarine E9: In the early hours of Sunday morning, two or three British submarines were stalking the Hela, about six miles off the German coast. The wind was freshening and the sea beginning to get rougher.

The E9 came to the surface at half-past six and sighted the enemy, which was seen to be within range. With all possible speed E9 dived and, at a suitable depth, launched two torpedoes, at intervals of 15 seconds. Whether both struck is not definitely known, but one of them certainly was effective, as an explosion followed. E9 remained below about a quarter of an hour and then came to the surface briefly for a survey, which showed the Hela listing badly. There were other German ships in the vicinity, but none were active fighting units.

The submarine prudently dived again at once. After an interval of something over a quarter of an hour it came to the surface again, but the Hela had disappeared. The submarine got away safely, but was unable to make a report of her achievement to the admiralty until to-day, when she first got within wireless range. The submarine crew say their boat was never seen by the enemy either before or after the blow was struck.

The Hela ranks as a small protected cruiser, having a displacement of 2,400 tons, and a complement of 178. She was 328 feet long, with a beam of thirty-six feet. She was built by Weser, of Berlin, and was laid down in 1893 and finished in 1896. In 1910 the Hela was refitted.

PAID TERRIBLE PRICE FOR AVENGING SISTER'S HONOR

Story of Aerschot Sacking and Murder of Burgomaster and Son

London, September 17. — The Standard publishes the following story from a correspondent, whose faith the editor of the Standard guarantees, but whose name he refuses to give.

"One of the blackets pages in the invasion of Belgium is the sacking of Aerschot and the murder of the burgomaster and his son. I had the story from a resident of Aerschot, who is now a refugee in Antwerp. He said that every word was true.

"When the German troops, under General von Boehn, entered Aerschot, the idea of the burgomaster was to save the town and people from the dreadful fate of Louvain. He awaited the Germans at the entrance to the town, and to General von Boehn made offers of hospitality.

The general was gracious enough, and said that so long as everybody in the place showed the quietest demeanor the town and the lives of those in it were safe. It not, the reprisals would be pitiless.

"The burgomaster offered the hospitality of his own house to the general and his officers, and this was also accepted.

"General von Boehn, with his chief of staff and another officer, took up their quarters under the roof of the mayor, where everything possible was done for their comfort. At night the general and his officers dined with the family, consisting of the burgomaster, his wife and their son and daughter. The meal progressed with every sign of congenialty and the conduct of the officers was perfectly respectful and normal, but toward the end of the dinner they drank very freely and kept on drinking afterwards. By the time everybody was retiring to bed the three Germans were much the worse for drink.

"In the early hours of the morning the members of the household were roused by a shriek from the room occupied by the daughter. The son rushed and found his sister struggling in the arms of the chief of staff, who was still tipsy.

"The yuong man, aroused to a frenzy, attacked the scoundrel. There was a fierce struggle, which ended in the son shooting the chief of staff.

"The tragedy was witnessed by most of the household, including the male and female servants, but the shot did not arouse the general and the other officer, drunkenly asleep in their beds. The terrified household had to await until morning for the announcement of the tragedy. The next morning the body of the chief of staff was discovered by the officer. The general was terribly cold in his wrath. 'The price must be paid,' he said.

"The burgomaster, his wife, son and daughter, even the servants, pleaded pitifully, but General von Boehn knew his duty.

The burgomaster, his son, and two manservants were put up against the wall and shot. The carnage in the streets, with burning, hacking and stabbing followed.'

POLICE FOUND WOMAN BOUND AND GAGGED

Montreal, Sept. 17. — When the police were called to 409 Dorchester Street West yesterday afternoon they found Mrs. J. Ysolda, the occupant of the place, tightly bound to a chair by ropes, gagged by a rough cloth and in an unconscious condition. The woman, who is of Spanish nationality, was taken to the Western Hospital, where a deep gash on the head was treated.

Eight hours after she had been taken to the hospital Mrs. Ysolda recovered consciousness, and told a strange story. She was sitting in a front room, the front door was opened by a servant girl, and two men suddenly entered. One stepped towards her. From that point the woman's mind is apparently a blank, as she has no recollection of what followed. A search of the place by the police revealed the fact that $75 had been stolen from a purse and valuable jewels are also thought to have been taken. Mrs. Ysolda told detectives who were put on the case that she could readily identify the two men, and that she had an idea who they were, altnough she could not give their names.

Still Suffering From Shock.

As soon as the police were notified, Detectives Weston and French were put on the case. A careful watch over the house was maintained all night, and several clues were followed up, but at an early hour this morning no arrests were made. Mrs. Ysolda, although somewhat improved since being taken to the Western Hospital, still remains in a serious condition. The gash in her forehead was sewn up last night, six stitches being necessary to close the wound. She is very weak from the shock, and the doctors fear a relapse.

Mrs. Ysolda is a widow who has been in the city a little over two months, having taken a two-room apartment at the Dorchester street house about a month ago. She told the police that she had heard of a woman next door being robbed under similar circumstances last week. The police are investigating.

Worthy to Wear a Crown.

"Are you sure you love your neighbor as yourself?' asked St. Peter, who was cross examining the new arrival.

"Yes," answered the applicant for a golden crown. "For ten years he used my telephone to carry on his business and I never complained."

"Enter, my good man," said St. Peter, with much feeling.—Birmingham Age-Herald.

HOLD SON JUST MARRIED, AT HIS OWN HOME

Parents Displeased Because Bride is of Another Faith

Montreal, Sept. 17.—Because his father would not allow him to leave his home and return to his nineteen-year-old bride, Mrs. Armand Grenier appealed to the police in an effort to obtain her husband. The young couple were married by Rev. Thomas E. Bourke, of Mountain Street Methodist Church, some time ago, but it was only last night that they made the announcement to their parents.

The father and mother of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. Aubry, who reside in Seigneurs street, did not have any objections, although they thought their daughter rather young to get married and felt she should have told them before she took such a step. But it was different with the parents of the bridegroom.

Grenier, who claims to be twenty-one years of age, was a Roman Catholic. Before the girl, who is a Methodist, would consent to marry him, he had to embrace her religion. This he finally consented to do.

When the bridegroom went to his father's home in Savignac lane last night, together with one of his brothers-in-law, to acquaint his father of the fact that he was married, obtain his blessing and remove his belongings to his new home, he met with a reception of an unexpected nature. When he broke the news of his marriage his father was astounded. He would not believe it as first. But when the young man exhibited his marriage certificate, signed by Rev. Mr. Bourke and the witnesses of the ceremony, the father's surprise was even greater. He could not understand his son deserting his church to get married while there were scores of young women of his own faith among whom he could have selected one.

The outcome of the matter was that the bridegroom's father was angry, but every one of his relatives appeared to be upset.

Forbidden to Leave House.

Young Grenier was forbidden by his father to leave the house. He was given to understand that not only would he be prevented from leaving the house, but that he would not be allowed to remove any of his belongings. The brother of the bride, who had accompanied Grenier to his home to assist him in removing his clothing and other belongings, had to return alone to his sister to inform her that her husband's father would not allow him out. He said that his brother-in-law was anxious to return to his wife, but he was afraid of his father and would not dare leave the house after he had forbidden him to do so.

Then followed a visit of the bride and her mother to police headquarters, accompanied by the brother who had gone to Grenier's house with him. They explained the condition of affairs to one of the officers at headquarters, but was informed that it was a case in which the police could not act. The young man could leave his father's house if he desired to do so, but the police could not compel him to leave, or order his father to put him out.

The only advice the police could offer was that, if the young man was being detained against hs will, the bride might be able to take a civil action against her father-in-law for depriving her of the comfort and support of her husband.

One thing that appeared to bother the young woman and her mother was as to whether on account of Grenier having been a Roman Catholic his father could have the marriage declared illegal because they had been married by a Protestant minister. The police could not give them much advice on that point, but thought that if Grenier embraced the Methodist belief before the marriage ceremony the union would be legal.

DUM-DUM BULLETS

With reference to the unverified story from Berlin that on the 7th or 8th of September, Emperor William forwarded a communication to the President of the United States, stating that the British army on the Continent was using Dum-dum or explosive bullets, and protesting thereat as a violation of The Hague Conventions, it is interesting to find in despatches from Paris to the English papers on Aug. 23 the following:

"A further note has been sent to The Hague by the French Government protesting against the use of Dum-dum bullets by the Germans. The text of the note is as follows:

"The Government of the French Republic has the honour of informing the Powers signing The Hague Conventions of the following facts, constituting on the part of the German military authorities a violation of the conventions signed by the German Government on Oct. 18, 1907:

"On Aug. 10, 1914, after an engagement between French and German regiments, a major in the medical service sent to the general commanding the infantry brigade a clip of cartridges found on the Munster road near the German customs office, which contained five cartridges loaded with cylindro-conical bullets cut at the point, the nickel covering of which was incomplete and left exposed the fore end of the loaded core. Other similar bullets have been found in the bodies of the French dead and have been sent to the War Office. The Declaration of The Hague, dated July 29th, 1899, and signed by Germany, condemns the use of such bullets in the following terms: 'The contracting Powers forbid the use of bullets which expand or flatten easily in the human body, such as bullets with a hard envelope which either do not completely cover the core or have an incision in them.' The government of the Republic protests against such proceedings."

The British Government has emphatically denied that expansive bullets have been used in the British army during the present war; but so far as is known the German authorities have not denied the circumstantial charge made by the French Government.

It might be explained that Dum-dum is the arsenal in India where the ammunition for the Indian army is made and that no expansive bullets have been used in the rifle cartridges manufactured there for many years. The name Dum-dum became identified with expansive bullet on account of the issue of cartridges with bullets of that description turned out at the Indian arsenal for use in one of the many border wars, the object being to increase the stopping power of the small calibre cartridge when used against hordes of fanatical tribesmen. There was a violent protest aroused against the use of this ammunition in England and none of it has been issued or made since at Dum-dum.

Cannot Continue the Credit System

Brantford, Sept. 17.—The monthly meeting of the Grocers' and Butchers' association was held last night, when the matter of giving credit was again discussed. Some of the merchants claim that while some of their customers are trying to pay up, many are expecting the same amount of goods and credit as in good times when there is plenty of work and they are earning full wages.

The grocers are unanimous in saying that that they could not and would continue to give such credit, as it is impossible for the average merchant to carry customers any further as their own credit is limited.

The London audience that hooted at futurist music will doubtless enter the plea that the orchestra hooted first.

According to a Roumanian scientist old age is simply due to a decrease in the amount of water in the human system.

DRYDOCK IS LOST TO CITY

Property Owners Refused Price in Advance of Valuators

In accordance with an item appearing in the Review, a few days ago making reference to the notice Mr. Burnham received of the intention of the Dominion Government to abandon the dry-dock scheme here, on account of the refusal of a number of property owners to take the Government offer which was an increase over the value of the two valuators, the official papers have been forwarded, it is understood, to the superintendent of the canal here for registration, finally abandoning all claim to the property.

The two property owners who had accepted the valuation, were Mr. Noyes and the representatives of the John Burnham estate, the latter being a small block of land near the extensive property of Mr. Noyes. The history of this scheme is that Mr. Burnham, two years ago asked for the establishment of a dry dock here. This was arranged for. The land was acquired and all surveys made but the Government decided that this scheme should be greatly extended by, as a matter fact, five times as big as the original scheme suggested by Mr. Burnham.

To carry this out it was necessary to purchase six and a half acres of land and to have a siding of the C.P.R. built into the property. Some of the property owners however stoutly refused to take any sum near the valuation made and as a consequence the Government has preferred to abandon the whole scheme.

It is most unfortunate and will result no doubt in the plan being realized somewhere else and will deprive Peterboro and especially the Ashburnham part of it of an extensive and important industry.

WAR BREAKS OUT ON SMITH STREET

Hostilities Commenced When Children Made Too Much Noise

Two women who had a little war all their own on Smith street, where they reside, were in police court this morning. It was stated that the children of one of the women was making too much noise and that the other woman resented this, and it finally resulted in one of the women striking the other on the eye with her fist. The other retaliated with some very abusive language. It was simply a case of one being quick of fist and the other quick of tongue.

Magistrate Dumble, after lecturing them, bound them over to keep the peace, warning them of the punishment they would receive if it happened again.

Charge of Non-Support.

The case of W. J. Lintock, charged with non-support of wife and family, was enlarged one week. The defendant pleaded not guilty to the charge, although Chief Thompson said that his wife had been out working in order to support the family.

Not Anxious to Work.

William Walraven, a Hollander, was charged with vagrancy. It appears that he has had several jobs, but did not stay with them, as he was none too anxious to work. He is also $25 behind in his board bill. The case was enlarged one week, and he must find work and report to the chief of police at the end of the week.

A Different Case.

Edward Hayes rode the bumpers on a C. P. R. freight from Havelock to Peterborough. He pleaded guilty, but when explaining that he did not have any too much money and was heading for the woods to work for the Peterboro Lumber Co., he was reprimanded and let go.

Dog Must Depart.

William Whitworth has been allowing a dog to run at large which was a nuisance to the city. He explained that the dog was tied up in a shed, but broke loose and got out unknown to him. If the dog is not disposed of in one week, he must pay a fine of five dollars.

A recently patented case for smokers is arranged to hold cigars in one side and cigarettes and matches in the other.

TEAMSTERS GRIEVANCE IS AIRED

Are Farmers Getting Preference Over Local Men?

Board of Works Promises to Make an Investigation

As light was unavailable in the committee room of the City Hall last evening, the Board of Works decided to hold their meeting in the Council Chamber in preference to struggling in the darkness. A deputation of several ratepayers who earn their livelihood by driving a team, awaited Alderman Duncan's committee and presented a complaint that Mr. Brown, who was supplying gravel for Messrs. Foley and Gleason, was employing farmers and ignoring citizens. On motion of Alderman Stratton and Alderman Anderson, the chairman and the City Engineer will bring the matter before the paving contractors and ask that it be rectified.

Applications for Watchman.

Applications were received by the Board from James Murray and Andrew Robinson for the positions of night watchman of the outfall sewer and street paving, respectively. The matter of appointing men for these positions was left in the hands of the City Engineer.

Requests Granted.

A letter was received from John Allan, asking that Walton street, from Weller to Homewood, be provided with concrete sidewalks. Another letter from J. E. Allen was received. This requested that the sidewalk from Aylmer street east on Townsend be extended 62 feet. The meeting decided to grant both requests.

Engineer to Report.

The letter recently referred to the Board by the Council re sewer and water facilities for the property southeast of the Lift Lock, recently purchased by Mr. Diamond of Toronto, came up for discussion. The City Engineer was ordered to prepare a report of cost, etc., and present it at a later meeting.

Wants Street Watered.

A letter was read from Mr. E. G. Patterson, requesting that the street in front of the Canadian General Electric Company be watered. Alderman Duncan and City Engineer Parsons were ordered to investigate the matter.

To Construct Sewers.

A recommendation from the Board of Health for sewers on Adeline, Baker and Clara streets from Patterson to their terminals was adopted as far as Adeline and Baker were concerned, but the City Engineer gave out the information that the crown of Clara street was not high enough to warrant a sewer being constructed, hence no action was taken.

TRACES OF GAS AND COAL DISCOVERED IN DOURO

Find is Made at Rear of Blacksmith Shop, During Drilling Operations

Coal and natural gas—the forerunners of a boom for any industrial centre—have been located within ten miles of this city. The exact spot is at the rear of Charles Ellis' blacksmith shop about thirty or forty feet east of St. Joseph's Church, Douro, which is nine and a half miles from this city.

For the past few days Mr. Ellis has been drilling a well, the operation being carried on by driller Edwards of Keene. On Tuesday when down a little over fifty feet the men noticed gas fumes and the deeper they went the stronger the fumes became.

Yesterday when down about eighty feet a vein of coal presumably about a foot in thickness was bored through and immediately below it another pocket of gas was found. The fumes became so strong that the men capped the top of the hole and lighted it. The flame which resulted was some three or four feet in length and from six o'clock in the evening till eleven o'clock it burned steadily. It was then found necessary to extinguish it by smothering. The absence of water gives reason for the belief that coal and gas are to be had in abundance and today the drilling is being continued. It is Mr. Ellis' intention to drill away till water is found or the coal or gas amounts to something.

This is not the first time gas has been struck at Douro. A couple of years ago while drilling operations were being carried on at the residence of Rev. Father McGuire, heavy fumes arose from the hole but as perfect water was found at a depth of sixty feet the operations were discontinued in case the water at a greater depth would be unfit for use. The fact that gas was there, drew several Pennsylvania and Ohio magnates to the spot but no steps were taken to have it developed.

OBITUARY

The death occurred this morning of Thomas L. Riley, at Oak Orchard, Harvey. He was born in Fort Wayne, Indiana, fifty-one years ago. The burial will take place in Cleveland, Ohio.

JOHN R. BUCHANAN.

There passed away this afternoon a well-known resident of this city, in the person of John Robert Buchanan, 524 Paterson street, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John B. Buchanan. He was 34 years of age and had been a resident of this city practically all his life. He was born in this city. Up to the time of his illness he was employed by the C. G. E. Co., as a machinist. His death will be regretted by a large circle of friends who held him in high esteem. He was a man of exemplary character and of sterling qualities. Left to mourn his loss are his sorrowing wife and one little daughter, Mary; also one brother, George H., and three sisters, Mrs. A. C. Harran, Mrs. O. C. Callender and Mrs. T. F. Diarden, all of Peterborough. The The funeral will take place Saturday afternoon at 2.30 from his late residence to the Little Lake cemetery. the sympathy of many friends will go out to them in their bereavement.

BOY SCOUTS ASSOCIATION

The Crying Need is Men to Lead the Boys

Again it has been shown that the men of the British Empire are men of character, integrity and honour and again has it been shown that this same honour must be thoroughly inculcated within the hearts of the rising generation assisting them to become good, useful, honourable, upright citizens.

The principle of the Boy Scouts Association is already showing its mark upon the boys of this generation, and can be made of great help to the boys of any centre if only the men can be procured to lead.

The secret of the Boy Scouts' Association is that the leader merely organizes the work, suggests the ambition, and the boy has full liberty in accomplishing the object aimed at. Freedom without organized aim would be chaos.

The scoutmaster initiates the ambition in the boy leaving him free to gain his objective in his own way; he does not instruct, he leads the boy on to learn for himself. Thus it is that as he successfully accomplishes one step after another the boy develops the calmness of confidence and self-reliance, and the cheerfulness of freedom and triumph.

There is good work to be accomplished in any community if only the men can be induced to lead; to give a few hours each week on behalf of the boys. It is a noble work to help mould the boys into good citizens for Canada.

It is a work that calls for men on the firing line under the banner of good citizenship. Reader will you help? The boys want leaders, "Men, give us men."

Any information will be gladly forwarded by applying to the Provincial Secretary, Bloor and Sherbourne Sts., Toronto, Ont.

WAS FINED FOR SELLING TO INDIAN

Hearing of the Appeal is Adjourned

The appeal of Alexander Elliott & Co. against a decision of Magistrate Dumble, given some time ago, in which the company was fined $50 and costs for supplying Sam Knott, an Indian, with liquor, came before Judge Huycke yesterday. Owing to Sam Knott not being present, counsel for the license department, W. H. Moore, K.C., asked for an adjournment. G. N. Gordon, acting for the plaintiff, had no objection, so the case was laid over for a week.

James Parcels, of Havelock, who was committed for trial by a board of magistrates at Havelock for stealing goods from a storehouse belonging to a rag gatherer, appeared before his honor, but as the owner of the storehouse was absent, the case was adjourned till Wednesday, Sept. 23.

MILITARY UNIFORMS

In many houses in the city there are uniforms, belts, some rifles, side arms, and other equipment belonging to the 57th Regiment. These in some cases have been left by soldiers now out of the city. The equipment is urgently needed and will be called for if a card is sent to Capt. A. G. Carruthers, 138 Hunter St.

Persons unlawfully having these articles in their possession are liable to a fine of $20.

We cordially invite you to be present at our Opening Display of the Latest Styles in Millinery

SOME FACTS BEARING ON THE CONFLICT

By the Treaty of London, signed on November 15th, 1831, the neutrality of Belgium was guaranteed by Austria, Russia, Great Britain and Prussia. This was renewed by a second Treaty of London, signed on April 19, 1839. Again in 1870, on the outbreak of the Franco-Prussian War, a treaty for the neutrality of Belgium (re-offering the treaties of 1831 and 1839) was signed between Great Britain and Prussia on August 9, 1870; and signed also by France two days later, on August 11. The Kingdom of Prussia is now the leading state of the German Empire and its king, Wilhelm II., is German Emperor. Neutrality is the state or condition of being neutral, that is, of not being on or inclined to one side or another; particularly, according to international law, the condition of a state which abstains from taking part in a dispute between other states. The British Government declared war on Germany because Germany refused to give assurances that she would respect the neutrality of Belgium in her war against France. After violating the neutrality of Luxemburg, Germany declared war on Belgium, owing to Belgium's refusal to allow German troops to violate Belgian neutrality guaranteed by international treaty, by crossing Belgian territory in order to get at the French. The maintenance of Belgian and Dutch independence is vital to the British Empire, as the seaports of Belgium and Holland dominate the Channel and the North Sea, Great Britain's main lines of communication by water. As already stated, Germany had signed the treaty guaranteeing the neutrality of Belgium. She was a joint guarantor with Great Britain. Sir William Goschen, British ambassador at Berlin, just before the war, explained to Dr. Von Bethmann-Holweg, the German imperial chancellor, the British view of the matter. "A solemn compact had to be kept, or what confidence could any one have in Great Britain's engagements in the future?" The chancellor thought it was "terrible" that Great Britain should go to war with Germany "just for a word, 'neutrality,' a word which in war times had so often been disregarded; just for a scrap of paper. Great Britain was going to make war on a kindred nation who desired nothing better than to be friends with her." The German secretary of state, Herr Von Jagow, was sorry that he couldn't assure the Ambassador that Germany would refrain from violating Belgian neutrality. The German government had been obliged to take that step in order to gain the advantage of invading France by the quickest and easiest way; if they had gone by the more southern route, a great loss of time would have been entailed. The two German statesmen thus gave to the world in a very striking fashion the Berlin view of international morality. Until its violation by Germany, the neutrality of Belgium had been recognized and respected by all the states of Europe. The immediate pretext for the terrible war which Germany forced upon Europe was Austria's declaration of war on Servia as a punishment for the alleged complicity of Servia in the plot which led to the assassination of the Austrian heir to the throne. Russia stepped in to save the sovereignty of Servia, whereupon Germany declared war on Russia, and then on France, Russia's ally in the dual alliance and the friend of Great Britain in the Entente Cordiale.

Cost of the South African war to Great Britain: £222,974,000. Killed in action, 5,744; wounded, 22,829; died of wounds or disease in South Africa, 16,168. These are official figures of the British Government.

Strategy and tactics are the two great branches of the art of war. They are so closely interwoven that to distinguish precisely the one from the other is probably impossible. Strategy may be defined as the art of planning and directing important military movements or operations; the scientific handling of masses or combinations of soldiers not actually engaged in battle or under the fire of the enemy, and securing topographical points or lines most favorable for attack, defence, retreat, supply, etc. Tactics may be described as the art of handling troops in the presence of the enemy, or applying on the field of battle the movements learned at drill. Lieut.-Col. A. W. Alsager Pollock, a noted military authority of the British army, gives these definitions: "Strategy is the science of handling troops in the theatre of war, so that they shall as often as possible be where the enemy least desires or expects them. Tactics is the art of handling troops on the battlefield, so that they shall incur the minimum loss compatible with inflicting the maximum upon their opponents." "Strategy," this authority continues, "is a constant influence (unless the so-called strategist in command is very incompetent), but the influence of tactics is only intermittent. That is to say, the manoeuvres of an army in the theatre of war are one and all ordered and executed in accordane with the original or modified plan of campaign; but the battles resulting from those manoeuvres are merely tactical incidents of the strategical operations in progress. Albeit every tactical effort has, or ought to have, a strategical object. A general whose 'strategy' includes not the fighting of decisive battles for his strategical ends need not hope to attain those ends; nor need he who seeks success in battle from manoeuvres calculated merely to 'dislodge his opponent except to advantage materially the strategical or tactical prospects of his side. To manoeuvre an opponent out of a position, with a loss of 5 per cent. of his force, at a cost of the same percentage of your own, is nothing; but forcibly to throw him out with a loss of 10 per cent., even though your own losses be as great or greater, is real tactical business."

PEACE ALMOST ASSURED WHEN GERMANY ACTED

Sir Maurice de Bunsen, Late British Ambassador at Vienna, Tells of Diplomatic Negotiations --- Austria and Russia Would Have Settled Differences but for Germany's Action

LONDON, Sept. 17.—The Foreign Office issued last evening in the form of a white paper, the report of Sir Maurice de Bunsen, late British Ambassador at Vienna, on the rupture of diplomatic relations with Austria, in which the Ambassador declares that Austria and Russia had about reached an agreement on the Austro-Servian dispute when their conversations "were cut short by the transfer of the dispute to the more dangerous ground of a direct conflict between Germany and Russia."

The ambassador says that although two days previously he had refused to consent to the continuance of the conversations at St. Petersburg, Count von Berchthold, the Austro-Hungarian Minister of Foreign Affairs, on July 30, although Russia had been partially mobilized, agreed in a most friendly manner that the conversations should be continued.

"From now onwards," says the Ambassador, "the tension between Germany and Russia was much greater than between Austria and Russia, as between the latter an arrangement seemed almost in sight, and on Aug. 1st I was informed that Austria had agreed to mediate the question.

"Count Schebeko, the Russian Ambassador, to the end was working hard for peace. He was employing the most conciliatory language to Count von Berchthold, and he informed me that the latter, as well as Count Forgach, has responded in the same spirit.

"Germany intervened on July 31 by means of her double ultimatum to St. Petersburg and Paris. These ultimatums were of a kind to which only one reply was possible and Germany declared war on Russia, Aug. 1, and on France Aug. 3.

"A few days delay, might, in all probability, have saved Europe from one of the greatest calamities in history."

The Ambassador then refers to the rupture of diplomatic relations between Austria and the allied powers, the details of which have already been published.

KING OF BELGIUM WORKED AS REPORTER

Standing supremely unique among the figures who are making history in the great war, which will mark a new era for Europe, is Albert, King of the Belgians, newspaperman, expert engineer, lover of mankind and one of the most democratic of rulers.

Nobody ever heard much of Albert Leopold Clement Maria Meinrad before that eventful day when he sent word to his soldiers at Liege to "hold out" against the Germans massing at Herbestal. The exhortation breathed such a dauntless assurance that those who read smiled grimly and a little sadly as they reflected that tiny Belgium would prove a tidbit for the Teuton war hosts.

But Liege surprised them, and Albert King of Belgium, which is said to enjoy more prosperity per capita than any other European country, was soon riding at the head of his army of 200,000 men.

Europe has long wondered at Albert, King of Belgium. His undoubted business ability and his manner of dealing with the Socialists so that the Socialists, cursing most labor conditions, paused to praise their ruler, has worried autocrats like the German Emperor.

A Great Athlets

There are few things that this accomplished king cannot do or hasn't done. He fights, rides, swims, shoots, and engages in aviation, engineering and writing with equal facility. He was a newspaperman for a long time, carrying a police card, visiting police stations and doing what is known as "ship news." As a reporter, it is said, he was a "snappy" worker, who scored many beats and obtained timely pictures.

King Albert is more than six feet in height and has a fair complexion and golden hair. He is 39 years old, is married to a woman to whom he is unusually devoted and has three children. He is the son of the deaf Duke of Flanders, and it was the mysterious death of his brother, the Prince of Baudoin, which made his accession to the throne possible.

KING ALBERT OF BELGIUM

In 1898 he visited America, and spent much time in New York, Washington and the east, went west and stayed for months in St. Paul, Minn.

The king, who is a great cyclist and an extraordinarily brave man, went to the Congo and pierced that fever-ridden country soon after his accession to the throne. The things he saw there caused him to sell all of the possessions of Belgium in that region after he had ameliorated the conditions under which the natives lived.

Dismantled Wooden Navy

The one desire of the king was to establish a merchant marine and later a navy. After he had reviewed the "navy" of Belgium, in the first days of his reign he ordered all of the vessels dismantled. They were wooden hulks, and every time they appeared at foreign ports were the source of vast amusement.

The queen, his consort, is a full fledged physician. She was Elizabeth daughter of the Duke Carl Theodore of Bavaria, the famous oculist. As the king is constantly seen about the piers of Antwerp, where he once gathered news for a newspaper, conversing with stevedores, so the queen evidences her democratic spirit by being seen working in the slums of Brussels. She has established hospitals in many places in Belgium, and is head of an association of women who strive to ameliorate condition under which hard working folk live.

The king is an indefatigable worker. He rises at 6 in the morning and rarely ever ceases work until 5 in the afternoon. As a mechanical engineer he has personally superised the operation of the great state railroads, installing modern lounging cars and sleeping cars.

Live Like Their People

The simplicity in which the royal family lives is remarkable. They rarely occupy the great palace, preferring to live in a villa near by. They are both lovers of music and occupy seats in the stalls of the Belgian opera house, rather than the royal box, so they may be nearer the orchestra.

The private life of the king is without a stain. The royal couple have three children, two sons and a daughter, the latter being a great favorite with the people. In a country the size of Belgium the ruler becomes a quickly known personally to his subjects and there is hardly a spot in Belgium with which the royal couple is not familiar.

That is why Leon Vandervelte, the socialist leader, newly appointed Minister of State in Belgium said to his comrades when war broke out:

"Let us fight now for our king and country as we have always fought for the laboring man."

DOWN TO FIRST CAUSES.

There is Often More Truth Than Fiction in Juvenile Philosophy.

"I LEARNED a new word today," said the first baby. "It appears to be connected, in some remote manner, with a person who apparently had something to do with us before we came into conscious existence."

"You're an awful bore," interrupted the second baby. "Out with that word."

"Mother."

"Mother! What did you say it meant?

"Well, mother, as I understand, is an unknown being who produced us."

"Oh, a force or a person?"

"That is precisely where I am undecided. There are moments when I believe in a personal mother; then again, a first cause."

"But even then, after you had settled that doctrinal point, you would come to another. Who made mother?"

The first baby reflected for a moment.

"Oh, well, that isn't fair," he exclaimed at last. "One must have a belief."

He leaned toward a large, empty, rectangular paper box cover and drew it toward him with his chubby fingers.

"Now, here," he said, "is an instance. In an idle moment I have been attempting to decipher the inscription upon this box. It is evidently the name of some unknown god."

"What do you make of it?"

"It reads D-r-e-s-s-m-a-k-e-r."

"Well," said the second baby, "go on."

"I was only going to remark," said the first baby, "that possibly, after all, mother is not a first cause. In the great scheme of things—who knows?—maybe she was created by—Dressmaker."—Life.

ARCHDUKE IN DANGER

Russians Are Pressing Austrians Hard at Rzeszow.

Generals Auffenberg and Dankl Are Reported to Have Effected a Junction After Hard Fighting and Remnants of Austro-German Army Are Resisting Russian Attack—Losses Forty Per Cent.

LONDON, Sept. 17. — According to one despatch, although others seem to contradict it, after a desperate engagement, in which the Austro-Germanic forces lost forty per cent. of their numbers, the army of Gen. Auffenberg, which had been driven south from Russian Poland, effected a junction at Rzeszow with the remnant of Gen. Dankl's corps that have met with such smashing defeats in Galicia.

With the fortified towns of Przemysl and Jaroslav on their flank, and Cracow as a city of refuge in front, the battered wrecks of Austria's main armies are battling with the tenacity of despair to effect a safe retreat from the sledge-hammer blows of the Russian armies advancing from the north and east.

Flushed with victories that rank with the greatest in the world's history, the Russians are sweeping southward and westward in the hope of rounding up and annihilating the enemy while it is still reeling under the shock of a series of demoralizing defeats that have reduced its numbers to almost negligible proportions.

THE ARCHDUKE OF AUSTRIA.

Gen. Dankl's army, to which the heir to the Austrian throne is attached, was entirely cut off, and its surrender regarded as imminent. For the moment Dankl appears to have escaped by cutting his way through the Russian cavalry, losing nearly half his army in his retreat from before the fortress of Przemysl, on which the victors of Lemberg are now rapidly advancing. The last hope of the harassed Austrians — to concentrate between the triangular fortress of Przemysl, Cracow and Jaroslav— has been achieved, but at a terrible sacrifice. Five German army corps rushing to their assistance have been intercepted and checked at Grodek by the third Russian army corps. With its artillery and cavlary practically annihilated in the morass to the west of the River San, and with an army of 100,000 Cossacks threatening its flanks, the outlook is depressing for the Austrian army now at Rzeszow, thirty-two miles northwest of Przemysl. Unless German reinforcements come to their aid the capture of the two Austrian armies and the Archduke Charles Francis is within the bounds of probability.

The Official Press Bureau issued the following announcement last night:—

It is stated from Russian official sources that the rout of the Austrian army in Galicia is complete, though full details have not been received.

The losses in Galicia and Poland, where fighting has been going on incessantly for more than three weeks, are even greater than those in France, and, according to official reports, the Russians are still attempting to strike another blow before the Austrians and Germans can reform. A report from Petrograd says that the Russians have severed communications between Przemysl and Cracow, the two fortresses for which the Austrians and their German allies are heading, and have begun an advance to sever communications between Galicia and Budapest.

The Germans have bravely attempted to stem the retreat and save their allies from utter disaster. At Tourobine, where the Germans made a desperate stand, the Russians captured thirty-six pieces of long-range German artillery, in addition to some 5,000 German prisoners. At other places on the front several dozen large German guns, many of which had been prevented by lack of time from taking part in the fighting, fell into Russian hands.

Beland Would Join Canadians.

OTTAWA, Sept. 17.—Hon. Dr. Beland, M.P. for Beauce, who went to Belgium this summer to be married is still in Antwerp attending wounded soldiers. He offered his services to the Belgian Government, and these were gratefully accepted. He now writes to Col. Hughes asking permission to join the Army Medical Corps of the Canadian division when it reaches Europe.

BRITISH DESTROY A BRIDGE

But not Until Twelve Men Gave up Their Lives

HAVRE, Sept. 17. — The blowing up of the bridge over the Aisne at Soissons in the long retreat from Mons was accomplished after eleven British engineers, one by one, had given their lives in a vain effort to light the fuse. A twelfth man tried and died, but not until after he had accomplished his mission. The story is told by a French actor named Bossier.

"We were together, the Cuirasseurs of France and the British Royal Engineers," he says, "as we retreated across the Aisne at Soissons, before the tables were turned by the battle of the Marne. The Germans advanced rapidly, trying to rush masses of soldiers across. Bridge after bridge had to be blown up. The German sharpshooters were firing at us from a clump of trees, and the mitrailleuses were working havoc among the allies.

"Suddenly a party of British engineers rushed toward a bridge. They lost heavily, but succeeedd in laying powder sufficient to destroy it. Before they could light it all of them were killed. We waited while another party of brave engineers crept near the bridge. They took to cover, but the Germans got the range and continued a deadly fire.

"Then we Frenchmen watched what we must remember to our dying day. One engineer suddenly dashed alone toward the fuse. He was killed before he reached half way there. A second followed and fell almost upon the body of his comrade. A third, a fourth and fifth ran in succession the gauntlet of merciless German fire and met the same death. In the same way each followed his comrades until eleven had been killed.

"The German fire seemed to slacken for an instant, and in that instant the bridge was blown up, for the twelfth man, dashing across the space lined with bodies of his comrades, reached the fuse and lighted it. The bridge went up with a roar as the engineer fell before the German rifle shots."

BATTLE IN AIR

British Aviator Beats German After Thrilling Manoeuvres

LONDON, Sept. 17. — The Times has the following from Havre: "I learned to-day of a combat waged up among the clouds, during the battle of the Marne, one of the most remarkable which this war of wonders has hitherto disclosed. A German aeroplane flying high visited the British lines with the object of reconnoitering. As the machine hovered overhead well out of reach of fire a British airman shot up to attack. The German saw the adversary and attempted to attack him from above. Shots were fired, but missed the British plane, which swept in a wide semi-circle around his adversary. Mounting steadily the German tried to swoop in order to open fire at close range from above. The sudden, giddy manoeuvering of both machines showed another swift change in the position. The German and British planes were almost at the same altitude, but out of range of one another. Each was fighting for a higher place. Rushing together the two machines far up now looked exactly like great birds in combat. Then there was the distant sound of shooting. Darting hither and thither each airman determined to win the advantage over his foe. A machine would advance and retire. Suddenly the British machine swings above, the German reels and seems to stagger, and then travelling more slowly, the German descends. The German is wounded.

There have occurred to my knowledge many such encounters, in which the amazing pluck of the airmen has been revealed times almost without number. I record this story, however, as being the most thrilling which I have ever listened to, and give it in the words of an eye-witness.

REDMOND CALLS TO THE IRISH

Home Rule Leader Urges Them Now to Enlist

LONDON, Sept. 17.—"The democracy of Great Britain have kept faith with Ireland, and it is now the duty of honor for Ireland to keep faith with them," said John Redmond, the Irish leader, in a manifesto issued last night, in which he calls on Irishmen to bear their share in the war in which the Empire is engaged.

"The Irish people," Mr. Redmond continues, "know and appreciate the fact fully that at last, after centuries of misunderstanding, the democracy of Great Britain have finally and irrevocably declared they trust them and give them back their national liberties.

"By overwhelming British majorities a charter of liberty for Ireland has three times been passed by the House of Commons, and in a few hours will be the law of the land. A new era has opened in the history of the two nations.

"During the long discussion on the Irish problem in Parliament and on the platform we promised the British people that a concession of liberty would have the same effect in Ireland as in every other part of the Empire, notably in recent years in South Africa, that dissatisfaction would give way to friendship and good-will and that Ireland would become a strength instead of a weakness to the Empire."

Mr. Redmond then goes on to speak of the war, saying:

"It is a just war, provoked by the intolerable military despotism of Germany—it is a war for high ideals of human government and international relations, and Ireland would be false to her history, to every consideration of honor, good faith and self-interest did she not willingly bear her share in its burdens and its sacrifices."

Mr. Redmond asks that Irish recruits be formed into an Irish brigade and that the volunteers be put in a state of efficiency as shortly as possible for the defence of the country.

TO BE COURT-MARTIALLED.

German Destroyer of Louvain Is Now In Criminal Prison at Antwerp.

LONDON, Sept. 17.—T. M. Kettle, the correspondent of The London Daily News at Ghent, telegraphs: It is satisfactory to observe that the Belgians have refused to treat as a prisoner of war Commandant Meune, who commanded the German Landsturm at the wrecking and burning of the city of Louvain. He is now in the criminal prison at Antwerp, and will be tried by court-martial for gross infractions of the rules of war.

Indian Troops Near Front.

LONDON, Sept. 17.—Premier Asquith announced yesterday that the Indian troops of the British army are on their way to the seat of war. It is believed that they number about 70,000.

Although the Premier did not say so, it is probable that these troops have already reached the front and are taking part in the battle now raging in France. It has been the custom of the War Office and the Government press bureau not to forecast any event, but to wait until it had happened before making any announcement.

Notables Killed.

LONDON, Sept. 17.—A despatch to The Evening News from Copenhagen says that among the deaths reported in the latest German casualty list are those of Capt. Bethusy-Hue and Count Saurma Jeltsch, the so-called gentleman jockey.

Gideon Sengler, the Austrian meteorologist, has been killed on the Russian frontier.

TOUGHS AT WORK

The Peterborough police have arrested two crooks, Rose and Barr, for "short changing," and they claim one is none other than H. Schelby, alias Meers, alias Phelps, who was arrested in Lindsay on July 12 last in the act of picking a man's pocket at the G. T. R. station. His partner, they claim, is the man who went bail for him. Both have been identified by Mr. Mowry, of Peterborough, who caught Schelb in the act on the date in question.

Chief Thompson, of Peterbrough, has written Chief Short concerning the two men, who have been committed for trial. Schelby, it will be remembered, jumped his bail.

In communicating with the Toronto police, Chief Short was informed that they had no record of a man named Schelby, but a crook answering his description and known by the aliases Meers or Phelps, was well known to the Toronto police. He was sentenced in Regina to three months for theft, deported from Watertown, N.Y., for theft, and also served a fifteen months' term in Central prison.

The photo sent to Chief Short from Toronto of Meers resembled Schelby more than did the photo furnished by Chief Thompson.

Barr and Rose come up for trial before Judge Huycke to-morrow morning.

THE SPORTING WORLD

Intermediate Lacrosse Honors Went to Weston

Peterboro had the contest for the Intermediate Championship of the Ontario Lacrosse Association played off at Riverside Park yesterday, and it is doubtful if a hundred citizens were aware of the fact. There couldn't have been many more, for the outside number of local faces which appeared at the wicket with two bits could be put at 25.

The competing teams were Marmora, champions of Eastern Ontario, and Weston, the champions of Western Ontario. At the end of an hour of very poor lacrosse the team from the west won by 20-4. Both teams showed lack of condition, and the inability to shoot caused the loss of several goals. Combination by the Weston team was the only bright feature of the game. At half-time the score stood 10-4, and for the next fifteen minutes there was nothing to it but Weston. The defence of the aggregation from the east went all to the bad, and the winners scored almost at leisure. At three-quarter time the score read 16-4.

Frank Doyle refereed and had rather easy duties as both teams played clean lacrosse. The line-ups:

WESTON.		MARMORA.
	Goal
Rountree		Clairmont
	Point
Holly		Murphy
	Cover
McEwen		Yates
	3rd Defence
G. Coulter		Downey
	2nd Defence

	Centre
Riley		Shannon
	2nd Home
H. Coulter		Wells
	3rd Home
Clayton		McWilliams
	Outside
Dicken		McWilliams
	Inside
Smith		Gladney

Score by quarters:
1st quarter—Weston 6, Marmora 1.
2nd quarter—Weston 10, Marmora 4
3rd quarter—Weston 16, Marmora 4
Full time—Weston 20, Marmora 4.

"BRAINS" OF BOSTON BRAVES EARNS $30,000 AT KEYSTONE SACK

"Johnny" Evers, captain of the Braves, is credited by rival players with being the "brains" of the Boston infield, and the man who "made" the team after George Stallings had formulated a system. Without detracting any of the credit due the "Miracle Man" of baseball, whose management has put a Boston National league team within hailing distance of a pennat for the first time in 16 years, it is claimed that without Evers there would be no one to demonstrate the Stallings systems as now perfected.

The erstwhile Cub leader's earning power in baseball this season surpasses that of any other player. Few club owners outside the National league will show a profit on the season equalling that of Evers, whether "Johnny" gets a world's series or not. "Johnny" feels grateful to Charles W. Murphy for the upheaval in Chicago which made it possible for Evers to be a player at the same salary of $10,000 that he would have received had Murphy retained him as manager of the Cubs.

A bonus, reported at from $15,000 to $25,000, went to Evers when he remained loyal to the National league and consented to the deal that made him a Brave. The Boston club assumed a Cub contract for ten years, which provided that Evers was to get $2,000 if the team won the pennant, $1,500 in the event of finishing second, $1,000 third, and $500 if in the fourth place.

At the beginning of the season this part of Evers' contract was considered humorous reading matter only. It has been estimated that before Evers begins to share profits in an October series, he will have earned more than $30,000. The highest priced baseball player in the world is earning every dollar of it, in the opinion of the owners of the Boston club and fans in all sections of the country.

CY. YOUNG HOLDS HONORS FOR TIME OF SERVICE

The fight of athletes against time is always an interesting one. Continuance of success, of supremacy in any branch of sport, depends primarily upon ability to resist old age. Read below and learn how many of the heroes of sportdom have fought the good fight.

Fighters	Years of Service
George Dixon	18
Joe Wolcott	14
Joe Gans	15
George McFadden	15
Bob Fitzsimmons	17
Joe Choynski	16
James J. Corbett	17
"Kid" McCoy	15
Jack (Twin) Sullivan	16
Hary Forbes	15
Battling Nelson	13

Ball Players	Years of Service
Cy Young	22
Fred Clarke	20
Willie Keeler	19
Hans Wagner	17
John Kling	17
Nap. Lajoie	17
Harry Davis	18
Hughie Jennings	16
Jimmy Callahan	20
Tommy Leach	17
Billy Sullivan	17

From this short list, not adequate by any means to cover all who have lasted for a longer period than is usual for Father Time to allow, we learn that the length of service of the ball player and the fighter is about the same. It is interesting to note also that, among the boxers, the man who lasted the longest was a colored boy—little George Dixon.

Strange to relate, he who stands first in length of time among the ball players is a pitcher, Old Cy Young, the grand old war horse of the diamond. It is doubtful if Cy's record ever will be equalled by a pitcher, though Hans Wagner and Larry Lajoie bid fair to surpass it. Matty, who is the present marvel of the mound men, has nine years to go to equal Young's record.

COMMENT As You Like It

Marmora had an excursion train with 130 on board.

Coming out after the game, some one inquired for the hits and errors.

We sympathize with Frank Doyle and Joe Lally in their efforts to resuscitate lacrosse when their final intermediate game is of the calibre the Weston-Marmora game was.

Ed. Dillon refereed games in this district this season. The question bothering most of the fans is—did he don the white ducks and white hat, like Frank Doyle.

One local spectator was reading a paper in the stand during the greater portion of the game. You couldn't blame him for reading advertisements.

Tommy Moffat still runs at large. He was one of the most prominent followers of the Marmora team. Tommy's absence from this city has had one effect — the bad management of the Mercantile League.

Two kids, one the grip carrier for the Weston team and the other a local cut-up, got into an argument and finally the home boy exploded: "Oh, what's Weston—only a village." The kid from the west came back with: "Well, our band copped the prize at Lindsay, we're winning today, and your town ain't got no sewerage disposal plant." "No, we haven't," agreed his newly made friend, "but we got an incinerator."

Jack Mitchell, Ottawa's phenomenal shortstop, is to join the Toronto Leafs before the end of the week.

Mal Eason, of the National league umpires, is thinking of going into handling boxing bouts. Eason has been the outside party in three fights in the National league this year.

Johnny Evers' home at Troy, N. Y., was entered by burglars on Tuesday night and a chest of silver presented the Trojan from Chicago admirers was stolen.

Mike Donlin, pinch hitter for McGraw, is named by many as a successor to Frank Chance. Mike has a legion of friends in New York city who would pull hard for him.

Ty Cobb has jumped to first place in the race in the American league for the lead in batting. Eddie Collins, who led the official averages published last Sunday, has dropped below Cobb, Jackson and Hoblitzell. The published averages included last Thursday's games, and since then Collins has made only one hit. Jackson has added three to his total, Hoblitzell three, while Cobb has been flogging the ball in that time and added eleven hits to his store. The batting averages, including Tuesday's games, are: Cobb, .367; Jackson, .344; Hoblitzell, .342; Collins, .331.

McGraw has employed Pinkerton men to keep knockers from the Polo grounds. It appears that a number of fans congregate at the park daily and root for the Braves. They do not stop at rooting for Stallings' team, but spend the afternoon casting sarcastic remarks at the New York players. The charge is now made that these anti-Grawites are "tin horn sports" who have piker bets down on the Braves, and come to the park daily simply to root against the Giants and boost the Braves who are carrying their dollars.

Too Much Militancy.

"Would George enlist?"

"No. I don't think he would."

"What's the reason? He comes of fighting stock."

"That's the reason. He's soured on fighting. His grandmother is a colonial dame, his aunt is a D. A. R., and his mother is a militant."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

County's Finest seen At Lakefield Fair

About 3,000 people attended the annual exhibition of the Lakefield Agricultural Society yesterday. It goes down in history as the best fair Lakefield has ever had. Under ideal weather conditions, people from far and near came to view the exhibits in the many different classes. There were 1,100 entries altogether, so one can judge how eagerly each class was contested.

It would be difficult for one to say which class of exhibits was the most popular; each had its many admirers. There was a very large showing of the various lines of fruits and vegetables. The competition was very keen in these classes, some of the exhibitors being Messrs. A. Trennum, B. Payne, J. J. Bickle, S. Slater, W. Dodds, and H. J. Abbott. There was a fine showing of horses, and the exhibitors deserve a lot of praise. The other classes, such as sheep, swine, poultry, and cows, showed that the farmers of the surrounding vicinity go in for the raising of the very best. Some of the exhibitors in these were Messrs. H. Matthews, D. Garvey, W. Dodds, S. Slater, R. H. Little, H. Garbutt, W. H. Down and H. C. Garbutt. The fancy work was a large centre of attraction, especially with the ladies, and the work shown was of a very high order. Some who contributed were Mrs. W. J. Baker, Mrs. W. Dodds, Mrs. E. Griffin, and Mrs. O. A. Sawyer.

The Horse Races.

But it would not be a fair unless there was a horse race. There were two races, which resulted as follows:

Free for All.

Dr. Johnston, owned by D. Fife, Otonabee	2	2	2

2.35 Class.

Oro Tarriff, J. Elmhirst, Keene	1	1	1
Phil Ha Ha, —. Fife, Otonabee	2	2	2

These races were no exhibition of speed, but there was some of the finest exhibitions of trotting and pacing one would wish to see.

Mr. Harry Winch of Peterboro was the starter, and the judges were R. J. Munro, Peterboro, and Dr. Munro, Warsaw.

A novelty race, which furnished a lot of amusement, was won by O. Northey, with F. Webdale second and A. Mann a close third.

Congratulations are due the officers of the society on the success of the exhibition.

Havelock's speedy juvenile team journeyed 75 miles on Monday to the town of Uxbridge, where they were to meet the Maitlands of Toronto in a sudden death game. The boys left on the seven o'clock train in the morning with about twelve enthusiastic rooters. The game commenced at 2 o'clock and was refereed by Secretary Frank Doyle of Toronto. The Maitlands are a big sturdy team, and a close observer would want more than the say so of a certificate to make them believe they were all 12 or under. From the draw the Maitlands made themselves busy and landed four goals in less than ten minutes. At this time it was a poor outlook for our juveniles, but when Bohan landed a nice goal it gave them heart, and before the quarter ended Rose made it 2 to 4. In the second period D. Innis netted another. But again the Maitlands rushed forward and hit the nets three times, while all the locals could do was to make it 4 to 7, when Haughton did the act. In the third quarter Havelock had the best of the play but could not succeed in getting more than one goal from Bohan's tricky stick handling which was offset by a Maitland tally, score 5 to 8. In the final quarter our kiddies started into the fray and worked like fiends straining every nerve in their attempt to win. P. Innis missed many goals by a few inches but managed to take the 6th goal. Amid high excitement R. O'Brien landed another, and with but two minutes to play Bohan evened the score, while the crowd roared like demons. Despite the hardest working on both teams neither could land the winning goal. Referee Doyle then ordered that the teams play 5 minutes each way, and again the first period resulted in no tally, with play all in the locals' favor. But alas doom awaited them, the Maitlands shot on goal and Joe O'Brien blocked the shot, but a hard body check caused the ball to roll from his stick and in the melee it rolled into the net. That goal broke the hearts of our youngsters and the Maitlands netted two more making the score 11 to 8 in their favor. It was easily seen that our juveniles had the sympathy and applause of the Uxbridge people and we thank them and though our boys lost they were in no way disgraced for as we all know this is their first year in lacrosse, and they deserve credit for their effort to win the championship and again for being the winners of the Eastern Ontario championship. The line up for Havelock was: goal, J. Saylor; points, J. O'Brien and P. Innis; defense, M. Brown and W. Copp; centre, H. Haughton; home R. O'Brien, C. Rose, D. Innis, and C. Bohan.

No Use.

"I admit that the architecture of this house is something fierce," said the agent, "but just see how handy the place is—only a stone's throw from the station."

"I see it is," said Tompkins wearily, "but I'm such a rotten shot it wouldn't be any satisfaction to me."

Appropriate.

"The impecunious nobleman who married the millionaire heiress, wore at the wedding a white carnation in his buttonhole."

"To be appropriate, his boutonniere ought to have been of marygold."—Baltimore American.

One Use.

"Do you use breakfast foods at all?" asked the grocer.

"Only for padding purposes," replied the ladies' tailor.—Yonkers Statesman.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

MANSHIP—MOORE.

A quiet wedding was solemnized last evening at 7 o'clock in All Saints' church, when Miss Hazel Moore, of Peterborough, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. Edward Thomas Manship, of Bowmanville. The Rev. R. B. Grobb officiated.

After a short wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Manship will reside at Indian River.

TRIPP—STAPLES.

The wedding was quietly solemnised of Miss Myrtle Violetta Staples to Mr. Roy Tripp of Port Arthur at her parents' home, Euclid Avenue. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. J. W. Magwood, and the bride was given away by her father. Her charming gown was of ivory duchess satin with tulle veil and orange blossoms, and she carried a bouquet of white roses and lilies-of-the-valley. Miss Pearl Staples, sister of the bride, who was her only attendant, wore a pale blue crepe de chene dress with silver lace, and girdle of shell pink satin with black hat. Mr. H. Gordon acted as best man. After the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Tripp left for Lindsay and Peterboro, and then to Port Arthur, the bride's travelling suit was a navy blue tailormade and a black hat. — Toronto Telegram.

Miss Bessie Mowry entertained the members of the W.T.S. Club, at her home last evening. During the evening two brides-to-be, Miss M. Merrell and Miss L. Haskill, both members of the club, were surprised with kitchen showers.

MILLBROOK PERSONALS.

Millbrook, Sept. 11.—Mr. and Mrs. W. J. E. Gillott, Mrs. H. Sheardown and Mrs. T. Gillott motored to Peterboro on Thursday.

W. H. Williamson, C.P.R. agent at Hillcreast, Alta., is visiting at his old home, Mr. Thos. Williamson's, 7th line.

Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Duncan are guests of Mr. and Mrs. John Duncan at Collingwood.

Miss Amy Carveth is visiting friends in Toronto.

Rev. Mr. Somerville, of Kingston, preached eloquent sermons in the Presbyterian church on Sunday.

Mrs. H. Sheardown, of Goderich, is a guest of her sister, Mrs. T. Gillott.

Dr. and Mrs. W. Rogers and children and Mrs. Skinner and baby, of Peterboro, were guests of Dr. and Mrs. Deyell this week.

Lieut. A. C. F. Winslow, in writing to his parents says he has received the appointment of paymaster, of the 14th Batt., 4th Brigade. Congratulations, Arthur. This is quite an honor for a Millbrook boy. Col. Hughes speaks very highly of Lieut. Winslow.

Mrs. Thos. Reid, sister-in-law of the late Chas. Gillott, and children, and her mother, Mrs. Lawrence, of Winnipeg, on their way to Boston, Mass., were the guests of Mrs. Thos. Gillott, last week. Mrs. Gillott received a card from them stating they arrived safely. Mrs. Lawrence met her brother at Boston, the first time in over 30 years.

Mr. R. W. P. Buchanan, of the "Herald," Lethbridge, Alta., is visiting his parents, Rev. and Mrs. Buchanan.

MAKE ONE NAME DO FOR TWO STREETS

As Murray street and Cedar street join, the suggestion is made that both streets be called Murray. The matter came before the board of works last evening, and the mayor and Ald. Duncan were appointed to act. The same committee will submit a name for the new street recently opened between Sherbrooke and Bolivar. Ald. Duncan said last evening that they would be willing to consider any suggestions from readers of the Review. Such suggestions should be sent on a postal or 'phoned to the Review.

There is a rumor that the Socialists in Germany are trying to stir up a revolution, and are talking about the dethronement of the Kaiser. This is hardly possible, though, as many of the Socialistic forces are engaged at the front, and it would be well nigh impossible for them to organize, owing to their scattered condition.

Better Baby Contest

Seven hundred babies were enrolled at Calgary for the better baby contest. Are the mothers of Peterborough as anxious to learn all about babies as are the mothers in Calgary? If so, bring your baby to the contest. Do not bring it merely to get a prize. Bring it to learn its physical and mental development. Be patriotic and join in the movement for the improvement of babies, and to lessen the dreadful mortality of infants. In Peterborough 40 per cent of the babies under five years of age die. Enrollment at the public library from 3 to 5 p.m., beginning Sept. 21, and ending Sept. 26.

many lines, for many of the factories will have to close down on account of loss of help. Not only that, but the stores will suffer on account of "the breadwinners" being called to the front. But I hope we will make a good job of these Germans, though many of the fine lads I see marching away so gaily will surely never come back, for this war is going to be a very fierce struggle. Home Rule is a dead issue for the present.

Kissed the Blarney Stone.

I have been to many of the seaside resorts and have traveled from south to north of Ould Ireland and have seen most places of interest within reach. I was out and saw "The Giants Causeway" the other day, and when at Cork went to Blarney and actually kissed the Blarney Stone. It is no easy job, and a Dr. Hudson, a preacher of Virginia, and I did it together with quite a party of Americans. I wouldn't have missed it for a hundred.

Trip Upset by the War.

Nearly all the boats have cancelled their regular trips, and all the excursion rates have been cut out on account of the war. The war, too, will prevent me from getting to France, Italy, Germany, Switzerland and other places. I wanted particularly to go to Brussels and see the field of Waterloo that I once heard Talmage so well describe.

A Canadian Preacher.

Speaking of preachers, I heard the Rev. Wm. Patterson, who used to be pastor of Cooke's Church, Toronto, preach in his church here last Sunday morning. Rev. Robt. Pogue used to be associated with him in Philadelphia. He preached on the subject of the war, telling the story of Gideon being called from hiding behind the wine press, and incidentally mentioned that wonderful barley-cake we read of. It seemed strange to me to be sitting there listening to a man whose voice I had often heard in Toronto, and to hear the old hymn sung that was so often sung in Centenary Church in my native city (Hamilton): "Oh God, our help in ages past." I say it seemed strange to me, for I have not seen a person I know since leaving my brother in Toronto six weeks ago, and I have not been able to get any word from home on account of having no permanent address. I should have received some letters, but they did not come forward for some reason. I am going today over to Scotland, as I see there is a boat going, and will spend a couple of weeks there, and will then go to England, although I will be getting nearer to the war zone. I can find nothing definite about the ocean liners, and I may have to stay here for some time. I heard the Mauretania was going to run her regular trip on Sept. 12th, and got passage on her, but now it looks as though she would not run. Everything before that has been cancelled except a boat sailing today from Londonderry, on which I could get passage for $500. If I was sure my trip would be cancelled, I would book for Australia and from there to San Francisco or Vancouver. This would cost some money, but would be better than staying here too long, after I have seen all the places I can see of interest to one.

Talking about beautiful scenery in Ireland, you should see the girls here, hundreds of young girls, and old women, too, in their bare feet. And speaking, too, of local option, it would be a God-send for Ireland, for surely 'booze' is the curse of the land from one end to the other of it.

The above letter was written in Belfast, Ireland, on August 14th. Not having an envelope handy, the letter was placed in his grip, and remained there for two weeks. On August 28th it was forwarded to Mr. Winch from Edinburgh, with a note mentioning his trip through the famous Highlands of Scotland, with their beautiful lakes. Mr. Moore expected to be in London on August 29th, but whether he would shortly sail for Canada remains a matter of conjecture. Mr. Moore said he was glad he did not get over to the Continent. Many who crossed the ocean with him had to run for their lives, and many are still over there. As is well known, the war played havoc with a good many tourists, but Mr. Moore was fortunate in escaping unpleasant experiences.

A special meeting of the City Council is called for tomorrow at seven o'clock when the by-law providing for taking possession of the property of the Peterboro Light and Power Co. will be submitted, and the agent of the city to perform the duties, appointed.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

"THE SLAVES OF THE LAMP."

Sir,—Perhaps the high standard of living is the cause of all the selfishness, or is it all innate jealousy? Why a devil? Isn't man enough? A sole medium of exchange was not invented, it came itself. There is only one man who understands bimatallism and he's in the asylum. They say Kaiser W. is crazy; hardly so advanced, the crazy are working hard to pay first and they will have to sweat for some years. Say "Observer" must have been buying shark or consulting law's majesty. Is it true they are going to put the Kaiser in the asylum and we'll all be under a mad-house keeper?

W. A. B.

ABOUT WAR.

Editor Review:

Sir,—Your editorial on war has the true literary flavour, as your editorials generally have, but you omit the consideration of a few very peculiar facts. The chaplain of the 57th Regiment has been holding church meetings to pray for peace, but has also been urging the young men to enlist. Is this not mocking God, or is our blessed Creator supposed to be able to stand on opposite sides of the same question at one and the same time? I am well aware that it is not possible to expect consistency except from people who recognize such a thing, but at the same time it must be recognized that we are borne on into war in spite of all our theories. When a cat plays with a mouse and rejoices in the hideous terror of death caused by it, who is responsible? Did Man put that idea into the cat's nature? This all shows that Nature (not human) has been built upon the same foundation as we have been. When we recognize this fact the whole riddle of existence is plain before us. God lives, but not in story-books. That idea and the idea that it is noble to serve God in hope of reward or fear of punishment, will both go their way in time. But you say, Love. I answer, why, then, is the fear of punishment and the hope of reward held out? Because it is our silly way and not God's way at all.

OBSERVER.

We recognize that, in human life there are many inconsistencies. These often prove a stumbling block to truth, but must be removed with delicacy, so that truth will be recognized and respected when it appears in clearer vision. It is not well to try to do everything at once in religion and ethics, for the same reason as in politics. The people must be ready.—Ed.

Important Witness May not be Present

The case of Bert Howden is called for police court, tomorrow morning, but it is doubtful that the young woman in the case will appear. It is said that since leaving the hospital she was married, and that she has left the city. If her whereabouts are not known the case, in all probability, will not be proceeded with. However, the prosecution of Howden lies in the hands of the Crown Attorney and in the event of the case being proceeded with, Miss Herron will have to be found and will be obliged to appear.

WANT NINE HOUR DAY

Trades and Labor Deputation Protest Against Extra Hour

ON STREET PAVING

A deputation from the Trades and Labor Council waited on Mayor Buller and City Engineer Parsons this morning. The deputation registered a complaint about the street paving gang working ten hours per day. They said it was one of the by-laws that on all city work, the men were only to work nine hours a day.

The Mayor said that they were anxious to have the work completed. The deputation said that the contractors could put on more men and cut the hours down and thus accomplish more work. The deputation explained there was a lot of union men who wanted work on the street paving but would not start when they were working ten hours a day. The Mayor said that the contractor was out of the city at present but he would take up the matter with him when he came back. The deputation are to see Mayor Buller and Engineer Parsons tomorrow when the matter will be settled.

NATIONAL CAMPAIGN FOR OUR OWN GOODS

The Galt "Reporter," a few days ago, had the following timely and interesting editorial under the heading "Buy Canadian-made Goods" on the economic situation in Canada arising out of the war:

"While one of the immediate effects of the European war was the disorganization of trade in Canada, a secondary result should be of a stimulating character. Owing to the fact that the continent of Europe is the centre of hostilities, a considerable amount of manufactured goods formerly imported from Germany, France, Austria, Belgium and other countries will now have to be produced here. Reports show that every year millions of dollars worth of manufactured goods from these countries are sold in Canada. Our own mechanics and artisans can produce such articles as well as the foreign workers and if the manufacturers take advantage of the opportunity provided, the war should result in more work, instead of less, for their employes.

"But the whole responsibility of making the best of the present situation does not lie with the manufacturers. If the people will demand Canadian made goods they will be not only supplying their personal needs but creating work for their fellow-citizens. When the Empire is involved in such a tremendous crisis as the present there is something for all to do. We cannot all go to the front but those who stay at home can do a great deal towards creating conditions that will make the suffering here as light as possible.

"The patriotic citizen, when he goes to the store to fill his wants will demand in every case possible goods "Made in Canada." There should be a well-defined campaign carried on throughout the country urging Canadians to purchase goods of home manufacture. If an accelerated demand for Canadian goods is created during the war, it will doubtless be maintained after normal conditions return in Europe.

"In this way we stand to benefit permanently by insisting that what we buy must be Canadian-made."

WORKMEN CAN HELP TROOPS AT THE FRONT

One of Canada's best known public men addressed the employes of a large boot and shoe factory in Montreal at their annual gathering last week as follows:

"This Company has obtained a contract from the Government for 40,000 pairs of boots, to be used by the soldiers going to the front. I am informed by the managing director that a very low bid was put in for these goods, primarily for the purpose of keeping you men and women employed during these trying times. Now, I want to say a word to you about the boot contract. These boots are to be worn by the Canadian soldiers who go to war. A soldier's usefulness depends largely upon his ability to march. He cannot travel unless his feet are sound, and his feet can only be kept in good condition if his boots are right. The management will purchase the best material possible to fill this contract. The superintendents will use the utmost vigilance, but unless everyone of you makes it a personal matter, some of these boots may not be quite right. It is easy for a laster to leave a nail in the sole, which may lame a man who wears the boot. The men who cut the soles might put in some weak shanks, in which case the soldiers wearing those boots could not use a spade properly; and it might happen that on their being able to dig entrenchments their very lives would depend. When you are putting in the counters, remember that a bad counter means a down-trodden heel and a blistered foot. When you are nailing on the heels remember that to drive the nails one-sixteenth of an inch short might mean that the heels would come off and the wearer be handicapped in marching. You women of the stitching room remember that if the linings are not put in properly or any bunching occurs, it may result in a blister where the foot is chafed. Now, I want everyone of you to remember that these boots are to be worn by our Canadian boys, and that a bad boot may mean a lame soldier, and a lame soldier may mean a Canadian taken prisoner or shot. People are giving large sums of money to help those who go to the war. You can help by seeing that they are properly shod. The honor of the firm, and the lives of our brave men, I leave in your hands with perfect confidence."

MUSHROOMS IN THE CELLAR

I have never had any trouble in raising a good bed of mushrooms in the cellar. Careful attention to details will ensure a successful stand in most cases. While we raise them mostly for our own use, we sell some to hotels and restaurants.

The first essential in growing mushrooms is a steady and nearly uniform temperature of from forty to seventy degrees. For this reason and also because light is not essential, cellars make good places for the growing of mushrooms. I use soil from the richest part of the garden for the bed and mix it with fresh horse manure which is free from straw. One should use about four bushels of good rich soil and one bushel of the horse manure. Shovel this over a few times to get a thorough mixing and then place it in the mushroom bed.

I spread it about ten inches thick on the cellar bottom and pack it firmly. It is then left until fermentation starts. Place an ordinary thermometer in the middle of the bed and when the temperature drops to 75 or 80 degrees plant the spawn, which may be bought at any seed store.

The spawn comes in bricks which are compressed mixtures of loam and manure in which mushrooms have been grown. The bricks cost about twenty-five cents each. The planting is called spawning. I simply cut the bricks up into small pieces and deposit these in holes about twelve inches apart. The holes should be about two inches deep and the bricks broken up into pieces about the size of a hen's egg. The holes are then filled up with earth and tamped.

I do not water the bed unless the surface soil seems to be getting too dry. Then I sprinkle it with warm water until it is moist but not wet. The spawn will begin to germinate in about a week or ten days under favorable conditions. At the end of this time the bed should be examined and spawn pieces which have not germinated be replaced with fresh.

Germination is indicated by the presence of white threads in the manure around the spawn. After germination I found it best to cover the bed with moist soil about an inch thick. This should be tramped down and the surface smoothed. After this the bed needs no further attention until harvest time, except to see that sufficient moisture is present and that that temperature is regulated properly.

A mushroom bed under average conditions will begin to bear in about five weeks and continue to yield for two or three months. A successful mushroom bed will yield several pounds to the square foot and the crop can be turned into considerable profit, as there is a ready market for it at about forty cents a pound. It is not much trouble to make a small mushroom bed in the cellar and a supply of fresh, home-produced mushrooms for the table is a cheap luxury for those fond of the dish.

Those not perfectly familiar with the edible plant should never attempt to gather them when growing wild in pastures because of the danger of getting the poisonous kind. Many deaths have resulted from this very thing, as there is very little difference between some of the edible and the poisonous kinds. One can feel absolutely safe in eating the kind he grows in his cellar from spawn bricks.—W. J. Lawrence.

Not Her Pie.

Hostess (at party)—Does your mother allow you to have two pieces of pie when you are at home, Willie?

Willie (who has asked for a second piece)—No, ma'am.

Hostess—Well, do you think she would like you to have two pieces here?

Willie—Oh, she wouldn't care. This isn't her pie!

CANADIAN SILHOUETTES

The New Vancouver

This city staggers any man who knew it at the end of last century. In vain will he look for his old haunts. Where stood the shack in which he "batched" in 1899 is now a soaring building of massive blocks of stone. The hill opposite—on the far side of the inlet—was, at the close of last century, simply a slope of forest. Now it stares across at Vancouver—a city itself—North Vancouver, with ferries plying to and fro.

All the old frame hotels, in the fronts of which men in Mackinaw coats, rough pants, and high-laced boots, sat talking over days in the Klondyke, in Cariboo (or in Queensland, Australia, for that matter), wanderers all—all these old hotels are down, and stone ones are up with tessellated tiled hallways, and people in boiled shirts are everywhere; pretty young men in fancy shirts rush to and fro, and young women trip about holding out little chatelains in front of them on one finger, or carry great big ones between hip and out-held crooked arm.

It is a fright! It would freeze you stiff to go back if you saw the place in 1880 I expect, and if you saw it last in 1890 and came back to it now it would make you run away.

In my time there of yore there were no strap-hangers on the cars. The inhabitants were still rather proud of their cars. Now it is almost impossible to get on to one. Vancouver is a kind of Liverpool Americanized. It was once a city of shacks and frame-houses where men wintered. Across on the Pacific side is now a kind of Brighton promenade. I expect, on sunny days, they have pierrots with floured faces, hitting pianos, and singing "Thora" to an audience with fluttering ribbons and silk sun-shades.

They have, at any rate, concrete. Where there used to be nothing but mud are now wooden side-walks. Where were wooden side-walks are now concrete boulevards. I repeat—it's a fright! It is Progress with a vengeance; and the people of Prince Rupert, away up the coast at the other railway terminus, say they are going to do likewise. They have got a motor road round Stanley Park where there used to be only a rough wagon road. Pa and Ma and the children with a box of candy and some chewing gum, go out on Saturday afternoon to the Park, to look at the animals in the "Zoo."

RETAIL MERCHANTS AND "MADE-IN-CANADA" POLICY

Practical action by the Quebec branch of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada was taken at a meeting held in Montreal immediately after the outbreak of the war. The following letter from the Quebec Secretary of the Association, Mr. J. A. Beaudry, offers good advice to the retailer and his customer alike. Every Canadian housewife should bear in mind this timely statement when she goes into the corner store to make her next purchase:

For years past, millions of dollars worth of goods have been imported into Canada from the countries involved in the war. These importations have now practically stopped, and may not be resumed for a very considerable period. The consequence is that the price of all imported goods has very materially increased, and will continue to increase in proportion to the excess of the demand upon the supply, and we shall not be surprised to see the supply completely exhausted within a very short time. This fact is creating some concern in the minds of the public, who seem to believe that the merchant is responsible for such an increase.

We think it would be advisable for you to point out to your customers that in their purchases they should give preference to goods made in Canada, which would avoid paying such high prices, and would help to keep the Canadian factories busy thereby giving employment to Canadians who, at this particular time, are so much in need of earning as much as possible.

To encourage home industries is a good policy at all times, but should be acted upon at this trying period for self-preservation, and we strongly suggest that you co-operate with your customers in this matter, thereby doing your share in educating the public to this end, and by so doing, greatly oblige.

Yours truly,
The Retail Merchants' Association
of Canada, Inc.
J. A. Beaudry,
Secretary for the Province of Quebec

Every dollar the Canadian householder spends for Canadian goods will lessen the demands from the unemployed for relief during the next few months.

In a Gold Rush

"For the past seven years," writes Percy Dent, "I have been knocking around the Klondike gold fields, and many a gold stampede I have taken part in. My last was to a new strike at the head of Sixty Mile river. With two dogs and a sledge of blankets and provisions I 'hit the trail.'

"Dawn saw a struggling line of men laboring up the Sixty Mile. There were representatives from all the civilized nations of the world—the scum of Europe, as the dapper, fireside civilization would call them. Grim and determined, they struggled through the desolate wastes of snow, straining at gee-pole, cursing the pull-rope, which cut the neck and armpits, and prodding their dogs unmercifully. The men's eyes were glassy; their beards and moustaches one mass of congealed breath. Each man held his own course and allowed no other stamper to oust him from the irregular trail.

"When a dog, unable to stand longer the awful strain of the race, gave in from sheer exhaustion, the poor brute was cut loose and thrust brutally aside to find its way back or starve. All higher instincts are subservient to self-interest in a gold rush.

"When you come to the new country there is a feverish search for gold. Men rush about looking for traces of it, and when they have decided on a claim they stake it out and hurry back to Dawson to report. It's an exciting life. At any moment you may hit on a fortune—or so, at least, we persuade ourselves."

A Practical Governor.

At the first good roads congress ever held in Quebec Province, at Montreal a few weeks ago, Sir Francois Langelier, Lieutenant-Governor, was one of the most active workers. Sir Francois has diligently identified himself with three or four well-defined public movements since he became Mayor of Quebec City in the days of the Marquis of Lorne. When he was afterwards member of the Legislature and of the House of Commons he was deeply interested in good roads and trees. There is a peculiarly passionate aptitude about a cultivated Frenchman. Sir Francois, long before he became a knight, had the same shrewd interest in these two simple betterments as many men have in books or pictures or fine horses. Most French-Canadians love good roads, because many of them drive fast horses. The best macadamized roads in Canada used to run out of Quebec City. That was some time after Francois Langelier quit the mayoralty and entered politics. In the matter of trees which have so much to do with really good roads, this public-minded French-Canadian was one of the earliest apostles. He took up the cause of Arbour Day. He believed not merely in trees but in planting and caring for trees; for he lives in a province of wonderful trees. Where in Canada can you find greater maples and elms and pines than in Quebec? To round out his interest in out-of-doors Sir Francois has taken a very live grip on the boy scout movement in Quebec. — Canadian Courier.

THE OUTLOOK IN CANADA

Handicap For Some Industries—Increased Activity For Others

Truly, it is an ill-wind that blows nobody good. One Continent's "down" is another Continent's "up." The industries of Europe are, generally speaking, at a standstill, and matters will be worse before they can be better.

The whole world is looking to the North American Continent—to Canada and the United States—for much of its provisions, machinery, textiles, boots and shoes, beverages, vehicles, cement, brick, earthenware, fancy goods, furs, glass, garments, paper, soap, tobacco, wood products, and much else. Canada must get ready to meet the demand made upon her. We have continued prosperity ahead of us if our manufacturers and merchants rise quickly to take advantage of their opportunity.

Encouraging Manufacturers

Last week was "Made in Winnipeg" week in the Manitoba capital, and manufacturers, retailers and citizens generally co-operated to bring the products of local industries before the public, and to urge Winnipeg people to help build up a bigger and better city, by using goods made in local factories. The object is a most worthy and commendable one, and the response which has been made by the citizens shows that western cities, as well as the older cities of the East, are developing a civic pride and a local patriotism that will be for the good of the community."—From "Grain Growers' Guide," May 27, 1914.

Eskimos Are Not Pagan

According to a census bulletin giving some details of Canada's farthest north population, there are some six hundred Eskimos in Ungava. On the east coast of Hudson Bay, and on the west coast and in the Churchill district the total population is given as 1,588, of whom 1,360 are Eskimos, 180 Indians, 26 half-breeds and 22 whites.

Speaking of the Eskimos on the east coast of Hudson Bay, Rev. R. J. Renison, Archdeacon of Moosonee, who took the census, says:

"In calling most of them pagans it must be remembered that they are so in name only, since all of them have their religious books, and practically every one of the age of ten can read them. Heathen practices are a thing of the past. The majority of the people live in the most squalid conditions, and are destitute of proper clothing through the failure of the deer, which long ago were numerous along the east coast of Hudson Bay."

A PIONEER ENTHUSIAST

P.E.I. to Celebrate Semi-Centennial of Confederation Conference.

The Province of Prince Edward Island is preparing to observe the fiftieth anniversary of an event which took place in Charlottetown and which in time meant so much for the people of what we call Canada. That event was the first conference held to discuss the question of the confederation of the various provinces. The writer, as a lad of less than seven years of age, stood on the wharf at Charlottetown and watched the delegates land.

Prince Edward Island played a far more important part in the great Confederation movement than is generally supposed. It is true that province was tardy in entering the union, but nevertheless the movement, in its infancy and in its course of formation, was keenly debated and had its warm friends and its bitter opponents in the little island province. Hon. Edward Whelan, one of the island delegates to the Quebec conference and who acted as secretary of that body, was perhaps the first live exponent of the idea of federation on Prince Edward Island.

Let me tell it now and it will be the first time of the telling, that at one stage of the great movement, Whelan had a petition circulated in that province for signatures favorable to the movement and it was signed by just nineteen people. But the movement grew. Whelan and D'Arcy McGee were great friends. I remember the grief of Whelan on receipt of the news of McGee's death. Whelan was my uncle, and I was in his house at the time. He was the editor and proprietor of The Examiner, a paper of great influence in its time. The Montreal Gazette wired Whelan to write an appreciative article on the death of McGee. That was how Whelan received the news.

It is a singular thing that both McGee and Whelan, two young Irishmen, living at the extreme ends of Canada, should be what may be termed violent Confederates. Whelan represented the district of St. Peter's in the Legislature for over twenty consecutive years. He was defeated on the Confederation issue and shortly afterward died of a broken heart. Still, I am told, he is not one of the "fathers of Confederation." In Prince Edward Island his name is ever green in the hearts of the people. He was an Irishman and a Roman Catholic. He fought the battles of responsible government for the island province. He gave the people there the free school system which they now enjoy. If he was not a "father of Confederation" he was at least a martyr for the cause, and yet to-day the island province contains no monument to his memory. In the old Roman Catholic cemetery at Charlottetown he sleeps his long sleep and only a plain, marble slab marks the spot.

When the people have assembled at Charlottetown to celebrate the anniversary of that important conference they should not forget the lonely grave in the cemetery on St. Peter's Road.

MAILS FOR THE NORTH

They Cost Canada a Round $50,000 a Year.

It costs the Dominion Government something over $50,000 a year to give the people of the far North the privileges of His Majesty's mails. That is more, of course, than they pay back in the way of postal revenue, but the amount of mail matter is increasing so greatly that there will some day be good business in it, says Aubrey Fullerton in Toronto Star Weekly. A few bags used to hold all the mail that went north from Edmonton, but now one ton of matter leaves Athabasca every week on the Peace river route alone. Fifty sacks or more, weighing about 100 pounds each, go out on the summer trip to the end of the line. And the distributing points are gradually shifting northward. Until a year or two ago all the north-bound mails were made up at Edmonton, but now they pass right through daily to Athabasca, where they are held till despatching time comes for the several routes north and northwest. Fort Smith, on the very top edge of Alberta, is becoming a subsidiary distributing point, and the schedules now list the sub-Arctic mails as leaving from Smith instead of Athabasca.

The summer mail for McPherson and intermediate points left Smith on or about June 26, and reaches McPherson about July 11. Three or four days later the return mail starts out. The summer route is by water, in the Hudson Bay Co. steamers, and in winter by the company's dog teams, leaving Smith on Jan. 2 and reaching McPherson about Feb. 15. There is no return mail in winter by the Mackenzie route, but letters come back from the Arctic coast once in the winter by way of Dawson. Stefansson's letter, announcing his plans and giving the story of the Karluk's mishap, came out in that way.

Nine round mail trips a year are made between Athabasca and Fort Smith, costing the Government in all $4,015. Two of these, one each in summer and winter, go on to McPherson, and others to nearer points, adding some $2,500 to the postal bill. Between Athabasca and Peace River Crossing there is a weekly mail, which costs $8,000 a year for delivery, and a twice-a-week service between Edson and Grand Prairie goes at the rate of $300 a trip in winter and $275 in summer. Other routes are priced proportionately.

There is a good deal of romance about this northern mail service even in these days. The advent of the railroads, making the postal routes much easier and cheaper, will do away with some of this romance, but in the top parts of the North country the primitive way will always remain—unless, to be sure, the air-line route is some day put into operation. As it is now, and is likely to be, His Majesty's mails are entrusted to sinewy halfbreeds, sons of the wilderness and employes of the Hudson Bay Co. That ancient and honorable company has the contract for the mail deliveries, and it gives the packets over to runners whom it knows to be trustworthy, with orders to get there on time. It is a long way to go, and relays of both men and dogs are kept at points along the route. A dog team carries 250 pounds of mail matter, the rest of its 800 pounds of freight being food supplies for man and beast.

The halfbreed boatmen on the Athabasca are as plucky and sinewy as the runners on the winter trail, and they are equally trustworthy. In both cases there has been a long record of faithful service, not one instance of theft, default, or failure, in the face of the greatest difficulties and privations, having yet been reported. There have been accidents, of course, and mails have been lost. A few years ago one of the scows that was carrying a part of the season's mail through the troubled waters of the Athabasca was hauled up for the night on the shore of the river, one end of it remaining in the water. During the night there was a sudden and unexplainable drop in the level of the river, the end of the scow dropped with it, and the mail bags fell out into the torrent, and were forever lost. Since then the boatmen carrying the mails have been given orders either to put their boats absolutely high and dry when making camp for the night or to take out the mail bags and pile them on shore.

When the summer mails get far enough north to take the steamboats they travel in much the same degree of state as away down East. For the steamers on the Mackenzie are well built and well equipped boats, with such modern appurtenances as electric lights and passenger cabins, and that means that they are in the regular carrying business. Their captains are entrusted with the mails in the same way, and with the same good results as are the runners in winter. On the routes further south, such as those of the Grande Prairie and Peace River districts, the mail-carrying contracts are given to private contractors, who use pack-horses or wagons, as circumstances may permit. They get very good pay for the service, but earn it all.

All this is done in behalf of a comparatively small number of people. North of Athabasca, except in the Peace River country, there is little settlement outside of the police and trading posts and the missions.

Wet Weather

A Detective Story

By COURTNEY RYLEY COOPER

Where the darkness was most dense waited Murphy of the Harrison street station, his hands deep in his pockets, his head shot forward.

He had been waiting a long time, starting now and then at the sound of a step on the quiet old street, slinking farther back into the shadows at the rumbling approach of the straggling cars, waiting and scowling.

There was something about Murphy which indicated that he was obeying orders against his will and his better judgment. "Tips" come often to police headquarters.

But, just the same, Murphy waited.

Suddenly his position changed. His hands came out of the pockets and swung aimlessly for a second at his sides before they gripped. He leaned forward and listened.

It came again—a whistle, low, yet sharp. Murphy's lips puckered, and, note for note, they answered the signal. A wait. It came again.

Murphy stepped forward, crossed the street, his head lowered, his hand grasping something in one of his pockets. He approached the hazy form before him.

SLOWLY AND DESPERATELY HE WORKED THE COMBINATION.

"Hello!" he said shortly.

The man turned, and Murphy noticed he was young, well dressed and apparently surprised at his voice.

"Hello!" came the reply.

"Waiting for somebody?" Murphy's head still was craned forward the least bit.

He was searching the face which showed dimly before him in a vain attempt to recognize some feature of the "mug book." He walked a step closer.

"Waiting for somebody?" he questioned again. The man laughed.

"Yes. Why?"

"Thought so. You'll find him at headquarters—in the captain's office."

He put forth a hand. The young man drew back just a trifle.

"I—I don't quite understand," he answered.

"You'll understand after awhile, then. Murphy's my name, from headquarters."

"A detective?"

"Yes."

"But what's that got to do with me? I'm not wanted for anything—unless waiting for a friend is something." Murphy noticed there was a boyish something about the face when the man before him smiled. "Clark's my name. I've just been to a party over on Kalamath and was coming home. There were two of us, you know—two couples—and we just decided that when we had taken the girls home we'd meet here and go over to my house for the night. The folks are all away. But"—he laughed the least bit—"I spent a good deal of time saying good night, and I guess he went on to his own home. I"—

The scowl which Murphy had worn deepened a bit.

"You don't look like a crook," he said at last. "Where do you live?"

"1201 Elizabeth."

"Who's there that can identify you?"

There was a bit of an embarrassed laugh.

"Nobody right now. The folks are all away. I'm the only one home, you know. That's why I was going to have Bob stay all night with me. I"—

"Have you got the key to the house?" A listlessness had come into Murphy's voice.

"The key? Why, of course!"

"That's enough. Let's see you work it."

Ten minutes later they stood before the veranda of a wide fronted house five blocks away. Murphy bent as he started to ascend the steps to the veranda and felt the stone of the lower step. He looked up.

"What did you say your name was?" he asked again.

"Bert Clark," came the answer.

Murphy struck a match and peered at the carved name of the lower step.

"That's right," he admitted.

The man had stepped to the door, inserted the key and turned the lock. Murphy grinned.

"Just a mistake, that's all. I'm sorry. A fellow will make mistakes that way, you know. I was looking for a couple of icebox robbers that have been swiping stuff off these apartment porches. Sorry. Hope you don't mind?"

The man on the porch laughed as he swung open the door and prepared to step inside.

"Oh, that's all right," he called cheerily. "Good night!"

The Lynx stood in the hall for just a moment after he had closed the door, listening for the fading steps of the plain clothes man without, and, hearing them, smiled to himself. Slowly he felt for the curtains and pulled them. Then he switched on the lights.

"Jane was right," he said to himself as he looked around the hall before him. "It's all as she said. Now, if she hasn't got the wrong dope about them beating it I'm all right." He seemed to draw his coat about him tighter, and there came a little white into his face. "That gink may be waiting outside to see if I'll light the upstairs," he mused. "I've—got to risk it."

Slowly he ascended the stairs and as silently as the animal whose name he bore. Softly he felt along the wall for the switch buttons, [illegible] The Lynx was not in the habit of traveling under full candle power—in other houses than his own.

Perhaps after all Jane's information had been wrong. Perhaps—a moment more of hesitation, then the click of the switch. With animal swiftness the eyes of the Lynx traveled here, there, through each open door as the light of the hall displayed bedroom after bedroom, quiet and destitute of humanity. The Lynx smiled.

"And that harness bull in plain clothes took me word," he said sarcastically. "But in case he's waiting for me to go to bed"—

He walked noisily into the front room and snapped the switch. There was no need for quiet now. Jane had been right. The family was gone; all was easy, and there was the little wall safe before him.

He pulled the shades one by one and, standing in front of them, took off his coat and his collar. He pulled a chair close to the window and sat in it for a moment that his shadow might show on the shade. He listened.

He heard the steps of some one start from in front of the house and echo more and more faintly up the street. Again the Lynx smiled to himself. He lit a cigarette. He had been right, then, after all. Murphy of the plain clothes squad was assured.

And it was then, as the steps faded, that the Lynx became active. A dart to the opposite wall, a click, and the room was in darkness. He raised the shade that the light of a neighboring street lamp might cast its soft glare on the wall safe before him. Then he began his work.

Quietly, quickly he turned the little knob and listened for the click of the tumblers within. Again, again, again, again, and he noted the numbers as the tumblers fell. Once more—slowly and smilingly he worked the combination, and what he sought lay before him.

Not so much, it is true, but the Lynx was not a seeker of vast wealth. Solitaires are easier to dispose of than necklaces. After all, five hundred a night is not so bad, especially when one has a policeman to aid one.

The Lynx whistled a bit under his breath and tucked the proceeds of his work safely in his hatband. There were some papers. The Lynx passed them by. He knew there would be no money. Slowly he closed the safe and passed to the next room.

For the Lynx needed a revolver. He found it, where he had believed he would find it, under a pillow and passed on. Quite aimlessly he wandered through the house, rifling a drawer now and then by the light of his little searchlight merely for the curiosity of it. He sought the downstairs and looked at the silverware.

It was heavy and solid. Knives and forks he tucked into the aperture in the lining of his clothing, feeling cautiously now and then to be sure that nowhere did there appear a betraying bulge, shaking himself a bit to be certain that silver did not touch silver with its clink, which would cause trouble on the way home.

Ten minutes more of work, and again the Lynx laughed.

"And a fly cop takes me to the house just for the company of it," he smirked. "Jane did a good job, she did. Jane's a good girl. Maybe some of these days if I keep on getting dippy over her we'll hook up—maybe."

He felt himself again. He pocketed the little searchlight and fumbled his way to the door. He opened it and stepped out on the porch—and recoiled at the touch of a human hand.

"All right, kid," came the voice of the man outside; "I thought you'd hang yourself if I gave you enough rope. You see, kid, we wasn't sure that Jane woman would stick to her giveaway, so I just thought I'd be sure of the dope."

"Jane?" The Lynx trembled a bit.

"Yeh," said Murphy of the Harrison street station; "she kicked in tonight. Got conscience or something and coughed it all up about making the impression of the key and all that stuff. Hated to do it at that, but she ain't built for that sort of work, honest. That's a good kid, that Jane. I kinda like her. Raining a bit harder, ain't it?"

But the Lynx did not answer.

Tommy could not understand why his teacher thought the following paragraph from his composition on "A Hunting Adventure" lacked animation and effectiveness:

Slight Difference.

"I didn't know you were so accomplished a linguist," he remarked as he glanced at the paper she was reading.

"I don't make any pretensions in that direction," she answered.

"But that is a Russian newspaper you have picked up."

"Why, so it is," she answered in surprise. "I thought it was a dialect story."

Discouraged.

"Don't you dance?"

"No," replied Mr. Meekton.

"Haven't you tried to learn?"

"Yes. The lady I employed was a very competent instructor. But I can't see any sense in a man's paying a woman to find fault with him."—Washington Star.

TORTURED BY CONSTIPATION

"Fruit-a-tives" Cured Paralyzed Bowels and Digestion

ST. BONIFACE DE SHAWINIGAN, QUE.
Feb. 3rd. 1914.

"It is a pleasure to me to inform you that after suffering from Chronic Constipation for 2½ years, I have been cured by "Fruit-a-tives". While I was a student at Berthier College, I became so ill I was forced to leave the the college. Severe pains across the intestines continually tortured me and it came to a point when I could not stoop down at all, and my Digestion became paralyzed. Some one advised me to take "Fruit-a-tives" and at once I felt a great improvement. After I had taken four or five boxes, I realized that I was completely cured and what made me glad, also, was that they were acting gently, causing no pain whatever to the bowels. All those who suffer with Chronic Constipation should follow my example and take "Fruit-a-tives" for they are the medicine that cures".

"Fruit-a-tives" are sold by all dealers at 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

AN "ANCIENT LIGHT."

Hole In a Toronto House Cost the Owner $1,000.

Of course, both houses have changed ownership for years. On the east side of Church street, opposite the centre of Normal School grounds, stands a reasonably attractive brick house, with brown stone to the lower storey. This residence —No. 323— though unsuspected from the front, possesses architectural features of uncommon occurrence in such structures of this or any other city. The neighborhood is visibly backslidden from its one-time state of prideful eligibility as first-class residential property. In the seventies and earlier eighties many of the best-to-do citizens lived along here and around the square. Mrs. Jones—the venerable lady who died a few months since at her life-long home, northeast corner of Wilton avenue and Church—was the last survivor of her class.

One of the leading wholesale and retail furriers of the country—James H. Rogers—long dead, owned the lot now occupied by No. 323 Church street. The ramifications of his business enterprise extended to Fort Garry (Winnipeg) and thousands of miles beyond that; his headquarters were on King street, facing St. James' Cathedral, Toronto—then the business section. No. 323 adjoins No. 321, and is tight up against it, as seen from the street, yet if you have the freedom of the latter house and enter, you will discover a window that faces north. "That's odd," you will say. Then you will investigate, and speedily discover how this window opens upon a queer shaped light-well cut into the house next door. At the bottom the shaft is about ten feet square, but spreads out to double that at the top. This unexpected rarity in residential building has a history. It cost Mr. Rogers $1,000 in money, besides the inconvenience of housing such a freak. Once it served as a ventilating shaft to a little family quarrel.

Although citizens generally may have wholly forgotten, the lawyers know the case as "Scadding v. Rogers." The E. A. Scadding concerned was a well-known insurance agent, and James H. Rogers his brother-in-law. Before the plans of the latter for his new house had reached the building stage it was pointed out by his connection's family that his proposed southerly wall would effectually block up a certain window in the Scadding home, facing north. This disagreement amplified to such an extent that they went to law, and the award of the arbitrator appointed by the court assessed all the costs, as above given, upon the defendant Rogers, besides requiring him to alter his plans and leave the freak light-shaft in his house. It has no doubt greatly puzzled the various owners ever since.

"Scadding v. Rogers" is probably the best case of "ancient lights" known to this city's legal fraternity. Prior to 1880, when "ancient lights" were abolished, if a house possessed windows which by any chance remained unobstructed for twenty years they acquired the right of unhindered aspect for immortality, according to the absurd statute. Nobody could build and block them, even if they were in a one-storey roughcast stable, and the contemplated structure next door to cost a round million of dollars.—Toronto Star.

Eskimo Courtship.

During the last days of the celebration of the whale dance of the Eskimos, when the time arrives for the selection of husbands and wives, the man performs his mate dance before the woman he has picked out. In pantomime he promises to provide her generously with the fruit of the hunt, both food and fur. If she is pleased with him, she walks out and dances her acceptance, and shows how she will look after igloo. When they have danced before each other they are married after the custom of the tribe and he leads her off to his walrus-hide lodge.

During the dance they feast on whale. The skin of the baleen whale is about an inch thick and looks like rubber. The solid blubber between it and the true flesh is usually about 14 inches thick. The black skin and the blubber, the cutter cut to the thickness of the former is called "moktuk" and is considered a great delicacy. It is eaten raw, and although it sounds repulsive to the civilized ear, is most palatable. It has a flavor something like that of chestnuts.

RURAL JOYS.

OH, the romance and the glamour
Of a peaceful country life,
Far away from tool and hammer
And the city's noisy strife,
Where no tempting drink is foaming,
Cool, seductive, fresh on ice,
And you revel in the gloaming
Without money, without price!

The mosquito, up and coming,
Buzzes coyly in your ear,
In his friendly manner humming
Tunes in town you never hear.
Almost makes you think of Riley
In his clear, poetic note
Till he comes and very slyly
Leaves his mark upon your throat.

In the fragrant meadow yonder
List the mooing of the cow,
And upon her notes you ponder
If engagements will allow.
For there's always something doing
In the house or out of doors.
You might listen to her mooing
Were it not for sundry chores.

Yes, the country is a winner
And a dream to read about,
But it sometimes jars the sinner
When he comes to try it out.
Over city weary creatures
It may cast a dreamy spell,
But it hasn't all the features
Of a large, first class hotel.

Different Kind.

"Uncle Jason, won't you go with me to the necktie party?"

"What? Do the women go to them here?"

"Certainly. It is to raise money for the Sunday school."

"Pshaw! We used to have them in Texas, but the Sunday schools didn't give them."

Easy.

"Whose little boy are you?"

"I'm mamma's little boy."

"Would you like to be my little boy?"

"No."

"Why wouldn't you like to be my little boy?"

"'Cause you'd ask so many fool questions."

Long Memory.

I remember, I remember, the day when I was born.
We had a mess of chicken and roasted
Indian corn.
The corn, so ripe and mellow, I toasted
by the fire
And ate a half a bushel—I did or I'm a liar.

Doomed.

While yet it holds a place,
For soon mankind will crane its neck

Their Task.

"No; he has come out wonderfully in the last ten years."

"What is the reason?"

"His children have done a good job of raising him."

Interesting.

"What does Mamie mean when she says that she has an option on Harry?"

"Well, there seems to be some kind of an arrangement whereby he is engaged and she isn't."

Unhealthy.

"He is going to die in the last ditch."

"Why, the idea!"

"What's the matter with that?"

"Why, he will catch his death of cold there."

In Real Life.

"Why are you so happy?"

"My mother-in-law is coming to visit us."

"Does that start the smiles?"

"You ought to taste her cooking."

"Papa, what is meant by all right thinking people?"

"The people who think as your old dad does, sonny."

WEIRD DREAM STORY.

The Startling Vision That Saved the Life of Lady Vernon.

The following dream story is told in "The Story of My Life," by Augustus J. C. Hare. The story was told to Mr. Hare in Rome in 1870:

"Lady Vernon dreamed that she saw the butler, with a knife in one hand and a candle in the other, crossing the entrance hall, and she awoke with a great start. After awhile she composed herself to sleep again, and she dreamed—she dreamed that she saw the butler, with a knife in one hand and a candle in the other, on the middle of the staircase, and she awoke with a great shock. She got up. She thought she could not be quite well, and she took a little sal volatile. At last she fell asleep again, and she dreamed—she dreamed that she saw the butler, with a knife in one hand and a candle in the other, standing at her bedroom door, and she awoke in a great terror, and she jumped out of bed, and she said, 'I'll have an end of this; I'll have an end of these foolish imaginations.'

"And she rushed to the door and threw it wide open. And there just outside stood the butler, with a knife in one hand and a candle in the other. And when he suddenly saw Lady Vernon in her white nightdress, with her hair streaming down her back, he was so dreadfully frightened that he dropped the candle on the floor and rushed off down the staircase and off to the stables, where there was a horse ready saddled and bridled, on which he meant to have ridden away when he had murdered Lady Vernon. And he rode away without having murdered her at all, and he was never heard of again."

Clews to His Writing.

Sometimes the worst of handwriting becomes intelligible when one grasps the rules, for a man's script—particularly an author's—is frequently made difficult, chiefly by his deliberate or unconscious inversion of the accepted rules of calligraphy. Henry Ward Beecher had a daughter who acted as copyist, and she read him with ease simply by remembering three principles—that in her father's manuscript no dotted letter was meant for an "i," no crossed letter stood for "t" and that no capital letter ever began a sentence.

Two Bores.

"Well, dear Emmi, do you not think that there is a peculiar marriage state with our neighbors? He is always traveling and leaves—ah—his poor wife alone. That must bore her terribly, the poor woman!"

"Well, it is just as one takes it. You are always at home; that is a still greater bore."—Fliegende Blatter.

BOWSER'S BARGAIN

He Buys a Hammock at 20 Per Cent Discount

By M. QUAD.

[Copyright, 1914, by Associated Literary Press.]

THERE was no red lantern as a danger signal.

There was no raven to croak.

There was no warning in the evening breeze.

But as suddenly as a workman quits when the whistle blows the Bowser doorbell was yanked.

The cook took her hands out of the dishwater to run upstairs and answer the summons and received a bundle which she bore to the sitting room.

"There must be some mistake," said Mrs. Bowser. "I have ordered nothing sent up today."

"There is no mistake about it," replied Mr. Bowser. "This is a hammock I bought this afternoon at 20 per cent off, because it was late in the season."

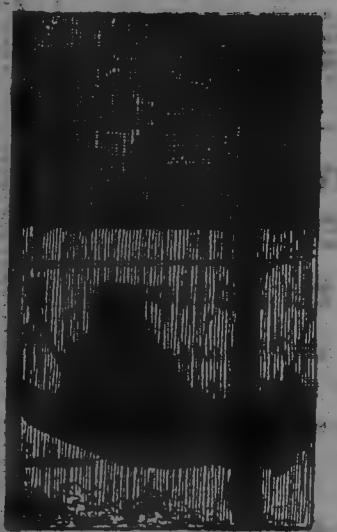
"But we have no place for a hammock."

"Haven't we got a back yard?"

"Yes, but there is no shady spot for a hammock."

Bowser Does Not Seek Ease.

"I am not looking for shady spots, Mrs. Bowser. I want you to talk sensibly for once in your life. Do you know that I have got to harden myself up for the coming dog days or [illegible] terrible risk of a physical collapse with the advent of the first real hot wave?"



THE BOWSER CAT AND THE INTERLOPER COLLIDED.

"No, I didn't know it. I thought you were in splendid health. Only last night I heard you telling Brown"—

"Never mind what I told Brown. A man may be at death's door and yet not like to have people talking about it and sympathizing. I may look well and have a good appetite, but the fact remains that a puff would blow out the flame of life. I have kept this fact from you for weeks and weeks, but I feel you ought to know it."

"And the hammock is going to save you from being puffed out?" she asked as the family cat came out from under the piano to take a hand in the game.

"I hope and trust it is. Acting under the advice of one of the best doctors in town, I am going to try to harden myself up before the hot weather becomes too oppressive. I shall put that hammock up in the back yard this evening."

"And that will harden you?"

Adam is His Hero.

"And I shall pass the night in the hammock—many nights. The doctor says I must have a free circulation of air and that instead of avoiding the night dews I must revel in them, so to say. Man was never born to sleep in a bed as we do. Adam rested at night under a tree. So did all the other men for hundreds of years. Whenever you find the hardiest men you find men who keep in the open air by day and night. I have coddled myself up too much."

"Well, when you have a sore throat, a cold in the head and are aching with rheumatism from head to heel, perhaps you'll keep on coddling!" she answered. "Any doctor who told you such stuff for truth is an idiot!"

"There you go!" exclaimed Mr. Bowser as he began to pace up and down the room, followed by the cat. "I might have known you wouldn't talk sense. I never start in to better my health but you oppose the idea. If you are hoping I may collapse on the street and be brought home as dead as a doornail, why don't you say so and have done with it?"

Mrs. Bowser Scents Trouble Again.

"Go ahead with your hammock cure," she quietly replied. "If the doctor said it would harden you up then of course it will. Don't put the blame off on me, however."

"Blame? Blame? How can I blame you?"

"I don't know, but you probably will."

"I'll probably do nothing of the kind. By George, but I wonder if there is another such aggravating woman on the face of the earth!"

Mrs. Bowser had nothing more to say. Mr. Bowser kicked things out of his way as he walked, and the cat rubbed against a leg of the piano and saw fun ahead. Half an hour later the hammock was slung between two of the clothesline posts. It was a fairly dark evening, and Mr. Bowser congratulated himself that none of the neighbors had got on to his little scheme. At 1 o'clock he was ready to try the cure. He tried to draw Mrs. Bowser into an argument about it, but she kept clear and went upstairs as he started out. Bareheaded and with coat and vest off, he fell into the hammock with a grunt of satisfaction and began counting the stars in the vault above. Unnoticed by him, the cat had followed at his heels. The night cure was nothing new to her, and she went wandering about the yard in search of summer novelties. Ten minutes had passed, and Mr. Bowser had just indulged in a sneeze which set the hammock swinging when the head of a neighbor's cat appeared above the fence. For a few brief seconds the Bowser cat and the interloper exchanging glances of hate and distrust and defiance, and then on top of the fence they collided.

"By the great horn spoon!" ejaculated Mr. Bowser as he rolled about and finally fell out of the hammock. By the time he had hit the earth the interloper was a licked feline and was heard scrambling over a fence three yards below.

Enter a Canine Intruder.

It was evident that the cure had a few drawbacks, but after cussing softly to himself for a minute the patient climbed back into the hammock and tried to make himself believe that he already felt better. He shut his eyes tightly, determined to sleep, and the premonitory tingle of a second sneeze was being faintly felt when there was a yell and a hiss, and the cat went up the fence and over it like a flash, and a dog was left whining and growling within ten feet of the hammock. The canine had crept under the alley fence, and the Bowser cat hadn't waited to ask any questions.

"By thunder! Can't a man find five minutes' peace in his own back yard?" shouted Mr. Bowser as he rolled out and looked for a clothes prop as a weapon of offense.

He ran that dog three times across the yard before the animal could find the hole he came in at and get out again, and when he returned to the hammock the romance of the night was gone. If he hadn't caught sight of Mrs. Bowser peering from one of the back windows he might have decided to call things off until the next night. That settled matters, however. He dropped into the hammock and huddled himself up, and the cat came back and sat on the fence and looked down upon him with guardian eyes. Ten minutes stole quietly away, and the crickets had begun to sing low and drowsily, when something fell from the sky with a great slash and clatter and missed Mr. Bowser and his hammock by only a few inches.

"Something" Was an Old Bucket.

"By the club footed king, but who did that?" he demanded as he rolled out to find that the "something" was an old pail.

He had scarcely uttered the word when an Early Rose potato whizzed by his ear and struck the fence with a bang, and it was followed by a Florida cabbage stalk, which emitted a moaning sound as it grazed the top of his head. The cat realized that she wasn't in it and took a skip, but Mr. Bowser wasn't to be bluffed.

"You reptiles, I'll have you jugged for this!" he shouted as he looked around and failed to locate any one. "Do you know"—

Then there were missiles which he believed to be onions and tomatoes and green corn cobs and ancient lemons, and all he could do was to jump up and down and demand that his hidden foes stand forth and be slaughtered. He thought he caught sight of some one on the alley fence, and he made a wild charge, but he had no sooner reached it than the heavens rained tin cans, bottles, old hats and shoes, and he was compelled to turn and flee for his life. Mrs. Bowser came downstairs to find him in the sitting room, white faced, big eyed and panting, and after a look at him she said:

"Have you got hardened up for the hot wave as quick as this?"

"Woman, how dare you look me in the face?" he demanded as he turned on her. "Don't you suppose I know all about your little plot to have me killed, murdered, assassinated in my own back yard? I say, dare you"—

"You'd better come to bed," she quietly replied, and she went upstairs, and he slowly followed and hadn't another word to say.

Master John R. Fell, Jr., Is Quite a Happy Lad.

© by American Press Association.

Master John R. Fell, Jr., during the summer season is a resident of Newport, the very fashionable resort of America's richest folks. In winter he lives in New York city, so he sees society in both seasons. That is, John R., Jr., might see it if he chose to bother about it, which he does not. He is too young and full of the carelessness of youth to bother about anything that isn't fun. John is a real boy of the American kind, who is mainly interested in things common to boys of his years. For instance, John met a photographer down at Newport, and he wasn't a bit uppish. He posed gleefully for the man with the camera and held his dog Buster by the tail, so that the little animal could be in the picture. Unfortunately the column of the paper is not wide enough to show Buster, but in the photograph he may be seen, his tail firmly grasped in John's right fist. John is a real boy—no mistake about that.

The Eagle Emblem.

The Etruscans were the first race to adopt the eagle as an emblem of their royal power and to carry it high upon their standards at the head of their armies. From the time of Marius it was the emblem of the Roman republic and was borne on the standards of the legions. It was generally represented with outstretched wings and was made of silver until the time of Hadrian, who made it of finest gold.

The Byzantine emperors used the double headed eagle to indicate their claim to the empire of the east and west.

The German emperors adopted it in the fourteenth century, and afterward it appeared on the arms of Russia.

Prussia carries on her standards the black eagle, and Poland bears a white eagle.

The United States of America has adopted the white headed eagle as an emblem.

Napoleon adopted the eagle as emblematic of imperial France.

A Wonderful Wall.

Few people realize what an almost perfect condition prevails along a large part of the great wall of China. The bricks of the parapet are as firm as ever, and their edges have stood the severe climatic conditions of north China with scarcely a break. The paving along the top of the wall is so smooth that one may ride over it with a bicycle, and the great granite blocks with which it is faced are smooth and as closely fitted as when put in place over 2,000 years ago.

The entire length of this wall is 1,400 miles. It is twenty-two feet high and twenty feet in thickness. At intervals of 100 yards or so there are towers, some forty feet in height.—Popular Mechanics.

"Holy City."

This is a name bestowed by any sect or nation upon the city most closely associated with its religious beliefs and observances and that has become a place of veneration consequently or special worship.

Allahabad is the holy city of the Indian Mohammedans.

Benares is the holy city of the Hindus, while Cuzco was that of the ancient Incas.

Jerusalem is the holy city of the Jews and Christians.

Mecca, Medina and Damascus have first place in the affections of the Mohammedans.

Moscow and Kiev are the holy cities of the Russians.

An Odd Beast Is the Aye-aye.

Have you ever heard of the aye-aye? No? Well, it is a small mammal about the size of a cat and inhabits Madagascar. It is said to have been named because of the peculiar cry it makes—aye-aye-aye! It has sharp teeth like those of a rat and long, thin fingers with pointed claws. But the middle finger of each paw is exceptionally long and thin. And for a purpose too. It feeds chiefly upon earthworms, so finds this middle finger very convenient for poking into worm holes and dragging forth the luckless dwellers therein.

"Germans ran back 12 miles in one day," says a heading. Quite a feat.

STORIES OF LISZT

How the Famous Master Played to a Hidden Audience.

A SURPRISE AT THE FINISH.

For a Moment It Filled the Hostess and Company With Dismay, but Proved a Case of All's Well That Ends Well—A Snub For a Tactless Baroness.

Liszt resented people counting on his playing. When Baroness K. inveigled him into promising to take tea with her, because he knew her father, she, on his accepting, invited a lot of friends, holding out hopes that Liszt would play. She pushed the piano into the middle of the room—no one could have possibly failed to see it.

Every one was on the qui vive when Liszt arrived and breathless with anticipation. Liszt, who had had many surprises of this sort, I imagine, saw the situation at a glance. After several people had been presented to him, Liszt, with his most captivating smile, said to the hostess:

"Madam, where is your piano?" and looked all about for the instrument though it was within an inch of his nose.

"Oh, monseigneur! Would you, really * * * ?" advancing toward the piano, triumphantly. "You are too kind. I never should have dared to ask you." And, waving her hand toward it, "Here is the piano!"

"Ah, yes," said Liszt, who dearly loves a joke, "I wished to put my hat on it."

Very crestfallen, but still undaunted, the tactless baroness cried, "But, monseigneur, you will not refuse, if only to play a scale—merely to touch the piano!"

But Liszt, as unkind as she was tactless, answered, coldly: "Madam, I never play my scales in the afternoon," and turned his back on her and talked with Madam Helbig.

On another occasion Liszt wrote to me that he would bring some of his songs to try over at 5 o'clock. I inclose his letter. What a chance, thought I, for me to give pleasure to some of my friends who I knew were longing to see him. Although he had said entre nous in his letter, and I knew that he really wanted to look through the songs alone with me, I could not resist the temptation—though it was such rank disobedience—and said to them:

"Liszt is coming to me at 5 o'clock. If you would like to hear him, and consent to be hidden behind a door, I will invite you."

They all accepted with rapture and were assembled in the little salon before the time appointed. The door was left open and a large screen placed before it.

Johan fetched Liszt in our carriage, as he always does. I received him and the book of "Lieder," which he brought with him. (Only Johan and Nina were present.) He opened the book at "Comment disaient ils?" one of his most beautiful songs, which has an exquisite but very difficult accompaniment. He played with fairy fingers, and we went over it several times. I could see the screen swerving and waving about, but Liszt's back was turned, so he could not see it.

After we had finished tea was served, and then he said, "Have you heard my 'Rigoletto'?"

"Yes," I said, and added, "but not by you."

"Well," he said, "I will play it for you. Your piano is much better than the one I have. It is a pleasure to play on it."

The screen, now alive with emotion, almost tipped over. After "Rigoletto" he played "Les Soirees de Vienne," and this time the screen actually did topple over and exposed to view the group of badly frightened ladies huddled behind it. I shuddered to think how the master would take this horrible treachery.

He took it better than I expected—in fact, he laughed outright. The ladies came forward and were presented to him and were delighted. I am sure that Liszt was, too; at any rate, he laughed so much at my ruse and contrition that the tears rolled down his cheeks. He wiped them away with his pocket handkerchief, which had an embroidered F. L. in the corner. This he left behind and I kept it as a souvenir.—Mme. de Hegermann-Lindencrone in Harper's Magazine.

MRS. MABEN WAS MADE WELL

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Wants Other Suffering Women To Know It.

Murfreesboro, Tenn. — "I have wanted to write to you for a long time to tell you what your wonderful remedies have done for me. I was a sufferer from female weakness and displacement and I would have such tired, worn out feelings, sick headaches and dizzy spells. Doctors did me no good so I tried the Lydia E. Pinkham Remedies — Vegetable Compound and Sanative Wash. I am now well and strong and can do all my own work. I owe it all to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and want other suffering women to know about it." — Mrs. H. E. MABEN, 211 S. Spring, St., Murfreesboro, Tenn.

This famous remedy, the medicinal ingredients of which are derived from native roots and herbs, has for nearly forty years proved to be a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism. Women everywhere bear willing testimony to the wonderful virtue of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Why Lose Hope.

No woman suffering from any form of female troubles should lose hope until she has given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

LURE OF THE OPIUM PILL

And the Way the Cost Piles Up as It Enslaves Its Victim.

In the American Magazine appears an article entitled "A Modern Opium Eater," written by a former newspaper man, who became a victim of the habit and is now a convict in a penitentiary. The following extract from his article gives an idea of the amount of money required by an opium eater:

"By this time the cost of opium had become a very appreciable and permanent expense. From a few pills at first I increased my allowance day by day until it took thirty or forty 'fun' (a Chinese measure; there are seventy-six fun in an ounce) to give me the mental relief I craved. The physical craving—the body's demand for it—can be satisfied with approximately the same amount each day. The mental craving—the mind's demand—increases daily. What satisfies tonight is too little tomorrow, and so on. To feel even normal I now needed three or four times the half dozen pills which at first had given me such exquisite pleasure. To get the exhilaration, the soothed nerves, the contentment I craved, I, like each of the millions before me, had to use more and more each day.

"Thirty-six fun of opium at retail costs, at an average, $3. A fifty cent tip to my 'cook' and a quarter for the privilege of the room in which I smoked made my habit cost me about $4 a day, which made a ghastly hole in even the good salary I earned. I began to buy my opium by the can, paying from $25 to $30 for tins averaging 400 fun. The elimination of the retailer's profit helped temporarily, but the ever increasing demands of my habit soon overcame the saving."

MAKING INVESTMENTS.

Safety of Principal Is More Essential Than Big Returns.

First, here is a quotation from a thrift preacher:

"Many fortunes have been made and many more will be made through wise investments. Many fortunes are lost, too, through unwise investments. But thrifty habits and consulting with experienced persons like conservative bankers will give one the wisdom necessary to handle money wisely."

Second, I set down a quotation from the advertisement of a wise and conservative investment banker:

"In lending or investing money all possible care should be taken to guard against hasty or impulsive decision. Every endeavor should be made to assemble such reliable information as will permit of the exercise of intelligent judgment. The man who assumes this attitude toward all investment propositions comes to have an increasing regard for the element of conservatism, and is ordinarily the first man to seek the co-operation of investment experts."

Conservatism in investment means, first of all, keeping the principal sum safe. What profits it to get 7 or 8 per cent a year on your money for three or four years if at the end of that time misfortune of any sort overtakes the company you invested in to such an extent that you would find what you have paid $100 for is worth only $75? And when you leave the road of conservatism in putting your money out to work this is exactly the experience you are likely to have.

Better keep your money in the savings bank, where it will earn about 4 per cent and where, if you wish, interest will be compounded, until you are positively certain of the soundness of the investment advice you receive. Adding to the saved sum in a savings bank, too, is a mighty good way to fasten the thrift habit upon yourself. Choose as your first adviser in investment some one who has selected investments for the savings bank. From him learn what the elements of sound investment are. Go slow!—John M. Oskison in Chicago News.

FASHION'S FOIBLES.

Rose colorings are seen everywhere.

The separate blouse is immensely popular.

Skirts of the newest frocks are trimmed with circular flounces, sometimes piped with plain colors.

Yolk of egg yellow is one of the smart shades.

Stockings should match the color of the frock.

Dresses for the street are most useful when made with coatee waists.

Modish white shoes are of white duck and made in colonial style.

The prettiest afternoon dresses are almost as simple as those for morning.

Collars and guimpes are so much alike this season it is hard to identify them apart.

Tango, purple and turquoise is a surprising color combination seen in silks.

On Duty.

THE SPOT DOWN DEEP

Not Too Deep to Be Touched

By ONEY FRED SWEET

The pair had progressed as far from the depot as the farm implement shop when Burke's tall companion interrupted his reverie caused by the sight of the old town again, the dark hour that lay upon it and the thought of the mission on which he had returned.

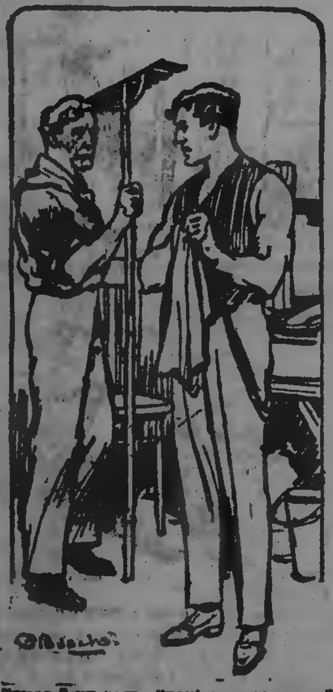
"I thought it was more of a place than this," the fellow slurred, "after hearing you tell about it. Why, the train hardly stopped long enough to let us off."

"They're all alike, these tank towns in the corn belt," Burke snarled, staring resentfully about him—"a green depot, a red elevator, a Main street, a church, a schoolhouse, a cemetery and a few houses. And don't let me forget—a bank!"

"At that I have an idea the place seems a little different to you from the others, Burke," the tall man went on. "Just think—this was your world all the time that you were a kid. Every one of these two story buildings must have loomed like a skyscraper then."

"Cut the comedy, Slim," Burke broke in, halting his hurried pace a bit to express himself more forcibly. "It's all familiar enough. These towns around here haven't had a new brick in them these past ten years. And the folks in them are as changeless as that statue of 'Justice' up there on top of the courthouse—unless it is that some of the kids have grown up. And if they've grown up very much they've pulled out like I did."

They had reached the center of the town—a point where the main street intersected with the street leading from the depot. "That's the joint," he said as he threw his thumb over his shoulder toward the brick building on the corner. The tall man turned to scan the tin sign, whose lettering, "Loans and Deposits," was foreshortened by the slight breeze that swayed it.



"WELL," HE SAID, "YOU'VE COME HOME."

"It looks soft," he answered after a shrewd scrutiny of the surroundings, "but it's one thing to crack them these days and another thing to get away. The way we've planned, though, I can't see where there can be a leak."

"Right on this corner is where the show bands used to circle and play," explained Burke, "and from this crossing down there to the park was the distance set off for the 100 yard dashes on the Fourth of July. I won one of them once with my pants rolled up and wearing a pair of white wool socks. They said I was over the age fixed and wouldn't give me the money."

At Burke's initiative the two started on down the street.

"Here's the hotel," he went on in the tone of a guide. "It's where you'll stop. You can look the part of a Chicago drummer all right."

"I suppose there's something in coming back like this that kind of touches a spot down deep," suggested the stranger companion as the two passed the point where the stores left off and the homes began, "even though a fellow's been in the game you have and has come back for what you've come back to do. I know"—

"Spot nothing!" Burke cut in disgustedly. "When we take the 'bumpers' tomorrow morning at this time on that train that just pulled out this town 'll be entirely off the map so far as I am concerned. It's been out of my mind for years as it is. I came back because I knew there was a soft job here, that was all. There's the folks' place, halfway down the block there, where you see the big maple—looks as if it was about ready to tumble over. I'll meet you in the alley there just after dark tonight. You find out what you're supposed to and count on me. So long."

It had been a long time since Burke had tried the door at home in the early morning hours, but he found no lock to prevent his entrance. And he had increased his ability at stealthiness in the years that he had been gone, so that he was easily able to make his room upstairs without being heard.

It was as if he had been gone but a day—the smoky kerosene lamp on the bureau, the varicolored quilt on the sagging bed. Once, on being half aroused, he expected to hear the rattle of trucks and the yell of a newsboy, but, instead, there came only the crow of a rooster welcoming the dawn.

He surprised his mother when she was at the task of getting dinner as he stalked half dressed through the kitchen on the way to the sink.

"There, now, can't a fellow come home once in awhile without there being a fuss?" he complained as the woman gave a little startled cry and rushed toward him. "Where's pa?" he inquired, forcing the arms away from about his shoulders. "I'm glad it's nearly dinner time—I'm hungry."

"I wasn't counting on you," his mother answered apologetically, wiping the tears from her eyes and starting for the pantry. Burke noticed that she limped in her walk. She had aged, his mother had.

The door she opened gave a glimpse of the queer shaped and colored dishes such as he had never seen except at home. They were accompanied by an odor that had been peculiar to them too. His mother came back with one of the biggest jars from the row on the shelf—currant jelly.

Burke was wiping his face on the red bordered towel when his father came in. The old man had his rake in his hand and slowly removed his slouch black hat before he spoke.

"Well," he said, "you've come home."

The removal of the hat showed how white his hair had become, and his face was like it in spite of its contact with sun and wind. He came over to wash his gnarled hands in the same basin with his son.

"I've the garden nearly all in again," he continued finally. "I'm going to put in onions again this year. They take lots of work, but if the season turns out just right they bring more than other stuff."

Burke noticed that the table had been shortened up until the checkered cloth touched the floor on all sides, but the dishes were the same, the food cooked the same.

"How long you going to stay?" the father inquired at length, pouring his coffee into a saucer.

"Oh, I only 'll be here a day or two," answered Burke. "It's pretty dead here after one is used to Chicago."

"Just a day?" his mother fluttered.

"Still traveling for that Chicago house?" the father interrupted to inquire, eying his son as he cooled the coffee at his lips. "Times ain't been so very good out here."

"I'm still with them," sparred Burke. "It's been a little dull with us, too, lately, but"—he faltered for an instant—"we're expecting quite a big piece of business out this way soon."

"The plaster on the wall back of you's all healed up now. Do you notice it?" the father went on, pointing to Burke to turn around. "You three boys used to lean back so much when you sat together there on the bench that it was always broke off. There wasn't much use fixing it."

The mother entirely ceased with her pretension at eating and nervously fingered the tablecloth.

"Sometimes," she interposed in an effort to appear unaffected by the reference just made—"sometimes your father goes to the hall door and calls to you all upstairs just as if you were all here yet. He calls each of you separate by name. 'It's time for school.'"

Her attempted laugh with the words fell lame, and to keep brave she started in to clear off the dishes.

Burke sought the lounge in the sitting room, the springs of which had been ruined by his acrobatic stunts years before. He could close his eyes and see every unchanged object in the room—the cheap organ, at which his sister had spent many weary hours in practice; the enlarged crayon portrait of his little brother, who had been taken by diphtheria at the time of their quarantine during the awful cold spell, and his father's war relics and encampment badges.

He had planned to get plenty of sleep, but he was surprised to find it dark when he awoke. The lamp in the kitchen was already lighted, and a dog was barking outside. Rubbing his eyes, Burke avoided his mother, busy in the pantry, and found his way into the back yard. He had not counted on the apple tree spreading its branches, but he refrained from cursing when it brushed his face in the path. At the alley he found his partner pacing in impatience.

"It's a fine time to be coming," the waiting man complained sarcastically. "I've been waiting half an hour. What was the matter?"

"I fell asleep," explained Burke, "but I'm awake now—clear awake." He paused a moment before going on. "I'm not in on the deal," he thrust decisively.

His companion's chagrin and surprise could not be concealed even by the darkness. For a moment they stood, two shadowy forms studying each other.

"Now, there's no argument," snapped Burke. "I'm not only not going to pull off this job, but I'm out of the game altogether. I'll shake hands 'goodby' if you want to. I suppose you are disappointed."

Burke caught the tall man's mumbled reply as he started back for the house.

"Disappointed!" he echoed. "I think the agency will be somewhat—after my using up two months' expense money in trying to get evidence on you that would stick."

Quebec Bridge Figures.

In the erection of the Quebec Bridge across the St. Lawrence river, which will have the greatest span in the world, over 60,000 tons of steel are to be assembled in three spans of a combined length of 2,830 feet, 150 feet above the water. The river is 200 feet deep, with a tide of sixteen feet and a current of eight miles an hour. Pieces weighing 185 tons and compound members nearly 300 feet long, weighing more than 1,200 tons, are to be handled in mid-air and assembled and maintained with precision. Two cantilever arms must be built out self-supporting for 580 feet beyond their piers and remain exposed for months to the severest storms, and a 640-foot double track 5,000-ton railroad span must be built at a distance, floated to the site, raised 150 feet and connected to them with great speed and accuracy.

Too Complex.

"I can't get on to these yere fashionable ways."

"What's the matter, Steve?"

"When I went to dinner at my rich cousin's house they went up in the air because I wanted to take my pie with my knife and then made me eat my ice cream with a fork."—Baltimore American.

A SUMMER ROMANCE.

An Example of the Originality Shown by Light Fiction Writers.

HE paused in the doorway, a superb figure, his Greek profile limned whitely against the dark velvet portieres. He held this for about nine feet of film.

"Julietta," he said, as he noiselessly crossed the priceless Daghestan rug, "I have bad news for you."

"Mercy, how you startled me!" pettishly cried the haughty beauty.

"I'll startle you still more," he gloomily responded. "It's about my father's failure. It was entirely unexpected. He didn't save a cent from the wreckage."

The girl gave a low cry.

"And you — what will become of you?"

"I hope to hire out," he coldly replied. "I believe I'd like to be the chauffeur of a horse car."

"But there are no horse cars in Cleveland."

"I'm going to New York," he gravely responded. He paused. "Will you wait for me?"

"I will wait until 3 o'clock," she answered, and her voice was full of hauteur.

He shook his head.

"I couldn't make a fortune in that time," he gloomily asseverated. "Let's end it now. Here is the neat silver matchbox you gave me."

"And here," she responded, "are your phony pearls."

"And my letters?"

"Here."

He glanced through the bundle.

"That's the bunk I want," he cried. "No breach of promise court for these." He turned in the doorway. "Father failed twenty years ago," he said. "He's richer now than ever!"

With a low cry the stricken girl slipped to the floor and buried her face in the fauteuil.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Reason.

Among the employees whose duties are supposed to be discharged in the rear of a certain shop in Baltimore while the proprietor looks after matters in front are a couple of darkies who occasionally "take things easy."

One afternoon they were engaged in a quiet game of seven-up on a barrel, when they were startled by the sudden appearance of the boss, whom they supposed to be in his usual place in front.

The boss was angry. "How is it," he demanded, "that I find you fellows playing cards?"

"I don't know, boss," was the response of one of the darkies, "unless it's on account of dem rubber heels you is wearin'."—Lippincott's.

Necessary.

Miss Audrey had come to spend the week end with friends in a little New Jersey town and exhibited a keen interest in the much talked of "Jersey skeeter."

When the greetings were over and the party settled down the guest remarked to her host, after a careful survey of the porch:

"I don't see any mosquito netting around, William."

"No," answered he, "we're using mouse traps."—Everybody's Magazine.

Mixed.

As the train was moving out of a Scotch station a man in one of the compartments noticed that the porter in whose charge he had given his luggage had not put it into the van and so shouted to him and said: "Hi, you old fool! What do you mean by not putting my luggage in the van?"

To which the porter replied: "Eh, man! Yer luggage is ne'er such a fool as yersel'. Yer i' the wrang train!"—New York Globe.

Strict Accounts.

"Wombat's wife watches him very closely in money matters."

"Yes; if he has a bit torn off his pay check she'd think he had been buying something surreptitiously."—Kansas City Journal.

THE TIMES CHANGE.

AT twenty-three to part my hair
A comb I needed like a trowel;
At fifty-three 'tis sparse and spare.
I use a towel!

At twenty-three my step was blithe
And bounding as a bunny rabbit's;
At fifty-three old time a tithe
Has changed my habits!

At twenty-three I loved the dew
That is the dawning's bright adorner;
At fifty-three I'm partial to
The chimney corner!

At twenty-three my speech's flow
Was springlike, sprightly and prolific;
At fifty-three I often grow
Quite soporific!

At twenty-three the wooded hills
Were filled with airy creatures Attic;
At fifty-three they harbor ills
And aches rheumatic!

At twenty-three Calliope
I wooed with all the lyric graces;
At fifty-three, alas, at me
She makes wry faces!

At twenty-three to Venus I
Breathed vows in sundry spots and shady;
At fifty-three I'm rather shy
Of that fair lady!

At twenty-three, with ardent eyes,
I looked on life without a tremor;
At fifty-three, in staider wise,
I'm but a dreamer!

PETERBORO FAIR SCORES "FIRST NIGHT" SUCCESS; CROWDS GIVE APPROVAL

Several Departments of Exhibition Show Improvement of Former Years—Splendid Exhibits From County and City.

MANY MERCHANTS HAVE DISPLAY

The Twelfth Annual Peterboro Industrial Exhibition is on. Weeks and weeks of preparations have been made, greater and more extensive preparations than ever before, because the directors were conscious of that fact that besides the country wide opposition to fairs—the money stringency another opposition had to be combatted, that was the Lindsay Fair which is being held on the same dates. It was impossible to play a winning hand against the national depression but it is a satisfaction to know that the directors have put forth such an extra effort that the Lindsay exhibition has had no effect and the local even exceeds former years.

It is generally the custom for patrons to forget the fact that the program commences the first night but last evening there was a good crowd on hand for the first night. So jubilant were the directors over the fact that they became very optimistic and asserted that the attendance would be greater than in previous years. If the attendance remains about the same it must be conceded that the exhibition was a greater success in consideration of existing conditions.

The midway shows were but partially operated as the proprietors of the various booths were depending more on the business of today and tomorrow than they were on the first day. Every feature of a properly conducted midway is to be found, one in particular that had the crowd coming was run a la the hit the nigger idea but instead of a nigger they had a picture of the Kaiser. Over the top the words Hock the Kaiser, three shots for 5 were inscribed.

Other attractions along the midway were the booths and lunch rooms of the All Saints, Park Street Baptist and St. James Churches. The Kitchener Club were also on the ground with a booth and from appearances were "reaping a harvest."

Two bands were present last evening, the 57th Regimental Band and the Salvation Army Band. Both acquitted themselves very creditably. The entertainment in front of the grand stand is a little variation from the usual tumbling and trapeze work. There are two sets of tumbling and three others, single, juggling, double, shooting, and double, musical number.

The musical number in which the two performers were dressed in kilts were given a great hand when they rendered, "It's a long, long way to Tipperary." The lighting system was not arranged so as to permit the lady and gentleman shooting to the best of advantage but this will be rectified this evening.

CIRCUMSTANCES CALL FOR ACTION RATHER THAN WORDS

King George Again Refers to the Enthusiastic Rally to the Common Flag, as Parliament is Prorogued.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Sept. 18.—In his speech from the throne proroguing Parliament King George spoke today as follows: "My Lords and Gentlemen, I address you in circumstances that call for action rather than for speech. After every endeavor had been made by my government to preserve the peace of the world, I was compelled in the assertion of treaty obligations, deliberately set at nought, and for the protection of the public law and the vital interests of my empire to go to war. My navy and my army have with unceasing vigilance, courage and skill sustained, in this assertion, with our gallant and faithful allies, a just and righteous cause. From every part of my empire there has been a spontaneously and enthusiastic rally to our common flag."

"Gentlemen of the House of Commons. I thank you for the liberality with which you have met the great emergency. My lords and gentlemen, we are fighting for a worthy purpose and we shall not lay down our arms until that purpose has been fully achieved.'

London, Sept. 18.—Scenes of unusual enthusiasm were enacted today when parliament prorogued. On the announcement of the passing of the Irish Home Rule Bill, in the Commons, Nationalists and Liberals broke into loud cheers, repeated again and again. Will Crooks asked if it was in order to sing God Save the King" without waiting for permission. He started the first verse himself and then broke down with emotion. The anthem was taken up by spectators in the gallery as well as by members and the singing was heard in the palace yard. As members filed out of the chamber Mr. Crooks cried out, "God save Ireland." John Redmond, the Irish Nationalist leader, replied, "God save England."

"I rely with confidence upon the loyal and united efforts of all my subjects and I pray Almighty God may give us His blessing."

ALLIES PROGRESSING ON WESTERN WING

Vigorous German Offensive Movement is Being Repulsed, French War Department Announces — Czar's Forces Capture Ammunition Convoys, Five Thousand Prisoners and Thirty Cannon

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Paris, Sept. 18.—The allies have progressed somewhat on their western wing and are repulsing the vigorous German offensive movement, according to an official announcement made this afternoon by the French war department.

Paris, Sept. 18.—An official communication says the battle continued during Sept. 16 along the front from the river Oise to Woevre, without any important changes in the situation at any point.

"First—On our left wing, on the heights to the north of the river Aisne, we have made slight progress against certain points. Three offensive counter-attacks undertaken by the Germans against the English army failed. From Craonne to Rheims we ourselves repulsed some very violent counter-attacks executed during the night. The enemy tried in vain to take the offensive against Rheims.

"Second—On the centre, from Rheims to Argonne, the enemy has reinforced himself by constructing important fortifications, and has adopted a purely defensive attitude. To the east of Argonne, in the Woevre district, the situation is unchanged. On our right wing in Lorraine and the Vosges, the enemy occupies positions organized on a defensive basis, in the vicinity of the frontier."

RUSSIAN SUCCESSES CONTINUE

Petrograd, Sept. 18.—Russian troops in pursuit of Austrians are meeting with success all along the line. In the Iavorovo district they captured ammunition convoys, together with 5,000 prisoners and 30 cannon.

FOUGHT ENEMY TO THE END

Capetown, Sept. 18.—A force of 250 Germans, together with three maxim guns, attacked the British postal Nakob on Thursday. The garrison consisted of seven policemen, who fought until their ammunition was exhausted. Those who had not been killed were taken prisoners.

ACCOUNTANT OF PUBLIC UTILITIES

Ald. J. C. Anderson is Appointed by the Commission

Alderman John C. Anderson, Chairman of the Finance Committee was appointed accountant of the Public Utilities offices yesterday at a meeting of the Public Utilities Commission. Mr. Anderson has had a vast experience, being connected with the Peter Hamilton Co. for over twenty-five years and Chairman of the Finance Committee for three sessions. During the three years he has guarded the "people's" money he has performed his duties in a manner that has won credit to himself and made money for the city.

Mr. Anderson will resign his aldermanic seat but whether or not a successor will be elected owing to the lateness of the year, is not known.

HYDRO LIGHTING ON WATER STREET

Utilities Commission Have no Plans as Yet

At the meeting of the Public Utilities Commission yesterday afternoon the Mayor was present and asked if the body had any plans for lighting Water Street. If so it would be best to execute them before the paving is commenced. The commission have no plans at present but the manager was ordered to consider the matter.

The superintendent reported that the cost of a five inch main from George to Water Street to replace the three inch main at present installed would cost $345. It was decided not to install the two inch main.

Manager Howse has six men at present taking the names and addresses, also the rate of the customers of the Peterboro Light and Power Co. The task will be concluded in a few days.

FOR TWO YEARS

Canadian Contingent Will be Reinforced From Time to Time

OTTAWA, Sept. 18. — The Canadian army division is being equipped for two years of service, the view taken by the authorities here being that the campaign will be a long one.

As the expectation of the War Office is that Canada will have 40,000 men in the field, and the Canadian Government will act in accordance with the views of the Imperial authorities, it is highly probable that the proposal to send a second army division to the front will be reconsidered. There is in war 60 per cent. wastage through casualties, illness, etc., and so, in order to maintain the force at its strength of 40,000, many more will have to be sent from time to time.

It will be January before the next troops leave for the front, and as Valcartier is impossible as a winter comp, they will likely be mobilized at various points.

IMPORTANT NOTICE FOR THE LADIES

The ladies who have been knitting caps, etc., for the soldiers at Valcartier are kindly requested to send the finished articles to the Oriental Hotel before ten o'clock Saturday morning as a parcel is to be made up and forwarded immediately.

COLLISION TAKES LIVES OF FOURTEEN

Wives and Children of Lighthouse Keepers Are Dead

STEAMERS MEET IN FOG

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Quebec, Sept. 1.8—Fourteen lives were lost this morning when the government steamer Montmagny was rammed by the Black Diamond collier "Lingan," at Beaujeu Banks, one mile below Crane Island.

The Montmagny was on her way from Quebec to the Gulf and Straits of Belle Isle, Newfoundland, where she was landing the families of two lighthouse keepers, together with coal and other provisions.

Mrs. Richard, wife of the lighthouse keeper at Belle Isle, with her seven children, was on board, with Mrs. Lavallee, wife of the lighthouse keeper at Flower Island, and her four children, and all perished. Second Officer Lachance is among the dead. He died with two children in his arms, trying to save them.

The Montmagny went down inside of three minutes. The fifth child of Mrs. Lavallee thought to be safe is said to have been drowned.

Quebec, Sept. 18.—The government steamer Montmagny was sunk at 5 o'clock this morning by a collision with the Dominion Coal company's steamer Lingan, during a fog, 25 miles below Quebec. She was bound for the Straits of Belle Isle with lighthouse supplies. It was at first reported that only one man was missing, but later the number was given as twelve. The crew numbered twenty.

CLOTHING AND FOOD FOR THE HEROIC BELGIANS

Province of Nova Scotia Will Provide Shipload of Supplies

Halifax, Sept. 18.—Premier Murray has addressed an appeal to the people of the province of Nova Scotia to provide a steamer-load of food and clothing for the starving Belgians. Mr. Murray says:

"The heroic stand of the people of Belgium has won the admiration of the whole world. They have made sacrifices so great that it almost passes our comprehension. Their hands have been laid waste, their towns sacked, their homes wrecked, their women and children outraged, their famous churches and cathedrals pillaged, their priceless art treasures destroyed—everywhere across the Belgian country is the invader's ruthless trail of ruin and blood.

"In the face of this appalling suffering and destruction, almost unparalleled in the history of warfare, I am sure that the people of Nova Scotia cannot remain unmoved."

The Government of Nova Scotia will charter a steamer, which will be despatched early in October with a full cargo of necessaries of life for Britain's faithful ally.

Co Hughes' Son Promoted

Ottawa, Sept. 18.—Militia orders announce the promotion of Major Garnet Hughes, of the 50th Regiment, Victoria, to the rank of lieutenant-colonel. He is a son of the Minister of Militia and is with the forces at Valcartier.

Major F. O. W. Loomis, of the 5th Royal Highlanders, Montreal, is made a brevet lieutenant-colonel, and Thomas A. Russell, of Toronto, a honorary colonel.

IRON CROWN FOR FIRST HAND NEWS OF THE BRITISH

GENERAL SIR HORACE SMITH-DORRIEN

Commander of one of the Army Corps of the British Expeditionary force, to whom Sir John French gives unstinted praise for his excellent work during the retirement after the battle of Mons. It is reported that General Smith-Dorrien may be placed in command of the Canadian forces.

Decoration Promised the Uhlans for Information About Landing of Troops

A TRIP OF DEATH

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Sept. 18.—A Times' despatch from Ghent says a large number of German Uhlans were promised the decoration of the iron crown if they secured authentic first-hand news about the landing north of British troops in Belgium. From this enterprise, the correspondent thinks none of the Uhlans will return alive.

London, Sept. 18. — A despatch from Bordeaux to the Exchange Telegraph Company states the battle continues with great earnestness along the whole front. The death is announced of General Bataille who was killed in action.

The Daily Mail correspondent at Ostend says important events are expected in North Belgium in the next few days, whose nature he is not permitted to disclose.

Paris, Sept. 18.—Many wounded prisoners are coming in from the front, indicate that the allies have made the Germans give ground, leaving their wounded behind.

KITCHENER CONFIDENT BUT HE SAYS STRUGGLE IS BOUND TO BE LONG

Secretary of War Says 165,000 British Soldiers Are Now Fighting in France and Territorials Are Garrisoning Egypt, Malta and Gibraltar ---Second, Third and Fourth Armies Are Preparing.

LONDON, Sept. 18.—Speaking in the House of Lords yesterday, Field Marshal Earl Kitchener revealed the strength of the British expeditionary force in France and described what he believed must be done to assure a successful issue of the conflict. A steady flow of reinforcements was required, he said.

There were already in France, the Secretary of War said, rather more than six divisons of British troops and two divisions of cavalry (about 165,000 men, all told), which were being maintained at their full strength. Further regular divisions and additional cavalry were being organized from units drawn from overseas garrisons, which were now being occupied by territorials and volunteers. A division of territorials already had left for Egypt, a brigade had gone to Malta, and a garrison force to Gibraltar.

Referring to the two new armies, the Secretary said that the new divisions were being collected at the training quarters. The third army was being formed on the new camping ground and the fourth army was being created. Meantime Indian divisions were on their way.

EARL KITCHENER.

In his despatches from the front Sir John French, commander of the British expeditionary force, had omitted, the Secretary continued, one aspect of the situation—the consummate skill and calm courage of the commander himself.

Earl Kitchener spoke in the highest eulogistic terms regarding Sir John French, the British commander-in-chief, who, he said, has met every difficulty presented by the situation in a manner that proved his worth as a soldier.

"Thanks to his superb leadership," continued the War Secretary, "the British army has been able at all times to fight a fight that has thrown terror into the enemy. Nothing has been wanting. His every move has shown that he has foreseen what was to come and has so distributed his force that the strongest German blows have spent their weight without bringing the disaster their authors had planned."

Earl Kitchener also paid a tribute to the other generals, and the bravery and endurance of the officers and men of the expeditionary force. The latest advices from Gen. French did not materially change the situation, as it was already known from published statements. The troops were reported to be in good heart and ready to move forward "when the moment arrived."

On the subject of recruiting Earl Kitchener said:

"A country which prides itself on outdoor sport as does England should have no difficulty in finding men capable of making officers. The territorials are making great strides in efficiency, and before long will be able to take their part in the campaign. Meanwhile reserve units are being sent to augment the expeditionary force and their places are being filled by territorials. While England has good ground for quiet confidence it should be borne in mind that the struggle is bound to be a long one, and it behooves us to develop armed forces to carry on and bring the mighty conflict to a successful conclusion. It will be necessary, in order to keep the army at its full strength to maintain a steady flow of reinforcements."

JUST CHATTERING.

THERE IS a bird called the chatterbox. It was so named because it prated, or uttered senseless jargon instead of singing. When anybody, by mouth or otherwise, prates of ministers and things, it establishes a claim to being a chatterbox. We would not like to say our esteemed evening contemporary was a chatterbox just because it prated about the martinet spirit, or even about other things, on different occasions. So long as the subject is unimportant, no great harm is likely to follow from its chattering, but its big talk with little sense concerning the Minister of Militia was about as sensible as its mistaken suggestion that the people of India belong to the yellow race, and shows how anxious the Examiner is to knock the Dominion Government, supported as it is by the Liberal party in the plan for Empire aid. The rambling character of its criticism illustrates how ill-advised and inopportune were its senile remarks.

It has been agreed by the Liberal party to support the Government in its efforts to aid the Empire, and the respectable Liberal press has refrained from criticizing adversely the Minister of Militia and Defence, and what is being done to defend the Empire. Just a little while ago the Toronto Star (Liberal) published an editorial advising its readers to have patience at the delay in getting the Canadian troops to the scene of action, and cautioned its readers as to the almost numberless details that had to be overseen by Col. Hughes. The actual and remarkable speed with which war preparations in Canada were made called for general approval, yet the paper that doubtfully represents Liberalism in Peterborough is pettishly uneasy and whines about Col. Hughes like a youngster that does not want to go to bed.

The Department of Militia and Defence called for some 22,000 men, and, when over 30,000 were assembled, it was universally understood that these would be weeded down to the required number. That was one of the contingencies volunteers for service had to expect. Canada wants as good a force of men for Empire service as she can possibly assemble, and standardizing these men according to medical knowledge is about the most efficient method the authorities at present have. No doubt the Examiner has a better one, but it failed to produce it. An ingrowing toe-nail is a very small but serious defect for a man who may be required to march forty miles at a stretch, and this might be overlooked in one examination. Besides, medical men differ sometimes, and two examinations ought to approximate a higher efficiency than one. The Examiner does not believe this, and arrogantly refrains from any reasons for thinking so. It suggests that the arms and equipment are not as good as they might be, when all competent to judge admit the Ross rifle to be the best in the world. Then, it had the nerve to ring in a word of approval for Laurier's abortive naval policy. This was the piece de resistance, and, like the oyster in the restaurant soup, is just as ridiculous. We know it is a disappointment for a volunteer to be rejected, but it is certainly no disgrace. The fault was not his, and his action in volunteering for service is deserving of the highest commendation, but, at the same time, he accepted the conditions of service, one of which was that he might not measure up to the standard required. The war is not over yet by any means, and if further troops are required, perhaps, a second contingent will not require so rigid an examination.

LACONIC WAR MESSAGES.

ONE CANNOT HELP but be struck by the business-like way the British went about the war, says the Montreal Journal of Commerce. In the first place, the simple direct mesage of the King to his fleet to the effect that they should "capture or destroy the enemy's ships," is in striking contrast to the appeals to God which the Kaiser and the Emperor Francis Joseph sent to their respective peoples. Then on the declaration of war, the single word "Go," was flashed to the British ships, which responded with the equally terse comment that they were "Off."

This directness and matter of fact business-like air is characteristic of the British, who Napoleon scornfully characterized a century ago as "a nation of shopkeepers." Equally laconic are some of the famous messages delivered by British generals in the past. In announcing the capture of Kronje at Paardeberg, Lord Roberts concluded his brief despatch with the following words: "I hope Her Majesty's Government will consider this event satisfactory, occurring as it does on the anniversary of Majouba." The relief of Kimberley was announced as follows: "French, with horse artillery, cavalry and mounted infantry, reached Kimberley this afternoon." The relief of Ladysmith was communicated as follows: "Dundonald, with Natal Carbineers and composite regiment, entered Ladysmith last night." Equally brief were the despatches announcing defeats which the British leaders were forced to send to the Home Government. General Methune, telling of Magersfontein, said: "Highland Brigade attacked at daybreak. Attack properly timed. Attack failed." General Buller wired his sad news regarding Colenso as follows: "I regret to report serious reverse." The fall of Khartoum was told as follows: "Khartoum fell on the 26th. The fate of General Gordon is unknown." The immortal "Charge of the Noble Six Hundred" at Balaclava was transmitted as follows: "I deeply regret eight hundred cavalry were engaged, of whom only two hundred returned. The 17th Lancers were almost destroyed. We require reinforcements."

These messages, which could be duplicated by the score, indicate that the British fighters take success and reverse with the same stoicism. In the one case they are not unduly cast down, or overly elated in the other. The characteristic trait of bulldog persistence is manifested in all the despatches. Let us hope that some day soon a flash will come over the wire telling of a crushing defeat of the German army.

THE PRICE OF SUGAR MAY GO HIGHER.

THE SITUATION regarding sugar does not appear to be improving. The high duties placed on this commodity by the governments of Canada and the United States have caused a marked rise in its price, and a corresponding decrease in its consumption, but this decrease is not believed to be large enough to prevent it going to still higher price levels. Some good authorities believe that by the end of November raw sugar will have climbed to prices exceeding the recent high mark of 5.27 and possibly touching 6 cents per pound.

The situation for 1915 is anything but bearish from the standpoint of American supplies of raws. There is almost certain to be a decrease in the Cuban production. Some authorities estimate it as high as 15 per cent. Even 10 per cent. would mean a shrinkage of 250,000 tons, a bulk which can ill be spared in view of England's necessity of buying 75 per cent. to 100 per cent. of her sugars in this country.

The outlook for the beet sugar growers is not a happy one. At a time when they faced the highest range of sugar prices known in modern history, they find themselves practically unable to obtain beet seed. It is indeed a very serious and unsolved problem as to where the American beet industry is to get its crop for the new year. Only 10 per cent. of the beet seed used in the United States for planting purposes is grown there. And the supply available in Europe is too small to be of any material assistance. In addition, it is prohibitive in price.

A shrinkage of 50 per cent. in American beet production in 1915 would mean the loss of 300,000 tons, and it is likely to be more instead of less. No estimates have been made, and probably cannot be made for months to come, as to the shrinkage in sugar production of Germany, Austria, France and Belgium. If 25 per cent. of the normal crops in those unfortunate countries is harvested, it would not be a surprising increase.

The immense quantities of sugars, both raw and refined, which England has bought in New York or direct in Cuba since July 31st, are not generally appreciated. They total between 500,000 and 700,000 tons. While England is provisioned three or four months ahead with sugar, she will inevitably be in the market from time to time.

There has, of course, been a very noticeable falling off in American consumption, due entirely to high prices.

But this decrease does not offset the English buying, and there is little likelihood that it will as the months roll by. High sugar for 1915 is coming to be regarded as inevitable.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

A COPY of the year book of British Columbia, compiled by R. E. Gosnell, has been received by the Review. It is a well bound, well printed, carefully arranged volume, full of valuable data about Canada's most westerly province. While it is dated 1911, the volume sent out has been brought up to and including the year 1913.

Why Germany Took the Plunge.

(London Spectator.)

Why did Germany think the present so favourable a moment? We believe that some feeling seized her as to the magnificence of the opportunity offered by the existing state of Europe. She thought the situation was going to develop favourably in the future, and that she, in fact, was now on the crest of the wave. What made her think this? In the first place — and we believe that this has all along played an important part — there was the opening of the Kiel Canal. A month ago that canal was finished. The next consideration was the belief that England was on the verge of a civil war, and therefore that her neutrality was almost certainly assured. Again, there was the belief, encouraged by the disclosures in the French senate, that France was at this moment very badly prepared for war. Lastly, that Russia was every day getting stronger, and that if Germany waited for another three years the advantages just named might be obliterated by vast increases in the Russian armaments, and especially in the development of her strategic railways. To put the thing in another way, we believe that the real cause of the war was that Germany was seized by one of those impulses which are prompted by the thought of "now or never," impulses which are the most frequent causes of war.

"Our Duty Towards England."

(l'Action Sociale.)

When in our civil, patriotic and religious demonstrations we speak of our loyalty towards England, we do not refer alone to the state of mind and of a disposition of national will, but we express also a duty which we intend to fulfill faithfully to the very end. * * * Does this loyal duty oblige us at the present time to give our effective aid in the great conflict in which the Mother Country is engaged in order to safeguard her interests and for the defence of right and civilization? We say without the least hesitation that it does.

The Invincible Allies.

(London Cronicle.)

So long as we hold the sea, we cannot ourselves be vitally struck; and Russia, owing to her vast area and giant reserves of men and horses, is almost equally impregnable. These two great empires, ruled by perhaps the two most dogged of the European races, saved Europe a century ago, and must rise superior to all reverses in the effort to save it today.

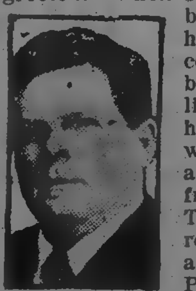
This Versatile Country.

(Chicago Herald.)

Canada's versatility is shown by the fact that she is busily engaged in getting ready for war and for the celebration of the hundred years of peace at the same time.

WHEN WAR IS DONE

By Walt Mason



In Europe, when the war is done—may that day soon be greeted!—when some their victory have won, and some have been defeated, 'twill be a country of the old, the halt, the maimed, the dying; in unmarked couches, 'neath the mould, the young men will be lying. Afar the youthful hosts are flung, like grain that waits the reaping; for war takes harvest of the young, and leaves the old men weeping. In Europe, when the war is done, and rust dims sword and sabre, in barren fields, from sun to sun, old men and dames will labor. The patriarch must guide the plow in fields yet red from slaughter, while hitched like horses are the frau, the grandma and the daughter. Perhaps some cripple from the wars may help to do the seeding, while groaning o'er his varied scars, and old wounds freshly bleeding. Some veteran on wooden legs, whose strength is swiftly dwindling, may milk the cow and fetch the eggs, and split the daily kindling. But everywhere the weak and old must do the heavy toiling, must strive the little farms to hold, and keep the pot a-boiling. Old men and dames, the harvest waves! Go forth and do the reaping, for in their red and shallow graves, your strong young men are sleeping!

MOTIONLESS UNDER FIRE

Every one must have wondered how he would feel in battle for the first time. We may get some idea of how the average man feels under such circumstances from a study of the psychology of battle, published in Italy. Lieut.-Col. Mangiarotti of the Seventy-seventh Infantry carefully examined more than 2,000 soldiers who first faced fire in the recent war between Italy and Turkey, and he summarizes their statements in the Rivista Militare. He questioned them by one.

Out of 2,000 men 1,700 confessed that their most trying moment in the whole campaign was when they first heard hostile bullets whistle about their ears. But almost all of them said they were much less frightened than they had expected to be, and that the scare diminished with each battle.

The average soldier finds the most terrifying position to be that of standing motionless in the front rank, exposed to the enemy's fire without being able to reply. The order to advance or to charge with fixed bayonets is then received as a release from agony. Movement, even into greater peril, distracts the mind and greatly reduces the mental anguish.

Soldiers are seriously affected by the trembling of their superiors. An officer who shakes in his shoes is a coward in the eyes of the rank and file, although the men know that many military heroes—Henri IV., Turenne and Frederick the Great, for instance—trembled on going into a fight.

Colonel Mangiarotti says that officers must understand this feeling. This is especially true for lieutenants for this enquiry reveals the fact that in battle all officers from captains upward are non-existent so far as the common soldiers are concerned. They keep their eyes on their lieutenants exclusively. This was brought out when Colonel Mangiarotti asked the men what sentiment animated them when the bullets were falling all round them—was it love of country, religion, their oath of fidelity to their King? "I went ahead," they replied almost unanimously, "because my lieutenant went ahead."

It seems that once the battle is on and the first feeling of terror has vanished soldiers feel as if set free. The fever of combat takes possession of them and they think about nothing else.

Sent It Back.

"Ma'am, here's a man at the door with a parcel for you."

"What is it, Bridget?"

"It's a fish, ma'am, and it's marked C. O. D."

"Then make the man take it straight back to the dealer. I ordered trout."

GERMAN STEAMER HAS COAL.

Liner Barbarossa Has a Slim Chance of Reaching Germany.

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—The North German Lloyd Liner Barbarossa, whose tonnage is 10,915, sailed from Hoboken yesterday afternoon with a cargo of coal which filled every available foot of space on board the vessel.

The destination is unknown, but it is believed she intends making desperate efforts to reach German warships either in Central American or other nearby waters, and supply them with fuel, of which it is believed, these cruisers must be greatly in need.

With a number of cruisers as well as French warships hovering around the entrance to New York harbor, waiting for merchants or warships of the enemy, it is believed that the Barbarossa's venture is more than hazardous.

New Plan of Campaign.

ROME, Sept. 18.—(Via London.)—The Tribuna states that the German headquarters staff has adopted a new plan of campaign, which consists of maintaining the defensive against the allies in the west, while undertaking an offensive movement against the Russians, in which 12 German army corps will be employed.

All Austrians Called Out.

ROME, Sept. 18.—A Vienna despatch to The Corriere Della Sera says Emperor Francis Joseph has signed a conscription decree in order to fill up the gaps in the Austrian army. MEMOIRS OF CRISPIE ON THE TRIPLE ALLIANCE

Crispi's memoirs, which have unexpectedly appeared, make very interesting reading at the present time, since they throw a strong light upon the circumstances in which Italy joined the Triple Alliance, and explain why she has now practically abandoned it. Though the diary from which the memoirs are compiled was written with no idea that it would ever become public, it dealt minutely with affairs of state, and it would appear that Crispi was keeping a record from which his own memory might be refreshed from time to time. In the memoirs we trace the beginning and the end of the faith in Germany that animated Italian statesmen of a generation ago and the birth and the death of the distrust of France, which was the strongest motive for Italy when she entered the pact with Germany and Austria. But though Crispi was the greatest statesman produced by Italy in fifty years, we now know more about certain aspects of international affairs than he knew. He was not aware of Bismarck's well-concealed plans, which Bismarck himself later revealed; and it was only toward the close of his career that he began dimly to perceive that Italy had been used as a mere cat's-paw from Berlin.

Italian Instinct Right.

Oddly enough the common people of Italy divined the true trend of German policy long before their most distinguished diplomat. He tells us of strong murmurings of dissatisfaction which he thought it to be his duty to quell. Of course he had information not available to the average man which seemed to prove to him that the alliance with Germany and Austria was for Italy's advantage. But the man in the street in Italy was the original "man from Missouri." He knew there was an understanding among the three powers, but its exact scope he did not know. Nevertheless, he was not blind to the fact that Italy appeared to be getting nothing out of it. He demanded to be "shown," and Crispi was unable to show him. Later on, Crispi came to the conclusion that the Italian instinct was right and that he and the other diplomats had been misled.

A Talk with Bismarck.

He tells of a very interesting conversation with Bismarck, in which he discussed with the German Chancellor the possibility of an alliance between France and Germany as a check upon possible Russian aggression. Bismarck must have smiled at the suggestion, but he said that although he would like an alliance, it was still too near the war with France to be considered. He similarly disposed of the suggestion that France and Germany should come to an understanding that would limit their expenditure upon armament. Again piously protesting his willingness to give every possible guarantee for peace, he said that the thing was impracticable. What one country might consider disarmament another would consider preparation for war. The dictionaries, he declared, gave no fitting definition of the term "disarmament," and for the present, therefore, he was reluctantly obliged to conclude that the matter was not in the range of practical politics.

Italy Left Alone.

Crispi's eyes and the eyes of Italians generally began to slowly open to German policy when, with the consent of the Berlin Government, France started upon her career of colonization in Tunis. Italy protested that this move cost her her liberty in the Mediterranean, and that she would thereafter be subjected to perpetual menace. Germany however, was perfectly willing that France should continue her African conquests, because they would distract France's attention from her, and at the time Germany could not see that the North African coast was useful to her. Austria, too, remained dumb, and Italy was left alone to adjust herself to the encroachments of France. Later on, when Italy sought to come to an understanding with France whereby each country should continue her colonization plans with the consent of the other, she was told that as long as she remained a member of the Triple Alliance no understanding was possible. Thus Italy found that the Triple Alliance was injuring her in two quarters. It did not give her the diplomatic backing which she required in dealing with France, and it also made France unwilling to make any concessions to her.

Italy the Dupe.

The root of the whole trouble, so far as Italy was concerned, lay in the fact that Germany and Austria were not dealing fairly with her. Between Austria and Italy there was constant friction over the Adriatic province that had been taken from Italy. There was a great popular desire to rearrange the boundary in the Tyrol, and Crispi hoped that he might be able to induce Austria to grant concessions there. For this reason he showed himself extremely friendly to Austria whenever occasion offered. To such an extent was this desire manifested that on one occasion his life was attempted by an Italian patriot who thought Crispi disloyal. Germany, too, as we know, now but as Crispi no more than suspected, was successful in keeping Austria and Italy from coming to an understanding and was also influential in breeding suspicion between Italy and France. The whole object of the alliance, so far as Germany was concerned, was to keep France and Italy from a natural alliance, and it is this fact that is realized today in Italy, and partly explains why she has refused to enter the war as an ally of her former partners.

THE GORDONS AT DARGAI

By Henry Newbolt.

Who's for the Gathering, who's for the Fair?
  (Gay goes the Gordon to a fight.)
The bravest of the brave are at deadlock there.
  (Highlanders! march! by the right!)
There are bullets by the hundred buzzing in the air,
There are bonny lads lying on the hillside bare;
But the Gordons know what the Gordons dare
  When they hear the pipers playing!

The happiest British heart to-day,
  (Gay goes the Gordon to a fight.)
Is the heart of the Colonel, hide it how he may;
  (Steady, there! Steady on the right!)
He sees his work and he sees his way,
He knows his time and the word to say,
And he's thinking of the time the Gordons play
  When he sets the pipers playing.

Rising, roaring, rushing like the tide,
  (Gay goes the Gordon to a right.)
They're up through the fire-zone, not to be denied.
  (Bayonet! and charge by the right!)
Thirty bullets straight where the rest went wide,
And thirty lads are lying on the bare hillside;
But they passed in the hour of the Gordons' pride,
  To the skirl of the pipers' playing.

Hoarded Wheat Seized.

LONDON, Sept. 18.—A despatch to Reuter's from Sydney, N.S.W., says: "The state government, acting in accordance with the powers, conferred upon it by Parliament at the outbreak of the war, to prevent gambling in foodstuffs, yesterday seized 140,000 bags of wheat which its holders had refused to sell at 4s. 2d. per hundredweight, the price fixed by the Government."

Italian Minister Recovering.

ROME, Sept. 18.—(Via Paris.)—Marquis Antonio di San Guiliano, the Minister of Foreign Affairs, who is ill, was reported to be much better yesterday. He suffers much, however, from gout. Though confined to his bed the Minister continues to direct the affairs of the Foreign Office.

THE MARKETS

Latest Quotations in Grain, Dairy Products, Live Stock, etc.

CHICAGO, Sept. 17.—Wheat prices had a serious tumble today, because it was not definitely settled until after trading hours that Germany's answer to President Wilson's offer of mediation was non-committal. There was a nervous feeling at the close, with prices 1 3-4c to 2c under last night. Corn suffered a net loss of 1 3-8c to 1 3-4c and oats of 1c to 1 1-8c. Provisions finished unchanged to 22 1-2c down.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Sept. 17.—The demand from foreign buyers for Manitoba spring wheat showed no improvement, but there were a few orders in the market for both old and new crop No. 1 northern, and sales of the former were made to London at 43s 9d, which is an advance of 2d.

There was some enquiry for No. 3 barley, but owing to the scarcity of this grain exporters could not accept the orders. The local trade in coarse grains continues very quiet, but prices rule about steady.

Flour was in good demand, sales of 10,000 sacks being made. The tone of the market is firm with a fair amount of business doing. Demand for millfeed is good, and sales of a few cars of bran were made for shipment to the United States.

Demand for butter is quiet. There was a better enquiry for cheese from over the cable today, and as the prices bid were higher, sales of a few round lots were made. Eggs fairly active and unchanged.

MINNEAPOLIS GRAIN MARKET.

MINNEAPOLIS, Sept. 17.—Wheat—No. 1 hard, $1.10½; No. 1 northern, $1.05⅞ to $1.07⅞; Sept., $1.07⅝; Dec., $1.11⅛.
Corn—No. 3 yellow, 75c to 76c.
Oats—No. 3 white, 44⅛c to 45c.
Flour—Unchanged.

DULUTH GRAIN MARKET.

DULUTH, Sept. 17.—Wheat—No. 1 hard, $1.11¼; No. 1 northern, $1.10¼; No. 2 do., $1.06¼; Sept., $1.10¼; Dec., $1.11⅛.

CROWDS THRONG TURNBULL STORE FOR FORMAL OPENING

Basement Section Added to the Many Departments of the Big Store

The formal opening of Turnbull's fine, new, modern departmental store took place on Thursday evening from seven to ten o'clock. The store was in gala attire with the choicest of merchandise and an extra prominent showing of British, French, Russian and Belgian flags in honor of the allies.

The orchestra discoursed music to the crowds on every floor. The special feature of the evening was the opening of tha basement section which has just been completed. The basement is devoted to the selling of kitchenware, china, cut glass and bedding, and has many bargain tables, chief among which are the 4, 9, and 19 cent tables loaded down with many choice bargains. The small articles of the basement were given a prominent display along with the more expensive lines. The basement fixtures are the most modern and the cut glass case alone occupies a space of thirty-two feet. In the last aisle a range of the finest of limoges dinner sets were shown, ranging in price from $50 to $95, while other tables displayed substantial English wares in dishes.

Great interest was shown by the throngs of people in the house furnishings and ready-to-wear departments, while various other departments on the main floor were the cynosure of all eyes.

The immense windows were one gorgeous display of the finer lines and a special allottment from each department received for the fall trade and the opening sale.

The rest room is a boon to all and was crowded throughout the evening.

NO WITNESS, CASE DISMISSED

Acting Crown Attorney Explains the Situation

At the police court this morning Charles Healey was charged with driving a horse in Nicholls' Oval while he was under the influence of liquor. He pleaded guilty and was fined $2 and costs, amounting to $5.75, to be paid forthwith.

James Henry Rishea, charged with stealing a watch and bicycle, was remanded for a week.

Acting Crown Attorney Wearing said that under existing circumstances, in regard to the charge against Bert Howden, he was unable to go on with the case. He explained that the chief witness had been married since the charge was laid. He said the evidence on which the charge had been made, they had every reason to believe, was not the truth. He explained that any evidence which he might give could not be relied on.

Magistrate Dumble said he had every reason to believe that the acting crown attorney had done his duty. He then dismissed the case.

Three men in Dawson Springs, Ky., were brutally lashed by night-riders. Their only offence was to condemn night-riding.

ANSWERS GIVEN TO COMPLAINTS

Men on Paving Operations Will Work Nine Hours

On request of the Trades and Labor Council City Engineer interviewew Superintendent Davis of the Foley and Gleason Co. in regard to the men working nine hours a day instead of ten and Mr. Davis decided to have nine hours constitute a day's work.

As a result of the deputation of teamsters which waited on the Board of Works, and complained that Contractor Brown who is supplying Foley and Gleason with the gravel, did not employ teams belonging to men who are residents of the city, the City Engineer asked Superintendent Davis of the paving company to look into the matter and the latter informed The Review today that Mr. Brown is willing to hire local teamsters if they apply.

Mr. Davis further stated that Mr. J. T. O'Connell, the real estate agent, who is to supply the sand for their work is desirous of hiring several local teamsters and wishes them to apply at once.

Rule Britannia Was Sung by Americans

London, Sept. 18.A Times correspondent in France describes an incident at Havre when the United States cruiser Tennessee lay in the harbour and a British transport, the decks of which were thronged with soldiers, passed her. The American cruiser dipped the Stars and Stripes and suddenly the British Tommies broke into "Rule, Britannia."

"Then," says the correspondent, "an amazing thing happened. I heard and was thrilled by it. The bronzed American sailors took up the rolling chorus:

"Rule, Britannia, Britannia rules the waves, Britons never, never, never shall be slaves."

"It was the most brotherly act I have ever witnessed."

Plenty of Work for Russian Prisoners

Petrograd, Sept. 18. — The Bourse Gazette states that up to a few days ago the Russians held 200,00 prisoners, who are being rapidly distributed to many distant districts. Most of them are being given labour of one kind or another, thousands being used on the railways and others helping with the harvest and plowing while still others are lumbering and roadmaking. Many of them have been sent to Turkestan for work on the drainage system.

The Minister of Agriculture says: "The prisoners must work to insure their existence. We shall pay for the work done, but our position is not that of ordinary employers. Our prisoners must work in return for what shall support and feed them."

Miners in Colorado have agreed to a three-year truce.

FAILED TO PASS EXAMINATION, LAD TOOK HIS LIFE

Welland, Sept. 18.—Daniel Lane of Battle Creek, Mich., about eighteen years of age, was found in convulsions at the park last night as a result of taking strychnine in an attempt to commit suicide. He was removed to the hospital, where it was said there is little chance for his recovery. A note was found in his pocket saying he was disappointed because he did not pass the medical test to go with the Canadian contingent to the war, and also requesting that his body be sent to Mrs. C. Chantrene, Battle Creek, Mich.

SOMETHING NEW IN MONAGHAN

Strange Pest Make Its Appearance in Granary

Mr. George Wood, of Monaghan brought to the Review office today a number of bugs resembling ants which he found in his granary. They are apparently something new in the grain pests, nothing like them having been seen around Monaghan by the farmers before.

Mr. Wood found thousands of them in several barrels of wheat in his granary, starting at the top of the barrel and eating down and completely destroying the grain.

Although there was an abundance of other lines of grain, these small ants did not eat anything but the wheat.

Is the farmer to have another pest in the form of a granary ant? When considering the fact that nothing like them has been seen before it would be well for some botanist to visit Mr. Wood at his farm in Monaghan and see this new pest and, if possible, give some enlightenment on the matter.

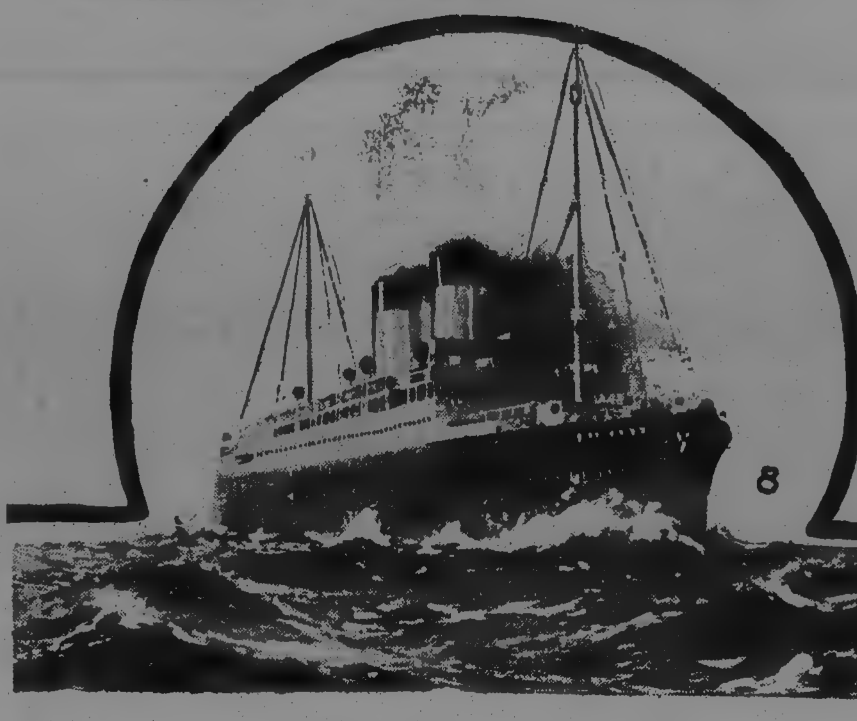
Undoubtedly it is a serious thing, and if other farmers' granaries are visited by this pestilence it will mean as grave a destructor of the grain as the army worm was.

A TRAGIC END TO YOUNG WOMAN

English Girl Took Her Life in Boarding House

Toronto, Sept. 18.—Holding in her mouth a tube attached to a gas jet, the crevices under the doors and windows stuffed with paper, and a note dated last April, declaring that she would end her life, lying beside her, Beatrice Barber, 24 years of age, was found dead in her room by her landlady at 602 Crawford street, shortly after 9 o'clock yesterday. The young woman was an English girl, who came to Canada some time ago from Croyden, Eng. She had not been working for some time, but it would appear from her letter that the payment of a debt may have been responsible for her action. The letter read as follows: "If I have not paid Fred the $50 I owe him, take it out of my money. After the funeral expenses have been paid, there should be some money left over, which should be sent to my mother. Good-bye."

THE NEW C.P.R. LINER "MISSANABIE"



When the twin screw steamer Missanabie sails on October 7th from Liverpool to Montreal the Canadian Pacific Railway will have added to its fleet of steamships one that is the last word in ocean vessels from the standpoint of comfort and convenience for the passengers, and strength and stability for navigation and capacity and appliances for cargo. The ship is 520 feet long, 64 feet broad and 41 feet deep. It has a gross tonnage of 13,000 tons, a displacement of 18,000 tons, and a cargo capacity of 400,000 cubic feet. Below the level of the main deck the space is devoted to general cargo three of the lower 'tween decks being fitted for the carriage of refrigerated merchandise. From the main deck upwards through no less than six separate decks the entire space is devoted to passengers. There is room for 520 cabin passengers berthed in large, airy rooms and for 1200 third cabin passengers all in large rooms. Counting in the crew of three hundred the vessel will therefore be fitted to carry 2,020 or as much as the population of a small town.

Although a one cabin boat every effort has been made to make its appointments second to none, and the dining room, smoke room, card room, drawing room lounge, cafe, gymnasium and other features of the most modern vessels are furnished and decorated in accordance with plans of the best British architects and furnishers. The decoration is of the Georgian period. The hosptals and culinary departments are commodious and admirably designed for the work intended for each.

The decks are expected to provide one of the chief features of the vessels, the promenade, recreation, and other decks being designed so as to provide shelter, amusement, exercise or rest according to the caprice of the passenger. The boat deck is entirely set aside for the storage and working of boats, thirty-two boats, including a motor life boat being carried. The launching arrangements embodying as they do devices to meet contingencies not anticipated under disasters of recent years are as complete as human ingenuity can provide. Chief among these is a mechanical contrivance which allows the boats to be launched though the vessel might have had a considerable list. Patent davits are fitted which in conjunction with a tramway render it possible to launch the life boats from either side of the ship. There is a new departure as well as in the system of providing heat and fresh air for every part of the vessel. The electric lighting system provides for 1300 lights and the power is supplied for the fans, elevators, submarine signalling and galley outfit. All watertight bulkhead doors are electrically operated and can be closed simultaneously from the bridge. The vessel is fitted with the well known cruiser stern which builders claim give increased capacity speed and deck area. It is so divided by watertight doors and bulkheads that she is capable of floating in a seaway with any three compartments open to the sea. There are twin sets of quadruple expansion engines and steam is supplied by eight single ended boilers at a working pressure of 215 lbs. which will give a sea speed of sixteen knots an hour for service. The Missanabie will arrive in Montreal on October 14 or 15 and leave again from Montreal for Liverpool on October 22. The ship was built by Messrs. Barclay, Curle & Co., Glasgow, and was launched in June last.

BLIND PIGGER IS FINED $200

Warning of Jail Term For Next Offence

Sudbury, Sept. 18.—Oscar Lindquest, proprietor of the Sudbury cafe, Borgia street, was fined $200 and costs in police court and given a warning that his next appearance would mean a jail term. The information was laid by Inspector Ayerst, of the provincial license department. Lindquist was fined scarcely a fortnight ago for a similar offence.

The inspector and two "spotters" were passing through Sudbury on May 27, and, hearing rumors about the Sudbury cafe, they paid it a visit. They ordered "strong coffee" for the party and were served with whiskey in coffee cups. They then had a lunch, ordered and were served with another round of "strong coffee" and departed.

The defence was that Inspector Morrison, of the provincial police, had laid a similar charge on Aug. 17 and secured a conviction and a fine of $200. Mr. Buchanan argued that this fine covered all previous offences, and that as Lindquist was now running an honest restaurant busines it was not fair to fine him for an offence committed previous to his last conviction. Neither the magistrate nor the crown attorney could see it in this light, Mr. Miller arguing that if a man chose to run a business of this description he must abide by the consequences.

Charge Withdrawn.

Arthur Christakos was another of Inspector Ayerst's victims, but this time an innocent one. It was charged that he did on the 17th day of August illegally sell liquor without a license, one bottle of port wine being the liquor in question. The wine was part of a shipment from the famous firm of Turner & Co., Toronto, a firm of whom the inspector spoke in very unfavorable terms. The wine was purchased by Mr. Ayerst and taken to the provincial analyst for examination. The analysis showed the wine to contain 10.96 per cent. of alcohol.

Christakos, in defence, claimed the wine was bought from a traveller in the usual way as a temperance drink, and he had no knowledge of it being above strength. Inspector Ayerst was satisfied that Mr. Christakos was innocent of any wrongdoing, and with drew the charge on the defendant paying the costs.

LARUE FREED ON MURDER CHARGE

Not Guilty of Causing Death of Wife

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Sept. 18.—Joseph Larue, on trial for the murder of his wife two years ago, was acquitted at the Fall Assizes here yesterday. In the spring the body of the woman was found in the river and it was charged that Larue had murdered her during the winter and had placed her body under the ice.

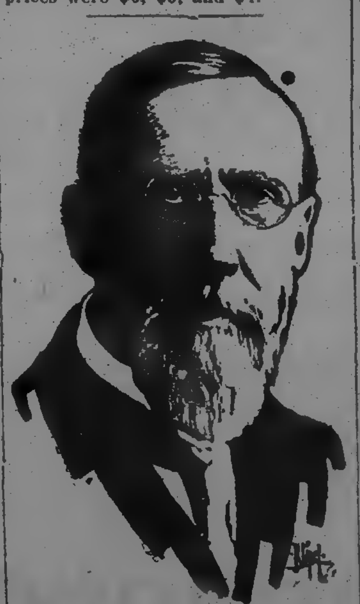
SPECIAL PRIZE GOES TO KEENE

Silver Cup for August Cheese Won Third Time

The cheese on exhibition at the Fair was judged this morning and Keene won the special prize, a cup valued at $20.00, donated by Mr. R. W. Ward, dairy instructor, for the highest scoring cheese (not less than fifty pounds) of the first half of August make. This is the third time Keene has won this cup and it will be permanently retained by that factory.

For the cool cured cheese made the last half of July, Shearer secured first prize, $6.00, and Keene second prize, $4.00.

In the ordinary cured cheese competition Lakehurst was first, Shearer second and Selwyn third. The prices were $6, $5, and $4.



Kingston, Ont., Sept. 18.—Sir Geo. Foster has been asked by the Senate of Queen's University to atend the fall convocation on October 16 to address the students and to receive the honorary degree of doctor of law. Dr. R. S. Thornton, president of the Canadian Medical association, will receive a similar honor.

The Senate placed itself on record as warmly appreciating the action of the students in going to the front, and has pledged itself to do everything possible to facilitate matters so that the students will have no trouble in completing their course of studies.

Not So Clever.

"I feel like a perfect ignoramus in your presence, Mr. Crichton," said the young woman who possessed the art of flattery. "You play, you sing, you are an accomplished linguist, you draw —really you have all the accomplishments that I lack."

"Oh, Miss Taurus," he protested, with becoming modesty, "really, I'm not that clever."

Afterward he wondered if he had said the right thing.—[illegible]

HEAVY ARTILLERY

Each army is equipped with heavy field and siege guns. The British use a 5-inch calibre gun, which is 160 inches long. It is known as a heavy battery gun and it weighs 4,368 pounds. Its charge is 9½ pounds of cordite and it can throw shrapnel 10,000 yards, or more than five miles. The gun and its equipment weighs 11,872 pounds. The British also use a 6-inch howitzer, which weighs 3,360 pounds and which can throw a shell weighing 122 pounds more than 7,000 yards. This gun and its equipment is just half the weight of that of the five-inch gun.

France uses a howitzer of 6.1 inches calibre. The shell weighs 94 pounds and the gun has an effective range of 7,000 yards. The breech of this gun opens automatically after each round and from 4 to 5 shots a minute can be fired.

The Germans have a heavy battery gun of 4 inches calibre which is very effective up to 5,750 yards with shrapnel and with common shell up to 11,000 yards. There are six of these guns in a battery, but it is a slow weapon to move about because of its weight and a platform, which it is necessary to carry for each gun.

The Germans also use a howitzer of 6 inches calibre which can be fired two or three times a minute.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

CROWNING OF THE POPE.

Editor Review,

Sir,—Would you oblige me by publishing the following account of the crowning of His Holiness as given in the Catholic Register :

The Pope's Coronation.

The enterprising press, which prepares its Papal news in advance, has been describing in detail the Pope's coronation, which it says took place in St. Peter's, whilst it was in the Sistine Chapel of the Vatican, as we stated last week. All the chapel could contain of dignitaries were present. There is nothing to add to our last week's description except a few minor incidents.

Precisely at eight o'lcock Pope Benedict appeared in the Sistine Chapel. The Pontiff, carried high in the canopied sedia gestatoria and surrounded by the Noble Guards in new red uniforms, with swords drawn, was the last figure in the procession entering the church. Immediately preceding him were the Cardinals magnificently robed and tended, each one with his chaplain, equerry, and train-bearer. The Cardinals were preceded by the Pontifical chaplain bearing the historical triple crown or tiara, ornamented with precious stones and pearls and equipped with three royal diadems. A gleaming cross preceded the cortege.

"Tu Est Petrus."

To the right of the Pope was the tribune of the Ambassadors, and to his left that of the Roman aristocracy. Eight chosen men surrounded him, bearing the famous ostrich feather fans with peacock tips that added a luxurious touch to the scene. The audience burst into shouts of applause, which were continued until the Pope rose, and, by a gesture of blessing requested that the cheers cease. It was a stirring and impressive moment. Bells rang, the Papal troops knelt, trumpets sounded long drawn notes throughout the lofty arches and the great choir sang the anthem "Tu est Petrus."

The actual ceremony of coronation was begun by the Pope blessing the altar and assuming symbolic vestments. One of the Cardinals entered from the crypt of St. Peter's bearing the Pontifical pallium. This was placed about the shoulders of the Pope and fastened with three jewelled gold pins.

Mass was said, the Gospel being read in Latin and Greek. The Pope broke the wafer communing with one half and giving the other half to the deacon and sub-deacon.

Reminder to Pontiff.

A prelate then advanced bearing a vessel in which was live charcoal. Taking a position before the Pope, he laid a handful of hemp over the coal, and, as the smoke ascended, uttered the following reminder: "Holy Father, thus passes the glory of the world."

With the Sacred College gathered about him, the Pope chanted Palestrina's "Corona Aurea Super Caput Eius," while the choir sang a song of triumph. When silence was restored the senior Cardinal Deacon crowned the Pope with the tiara, saying the while in Lata : "Receive the triple crown and know that you are the father of Kings, the pastor of the world, the Vicar of Christ, and crowned Pope."

At the conclusion of these words thunderous applause joined with the ringing of bells and the blasts of trumpets, until the newly crowned Pope rose and ordered silence and pronounced the benediction.

The ceremony ended at 1 o'clock and the Pope retired, borne away in the sedia gestatoria.

A LETTER ON APPLES.

Editor Review :

Dear Sir,—I see by the papers that apples are an abundant crop this year, and, judging by the specimens on the market, they are of the very best quality. It is also stated that, unlike other years, many of the large orchards in the apple districts have not been sold to the wholesale dealers, and in consequence many of them will be unpicked and go to waste. In view of the want that is staring many in the face, owing to this dreadful world-wide war, something should be done at once to utilize all the surplus products of our farms for those who will need them. It will be no sacrifice for farmers to give up their surplus, although this dreadful crisis demands sacrifices of us all. Is there no master mind in Peterborough to take this matter up and secure a storehouse for the reception of such farm produce as the farmers are willing to give, and let the same be known to them by a committee formed for that purpose? It is also a matter in which the leading farmers should get together and formulate a plan whereby the same may be carried out. I have no doubt that our farmers are as patriotic as they profess to be, but as yet they do not seem to realize the grave responsibilities devolving upon them. There are some notable exceptions, however, such as the county of York, which contributed $20,000, and, in another instance, where they appointed a certain day which they called "oat day," when each one brought in to a storehouse a quantity of oats, according to his means, and which in the aggregate amounted to a large quantity.

Potatoes, too, are a fine crop and of a superior quality, and would be equally acceptable. The same may be said of tomatoes, which will all ripen this fine weather, although the price per bushel should not be more than is asked per peck.

Hoping that the press may further advocate this scheme, I am,

Yours truly,
SYMPATHY.

Sept. 18, 1914.

PETERBORO FAIR SCORES

The close of the evening's amusement was marked by a large display of fireworks which were visible for miles. Only a part of the fireworks were used. The main section will be used tonight.

Exhibits in Art.

Upstairs in the main building the art works, fancy works and apple exhibits were very prettily arranged. In the art section the work of Miss K. L. Taylor was very prominent. She won first in the oil portrait, first in the oil landscape, first in the oil animal, first in charcoal figure, first in pastel work, first in water colors and first in figure. Miss A. Simmons won second in the portrait, animal and landscape with oil. Miss Winnie Palmer was recommended for a special prize for general excellency. In the pen and ink, Mr. G. W. Boyd received six prizes, three firsts and three seconds. His work consisted of landscape, figure and animal.

The fancy work is not so plentiful as it has been at other fairs, but the class of work is far superior. All specimens received by the directors is work of the past year.

Outdoor Exhibits.

At almost every corner of the grounds one is confronted with an Oak Hall sign. That store also has an exhibit tent. Other firms with tents and demonstrators are J. J. Duffus, Ford autos ; G. A. Gillespie, seeds ; James Murty, Adam Hall "Tropic" stoves ; De Laval, cream separators ; and the Empire Cream Separator Co., of Toronto.

The Floral Tent.

During all the advertising for the Exhibtion, very little space was given to the floral tent, yet it has proven to be one of the main attractions. The orderly manner in which the flowers are arranged is decidedly pleasing to the eye, and nothing need be said about the pleasing odor. The exhibits of the three floral firms, Chas. Kitney & Sons, Peterborough Floral Co., and Jordan Bros., are well presented, while the manner in which the small exhibits are placed is a credit to the directors in charge. In this tent small roots are also to be found.

The Main Building.

The main building of the Exhibition is in better order this year and the merchandise exhibits are becomingly displayed and show to good advantage the wares of Peterboro's prominent merchandising houses.

The Cressman Co., Ltd., had a fine inlaid mahogany chippendale dining suite on display and a splendid showing of silks, and madras from the dress goods department. A special feature was made of two Persian rugs, regularly selling at $125, now $83.50. All goods on display may be obtained from the third and fourth floors.

The Globe Tailoring Co. had an excellent display of tweeds, worsteds, serges, and a variety of Scotch woollens and Irish serges and the latest in overcoats. Suits and overcoats all retailing at $14. The best of work is put on these suits and overcoats and trimmings are of the best.

Grant and Thorpe, who did all the electrical wiring for the Exhibition had a superb display of electrical requirements. Flash lights, electric irons, toasters, heaters, reading lamps and much of the latest in electrical furnishings. They desire to draw attention to the possibilities of the flashlight in surmounting the lighting of a match when entering a dark closet.

R. G. Sturgeon & Co. are making a specialty of the Good Cheer range made by the James Stewart Co., of Woodstock. This is a combination two-fuel coal and gas range. Both fuels may be used at the same time without moving a burner or making any alterations whatever to the stove. Claimed to be the most complete range on the market—it is two stoves in one—gas or coal may be used at will. The cost of this range is practically the same as a one-fuel range. The Kawartha Water System is also shown by them and is a boon to the farmer or summer resorter. Pipe is attached to well or lake and by a few strokes of a high pressure pump water is distributed throughout the house. Standard Ideal bathroom fixtures are also shown by these people.

The Morgan Hardware Co. has an excellent display of Sherwin-Williams paints, varnishes, stains and enamel finishes. Perfection coal oil stoves and heaters and Rayo lamps; also O'Cedar mops and polishes. They have the agency for the 1900 Gravity Washer and are the sole agents for Higgin's all metal ventilators and weather strip.

Richard Hall & Son have a fine display of artistic rugs and draperies and some of the latest in costumes and mantles. Millinery and ladies' furs are also shown.

The Davis Acetylene Co., of Niagara Falls have a display of the acetylene lighting, ironing and cooking system.

Singer sewing machines have a strong display of their latest cabinet table models and the small machine for the use of children, or for doing any small piece of mending.

Exhibit in Sheep.

The first exhibit encountered on entering the gate nearest Lock street is the sheep. In this line the number is about the same as on other occasions, but the class is much better. Some of the principal exhibitors are: W. S. Westington, of Hamilton township, 15 Leicester ; W. Gladspell & Sons, of Taunton, Ont., 15 head of Colswald ; J. W. Balson, of Hampton, Oxford Downs ; John Ayer & Son, of Bowmanville, South Downs ; Holdsworth Bros, from near Cobourg, 25 sheep of the South Down and Shropshire breeds ; C. E. Moore, of Smith, Suffolk Downs ; A. E. Rosevear, of Cobourg, eight head of Horn Dorset.

Some Fine Cattle.

The number of catle on exhibition is far larger than was anticipater, and this morning it was found necesary to erect tents. The gentleman exhibiting the largest number is S. F. Redmond, of Otonabee, who has 41, mostly Durhams and Holsteins. Other exhibitors were: J. K Moore & Son, of Smith, Holsteins ; Joseph O'Reilly, of Ennismore, 6 High Laen Holsteins ; R. A. Garbutt, of Smith, 4 Short Horn Durhams ; J. Hetherington, of Chemong road, 8 Jerseys ; R. O. Gibbs, of Otonabee, 12 Aberdeen Angus.

Horses in Plenty.

As in the case of the cattle, the management found it necessary to provide more space for the horses. Some excellent heavy draught horses attracted a great amount of attention. One stable in particular which had a special distinction was owned by Mr. George F. Bothwell, of Cavan. An agricultural mare and fold and two colts were the animals presented. The year-old colts in particular were fine. One was a Belgian, weighing 1,100 pounds, and the other was a cariage colt, whose sire was Admiral. Other exhibitors were : Bowles Bros, Cavan; F. Robert & Sons, Otonabee ; E. & R. Woods, Otonabee ; Elmherst, Keene ; Byrman, Otonabee ; J. Bushnell, Omemee ; Hambridge, Otonabee ; S. Thorn, Otonabee ; J. O. Ball, Cavan ; H. Bryan, Cavan ; George Ward, North Monaghan ; S. Redmond, Otonabee ; R. Shaw, Otonabee ; G. W. Mann, Smith.

A Whole Poultry Show.

The poultry tent is not as popular this year as other years, as the number of birds on hand is smaller. One cage that is arousing interest contains two white turkeys. Breeds of birds present are : White, Brown and Buff Leghorns, Black Minorcas, Rhode Island Reds, Wyandottes, Games, Blue Andalusians; also several breeds of ducks and geese.

THE HARVEST FESTIVAL AT ST. JOHN'S

A Timely Serman Preached by Rev. J. T. O'Connor Newton

St. John's Church was prettily decorated last evening with the fruits of the harvest recently gathered, and many were present to offer their thanks to the Almighty for the bestowal upon them of His bounties.

The opening hymn of the harvest festivities was sung with great fervor, starting with :

Come ye thankful people, come,
Raise the song of harvest home ;
All in safely gathered in,
Ere the winter storms begin.

Rev. J. T. O'Connor Newton, of Fenton, addressed the gathering, and in his appropriate remarks went on to say that bountiful prayers should be offered to God in this trying time. We are meeting in the midst of peace and quietness with the harvest gathered in, while war is being waged in the father kingdoms. Our manifold thanks should be offered daily, realizing that we are the favored of favorites in this time of war, and although our sons are preparing to defend the honor of the Empire, our fair country has been spared from the ravages of the war.

It is to be lamented that we do not always give ample praise to God when partaking of his blessing in the form of our daily repast. We must at all times remember such favors as these and bow down to Him Who bestowed them upon us. Our souls are enlarged by the beauty of the world and God gave us eyes to see this beauty and lips to praise it, and He Who is the Maker of all.

Some do not favor smoking or dancing or many of our other self enjoyments. When considering this we should bow our heads and see if we can thank God with a truthful fervor for blessing us with these enjoyments. It is then that we are able to judge between right and wrong.

God made man and woman and although we do not always realize it, life's sweetest hopes and delights are based upon the feeling of one to the other. When we are sorely tried and are bewailing the loss of some of our earthly blessings we should stop and think of the blessings God has bestowed upon us—our life, our children, our prosperity and then thank Him Who has bestowed this upon us. Truly it is said, that unthankfulness is the beginning of what may be suicide.

We must not complain, there is always something to thank God for. What a supremacy in life we are showing when we can gve thanks to God for our troubles.

The services were concluded with a fervent prayer and thank offering for the harvest and the singing of a hymn and the national anthem.

The fully choral service was beautifully rendered by over 40 choristers, the anthem in its several movements fully entering into the spirit of the festival. The choristers and Mr. R. J. Devey were congratulated upon the fine service of thanksgiving and praise.

Besides the hymns, the following music was rendered :

Voluntary—"The Reapers," Benedict.
Magnificat—Rev. J. G. Plummer.
Anthem — "Praise the Lord," Maunder.
"O Canada."
"God Save the King."
Postlude—French and Russian National Hymns.
Harvest Thanksgiving March—Smart.

A MOOSE BAND IS ORGANIZED

Wednesday night the new Moose band held its first organization meeting, when the following officers, all members of the lodges, were elected:

Hon. Pres.—Mayor Buller.
President—G. N. Gordon.
Vice.-Pres.—W. H. Denham.
Executive Officers—President and Dictator, E. N. McWilliams.
Bandmaster—W. B. Webb.
Deputy Bandmaster—W. Hughes.
Secretary—J. M. Greene.
Treasurer—James Edgar.
Librarian—A. Patterson.

The order of the Moose has now 200 members in Peterborough and the Band is going to have splendid uniforms made for its members. They have now in the neighborhood of twenty applicants as members of the band, under the leadership of an experienced musician, Mr. W. B. Webb, of Kingston. Mr. Webb is a graduate of Kneller Hall, England, and comes to Peterborough with certificates from that institution. He is the only man in Peterborough at the present time who holds military music certificates from Knellar Hall.

The new bandmaster is, however, going to live in Kingston for a few weeks and in his absence Mr. W. Hughes will be in charge of the organization work of the band. It is the intention of the members and officers of the band to make it a first class organization. They do not anticipate appearing in public for some months but when they do they feel that they will be able to give a good account of themselves.

WIFE OF REV. R. T. LEWIS PASSES AWAY AT REGINA

Many people in Peterborough will be sorry to learn of the death in Regina last night, after a protracted illness, of Ethel Drew, wife of Rev. Harry T. Lewis, pastor of the Metropolitan Methodist church of that city. Rev. Mr. Lewis is well known in this locality, he having left the Bay of Quinte conference only four years ago to take charge of the Re- church, where he was just finishing his term. Mrs. Lewis came from Oshawa, and leaves, besides her husband, two children to mourn her loss. The funeral will take place on Monday to Little Lake cemetery, the arrangements for which will be announced later.

The Crown Prince of Germany comes so close to the danger line in the big battles that a gun with a range of 47 miles could almost hit him.

However it won't take the war long to stop when it finds out that it does not meet with Bourassa's approval.

TREAT IS ASSURED AT BAND CONCERT

A fine musical treat is in store for the citizens, when on the evening of Sept, 25th, the bands of the Salvation Army and 57th Regiment will combine forces and give a grand patriotic concert. This ought to be a big drawing card, it will be the first tme these two bands have combined in concert work. Altogether ther will be about 70 players, assisted by local talent, and the program will be of a high order. It is under the auspices of the women's committee of the war fund.

Claimed Advantage for PETERBORO Secured by C. B. Routley

Last January we placed large import orders with our European potters for crockery and china ware. We have now during the past month received the goods, at prices lower than any previous buy, and we intend that not one farthing's worth of goods will be raised in price. You will find, as usual, that our prices withstand any competition that you can put up against us. If you want a Dinner Set, Tea Set, Chamber Set, Lamp or China Ware, Wall Paper, etc., our prices must surely appeal to you.

15 only 97-piece Dinner and Tea Set combined, each piece perfect, per set $6.95

10 Dinner Sets, 97 pieces, each piece with gold line enameled decorations, per set $9.85

5 China Sets, 97 pieces, with gold handles. Kermis shaped cups, pink rose decoration, per set $15.95

Now is the time of year that we take for clearing out our Wall Paper. Look at our south window for ridiculous price cutting.

FIGHTING AT EVERY STEP

Germans Offer Bitter Resistance to Steady Advance of Allies.

Crown Prince is in a Desperate Position, Duke of Wurtemburg is Sorely Pressed by the French Centre and the Crown Prince of Bavaria is Reported to Have Been Forced Back Into Germany.

LONDON, Sept. 18.—On a line of battle variously estimated at from 150 to 200 miles, extending along the Aisne river, the allies and German hosts fought all day, the allies striving to envelope the right wing. The principal point of contact are between Noyon and Nancy. From 2,000,000 to 3,000,000 men are engaged, and the fighting is described by some as the most sanguinary since hostilities began.

The combined British and French forces appeared to have gained an advantage on the right flank, pressing the Kaiser's forces back for repeated losses. But the retreating army is vigorously contesting every foot of ground. The invaders had apparently chosen their present battle line some days ago, as indicated by the amount of heavy artillery they succeeded in getting into position.

The situation of the army under the Crown Prince, Frederick Wilhelm, is said to be desperate. That of the Duke of Wurtomberg is also sorely pressed by the French centre, and has given the crown prince much trouble. It is predicted that both armies must fall back to the Meuse river lines if they do not stem the advancing French.

In addition to the success of the allies on the German right, their lines were reinforced yesterday by detachments of the army of Paris, sent to ensure the progress of the advance. On the left of the German lines the army commanded by the Crown Prince of Bavaria is said to have been forced into German territory. The real force of the battle is on the right wing, where an attempt will be made to execute the same manoeuvres carried out so successfully on the Marne.

A steady rain continued to fall all day, rendering the discomfort of the troops excessive and causing much delay in the handling of artillery and the movement of cavalry. The action of the day was distinguished by repeated attempts to cross the Aisne by both armies. The English engineers are said to have rendered brilliant service in constructing pontoon bridges.

The losses of the second great battle of the campaign are described as enormous. The French transport corps is working excellently, and everything possiblethas been done for the wounded.

It is repeatedly rumored that heavy reinforcements for the Germans have come up from Lorraine. This would seem to be substantiated by the stiffening of their resistance during the past two days. The German general staff claims strategic gains, but the allies insist they are slowly advancing at all points. Much of the fighting has been at long range, the German lyddite shells working havoc in the ranks of their pursuers.

The latest official statement says: "On our left wing the resistance of the enemy on the heights to the north of the River Aisne was continued, in spite of the fact that the enemy gave back slightly at certain points. On the centre, between Berry-au-Bac, on the River Aisne, and the Argonne, the situation shows no change. The enemy continued to fortify himself along the line previously indicated. Between the Argonne and the Meuse the Germans are entrenching themselves in the vicinity of Montfaucon. In the Woevre district we have come in contact with several detachments of the enemy between Etain and Thiancort. On the right wing, in Lorraine and the Vosges, there has been no change.

"Summing up, the battle is being continued along the centre front between the River Oise and the River Meuse, The Germans occupy positions organized for defence and armed with heavy artillery. Our progress is of necessity slow, but our troops are animated by a spirit of offensive action, and they are giving evidence of vigor and enthusiasm. They have repulsed with success the counter-attacks undertaken by the enemy, both during the day and at night. The morale of the French soldiers is excellent.

Travelers from Germany via Rotterdam state that public anxiety in Berlin is constantly increasing. Demonstrations by the people have been promptly and severely repressed, but such occurrences are becoming daily events. One morning recently the walls of many buildings were placarded with huge signs bearing the legend, "We Want Peace!"

The inhabitants are greatly depressed owing to the lack of news, and there is a general conviction that the Government is hiding the real seriousness of the situation.

CROP RETURNS

Ottawa, Sept. 18.—The following have been received: Annapolis Valley, N.S.—Crop estimated at 900,000 barrels, which is equal to 1912 and 60 per cent. increase over 1913. Fruit coloring slowly and will be later than usual, but of finest quality in years. Prices low for early varieties and markets dull. Plums, pears and crabs plentiful but very little demand. Weather ideal.

New Brunswick—Crop equal to 1912 and double 1913 but smaller in size. Fameuse, McIntosh and Wealthy a full crop. Winter apples fair. Practically no scab. Local markets fair.

Okanagan Valley, B.C. — Weather unsettled and season two weeks early. Wealthy and Gravenstein now ready, McIntosh and Jonathan at the end of month. Crop fair.

Kootenay Valley, B.C.—Crop 60 per cent. of 1913 and equal to 1912. Wealthy Gravenstein good crop, Baldwin and Wagener fair. Others light. Pears and plums good.

Northwestern States — Estimate about 13,000 cars. Demand exceedingly light, trade buying only from day to day. Small likelihood of exporting very large quantities to Canada.

Glasgow, Scotland — Last week's prices 14 to 19 shillings. Quality first consideration to maintain prices.

Manchester, Eng. — Fair demand for superior apples. Do not ship inferior grades.

London, Eng.—Impossible to forecast values, but clean, bright coloured apples will sell. Present prospects for pears much brighter.

Liverpool, Eng. — Present market good for pears and coloured apples.

Counties north of Lake Ontario—Snows are a clean crop and a little heavier than last year. McIntosh, Greening, Starks and Ben Davis same as last year. Baldwins low. Kings a failure. No buying in orchards, the only movement being by consignment.

Georgian Bay District, Ont.—Apple crop 75 per cent. increase over 1913 and 50 per cent. over 1912. Pears double last year. Plums about one third of last year. Weather conditions favourable.

Apple crop in Michigan, North Carolina, Virginia, New York States, averages 76 per cent.

Rheumatism
A Home Cure Given by One Who Had It.

In the spring of 1893 I was attacked by Muscular and Inflammatory Rheumatism. I suffered as only those who have it know, for over three years. I tried remedy after remedy, and doctor after doctor, but such relief as I received was only temporary. Finally, I found a remedy that cured me completely, and it has never returned. I have given it to a number who were terribly afflicted and even bedridden with Rheumatism, and it effected a cure in every case.

I want every sufferer from any form of rheumatic trouble to try this marvelous healing power. Don't send a cent; simply mail your name and address and I will send it free to try. After you have used it and it has proven itself to be that long-looked-for means of curing your Rheumatism, you may send the price of it, one dollar, but, understand, I do not want your money unless you are perfectly satisfied to send it. Isn't that fair? Why suffer any longer when positive relief is thus offered you free? Don't delay. Write today.

AIRSHIPS KEEP OUT

Canada Issues Some Stringent Regulations

OTTAWA, Sept. 18.—An order-in-council was passed by the Government yesterday prohibiting the navigation of airships of any class within ten miles of Halifax, Sydney, St. John, Quebec, St. Jean, Valcartier, Montreal, Ottawa, Kingston, Toronto, London, Winnipeg, Regina, Calgary, Edmonton, Victoria, Vancouver and Charlottetown, or within ten miles of the wireless telegraph stations which stratch from Partridge Island on the Atlantic to the Pacific coast.

Aeroplanes have been observed approaching some of these points from the United States side of the border, and Dominion police have been stationed to prevent their approach. Airmen who approach within ten miles of the points mentioned will be fired upon.

COBOURG OFFICER COMMANDS TRANSPORT

COBOURG, Sept. 18.—Lieut. Thos. J. Turpin, who was with Col. Sam Hughes in South Africa, was highly honored by Cobourg citizens on the occasion of his leaving to join the Canadian contingent at Valcartier, Lieut. Turpin has been appointed to the important position of officer in charge of the Canadian Overseas Mechanical Transports, a new branch of the Canadian military service. He will have charge, it is understood, of 153 motor vehicles. Lieut. Turpin is now entering upon his third campaign in active service, having previously been with D. Company, Royal Canadian Regiment in South Africa, before taking up active special service with the Minister of Militia.

Life is a grind, but it always has its turning point.

LONDON, Sept. 18.—Sir Edward Carson, M.P., leader of the Unionists in Ulster, was married at Wincanton, Somerset, yesterday to Miss Ruby Frewen, niece of Moreton Frewen, member of Parliament for Northeast Cork. The Marquis of Londonderry acted as best man. The guests included the Countess of Ilchester, and Andrew Bonar Law, leader of the Opposition in the House of Commons.

This is Sir Edward's second marriage. He was born in 1854.

Seizure Authorized.

LONDON, Sept. 18.—A proclamation was issued last night authorizing the Board of Trade to take possession of any articles of commerce which are being unreasonably held from the market, paying the owners fair prices for them.

SURPRISED THE ENEMY

Brigade of Belgians Defeat Invaders at Termonde

GHENT, Sept. 18. — Germans in Belgium suffered a severe repulse yesterday. Following the retirement of the Belgian army to Antwerp, after four days of splendid work, a force of the enemy advanced from Alost to Termonde. Wednesday night a brigade of Belgians, who had retired a little way north of here, were reinforced by artillery from Antwerp. They bombarded the Germans in Termonde in the early hours of yesterday morning. The reply to the fire of the Belgian guns was feeble, the enemy quickly retiring in the direction of Brussels, and the Belgians captured some prisoners, also a number of field kitchens which were abandoned. The fighting south of Termonde continues.

German cavalry, to the number of about 400, made an incursion toward Dixmirde, a town about fifteen miles due south from Ostend. They advanced along a light railway, running north from Ypres, and were met at Zarren by a mixed Belgian force of soldiers and gendarmes. Although these were much fewer in number, they were, fortunately, in possession of three mitrailleuses. With these and rifles they opened fire, having been ambushed in an excellent position.

They took the Germans by surprise. The latter were in the open country, exposed to a witehring fire, and they commenced retiring. They attempted a rearguard action, but, decimated by the mitrailleuses, quickly turned their retreat into flight. Only about one-half of the raiding force escaped.

NOTED OFFICER AMONG THE DEAD

LONDON, Sept. 18. — Among the British officers killed, as made known in a casualty list issued last night, was Capt. Bertram Stewart of the West Kent Yeomanry. Capt. Stewart was one of two officers who were imprisoned in a German fortress for several months for spying and was pardoned by Emperor William on the occasion of his last visit to England.

In the list of dead also appear the the names of Col. Sir Evelyn Ridley Bradford, of the Seaforth Highlanders, who was a well-known Londoner, and Lieut.-Col. Louis St. Gratien le Merchant, of the East Lancashire Regiment.

Italian Attache Resented Insults.

PARIS, Sept. 18.—According to an article in the newspaper Avanti of Milan, Italy, the military attache of Italy has quit Berlin because of insulting remarks concerning the attitude of Italy in the war made in the official salon. It is stated that the Italian attache vigorously resented the remarks.

EVERY MAN CALLED TO THE COLORS BY AUSTRIA

Austro-German Armies in Galicia Are Still Retreating in the Hope of Making a Stand at Cracow, But Recruits Are Raw and Trained Russian Troops Far Outnumber Them—Vienna is Panicky.

LONDON, Sept. 18.—Austria is in extremis. Rome despatches from Vienna announce the approaching call en masse of all reservists, even those previously rejected as unfit. This looks like the beginning of the end for the Dual Monarchy.

With their flank threatened by the Russian guns now operating against Przemysl, and ringed in by Cossack cavalry, the decimated ranks of the Austro-Germanic armies that are retreating on Cracow are reported to be thoroughly broken and demoralized. The enemy has lost his nerve, judging by the terrible blunder when Austrian artillery almost wiped out three of their own regiments, which they had mistaken for the enemy. In some despatches it is stated that the Austrian retreat in Galicia has become a rout. The pursuing Russians are in superior force, in both men and guns. Both sides are feeling the strain of three weeks' incessant fighting, but all reports serve to indicate that the Austrian armies in Galicia are in a desperate plight. Ruzsky and Brussiloff, the Russian commanders in Galicia, have driven the enemy from position after position, with terrible losses. Leaving the shelter of the guns of Przemysl to the music of Russian artillery, the Austrians, joining the army of the north, are now endeavoring to reach Cracow, and the reinforcements and supplies that await them there.

A despatch to Reuter's Telegram Co. from Petrograd said;

"The Russians have reoccupied Sandomierz, Russian Poland, 57 miles southeast of Radom, and continue their pursuit of the Austrians.

"Newspaper despatches assert that German troops have been interspersed with Austrian troops in the entrenchments in order to raise the morale of the Austrians. One correspondent declares that while the Austrians took flight the Germans were ready to the last man to perish.

The Austrian and German general staffs are reported to be arranging a concentration at Cracow, where they hope to put over a million men in the firing lines to arrest the Russian advance. The retreating armies now at Rzeszow are about 200 miles from the protecting guns and trenches of Cracow, and could not cover the ground in less than two weeks by road. Without the aid of reinforcements, the Austrians, hampered by the raw levies in their ranks, will find the retreat on Cracow a formidable proposition."

The Austrian Government is keeping the people in the dark and spreading reports of victories, but the large number of wounded and maimed arriving daily from the front tells its own sorrowful tale. Many Slavs and Bohemians are deserting to the Russians.

By order of Grand Duke Nicholas, the commander-in-chief of the Russian forces, a manifesto, printed in nine of the principal languages of Austria, is being circulated in the Austrian districts captured by the Russians. The manifesto declares "in the name of the great Emperor, that "Russia, which has shed its blood many times for the emancipation of nations from the foreign yoke, only seeks the rehabilitation of rights and justice."

It accuses the Austro-Hungarian Government of fomenting discord and enmity, and declaring that Russia's "sole aim is that each and every one of you may grow up and prosper, and keep, at the same time, the precious inheritance of language and faith of your fathers," calls upon the Austrian people "to welcome the Russian troops as faithful friends, who are fighting for the realization of your greatest ambitions."

FIRED ON THEIR OWN WARSHIPS

Germans Reported to Have Had Battle All Their Own

LONDON, Sept. 18.—Telegraphing to The Times, its Petrograd correspondent says:

Reports of disaster to the German fleet in the Baltic have been confirmed by despatches received here which declare that German warships fired upon each other. All reports of engagements with the Russian fleet in the Baltic, however, are untrue.

"The information reaching Petrograd is that a numerous flotilla, attended by cruisers, while engaged in hunting down passenger steamers, mistook their own for the enemy's ships and engaged in a lively battle.

The number of vessels crippled is unknown, but several cruisers entered badly mauled and riddled and carrying many wounded."

THE SPORTING WORLD

FEDS WANT TO BUTT IN ON THE WORLD'S SERIES

Chicago, Sept. 18.—A chance for the Federal league to participate in the world's series was asked today in a letter from James A. Gilmore, president of the Federal league, to members of the National commission. In a plea for a truce in the interests of the supporters of the game, Mr. Gilmore declared that the national agreement did not prohibit the clubs in organized baseball playing an outside club, outlined the claims of the Federals to be regarded as a major league, and contended that no club could rightfully claim the world's championship until it had met the pennant winner of the Federal leaguo.

"We suggest," writes President Gilmore, "in the interest of the game that at least for the time being we forget our differences and our acts of war and peacefully, in keeping with the spirit of American business men, arrange a schedule for a world's championship between the three leagues."

Copies of the letter were sent to August Herrmann (chairman of the commssion), Ban Johnson and John K. Tener.

ABE ATTEL AFTER ANOTHER CHANCE

Will Meet Johnny Kilbane in October

Los Angeles, Cal., Sept. 18. — Johnny Kilbane and Abe Attel will fight twenty rounds at Vernon on the night of October 16, for the featherweight championship of the world. Attel lost the title to Kilbane in 1912. They will weigh 122 pounds ring side.

ATHLETICS AT RIVERSIDE PARK THANKSGIVING DAY

The city championship, which was postponed from Sept. 19th on account of the fair will be held at Riverside Park on Thanksgiving Day.

The committee in charge have been putting forth every effort to make this meet a great success. Not only because the proceeds are to go to the aid of sports and amusements of the soldiers in camp but because it is also an attempt to revive interest in track and field sports.

The Thanksgiving Day road race has been brought to life and will be a feature of the meet. The Examiner has put up a trophy which will be well worth competing for, and other suitable prizes will be given for the runners up. The course will be between five and ten miles, and will start and finish at Riverside Park.

This race is open to any one over 18 years of age, who is an amateur in good standing with the A. A. U. of C. or the athletic league of the Y. M. C. A.

This is ideal weather for training and every athlete in Peterboro should get in shape, and make this meet a big success. This is only the beginning of the committee's plans to boom athletics in Peterboro.

BOWLING ALLEYS OPEN SATURDAY

The Y.M.C.A. bowling alleys will open Saturday, Sept. 19th. The alleys have been put in good shape and the association will offer every inducement for the men interested in bowling to make good use of them.

A committee will be in charge of this activity and league and tournaments will be run off. This privilege is open to every senior member.

COMMENT

As You Like It

Pitcher Caldwell, who recently jumped the New York Americans, has signed with the Buffalo Federals for next year. Owner Farrell, of the Yankees, threatens to sue the Federals for coaxing Caldwell away.

That Guelph will be back in the Canadian league next season is becoming more apparent each day. Owner O'Neill, of the Erie team, claims to have lost $7,000 this season and is said to be willing to try out Guelph in the Canadian.

From Peterborough comes a report that the Lift Lock City will not be represented in the Canadian next year. They have lost heavily in the past two seasons, though some of this year's deficits may be wiped out through the drafting of players. Louie Schettler, Infielder Byrne and Outfielder Rooney may be called to higher company.—Ottawa Citizen.

There will be many changes in the Ottawa team next year. In fact, when "Play ball" is called the fans will only see a few of this year's team on hand. Nill has been given an unconditional release. Shockcor will either be drafted or Fort Wayne will use him. Rogers, it is stated, is after the job of managing the Peterborough team, the town where Curly Blount fell down. Smejkal will either be traded or sold, while Bullock will be released to St. Thomas. Cozy Dolan will be either traded or released, and it is said that the big pennant winner himself will play first. And it would not be such a bad move at that. With Shag on first, he could steady the pitchers and infield and there would not be so much danger of them blowing up.—Ottawa Free Press.

BUGLE BAND TOOK THE FIRST GAME

Indoor Baseball Schedule Opens Before Many Spectators

The indoor baseball game at the armourres last night was keenly contested. The Bugle Band and No. 7 company were the contestants. The Bugle Band won, 24 to 14. There were a large number of spectators.

The recreation room at the armouries is one of the most popular places in the city. Last evening a very large number of the men were there enjoying themselves in various games, music and goodfellowship. It is fast gaining in popularity.

Y.M.C.A. NOTES

All boys who wish to practice for the city championships which will be held on Thanksgiving Day, Oct 12th, will meet Mr. Carson at the Riverside Park Saturday morning at 9.30 to 11.00 o'clock. The boys will be taught how to start in a race, running and jumping.

The boys' rooms have been put in first class order and are all ready for the rush of boys that will come in on Monday for the fall opening. The first gymnasium class will be held on Monday afternoon. Employed boys will commence Monday night, intermediate Tuesday night, school boys Wednesday afternoon.

Boys' cabinet will meet Saturday night at 7.15 instead of Monday night. A large number of boys are taking out memberships in the "Y" now. We have room for many more, the tickets are only three dollars so now is the time to join and get in on the start of the fall work. A good programme of illustrated lectures, entertainments, and social times will be arranged for the boys and a general godo time is promised.

HOW IT STARTED.

A Telephone Conversation Showing a Husband Must Choose His Words.

HELLO! Is that you, m'love?

Uh-huh, this is snooky.

Yes, I just reached the office. Thought I would phone to find out if your headache still bothered you, dearie.

What! The baby standing straight up on her feet?

Gee, that's fine! How far did she walk? Yes! Alone?

Wonderful child, sweetie! She's growing to be more like you every day too. Why, I really believe in another week the little treasure will be able to converse with us. Lift her up to the phone, dearie.

'Lo! Is 'at Da Da's 'ittle uky-uky-ookims? Is 'ittle darlin' behavin' when Da Da's 'way? Div Da Da 'ittle tiss like a dood ittle dirlie.

Hello? Yes, dearie. What, she's crying? Oh, I hope there's nothing seriously wrong. Shout? I did not shout at the child.

How can I help it if she has a nervous temperament, lovie? You know we are all subject to things of that nature.

Inherited from whom?

No, I didn't say she inherited it from you—

What did I say?

Why, I only remarked—or rather I thought it was real complimentary to say—that she resembled you the most.

Quarrel? No, I'm not starting a quarrel.

Now, m'love, be reasonable; I—

No! No! Certainly, I—

Premeditated—just to annoy you?

Genevieve, dear, listen t'me—don't hang up. When—zizz-ack— Telephone crashes.—Puck.

She Favored the Queen.

Two sisters while visiting in Ireland in Victoria's time got into conversation one day with a tenant of their hostess. One of the girls, who was quite stout, asked the old woman if she would have known them for sisters.

"Well," was the answer, "ye look alike, but yer sister's slender, while you, miss—well, you favor the quane."—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

YOUNG—CORRIGAN.

A pretty wedding was quietly solemnized Saturday morning in St. Anne's Church, by the Rev. Lawrence Skey, when Annie, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. Corrigan, of Peterboro, was united in marriage to Dr. J. G. Young, son of Mr. and Mrs. Young, Cyprus River, Manitoba. The bride looked charming in a blue traveling suit with black velvet hat, and wore a corsage bouquet of roses and lily of the valley. Immediately after the ceremony Dr. and Mrs. Young left for a trip to Cyprus River, after which they will reside at Elstow, Sask.—Toronto Star.

Last night the Royal Hotel was the scene of much merry making, the occasion being the first anniversary of the wedding of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Heard, the guests completely filling the dining room where twelve tables of euchre were played.

Mr. Arthur Brown proved himself quite equal to the occasion and with a few well chosen remarks presented Mr. and Mrs. Heard with a brooch and electric reading lamp.

Notwithstanding the fact that both the recipients were taken completely by surprise they responded nobly.

Vocal selections by Mrs. James Massie, Mrs. Charles Massie and Mr. Arthur Brown added much to the evening's pleasure and all went home feeling that a most delightful evening had been spent. — Port Hope Guide.

Mr. A. P. Davidson, Toronto, is here on business.

Mr. M. Galvin, Rochester, is here the guest of friends.

H. Gondon, Toronto, is visiting friends in the city.

A. E. Oliver, Toronto, and F. W. Week, Ottawa, are registered at the Snowden House.

Dr. R. J. and Mrs. Davidson and daughter of Burlington, are guests at the White House.

Mrs. E. Ward and son returned Wednesday evening after spending a few days with friends in Toronto.

The condition of Constable Paterson, who is sick in Nicholls hospital with typhoid fever, was very grave yesterday and to-day.

Rev. E. W. Pickford, B.A., of Brighton, and formerly of Norwood, has been elected Secretary of the Brighton Branch of the Canadian Patriotic Association.

Mr. George W. Fisher, who has been general secretary of the Stratford Y.M.C.A. for four years has been engaged to take charge of the Welland Y.M.C.A.

Professor Dorenwend, of Toronto, has arrived and is, as advertised, with his hair goods, at the Oriental, and will have his showroom open this evening until 10 o'clock and to-morrow (Saturday) until 3 p.m., when he returns to Toronto. Ladies and gentlemen who are in need of hair should not lose this opportunity of consulting one of the few experts in this line.

The management of the Conservatory of Music announce the appointment to the faculty in the vocal department of Miss Ada Richardson, soprano soloist of the Charlotte Street Church. This popular artist needs no introduction to Peterboro, her work in church and concert field is already well known. Miss Richardson was formerly a pupil of Mr. David Dick Slater, A.R.C.M., London, England, the well known local teacher and composer. Miss Richardson will begin her duties at once and may be consulted at the conservatory.

A NEW BOOK PLAY

May Robson to be Attraction at the Grand Opera House in "Martha By-The-Day"

The attraction at the Grand on Wednesday next, Sept. 23, will be May Robson, who, under new management and with a new company, appears in a fetching comedy, "Martha By-The-Day." This is an adaptation of the book of similar title, by Julie M. Lippmann, and it is heralded as furnishing much that is novel and refreshing in characterizations and situation. In book form Miss Lippman's story was widely read and its wholesome and original humor won enthusiastic praise. Martha, around whom the plot revolves, is a kind-hearted, levelheaded New York scrub-woman, with a touch of Irish to her. Her shrewd and amusing comments on life, and her startling, practical applications of her philosophy of doing at once whatsoever seems her duty, furnish many amusing complications for the comedy. Its story is prettily told, with a charming love tale coursing through the three acts. To all who have read the book, and to those acquainted with the rare faculty for eccentric characterization possessed by Miss Robson, it is apparent that "Martha" will be one of the most successful roles of her career.

The scenes of "Martha By-The-Day" are all laid in New York state, and its characters are all American types. The first act discloses Martha's flat in New York city, and the other two show portions of an estate in the Catskill mountains. The settings for these scenes have been prepared upon a particularly elaborate scale, and from an artistic viewpoint will gain important recognition.

The Academic Producing Co., under whose direction Miss Robson appears, has assembled a very clever group of players for the cast, and announces the following names: Julie Herne, Lois Frances Clark, Anita Clarendon, Jane Heron, Violet Howard, Mary Mersch, Ramsey Wallace, Coates Gwynne, Edwin Brandt, Roy Ardmore and Joseph E. Clark.

WAR DICTIONARY MILITARY TERMS

The London (England) "News of the World" has compiled and published the following "military dictionary," showing the composition of the British Army at war strength:

Infantry.

Company—250 officers and men; in the case of mounted infantry, 163 officers and men.

Battalion—Four companies, 1,000 men, with machine guns.

Division—Three brigades of infantry, two squadrons of cavalry, or two companies of mounted infantry, three field and one howitzer brigade of artillery, one heavy battery and ammunition column, two field companies of engineers, one signal company, three field ambulances, transport and train—total 18,407 officers and men, 78 guns, and 5,904 horses. The combatant strength is about 15,000.

Army Corps—Two divisions. In the case of continental armies in war time a third division composed of reservists is generally added. Continental divisions are somewhat larger than British, and may be put at 20,000 men. A German (and perhaps French) army corps may consist of 60,000 men, of whom about 80 per cent. would be combatants.

Cavalry.

Squadron—150 men.

Regiment—Three squadrons and a machine gun section.

Brigade—Three regiments. When acting independently, horse artillery and engineers are attached.

Division—Four cavalry brigades, two horse artillery brigades, four field troops of engineers and signal squadron, four signal troops, four cavalry field ambulances, together with transport and train. This represents a total of 9,302 officers and men, with 9,307 horses, a number of motor cars, motor tricycles and bicycles. Number of combatants, about 7,000.

Artillery.

Battery is composed as follows:

Horse artillery: 6 13-pounder guns and 208 officers and men.

Field artillery: 6 18-pounder guns and 203 officers and men.

Howitzer: 6 5-in. guns and 191 officers and men.

Heavy: 4 "Long Toms" and 171 officers and men.

Garrison artillery: A variable quantity, according to the men and guns on the size of the forts named.

In the French army a battery consists of four guns.

A brigade consists, in the case of horse artillery, of two batteries and ammunition column (671 officers and men and 756 horses), in the case of field artillery of three batteries and ammunition column (793 men and 733 horses), in the case of the field howitzer artillery, of three batteries and ammunition column.

Shell—A hollow metal projectile fired by artillery, containing a bursting charge, which is exploded by a time or percussion fuse.

Shrapnel—A shell filled with bullets, and containing a small bursting charge just sufficient to split the shell open and release the bullets at any given point.

Flying Corps.

Aeroplane Squadron—Twelve aeroplanes.

Aeroplane and Kite Squadron — Two airships and two kites.

An airship battalion in the British army consists of from 20 to 430 officers and nearly 200 men.

Minor Units.

File—Two men.

Section—Cavalry: 4 men; infantry one-sighth of a company (about 30 men); artillery, 2 guns and their crews and waggons; medical corps, 3 Red Cross waggons, their stretcher bearers, doctors, and orderlies.

Field Ambulance — Three "sections" of medical corps.

Platoon—A quarter company of infantry.

Company—Royal Engineers: Between 180 and 200 men. Army Service Corps: about 100.

Miscellaneous Terms.

Train—Indicates all the baggage and impediments of an army which is not carried with the first line transport. Usually includes water and small arms ammunition carts, cooks' carts of travelling kitchens.

Patrol—A reconnoitering cavalry detachment, containing anything from two men to a squadron.

Piquet—A term as elastic as "patrol," denoting an infantry guard in front of a stationary army or detachment.

Outpost—May consist of anything from a company to a big force of all arms. Its size and constitution are determined by its duties, which are to ward off an enemy long enough to allow the army in the rear to make all its disposition for defence or attack.

Advance Guard—Usually one-sixth of the main army.

Corps—This word no longer describes a British fighting unit, but is used to describe "regiments" which split into infinitesimal parts, are distributed all over a fighting force, i.e.,—Army Service Corps, Royal Army Medical Corps, and Army Ordnance Corps; the last deals only with the material of war, and furnishes everything from fighters to firearms.

Column—A force of any size on the march. A division, for instance, when making a strategical advance, may move in two or three columns.

Wing and Flank—Usually interchangeable terms, and denote the right and left sides of an advancing line of troops, no matter how deep or how long that line may be.

Strategical—A term used with reference to the process by which an army is brought into the theatre of operations.

Tactical—A term applied to the movements of troops when in actual contact with the enemy.

Covering Troops.

A screen of troops of all arms is pushed out in front of each army to feel for and get in touch with the enemy, and to prevent him from getting in and obtaining information. The outermost fringe of this screen is composed of cavalry, split up into small parties or patrols, which work their way, if possible, into the heart of the enemy's country, gathering and sending back information, preventing the destruction of roads and railways which their own army will and hasp ledged itself to do everywant to use, stopping the removal or secretion of supplies, and a thousand and one other things. In 1870 the German cavalry screen was often 50 miles ahead of the main armies. The screen increases in strength form front to rear, the advanced horsemen being backed up by artillery and infantry, so that in the event of a check or of an attempt by the enemy to penetrate the screen, a force can be immediately concentrated for offensive or defensive purposes.

Reconnaisance.

A complete force of all arms, which may be anything from a brigade to an army corps, is sometimes sent on a special mission to penetrate into the enemy's country for the purpose of obtaining special information. Such a force would, when in touch with the enemy, attack him vigorously and compel him to expose his strength. Notable examples of reconnaisance in force have been the French dash to Mulhausen and to Saarburg, and the operations of the Germans against the Belgians to the north of the Meuse.

DESPERADOES ARE DEAD

Killing of Boer General Has Tragic Seduel

JOHANNESBURG, Union of South Africa, Sept. 18.—The gang of three desperadoes, under the leadership or a man named Jackson, who were indirectly the cause of the killing of Gen. Jacobs Hendrick Delarey, the noted Boer general, came to a dramatic end yesterday. They took refuge in a cave on East Rand, and the police surrounded the cave and called upon them to surrender.

The desperadoes offered to give up their arms to Jackson's wife. She entered the cave, and Jackson shot her. Jackson and his two accomplices then committed suicide.

Gen. Delarey, who was one of the ablest commanders in the Boer war, was proceeding in an automobile to his farm, when police, who were watching for the Jackson desperadoes, challenged him. He continued on without stopping and the police fired, a bullet entering Gen. Delarey's heart.

Somebody ought to tell the German navy that there is a war going on.

OFFICIALS ARE PLEASED

Peterboro turned out en fete last night to do honor to the Industrial Exhibition. Young and old forgot their cares when passing down the midway—on all sides the lusty voices of spellers were working overtime. The midway boys were there in force from "Hoch the Kaiser and get a five cent cigar" to the "spot the spot" spieler. And judging by the business being done at the "Hock the Kaiser" stand old King Bill was having some close calls.

The grand stand was crowded and some extra good fireworks were put on to the keen enjoyment of the small boy and girl as well as the larger ones. Four of the best vaudeville troupes on record contributed to the program, much of which was heartily applauded.

The advertising booths, the floral exhibits, the vegetables, the fruits, the merry-go-round, the vaudeville, the fireworks, and last but not least, the two bands, were all there and enjoyed by a record-breaking crowd.

For the first two days of the Industrial Exhibition the attendance has been a trifle smaller than the first two days of last year but with the perfect weather of today, it is anticipated that the full attendance of the three days will break all previous records. Last year the final day was marked by weather which drove the mercury down around the freezing point, that of course held hundreds away. The morning trains today on both the G.T.R. and C.P.R. were crowded so prospects point to a record attendance this afternoon.

Directors Jubilant.

In speaking to several of the directors this morning a Review man learned that they are very jubilant over the outcome and consider it away ahead of anticipations. The midway men have made money and will undoubtedly prove a good advertisement for the local fair.

R. M. Glover, in charge of the platform entertainment received a wire yesterday from New York stating that the principals of two of the acts had the misfortune to be in a railway wreck and although not injured they lost all their baggage. Mr. Glover immediately phoned Toronto in an endeavor to secure a couple of more acts but his efforts were futile.

The acts that have been presented are very good, the only fault being that they are a little too short.

SHACKLETON PARTY LEAVE

Antartic Explorers Off for Trip to South Pole

LONDON, Sept. 19. — Sir Ernest Shackleton and the members of his trans Antarctic expedition left London yesterday in two sections for the South Polar region. One party, headed by Sir Ernest, departed for South America; the other half of the expedition left for Ross Sea, on the New Zealand side of the Antarctic, by way of Tasmania.

Sir Ernest Shackleton hopes to meet the Ross Sea contingent in April of next year, or, failing in that, by March of 1916.

The Shackleton section will have 70 dogs, and also motor sledges. The other party will have 26 dogs.

One great difficulty which confronted the expedition was the lack of scientific instruments. These had not been delivered because of the war, and it was necessary to replace them in England.

A CONCERT FOR ALL THE CITIZENS

High Class Program for Monday Night at Opera House

It is hoped that the citizens will give hearty patronage to the patriotic concert, to be given in the Grand Opera House, Monday evening, next.

The 57th band, Opera House orchestra and local talent will take part in the program, which undoubtedly will be of a very high standard. Peterboro's favorite vocalists and musicians will be heard.

As there will not be one item of expense, the entire proceeds will be handed over to those in charge of the relief fund.

Reserved seats are now on sale at the Opera House, the tickets being 50 cents. The general admission is 25 cents.

PARIS STATEMENT

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Sept. 19.—The official statement given out in Paris this afternoon says the French have advanced on the right bank of the Oise, that the Germans are bringing up reinforcements from Lorraine to the river Aisne, that the enemy is holding firm on the centre, and that the army of the German Crown Prince continues to retreat.

BODIES OF HEROIC MEN COVER FIELDS

Story of Terrible Struggles Along the Aisne

London, Sept. 19. — The London Times' special correspondent in France says: From a point behind the lines by Senlis and Chantilly I have passed through a smiling land to a land wearing the mask of death; through harvest fields rich with great stacks, snugly built against winter, to fields of braver harvest; by jocund villages where there is no break in the ebb and flow of everyday life, to villages and towns that despoiling hands have shattered in ruins.

The crossing of the Aisne by the allied troops was, as all the world now knows, accomplished on Sunday under circumstances of desperate strain and stress. On the north bank the enemy was repulsed with a sweeping force, but was able to reform his ranks for another stand. He was able, too, as we have reason to know, to hurry large reinforcements toward this vital part of his line.

A Terrible Fight.

On Monday the second and greater battle of Aisne opened all along the line. Details of this fight, which as I write reaches the third day of duration, are very scanty, but from personal observation and information which reached me, I know the struggle so far has been terrible, ono equal to it if not greater than the struggle on the banks of the Marne.

The events of Monday revealed the foe battling desperately for his life. This defence of General Von Kluk's army demanded of the allies, and is still demanding, their utmost strength and determination. I see through these fierce hours the tide of battle ebbing and flowing across the plain which runs deeply betwixt high banks. Along this huge front there are varying fortunes, though everywhere the same zeal and fury of conflict. I see tremendous doings on these rough, newly-made bridges in the region of Noyon, of Vic-sur-Aisne and of Soissons. I know of the heroic work against these great lines, a work that will live with the most momentous of this struggle.

Soon on these green river banks and across these wooded plains the Huns will make their great stand, a stand that, if they are defeated, will be their last in France. And meanwhile, behind them lie the wasted fields and broken villages of their rapine and savagery.

CROWN PRINCE WANTS SOCKS

BERLIN, Sept. 19.—(Via Rotterdam.)—Crown Prince Frederick William yesterday telegraphed to The Zeitung Am Mittag as follows:

"Please collect and forward as early as possible woollen underwear and socks for my soldiers. Greetings.

Paris Reports Germans Have Received Reinforcements From Lorraine.

THE LONDON OFFICIAL STATEMENT

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Sept. 19—The official information bureau to-day gave out the following statement regarding the situation in France:

"The situation remains unchanged. A counter-attack against the first division delivered during the night was driven back. The weather is bad and it is raining continuously."

Paris, Sept. 19.—The Germans are strongly entrenching on the river Aisne, with reinforcements from Lorraine, according to an official announcement made in Paris this afternoon.

London, Sept. 19.—According to a high government official, the reports of the movement of Russian troops through England probably had their source in the fact that a number of Russian officers detailed for staff and observation duty with the French and English armies in the field, passed through England, accompanied by their orderlies and servants, all in uniform.

It is believed the villagers in Scotland caught sight of these Russians in uniform, and thus arose the widespread report.

London, Sept. 19.—British and French assertions that the Germanic horde which stretches across Northeastern France is slowly yielding, indicate that the battle of the Aisne seems likely to follow the course of the battle of the Marne, for there it was the German right which first fell back across the river.

Along 150 miles of front, the rear of which is scarred with the graves of thousands of lives already sacrificed, two armies comprising millions of nerve-wrecked men, rapidly approaching a stage of exhaustion, and standing in trenches deep with water, wait the opportunity to drive the wedge through the opposing line and thus end the terrible strain which must last so long as Emperor William's troops hold their now strongly entrenched position, and so long as the allied force can face the murderous hail of projectiles from the hidden batteries of their opponents. Both British and French realize and admit that it will take an almost superhuman effort to turn the tide, the strength of the German position being emphasized in almost every despatch from the front.

GERMANS ARE STRONGLY ENTRENCHED

London, Sept. 19.—The correspondent of the Daily Mail, describing the great battle, says: "The Germans have held their ground for three days, with their heaviest guns hidden in the woods, and the French artillery has not yet obtained the mastery of fire over them. German infantry is entrenched along the edges of the woods in which batteries are concealed. It is being attacked alternately by artillery fire and by infantry assaults. French charges are being driven home right into the heart of the woods. At night the Germans make counter-attacks, but these have always been repulsed. The stronghold of the German position is the height of Nogent L'Abbesse, three miles due east of Rheims. There the Germans occupy a site of what used to be the forts of Rheims, and from where they are bombarding the town of Rheims, which was on fire in eight different places at 4 o'clock Thursday afternoon.

London, Sept. 19.—Earl Durham received a letter Friday from his brother, who is on General French's staff. The letter, written two days ago, says that for four days previous there had been desperate fighting, in which the British army more than held its own.

INVADERS AFTER FRENCH'S ARMY

London, Sept. 19.—A despatch to the Times from Bordeaux says: Throughout Thursday the whole front was engaged, the fight again being the hottest on our left flank, where a turning movement is becoming defined. The enemy made a series of vigorous counter-attacks. General French's army has again been signalled out for the enemy's particular attention, but their three attempts to get home upon it have been in vain. While the fighting is hard on the eastern half of their front, the Germans are digging hard in the centre from Rheims to Argonne, and this probably will form the pivot of the battle.

London, Sept. 19, 12.08 p.m.—The Star has a despatch from Rome saying that warships cruising in the Adriatic have captured an Austrian steamer flying a Greek flag and loaded with arms and ammunition destined for Albania.

HISTORY OF THE CHARLOTTE STREET METHODIST CHURCH

In view of the approaching ceremony of laying the corner stone of Trinity Church, it is interesting to recall the history of the edifice which it will replace, the Charlotte Street Methodist Church. The corner stone will be laid Monday afternoon by Mr. Herbert C. Cox, son of the late Senator Cox, who, during his residence in Peterboro, was a member of the church and who remained a staunch supporter, after leaving to reside in Toronto. The property on which Trinity Church is being erected, is a gift from the late Senator.

During the year 1873 the capacity of George Street Methodist Church to accommodate a congregation increasing in numbers, was taxed to the utmost and about the time of the building of the new George Street Church, at the corner of George and McDonnel Streets, a new circuit, to be known as that of Charlotte Street was set off. The growth of the city to the south and west, called for provision to be made for a place of worship and a site was secured at the corner of Charlotte and Reid Streets. On this site the commodious Charlotte Street Church was erected.

On Wednesday, June 25th, 1873, the corner stone was laid, Mrs. Geo. Hilliard placing the stone in position. Work was pushed with all despatch and the church opened on December 7th, 1873. Rev. Dr. Nelles, of Victoria College, taking the services, which were attended by large congregations.

On September 20th, 1891, the church held the formal opening of the fine, new and commodious Sunday School building erected as a wing to the church, and facing on Reid Street. Over $,1000 was raised as an aid to the building fund at the opening meeting. Afterwards the Sunday School building was improved by the addition of a gallery, affordng much needed room for classes.

Under the successive pastors and in care of an energetic Board of Trustees and Stewards the church has prospered, and has now quite outgrown its capacity to accommodate the congregation. This has led to the building of the handsome and commodious new Trinity Church at the corner of Simcoe and Rubidge Streets.

Bordeaux, Sept. 19.—The following personal experiences, furnished by German prisoners, are published officially:

A German artillery officer writes that modern war is the greatest of follies. Companies of 250 men in the 10th army corps have been reduced to 70 men, and there are to-day companies of the Guards commanded by volunteers of one year, all the officers having disappeared.

Another German officer, who was captured at Rheims, said that for tactical reasons the Guards had to retreat. "We had many killed and 800 injured. General Von Schack and a colonel of the 2nd Regiment of artillery of the Guards are among the killed."

The following is from a letter written by a lieutenant of German artillery: "Nearly all our horses have fallen. We fight every day from five in the morning till eight at night, without eating or drinking. The artillery fire of the French is frightful. We get so tired that we cannot ride even at a walk. We hope for a decisive battle to end the situation. for our troops cannot rest. We do not receive any more mail, for the postal auto corps have been destroyed."

An officer of the Prussian Guards Regiment said: "My regiment left for the front with 60 officers. It counts to-day only five. We underwent terrible trials."

SAVAGES COMMIT ANOTHER CRIME AGAINST HUMANITY

London Times' Correspondent Says Huns Hanged Mayor of Cathedral Town, Shelled the Main Street and Burned the Buildings---Many Children Struck.

LONDON, Sept. 19.—The London Times' special correspondent in France says:

"I spent many hours at Senlis today and will recount the story as I heard it from those who lived through the dreadful procession of days.

On Saturday, Sept. 5, the Germans reached the beautiful old cathedral town and entered into occupation. Arrogant, as usual, they immediately issued a proclamation to the inhabitants, calling upon them to submit absolutely and to offer no sort of resistance on pain of severe reprisals.

"The inhabitants closed themselves in, terrified of the result. Their fears were well-founded.

"Furious, the conquerors marched instantly to the house of the mayor, their hostage, arrested him and conveyed him to the military headquarters, where he was imprisoned for the night. On Wednesday a court-martial sat to decide his fate. A few minutes later this brave man died splendidly and then the Huns fell to on the bloody repast prepared for them. Great guns were turned on the town of living men, women and children. Shells crashed into houses, into shops, into the station. At Chantilly, seven kilometres away, the inhabitants saw a great column of black smoke curl up into the air. They guessed the horrible truth. Senlis was burning.

"From the shattered houses men and women ran, and wounded and terrified children screamed among the ruins of their homes, but the bombardment went on till the principal street of the town was shattered, till the railway station was reduced to a few charred walls, till the exquisite tower of the cathedral had been smashed and broken, though, happily, not demolished."

A courier just arrived from Brussels bringing important despatches says that the Belgians expect to see Brussels treated as Louvain was before the Germans evacuate the city. He says that all important public buildings, including the Palais de Justice and the largest and most imposing private residences, are already mined by the Germans in preparation for blowing up, while school houses and many other buildings are filled with straw ready for the torch. The courier says that the Germans have mined all roads leading into Brussels, but the Belgians think that the Germans intend to make their principal stand on the line of Namur and Liege, as forts and other defences are being reconstructed, the work going on night and day.

A despatch to The Temps at Bordeaux from Troyes says:

"In the last body of prisoners brought to Troyes were seventeen Imperial Guardsmen, who were captured in the woods near Vitry-le-Francois, Department of Marne. Attached to their sleeves by pins were Red Cross insignia, to which, it is suggested, they had no right. They have been sent to a French ambulance corps, where their qualifications may be tested.

Jurists Should Inquire.

LONDON, Sept. 19.—An enquiry by American jurists into the allegations of German disregard for the rules of civilized warfare is suggested by the Weekly Spectator in its current issue:

"We cannot ask President Wilson or the American Government to appoint such a committee of enquiry," The Spectator says: "They would naturally be afraid of annoying the German Government by so doing, and of imperilling that strict, nay, anxious, neutrality which they desire to maintain in the case of the German empire. We do not see, however, why the French, British and Belgian Governments should not privately invite three American jurists of high distinction to undertake the work of discovering whether the Germans have respected and are respecting the agreement made at The Hague in 1899 and 1907, and also those rules of civilized warfare which generally are respected by belligerents, and to report whether any infringements of these conventions and the rules have taken place."

COMMISSION IS COMPLETE

A. W. Wright and Geo. A. Kingston on Workmen's Board

TORONTO, Sept. 19.—The personnel of the Workmen's Compensation Commission is now complete. The Ontario Government announced last evening that A. W. Wright and Geo. A. Kingston will serve with Chairman Samuel Price, K.C., of St. Thomas, in this court, which opens on Jan. 1. Alexander Whyte Wright has been chosen as the second member and vice-chairman of the commission. He is known as one of the first and strongest advocates of public ownership in Ontario, a thoughtful writer on economic questions and a careful executive. Born at Elmira, Ont., about 70 years ago, his life has been largely spent in Canada.

G. A. KINGSTON.

The third member of the commission, Geo. A. Kingston, is 45 years of age, and has lived in Toronto continuously since 1889. He was born near Stirling, in Hastings County.

Samuel Price, K.C., whose appointment as chairman of the commission was announced July 21, is eminent among the lawyers of the province. He lives in St. Thomas, and specializes in acturial and statistical work.

NOT ON THE PROGRAM

Two gentlemen connected with the Farm and Dairy of Peterborough met with an exciting experience in Smith township on Monday afternoon. The horse was feeding along the road, when it became frightened and started off down the road at a terrific pace. On reaching Mr. Wm. Hampton's farm it turned and crashed through the gate, running down the lane until it was stopped by going against the shed, being knocked unconscious. The two men quickly arrived on the scene and first aid remedies were applied, with the result that the animal was soon able to stand on its legs. The horse escaped serious injury, the buggy was only slightly scratched, and the two men proceeded joyously on their way.—Lakefield News.

WHAT IS THE BOARD OF TRADE DOING?

WHAT IS THE MATTER with the Peterborough Board of Trade? What has it been doing for the city? We notice that Hamilton has secured this year two new large and important industries.

The Proctor & Gamble Company of Cincinnati has completed arrangements to build a plant in Hamilton at a cost of $250,000 to $300,000, and expects to employ from 400 to 500 hands in the manufacture of soap, perfumery and various other household commodities.

The largest steel goods manufacturers in America, the Stanley Works of Connecticut, will at once establish a large plant in Hamilton for the handling of their Canadian business. The Canada Steel Goods Company of that city has been absorbed by the new organization.

It is to be noted that both these important concerns have established factories in Canada to handle their growing Canadian business. There are many such concerns still to come to Canada and build big factories here, and Peterborough should look out for some of them. Hamilton has many advantages as a manufacturing centre, and Peterborough has also all the essentials necessary. This city has splendid shipping facilities, excellent factory sites of the size required by large concerns. It has cheap electric power right at its door. It has a reasonable tax rate, a pleasant location, a progressive community. With all these advantages, why are we not securing new industries? We do not know whether the Hamilton Board of Trade was instrumental in getting those new industries or not. The point is, Hamilton got them, and secondly, we are hearing very little of Peterborough's organization. It, too, may be doing something, but where are the results? The time is exceptionally important now, owing to the depletion of Germany's trade and the possibility of new concerns manufacturing things that this country formerly imported from German and Austrian cities. If we want new industries in Peterborough, it would be the part of wisdom to go after them.

A PLATFORM FOR ELECTRIC RAILWAYS.

ONE OF THE RESULTS of the use of electric power has been a great development of street car and suburban lines. While street cars were in operation before electric power was used to drive them, it was electrical energy that brought them into such general use on this continent. From their great development arose the question of considering them a public utility, and from this has followed the problem of whether this utility should be publicly or privately owned.

Next month, the American Electric Railway Association will hold its Annual Convention in Atlantic City. The dates are October 12th to 16th, and a committee will present for consideration a Platform of Principles embracing what the comittee believes to be a statement of the relations that should exist between public utilities and the public.

Public relations is the all-important topic in public utilities' affairs at this time. Drastic measures aimed at public utility corporations have made it of the greatest importance to operators and investors alike that in the readjustment that is now going on all along the line the case of the utility should be properly presented to the people of the country, and the American Electrical Railway Association has come to the conclusion that the first step in such a campaign should be the adoption of a platform which will embody what it believes to be fundamentals underlying any effective readjustment of the relations existing between the utilities and the public.

Among the addresses will be one by R. B. Stearns, of Milwaukee, concerning the experiment now being conducted in that city with the zone system of railway fares. This is the system in general use in European countries, instead of the flat-rate system common to the United States. Milwaukee is the first city where it has ever been carried out on anything like an extensive scale, and railway men are watching the experiment with the closest interest, as a possible remedy for conditions arising in this country from the expansion of the cities, the corresponding growth in the length of haul, and the consequent cutting down of the per passenger revenue, which it is believed has had much to do with the present depression in railway extension. A falling-off in new construction in electric railways is giving railway men much food for thought, and the causes are being sought for in many directions, many of the financiers believing that the tendency of regulating bodies in the restriction of earnings being the fundamental reason for the marked decrease.

Whatever one may think of the problem of public ownership of electric railways, particularly within cities, the railway men are taking a sensible step in adopting a platform. There are two sides to every question. The public has tried to remedy its grievances by a resort to public ownership. If each side understood the other better, perhaps better results would be obtained under private ownership. Often bitter disputes are a result of misunderstanding more than real grievances. However, the public will await the platform to be decided on, with interest.

IRELAND FOOLED THE GERMANS.

ONE OF THE THINGS that Germany strongly counted upon was that Ireland would, in its troubled condition, keep Great Britain from engaging in the contest. The fact was that the war drew the Empire together like a colossal magnet, and Ireland, where there was so much talk of civil war, was as strongly united with England as any part of the Empire. That is one of the most amazing features of the war.

The manifesto delivered by John Redmond recently is indicative of the fact that however strongly, and even bitterly, men of the Empire may differ politically, when it comes to a question of war, they stand shoulder to shoulder against Britain's enemies, wherever they may be.

"The democracy of Great Britain has kept faith with Ireland, and it is now the duty of honour for Ireland to keep faith with them," said John Redmond, the Irish leader, in a manifesto, in which he calls on Irishmen to bear their share in the war in which the Empire is engaged.

> "The Irish people," Mr. Redmond continued, "know and appreciate the fact fully that at last, after centuries of misunderstanding, the democracy of Great Britain has finally and irrevocably decided to trust them and give them back their national liberties.
>
> "By overwhelming British majorities a charter of liberty for Ireland has three times been passed by the House of Commons, and in a few hours will be the law of the land. A new era has opened in the history of the two nations.
>
> "During the long discussion on the Irish problem in Parliament and on the platform we promised the British people that a concession of liberty would have the same effect in Ireland as in every other part of the Empire, notably in recent years, in South Africa, that dissatisfaction would give way to friendship and good-will and that Ireland would become a strength instead of a weakness to the Empire."

EDITORIAL NOTES.

A HARVARD scientist says that we would be more healthy if we sat on the floor instead of on chairs. Since Professor Muensterberg began justifying the Germans, a good many Harvard professors are making one-ring circuses of themselves. — Toronto News. Yes, and they don't get a full house at that.

TORONTO UNIVERSITY is deeply interested in the European war. It has, we understand, French professors fighting for the Allies and German professors fighting for the Germans. Thus, Toronto University is bound to win, no matter how the battles go.

Canada's Devotion.

(Rochester, N. Y., Herald.)

There is no legal process by which Great Britain can command a single Canadian soldier to enter the field in her aid or even in her most needful defence. Great Britain cannot legally take a dollar of Canada's money for this or any other war without Canada's consent. All must be given voluntarily, if it be given at all. Yet men and dollars are given to the limit of Canada's power to give, just as if Great Britain had both physical and legal power to exact them. Indeed, it is possible that they are given more freely in this way, for what a man gives because he wants to give is likely to be greater than what he gives under force.

All in all it is a noble picture of devotion to her motherland which Canada offers to the gaze of her admiring and unenvious neighbour.

German Idea of "Strength."

(Jerome K. Jerome, in London Daily News.)

In Koln, a dear old German professor, kindest and simplest of men, took me to dine at a restaurant not much frequented by the stranger. He had been a guest of mine in England. I knew him for a high-bred, courteous gentleman, and it surprised me somewhat to find him shovelling his food into his mouth now with his fork, now with his knife. I looked about me. Most of the men were feeding the same way; doing it ostentatiously, it seemed to me. He intercepted my look. "We know better. We do it on purpose," he laughed. "Man is becoming too finicking," he continued in a graver tone. "It is little things that mould a character. It doesn't do to think too much about being 'nice.' Civilisation carried beyond the essentials, weakens a race. It is not wise to get too far away from the animal. Coarseness—a touch of the savage; they are not good things in themselves, but they make for strength."

OLD FURNITURE

By Walt Mason

The women are hunting for antique mahogany, old junk of that sort in our households is piled; the prices, once low, are no longer toboggany, but higher they soar, as the women grow wild. Beds, for a century wabbly and rickety, dressers and chairs that are all on the blink; the owner of these is so proud and persnickety! She asks a big price and we cough up the chink. Those creaking old beds that are wide and commodious, fitted with ropes and the old-fashioned slats! Always they seem to me wretched and odious, but when I say so, the women cry "Rats!" Bureaus so punk that they make a man serious, wapper-jawed things, an offence to the eye, send the wild dames into spasms delirious; "oh, what a sumptuous relic," they cry. How you would like to destroy all the furniture gathere from junk piles in country and town! But if you heap it around you and burn it you're apt to retire with a dent in your crown. Rosewood, mahogany, walnut and hickory, anything handed from ages of yore! Sadly I'm drinking my flagon of chicory, wishing the women were lucid once more.

LATEST NEWS PARAGRAPHED

A despatch from Vienna says the Austrian Foreign Office has officially denied reports that Austria made overtures for peace.

Among those killed in the battle now progressing in France was Capt. Wedige Von Medel, personal aide of Crown Prince Frederick William.

The speech from the throne at the opening of the Holland States General, emphasized the necessity for the strictest neutrality in the present war.

The German consul-general at Amsterdam announces that there is no truth in the report that Germany offered King Albert of Belgium separate peace terms.

German military authorities occupying the territory around Kalisz, in Russian Poland, have called to the colors all the German inhabitants there between the ages of 16 and 45.

An explosion of several thousand pounds of guncotton at the plant of the Wright Chemical Co. of Springfield, N. J., destroyed part of the plant. Three workmen were killed.

The million dollars the Montreal branch of the Canadian patriotic fund began on Monday to gather in seven days was guaranteed yesterday afternoon, and it is likely that another quarter million will be collected.

SCOUTS OF THE AIR

Some of the Disadvantages of Dirigibles — Aeroplanes Fly Higher.

So striking is the part played by aircraft in the war that army officers of neutral nations already are calling the attention of their Governments to the fact that no army is fully equipped or prepared for war if the new air arm has been neglected.

In The Journal of the Royal Artillery of Great Britain there appeared in a recent issue an article on the importance of aircraft in war, by Col. H. S. Massy of the British Army, one of the leading English authorities on military aeronautics.

"The armies and navies of the world," Col. Massy said, "have now at their disposal three classes of aircraft which before long they will be able to use effectively for offensive as well as defensive purposes. These three classes of aircraft are the airship, the aeroplane, and the seaplane. The airship, as you know, derives its 'lifting power,' or sustentation, from the light hydrogen gas inclosed within one or more gas-tight bags or envelopes. If we remember that it requires about thirteen cubic feet of hydrogen—which is the lightest gas known—to lift one pound weight into the air, we can easily realize that airships, if they have to carry a numerous crew, must of necessity be very bulky. The great size of the airship is naturally a disadvantage; and in order to be fairly safe from special artillery fire, airships must be made to travel comfortably at a height of at least 5,000 feet.

Aeroplanes and seaplanes, on the other hand, deriving their sustentation from the action of the air on their wings, can be made much smaller, more compact, and stronger than airships. Whereas a given type of airship carrying a certain load can be made to travel at greater altitudes only by increasing its bulk, an aeroplane is made to rise higher by increasing the power of its engine.

"The increase in the size of an airship leads to a considerable increase in the 'dead weight' to be lifted, as well as to a decrease in the strength of the construction and a greater difficulty of proper handling; while the increase in the power of the motor of an aeroplane leads, generally speaking, to a stronger construction and to a much safer machine, provided the motor is reliable and possesses sufficient flexibility, that is, capable of giving a wide range of power. These advantages of the aeroplane and of the seaplane over the airship would seem sufficient to decrease the value of the latter as a war weapon."

Identifying German Soldiers

A feature of the German military system is the requirement that all soldiers on active service should wear around their necks labels with their names, regiment, and rank. In the event of disablement these are useful for purposes of identification.

AN EXPLANATION DEALING WITH RELIEF FUND

Editor Review :

Dear Sir,—Mr. A. Mowat, in a letter published last evening, asks two questions.

1. He asks if the fund now being collected will be used to relieve the needs of all classes.

The fund, as decided at the organization of the committee by resolution unanimously passed, is to "care for the families of those who have gone on active service in the war, and those needing relief in consequence of the war." That does not include all classes. There are a number of persons who are receiving and will need relief apart from the consequences of the war, and these cases will be attended to by the city through the charity board, as they have been for years. The fund will be used, as decided, to aid those dependent upon the soldiers on active service, and to give relief needed by persons whose need is caused by the war, through lack of employment, in consequence of industries being closed, or similar causes. The fund will be needed to care for the extraordinary cases calling for relief on account of the war; the city, through the charity board, will look after other cases as usual.

2. Mr. Mowat asks what amount will be required.

That is a question difficult to answer. So far the fund has only been used to relieve families of the soldiers, and $396 has been spent for that purpose, which is at the rate of $132 a week. It is expected that when the wives of the soldiers begin to receive their husband's pay, the demands upon the fund for this purpose will not be so heavy. But we do not yet know when that pay or the government separation allowance will be received, and, not knowing that, we cannot tell how long the full demand will continue. Then a number of British reservists went from Peterborough, and their families are here. The sum they will receive from the government will be much smaller than the amount the Canadians will receive and will probably be longer in coming. There are also one or two families of French reservists who must be provided for. We do know that the requirements for these purposes are and will be large, and that some of them, at any rate, will continue throughout the war, but, owing to the circumstances mentioned, it is impossible to estimate with any accuracy how much will be required. But it does certainly appear that all that will be subscribed will be needed, and more.

It is equally difficult to estimate how much will be required for consequential relief. Everyone knows that some of our largest factories are running light, and that very many workmen are out of employment. The city has taken strong measures to provide such employment as it can, but it can only give employment to a comparatively few and cannot continue it through the winter. So far the demands from this source have scarcely begun, but a long winter is coming on, with large numbers out of employment, and the need will be great. How great can only be told as the demands develop.

That all the help that can be procured will be needed appears evident.

Yours truly,
S. R. ARMSTRONG,
Secretary.

A Marriage of Convenience

By WILLARD BLAKEMAN

Pixley was putting the finishing touches on his education at Heidelberg, Germany, when he received a letter from his mother that his father was very ill. He was about to start for home when he received a cablegram directing him to await a letter where he was.

When the missive came it was accompanied by a very long one written by a lawyer. The letter from Mrs. Pixley, after exhausting matters incident to her husband's death, said, "I hope after you have read Mr. Conkling's letter you will act as he suggests."

Mr. Conkling's letter, summarized in a few words, was that George Pixley's father had entered into a manufacturing scheme with Edward Brown. Extensive works were about being completed when Brown died and left all his property to his only child, Alice. Additional capital was needed, but the death of both the principals had so complicated affairs that no one would loan money on the enterprise. The attorney said that if Pixley would return at once and devote himself to the business in question there was a hope of saving the money already invested. Miss Brown, aged twenty, was traveling in Europe. If Pixley could unite his and her interests there would be no difficulty in the way of carrying through the manufacturing scheme.

Nothing was said about how Pixley should identify his interests with those of Miss Brown, but Pixley conceived an idea of his own. But he must first form Miss Brown's acquaintance. Her mother's letter gave her location at Munich.

One day while Miss Alice Brown was listening to the orchestra in the Hofbrau in Munich she was pointed out to Pixley, who had recently arrived. She was sitting at a table on which were refreshments with an elderly lady (her aunt) and a boy of fourteen (her cousin). At an adjoining table sat a couple of German wasp waisted army officers. They had been drinking considerably, and one of them was ogling Miss Brown and talking to his companion in German, sounding her praises loud enough for every one near by to hear. Miss Brown as soon as she became aware that she was an object of admiration on the part of a man in his cups turned her back upon him.

Pixley was a witness of all this; also that the officer continued his remarks after the young lady had turned her back on him. Pixley, who understood and spoke German, also heard him make some derisive remarks about her, indicating at the same time that he knew she was an American and did not understand German. Pixley advanced to the officers' table, tossed a card on it, then, turning to the party insulted and raising his hat, said:

"You are evidently annoyed here. Will you permit me to escort you to another table?"

The offer was accepted, and when they reached a new position Pixley was invited to remain with them. While they had seen him drop his card on the table at which the two officers sat, none of them knew that it was a challenge to fight a duel.

Americans abroad become readily acquainted, and there was an especial reason why they should do so in this case. The elderly lady asked Pixley to call upon them the next day at their hotel, and he promised to do so, but he neglected—through an oversight they supposed—to give his name. When they parted Miss Brown gave Pixley a look which was intended to convey her thanks for the service he had rendered them.

The next evening he called and betrayed what had happened by a long narrow patch over his left cheek, indicating that it covered a gash. Miss Brown was puzzled and inquired if he had met with an accident. In reply he handed her a little note written in German and translated it for her. It was an apology from the officer who the night before had insulted her. Something popped into Miss Brown's head.

"Have you been fighting a duel?" she asked.

"Yes."

"And this apology has been forced."

"No; it was written voluntarily and after the fracas."

"Heavens! Did you kill him?"

"Oh, no! I am a member of a Heidelberg dueling corps. He is an indifferent swordsman. I eluded injuring him by giving him an opportunity to draw a little blood. I only wished to teach him manners. I didn't even scratch him."

Miss Brown's tongue seemed paralyzed for a time; then she said in a low voice:

"And you did all this for me?"

"I would have done it for any lady, but it gave me inexpressible happiness to do it for you."

Pixley, having thus by a fortunate circumstance made a fine start in a courtship, pushed on rapidly for a few days, when he no longer found it impossible to withhold his name.

"Pixley!" repeated Miss Brown. "Why, that was the name of my father's partner."

"Was your father James Young Brown?"

"Yes."

"What a coincidence!"

Miss Brown went back home as Mrs. Pixley, but never knew that her marriage was one of convenience. It turned out a happy one, however.

TALES TOLD BY SOLDIERS FROM THE BATTLEFIELDS

The tales told by the men who have been in the fighting and have been wounded for their country are even more interesting than are the human interest touches which come in the letters from "Tommy" and J. "Jack." Take for example the men at the London hospital: One picture was typical. A Scots Guardsman, wounded in the leg, leaned on his elbow, giving a graphic description of the fighting to his father. His wife, drinking in every word, sat, with the baby on her knees. A little girl of three sat on the bed, industriously munching an apple. Happy those with their own people beside them; wistful the looks of the others. To these men a war chat with a privileged visitor was more welcome than grapes, more gratifying than cigarettes. Every man to whom I spoke declared, in the most matter of fact but convincing way that he hopes to be cured soon and to be "at 'em again."

Merriest of all the patients was a young drummer of the Manchesters. "We lay with two grand regiments, the Argylls and the Middlesex. First wounded man that fell I picked up his rifle. I was in five battles, or as you might say one battle that lasted for five days. I was behind the line; then a German missed the army and hit me. Worse than that he smashed the rifle I had found. The German rifle fire is rotten, but their machine guns and shrapnel are good."

"My Captain."

"I fought at Mons," says a corporal. "We had not been there half an hour before we were in the firing line. They blazed at us from 350 yards and as fast as we shot one lot down another came up. I got it in the calf. We retired altogether. My captain put me on his horse and led it for twenty miles, until we got on a train, which took me to hospital. Then I was brought home."

"I got it in the left shoulder," said another. "I did not know it until I found it was hard to life my rifle; then I felt my tunic wet and sticky. I am very comfortable here, but I would rather be out again, and I think it won't be long. I saw the Germans mowed down by our machine guns in the streets of Landrecies."

Most of the soldiers in the hospital have a little Union Jack pinned to their breasts. Wounded, or well, they keep the flag flying.

SOLDIERS THREE.

Three wounded British soldiers were on a train going to Havre.

One was a big, bronzed Coldstreamer, one a Welsh Fusileer with a week's growth of beard, the third a small Irishman of the Dublin Fusiliers, wearing a tiny scrap of emerald ribbon on the breast of his unbuttoned tunic, under which I could see the beads of a rosary round his neck. Tousled and unkempt these British soldiers were, and wounded all three.

It was the Irishman who told the most.

"Of course, they shoved us back, sir," he said, "there were so many of them. But we're thinning them out all right. And we're losing men, too. But we gave them something, too, so we did now: shot 'em as fast as we could, and they coming on and climbing over their dead to get at us. Oh, we held them all right.

"Then they came on our bayonets. Squealing and holding up their hands they were, and those at the back shoving them on all the time. Fast as we could throw 'em off our bayonets the way we could to get at the next one. It was like tossing hay."

The little Irishman pointed his wounds out. "First I got this one, then this, then this. Then we had the order to go back, so back we came—that is what was left of us. I rather think our commander was expecting reinforcements, but anyway they never came."

"We Never Got Our Tea."

The man paused a little as though his mind was travelling over the things he had seen. Then he began again. "In the trenches for hours we were, and raining all the time, and they didn't come. We came out to get a bit to eat and a rest, and while the tea was boiling they attacked us. Sheer bad luck! We never got the tea.

"This happened last Monday up near St. Quentin. Since then I've been making my way to the military hospital. Twice I've taken the wrong train, and then I fell in with these two boys here and they're going along to hospital too. French is it? Not a word do we speak between the three of us, but we shall get there all right.

"It is the bad travelling and the lack of sleep that pulls you down. Then we're not used to the wine and stuff that people give us; but there, we shall soon be all right again.

"Devils They Are."

"On my thigh? Oh, that's a bit of shrapnel; the other two in my legs are bullets. Shoot, is it? They can't shoot for nuts, but their artillery's good. Devils, that's what they are. No game is too low for them to play. Sent Red Cross wagons over, they did and suddenly open fire from inside them. And they kill the wounded, too, and don't make prisoners.

"Speak English, a lot of them do. Didn't they strip the very tunics off our dead and come creeping up to the French—the 57tht of the Line it was—talking English and masking the advance of the others? The French let them up quite close and got very badly cut up.

"They kill and maim the children, too, not to speak of the women. Just for the sport of the thing, they seem to do it. Ah, but we've got them all right. We retreated in good order, the Frenchmen are coming in from the east and we are drawing them on always. They have failed and we're going to smash them."

Fear of "Bright Bits of Steel."

From "somewhere in France" Private P. McGlade writes to his mother in Ireland. In his letter he says:

"I got your letter with the Freeman, and the report of Johnny Redmond's great speech in the Parliament House why Irishmen should stand up for little Belgium, and it's glad we were to hear the fine words when Paddy Byrne read it out for 'A' Company in camp.

. . . We were all beat up after four days of the hardest soldiering you ever dreamt of . . . I am glad to say we accounted for our share of the German trash, who are a poor lot when it comes to a good square ruction in the open.

We tried hard to get at them many's a time, but they never would wait for us when they saw the bright bits of steel at the business end of our rifles.

Some of them squeal like pigs on killing day when they see the steel ready.

"Some of our finest lads are now sleeping their last sleep in Belgium, but, mother dear, you can take your son's word for it that for every son of Ireland who will never come back there are at least three Germans who will never be heard of again."

Revenge for the Irish.

In a letter to his mother, Private A. McGillivray, a Highlander, says:

Of my company, only ten were unhurt. I saw a handful of Irishmen throw themselves in front of a regiment of cavalry who were trying to cut off a battery of horse artillery. It was one of the finest deeds I ever saw. Not one of the poor lads got away, but they made the German devils pay in kind, and, anyhow, the artillery got away to account for many more Germans. Every man of us made a vow to avenge the fallen Irishmen, and if the German cavalrymen concerned were made the targets of every British rifleman and gunner they had themselves to thank. Later they were fully avenged by their own comrades, who lay in wait for the German cavalrymen. The Irish lads went at them with the bayonet when they least expected it, and the Germans were a sorry sight."

Letters From Sailors.

Ted——(H.M.S.——, destroyer):

Our greatest danger lies at night time. It requires everybody to be on the top line and have his eyes strained through inky darkness to try and detect a vessel without lights. You imagine you can see Dreadnoughts, cruisers, gunboats and destroyers. You cannot be too careful. We are allowed to lie down, fully dressed, by our guns, with one of the gun's crew on the look-out. We are all a jolly, happy crowd, and to be among us you would not fancy we were at war, although there are lyddite shells and quick-firing cartridges by you everywhere.

J. Hall (H.M.S.——):

We've had no luck. Our sister ship has been luckier. She actually caught sight of the German battleship, but you can always bet on Herr What's-his-name getting out of the way when there's fighting in view.

W. Bishop, engaged with the Fleet, writes to his brother and sister in London, as follows:

If only those damned Germans would come out of the Kiel canal we would soon make sausages of their navy. What a strain for the lads lying in wait. My boy Bill is in amongst them—like father like son, never content until he is in the thick of it.

A bright London tar, the son of a Mrs. Field, writes:

Don't worry, dear mother; I shall have a medal yet, and perhaps a wooden leg!

THE BLOOD IS THE STREAM OF LIFE

Pure Blood Is Absolutely Necessary To Health

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" PURIFIES

These Wonderful Tablets, Made of Fruit Juices, Are The Best Of All Tonics To Purify And Enrich The Blood.

Pure, rich blood can flow only in a clean body. Now, a clean body is one in which the waste matter is regularly and naturally eliminated from the system. The blood cannot be pure when the skin action is weak, when the stomach does not digest the food properly, when the bowels do not move regularly, when the kidneys are strained or overworked.

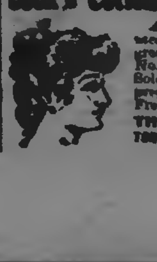
Pure blood is the result of perfect health and harmony of stomach, liver, bowels, kidneys and skin.

"Fruit-a-tives", by their wonderful action on all these organs, keeps the whole system as clean as Nature intended our bodies to be clean.

"Fruit-a-tives" tones up, invigorates, strengthens, purifies, cleans and gives pure, rich, clean blood that is, in truth, the stream of life.

"Fruit-a-tives" is sold by all dealers at 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50 trial size 25c. or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Cook's Cotton Root Compound.



A safe, reliable regulating medicine. Sold in three degrees of strength—No. 1, $1; No. 2, $3; No. 3, $5 per box. Sold by all druggists, or sent prepaid on receipt of price. Free pamphlet. Address: THE COOK MEDICINE CO., TORONTO, ONT. (Formerly Windsor.)

Milady's Mirror

Knowing How to Stand Correctly.

In the correct standing position the chest is held high and thrown out strongly, the abdomen drawn in, the chin in toward the chest, with the body held erect and leaning slightly forward, says a writer in the Woman's Home Companion. The weight of the body is equally distributed upon both feet, either with one foot in advance of the other, as in the military "at rest," or with heels together, as in figure. In the military carriage the body is bent farther forward than in the ordinary walking posture. The cadet gets his erect posture not so much by the physical exercise he takes as by constantly being reminded by his officers that he must hold his body erect.

There are three ways to tell whether you are carrying yourself properly. Stand with the back to a wall which has a smooth surface with the head, shoulders, hips and heels touching the wall. Try to maintain this position at all times. Another way is to lie on the back, note the posture of the head, shoulders, chest and hips, arise and assume the same posture. Still another is to practice balancing a moderately heavy book on the head. Place a soft cushion on the head and the book on top, as this gives the book more surface upon which to rest and is more easily balanced.

Keeping the chest high and the body erect is an excellent exercise and should be cultivated.

The Vinegar Bath.

For the tourist or vacationist who has no bathroom privileges a huge bowl, or, better still, an old fashioned foot bathtub, is essential. With the aid of either of these she can sponge in cool water in the morning and in warm at night.

If her skin is sluggish and she has a generally rundown feeling in hot weather let her try the vinegar bath. For this allow a pint of pure cider or wine vinegar to two gallons of water, which is about what is needed for the average sponge bath. Put this into the basin and stand in the tub. Use a large sponge and saturate it with the water and vinegar. This should be pressed over the spine.

Repeat this several times and then proceed the same way, pressing the sponge to the base of the brain and on the shoulders until the body has been literally showered with vinegar and water.

The body is then patted, not rubbed, dry, and the patient should lie down at once and rest. Two vinegar baths a week are sufficient.

Summer Care of the Eyes.

It behooves the summer girl to rest her eyes as well as her body. She should make a point of sleeping so that the light shines over her head. It pays to invest in a dark green shade through which the light cannot penetrate and force the eyes into harness before she is ready to get up.

Many women have an idea that it helps the eyes to open them the first thing in the morning into an eye cup filled with some mild antiseptic. The best occulists disapprove of this. It washes out the natural secretions of the orb, and if a stimulant is needed for the lids it is much better to insert it with a glass dropper.

One of the most sensible fashions of summer is the fancy for lining hats and parasols with green. This throws a wonderfully restful light on the eyes and relieves them from the merciless glare of midsummer sun. Both pongee and white parasols can be had that show the lining or an edging of green.

Fighting Dust.

The first of summer evils for the skin is dust. In the hot, dry weather dust is blowing about everywhere and soon settles into the pores of the skin. If we allow it to remain there it can well be imagined what havoc it will work.

In the summer we should massage the skin frequently with good skin food. There is nothing so effective for thoroughly cleansing the pores. Do the massage at bedtime, rubbing and tapping the cream into the skin of the face and neck, then bathe face and neck in some tepid water to which about from eight to ten drops of tincture of benzoin have been added. This prevents the skin getting flabby.

Air in Sleeping Car.

No matter how carefully screened the windows of a sleeping car may be, dust and dirt will sift through the netting. So when you travel in a train at night you are forced to breathe in some unwelcome particles of soot and soil.

To keep out these particles carry a roll of cheesecloth or gauze with you and at night wet a square of it and tack it with thumb tacks or pins over the window screen. In the morning this square will be covered with soot and dust and your lungs will be free of just that much less. So will your clothes, which is another important consideration.

For Dull Eyes.

When the eyes are tired and dull, as after motoring, use either an eye lotion bath or one made of water to which a little boracic powder or witch hazel has been added. Keep the eyes open in the water. This both strengthens and brightens them.

THE REVEILLE

By Bret Harte.

Hark, I hear the tramp of thousands
And of armed men the hum;
Lo! a nation's hosts have gathered
Round the quick alarming
Saying, "Come,
Freemen, come!
Ere your heritage be wasted," said the quick alarming drum.

"Let me of my heart take counsel:
War is not of Life the sum;
Who shall stay and reap the harvest
When the autumn days shall come?"
But the drum
Echoed, "Come!
Death shall reap the braver harvest," said the solemn-sounding drum.

"What if, 'mid the battle's thunder,
Whistling shot and bursting bomb,
When my brothers fall around me,
Should my heart grow cold and numb?"
But the drum
Answered, "Come!
Better there in death united than in life a recreant,—come!"

Thus they answered, — hoping, faring,
Some in faith, and doubting some,
Till a trumpet-voice, proclaiming,
Said, "My chosen people, come!"
Then the drum,
Lo! was dumb,
For the great heart of the nation, throbbing, answered, "Lord, we come!"

Prisoners of War

York Castle, which is being used as a place of detention for prisoners of war, is one of the finest of Britain's old buildings. It is well situated for its purpose, being between the rivers Foss and Ouse. Its walls enclose no fewer than four acres, with space to contain 40,000 persons. The castle dates back certainly from Roman times; possibly from the days of the ancient Britons.

Clifford's Tower, the chief of the existing buildings, was reduced almost to a shell by fire in 1648, but was surrounded by a strong projecting wall, erected in 1836. This tower was the scene of a massacre of Jews in the reign of Richard I., the number put to death being chronicled as 500. The Yorkshire Assizes are held in an outbuilding which dates back to 1777, and the prison, which is not yet a century old, is also within the castle space.

WEALTH OF TOGOLAND

African Colony Taken by Great Britain is Healthy Spot

Togoland, the fourth and smallest of German protectorates on the West Coast of Africa, which was taken by Britain by an expeditionary force of Gold Coast troops, has a coast line of about thirty miles only, but the strip of territory extends inland for about 350 miles. Whilst narrowing on the northern frontier to about thirty-two miles, it widens in the centre to fully 100 miles. It is calculated that Togoland comprises an area of nearly 34,000 square miles, and there is a population of fully 1,000,000.

There are fewer than 400 Germans in the colony. Most of these are at Lome, the chief town, and they consist of officials and traders. Togoland, like the other German West African colonies, suffered from the methods adopted in developing the territory; but it is a rich country, producing palm oil and palm nut kernels, cocoa, kola nuts, rubber, and the many fibres yielded by tropical forests.

In addition to building Lome on lines which render it one of the healthiest towns on the West Coast the Germans spent about $250,000 in the construction of a landing stage.

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills

are not a new and untried remedy—our grandfathers used them. Half a century ago, before Confederation, they were on sale in nearly every drug or general store in the Canada of that day, and were the recognized cure in thousands of homes for Constipation, Indigestion, Biliousness, Rheumatism and Kidney and Liver Troubles. To-day they are just as effective, just as reliable as ever, and nothing better has yet been devised to

RUSSIAN GENERAL CHECKS GERMAN OPERATIONS IN EAST

Petrograd Despatches Say Russian Army Has Gained Important Success Over Austrian Rear Guard, Taking Prisoners and Munitions.

LONDON, Sept. 19. — The following communication was issued yesterday by the chief of the general staff in Petrograd:

"On the front in Eastern Prussia the armies of Gen. Rennenkampff definitely stopped on Sept. 17 the offensive movement of the Germans. At several points the Germans are falling back and shifting to new positions.

"On the Austrian front the pursuit of the enemy continues. The Russians are approaching the defensive positions of Sienawa, Jaroslau and Przemysl (Galicia)."

Reports received from Petrograd yesterday say that the Russians have gained important successes over the Austrian rear guard. Convoys of two army corps with thirty guns and ammunition and 5,000 prisoners are said to have been captured. The whole of the Austro-Russo border between Yusevoff and Annapolis reported to be overrun by Cossacks who are leading the Russian advance.

The Russian army now in Galicia will be left there to complete its work, for, according to a Rome despatch, an army of 900,000 Russians is marching into Central Poland, followed by another army of 2,000,000, while a third army, also ggregating 2,000,000 strong, is coming from more distant regions and will reach the front in October.

There already are said to be a million Russians in Galicia and a half million in East Prussia. While these numbers seem enormous, they are considered probably a fair estimate of what Russia soon will have available for beginning her war.

It is said she will soon have 7,000,000 men on the move.

VIENNA, Sept. 19.—(Via Paris.)—In the complete absence of any satisfactory details regarding the progress of the campaign in Galicia and along the Servian frontier, the Austrian public is waiting with dumb patience for some definite news as to what is really happening.

Ever since it became known that Russia was making great headway in Galicia the comment in Vienna newspapers has been guarded, the editorials dealing chiefly with the German campaign in western Europe. The presence of 70,000 Polish refugees from Galicia, however, added to the constant arrival of trainloads of wounded, tends to offset this reticence.

The police recently issued a decree warning persons against spreading unfavorable war news under threats of the severest penalties. Spies are found everywhere, in cafes and on the streets, trying to overhear private conversations and then hastening to the police and denouncing suspected persons. Hundreds of arrests already have been made and many persons have been placed under more or less strict police surveillance.

Six Slav deputies in the Reichsrath have already been imprisoned. These include Dr. Kramarz, the Czech leader.

Austria May Make Peace Alone.

ROME, Sept. 19.—(Via Paris.)—An Austrian official denial from Vienna that any initiative toward peace has been taken by Austria is causing much comment here, because it contains no assurance that peace would be concluded together with Germany. The Austro-German treaty originally contained a clause specifying that the two countries should act reciprocally.

PROTECT HOMES

House Purchasers to Get Moratorium

TORONTO, Sept. 19.—Hon. R. A. Pyne, acting Premier of Ontario, announced yesterday the passage of a partial moratorium to protect small mortgagors. His statement said in part:

"It is, therefore, the intention of the Government at the next session of the Legislature to introduce an act requiring mortgagees, holders of agreements of sale, options and other like securities to secure an order from a judge before taking proceedings, either through the court or otherwise, to foreclose or forfeit such mortgages or securities for default in payments of principal, and giving judges power, upon a proper case being made out, to relieve from forfeiture and to extend the time for payment of principal moneys.

"It is not intended by such proposed legislation to in any way interfere with rent, interest or other payments of this character, or in any case where a judge does not feel that justice and right demand that some relief be given.

"It is the intention of the Government to make such legislation retroactive, and the judges and the legal profession are particularly requested to make note of the proposed legislation and of this fact."

New Dining Hall at Guelph College

Guelph, Sept. 19.—Starting Wednesday morning, the Ontario Agricultural College students commenced to flock back to the old grind. In the freshman class there are about 155 students this year, a slight decrease from last year. There will be about 150 sophomores, 100 third-year men and 50 seniors. None of the classes open until Monday next.

The new dining hall was used for the firset time yesterday. It is a decided acquisition to the group of college buildings, has a seating capacity of 500, and is furnished with 50 polished fumed oak circular tables, with chairs to match. Each table has space enough for ten persons to sit around it. The kitchen is situated in a convenient place, and an elevator makes it easy for transporting trays and other things up and down.

SCHEDULE OF RATES FOR DEPENDENTS OF THE SOLDIERS

St. Catharines, Sept. 19. — The committee appointed by the Lincoln county council to look after the dependents and families of the men outside the city who have left with the Canadian overseas force, has decided that the schedule of rates to be paid to the families or dependents of the volunteers and reservists who have gone to the front shall be as follows, subject to the approval and recommendation of the committee at any time, should such circumstances arise to justify so dong :

Wife or dependent, seventy-five cents per day.

Each child up to five years, ten cents per day.

Each child from five to ten years, fifteen cents per day.

Each child from ten to fifteen years, twenty cents per day.

WET GOODS WERE SHIPPED INTO BOBCAYGEON

Developments Expected to Follow Arrest of Express Messenger

(Lindsay Post.)

C. P. R. Detective Fletcher, who was instrumental in solving the 45th regimental train shooting episode, and who has beep working on a number of other important cases touching Lindsay, made an important arrest Thursday night for the Dominion Express Co., which, it is claimed, has been losing considerable revenue through methods practiced on the Bobcaygeon branch of the C. P. R.

The arrest last night was of Jos. W. Redmond, of Bobcaygeon, express messenger on the C. P. R. train between Burketon and Bobcaygeon.

He was charged with defrauding the Express company through carrying goods without billing them or turning in the revenue to the company.

He appeared in police court before County Magistrate Moore. He is a young man of about 25 and has a wife and little child.

Mr. L. V. O'Connor appeared for the Express company, and after summing up the case stated that there must be somebody behind the young man who was as guilty if not more guilty than the defendant.

Mr. O'Connor urged that he be given only a light sentence or let off on suspended sentence if he would assist the authorities in bringing to justice those others who were also implicated in the matter.

Previous to Mr. O'Connor speaking the young man had pleaded guilty to the court.

Magistrate Moore allowed him to go on suspended sentence, after Redmond had agreed to give the crown every assistance in bringing the others concerned to justice.

According to Detective Fletcher, who has been on the case, Redmond has been taking wet goods to Bobcaygeon for the past two years without making returns, although the company learned of it only a month ago.

Only one example was named in the evidence against him, but the method used was that a case of goods would be put on the train in Lindsay consigned to parties in Bobcaygeon. No billing would be made to the express company, but the messenger himself would look after the delivery, and for his trouble and risk was given one dollar for every case that passed through his hands.

In the event of Redmond not pleading guilty, it is probable the evidence brought forward to convict him would have implicated a number of Bobcaygeon and Lindsay people.

Further important cases are expected to develop from this in a few days.

BUSINESS CLOSED, PROPRIETOR AWAY ON ACTIVE SERVICE

The following item is taken from the Cheltenham (Eng.) Chornicle :

"At least one Cheltenham shop is closed in consequence of the proprietor having gone with the Territorials, for the blinds are down at the establishment of Mr. Sam Barton, tailor, of Suffolk-parade (son of the late Mr. Joseph Barton, a very well-known townsman), and a note states: 'This business is closed temporarily owing to Mr. Barton being called away on active service.' Mr. Barton is a lance-corporal in the 5th Gloucester (Territorial) Regiment."

MILITARY BULLY IS LAID BARE TO ALL THE WORLD

London, Sept. 19.—The Referee, in an editorial article, entitled "Lo, Dagon is Fallen and Broken in Pieces!" says :

"Many are the illusions regarding Germany which the Kaiser has smashed with a misdirected blow of his mailed fist. It is not too much to say that the belief in Germany's military might was a world-dominating obsession.

"On the strength of her reputation for possessing the most perfect military machine in existence she has repeatedly driven peace-desiring nations to the utmost limit of exasperation. The commonplace crowd of whom her culture was a matter of hearsay or indifference religiously believed in the greatness of her army and the military cunning of her war staff.

"Certain objections were lightly explained away as relating only to show movemnts exhibited to professional visitors at manoeuvres. The world never believed that a modern war lord, however, could be regardless of the expenditure of human masses of soldiers to modern rifle fire, not to speak of machine guns.

"Callousness we were not unprepared for in disciples of Bismarck, but the sheer madness exhibited by German generals in advancing in solid formation even upon forts whose shrapnel cut lanes through the ranks as a reaping machine mows down standing corn, was evidence that the boasted military genius of Germany had made no appreciable advance in forty years.

"As in 1870 weight was considered the overpowering factor, the weight of an enormously increased army, backed by an enormous weight of artillery, was to bear down all opposition.

"William II. saw no need for a Bismarck or a Moltke in his conquest of the world. His all-potent personality can tolerate nothing but sycophantic admiration and abject obedience. Himself and Krupp, the other evil genius of Germany, were all-sufficient as the mind and the power of the conquering host.

Officers, big and little, could devote themselves to hounding on the invincibles and to forwarding the glorious cause by encouraging the frightfulness of barbarism sanctified by the grand end in view.

"Krupp's part has been diabolically well done. If it has failed in what was expected of it, it is because the craven enemy would not, like Germany's brace automatons, face the shrieking death blast in a solid phalanx.

"The German officers have also done their best, and their worst, by their men and their enemies, but the cannon fodder is merely mortal. Its rifle's hooting is deplorable, and it has betrayed a very human dislike for sold steel at close quarters, having probably been assured that Krupp would never alloy the contemptible foe to get within prodding distance.

"Germany has imposed upon the world in many years, but in none so completely as in her fancied fighting power. Her political honesty has long been suspected, and her pretended devotion to the cause of peace has has never thrown Europe off its guard, but in the matter of arms she has deceived the whole earth till now. Her bullying has brought her little substantial profit, but she has unmistakably been regarded as a thoroughly capable bully.

"Yet even her military reputation appears to have rested upon a false foundation, and the shattered idol of Prussianism seems likely to be added to the heap of broken fragments, which is all that is left of Germany's boasted culture, good faith, and honor."

BARTLETT ON HIS WAY HOME

OTTAWA, Sept. 19.—Capt. Bob Bartlett, who was skipper on Stefansson's ship, the Karluk, has arrived at Nome, Alaska, on the American revenue cutter Bear.

This information was received yesterday by G. J. Desbarats, Deputy Minister of Naval Affairs, from Capt. Bartlett, who states in his telegram that those who survived the wreck of the Karluk are with him and are all well.

Capt. Bartlett says he is leaving Nome with the rest of the party on Sept. 25 for Victoria, B.C. On arrival there he will proceed to Ottawa without delay. The journey from Nome to Ottawa takes about three weeks.

A GERMAN VIEW

In an article on the war the Berlin "Vossische Zeitung" makes a bitter attack on Russia. "The Czar would not raise a finger to help France," it says, "but France must go to war, or thinks she must, because Russia wishes to extend her dominion over South-eastern Europe, and for that reason must first of all destroy Austria-Hungary. Her object is clear. It was set forth in the testament of Peter the Great and the Pan-Slavists have preached it for generations—'Constantinople!' Constantinople must be captured over Berlin and Rome.

"Woe to the independent Balkan states, but above all woe to Roumania, if Russia should ever emerge victorious over the Hapsburg monarchy!

"Woe, too, to the former great powers of Europe, which would become humiliatingly dependent on the empire of the Czar."

PATRIOTIC RELIEF FUND

The teams in several divisions have about completed their canvass. They have met with encouraging success.

All the teams are urged to complete their work in the week beginning Sept. 21st, and to hand in the completed lists by Sept. 29th.

These funds are to care for the wives and families of volunteers who have gone on active service, and of those who, in consequence of the war, are in need of relief.

Large sums will be required to prevent suffering.

Liberal contributions are urgently requested.

W. BULLER,
Chairman Patriotic Relief Fund Committee.

YOU CAN DEFY HEADACHE!

Yes you can, with a box of ZUTOO Tablets in your pocket or home.

Taken when you feel a headache coming on, one little tablet will ward it off—nip it in the bud. Taken later it will cure the headache in twenty minutes.

Why then continue to suffer when a box of ZUTOO will make you headache proof. You would be suprised to know how many people, who never before used a headache remedy, are now using ZUTOO Tablets. Why not you?

THREE BODIES WERE LOCATED IN ONE PLACE

Funeral of Drowning Victims Held at Belleville

The funeral of the three drowning victims of Belleville, the late Clair Jenkins, Fred C. Gerow and James White, was held yesterday at Belleville. The tragedy has cast a deep gloom over three families, and numerous friends of the young men. All three even had acquaintances in this city. The Belleville Ontario gives the following particulars regarding the recovery of the bodies:

About four o'clock yesterday afternoon the bodies of Clair Jenkins, Fred Gerow and James White, the three unfortunate victims of Sunday's drowning accident in the Bay of Quinte, near Baker's Island, were brought to the surface by Mr. Wm. Carter, and Messrs. Robert Day and George Williams. Three days of steady search were at last rewarded by the recovery of the remains from the muddy bed of that part of the bay.

The three bodies were found in the one place, evidently a hole of a ledge of rock not far from the place where they were believed to be. They had gone down near a buoy and been held in the mud.

Twelve or fifteen boats with several hundred hooks had worked over the same spot one thousand times, said Mr. Carter, but without avail. This leads to the opinion that the bodies were in a depression in the bed of the bay.

About 3:45 on Wednesday afternoon another plan was tried in order to locate the remains. A tug from the Weddell dredge circled at high speed around the buoy three times, churning and riling the water with the mud at the bottom of the bay. As it finished its third turn, Mr. Wm. H. Carter, the veteran boatman of Belleville, who has rescued scores of bodies from the Quinte, rowed in with his companion, allowing the iron to drag. All at once he felt the increased resistance, and pulling the rope to the top he found he had grappled one of the men by the trouser leg. It turned out to be that of Jimmy White. Before the body had been removed to a boat alongside Messrs. Day and Williams had brought to the surface at about the same spot the bodies of Jenkins and Gerow, both being together. It is imagined that the three went down in the same hole, and that Mr. Carter, with his hooks, pulled White away or that the movement of the water by the motion of the dredge had broken the hold.

From the appearance of the clothing and faces the bodies had evidently been lying in the mud. White was in his shirt sleeves, but Jenkins and Gerow had their coats on.

The bodies were in excellent condition after their three days' immersion.

When the 7th Fusiliers of London were on parade a street car broke the ranks and the parade. An action for damages has been instituted as a result by the officers of the regiment.

CHANGES HIS STORY, CHARGED WITH PERJURY

Blacklister Now Says He Was Supplied With Liquor Here

Herbert Landry appeared in police court on September 12th last and pleaded guilty to being drunk while on the prohibited list, saying that he had obtained his liquor in Lindsay. He was fined ten dollars and costs. In today's court he was up on a charge of perjury on account of swearing that he obtained his liquor in Lindsay, which is contrary to the truth as Landry later, while in the custody of the police, being unable to pay his fine, admitted to Chief of Police Thompson that the liquor had been supplied him by Elmer Liddell of Peterboro, and he also said that he had not been in Lindsay on the 11th of September.

Landry explained these admissions by saying that he did not know what he was talking about on the morning of the 12th of September.

SITE SELECTED FOR BUILDING

To Provide Accommodation for Salvation Army

Brigadier Rawling and Staff Captain Walton, of Montreal, who are in the city to assist Adjutant McElheney with the harvest festival services at the local Temple, made a trip to Brownton this morning, and the adjutant states that a site was selected for building purposes, in connection with the extension work of the local corps.

It will be some time yet before building operations are commenced. Accommodation is urgently needed, as at two points in the outskirts of the city, where services have been held for some time, the attendance has been very larg.

TRENT CANAL CONTRACT HAS BEEN COMPLETED

Mr. Wm. Rose, who has been cook, since last April, for the Randolph MacDonald company, which had the contract for the construction of the Trent canal from Healey Falls to Rice lake, writes that the contract has been completed. Their equipment consists of 2 dredges, 10 scows, 3 tugs, 1 steam drill and 1 derrick. This is all being moved to Hastings for repairs.

From Hastings the outfit will be moved to Washago, where the company has a $900,000 contract. About 75 men are employed there at present. The company will build about four miles of railroad next winter. From Hastings to Washago is about 180 miles by water, Lake Simcoe, which is 20 miles long, being one of the largest bodies of water to has been very large.

INDUSTRIAL ASSOCIATION

Steps Will be Taken to Form Branch in Peterboro

THE OBJECTS

The meeting called last evening in the Council Chamber for the purpose of forming a local branch of the Industrial Association of Ontario was very slimly attended, undoubtedly the Exhibition being too big a temptation for many citizens interested in the movement. His Worship Mayor Buller presided, and after briefly outlining the idea, read the following letter:

To the Mayors or Reeves of Ontario Municipalities:
Gentlemen,—

At a meeting attended by three hundred representatives of Ontario municipalities and public corporations, held in the City Hall, Toronto, on Tuesday, Sept. 1st, it was decided to organize an association to be known as the Industrial Association of Ontario, whose duty it shall be to investigate the unemployment situation in Ontario, and to devise and carry out plans for remedying it as far as possible. Reliable information received from many sources warrants the fear that on account of the war, the coming winter will witness unemployment upon a scale never before experienced in Canada. It is therefore essential that no time be lost in making preparations to deal with the situation.

It will be the object of the Industrial Association of Ontario to deal with this problem in a practical way, and the constant aim will be to provide remunerative employment as opposed to direct relief for the unemployed. "Work, Not Charity," is the motto of this association.

Officers were elected at the meeting in Toronto, as follows:

Patron — His Honour Sir John M. Gibson, K. C. M. G., Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario.

Honorary Chairman — Hon. W. J. Hanna, K. C.

Chairman — W. K. McNaught, C. M. G., Toronto.

Vice-Chairmen — E. G. Henderson, Windsor, President Canadian Manufacturers' Association; W. P. Gundy, President Toronto Board of Trade.

Treasurer — G. Frank Beer, Toronto.

In order to expedite the work of the Central Committee, every city or town in Ontario is requested to organize at once a local branch of the association, which will be affiliated with the central organization, and presided over by a chairman elected from amongst its own members at the first meeting. The Mayor or Reeve in each municipality should call the organization meeting, and the sooner it is called the more quickly will the Central Committee be able to formulate its plans.

In order to prosecute this work successfully accurate information is absolutely necessary as to the extent of unemployment, causes contributing to same, sources of employment available at present or in prospect, and a general forecast of the conditions in the respective municipalities. The first work of the local branch of the association will therefore lie in collecting data of this nature. A card containing questions covering the information necessary is enclosed herewith. It is highly important that the information in reply to these questions should be accurate, and to this end it is suggested that the municipalities have an unemployment census taken officially.

In order that the Central Organization may be a clearing house through which work can be provided for as large a number of unemployed as possible, cards will be provided, which the local branch will have each unemployed person in its district fill out. Local branches should make known to the secretary as soon as possible what number of these cards they will require so that they can be forwarded without delay. Cards should be filled out in duplicate so that the original can be kept by the local branch and the other copy forwarded to the Central Committee. To carry this out effectively it is advised that each municipality at once open an Employment Bureau.

The Executive further desire to point out that this association is formed primarily to endeavor to better industrial conditions in the Province of Ontario and that legal residents of the Province of Ontario will have first place in the scheme,—married men with families or single men supporting families, first of all, and the others afterwards as their necessity seems to require, and that unemployed laborers, who are not residents of Ontario, will be the last to be considered.

A formal report of the organization meeting held in Toronto, a summary of the situation as it appears to the Central Committee at present, together with suggestions for the relief work, will be forwarded to every municipality in the course of a few days. As soon as the committee has received accurate information from the municipalities on the cards supplied for that purpose, as to the extent of unemployment, it will be in a position to devise plans which may enable work to be provided for many now unemployed. The cordial sympathy and support of every municipality is essentia. in the successful carrying out of the plans of the association, and as the winter months are approaching, the organization of local branches and the collection of information should be pushed with the utmost despatch.

Yours faithfully,
W. K. McNAUGHT,
Chairman.

In connection with this letter, Mayor Buller urged that the work be gotten under way immediately, and he thought that the City Council might donate a small sum to get the work started, for it will necessitate a little capital.

The first step taken by the meeting was to adopt a resolution that a branch of the Industrial Association of Ontario be formed in this city, and then Mr. Basil D. Hall was elected chairman. As the number present was too small to do anything definite, it was decided to adjourn for a few days, and in the meantime the chairman will interview some of the manufacturers of this city and invite them to a meeting to be called probably the first part of next week.

At the next meeting steps will be taken to secure the necessary information to answer the following questions which have been asked by the Central Association:

Actual number of unemployed in your municipality?

How many are factory employees?

How many are unskilled workers?

How many factories in your municipality are:

(a) Closed down?

(b) Running with reduced forces or on reduced time?

(c) How many are running full time?

Reasons given for closing down or reduction?

Is your municipality employing as many men on municipal work now as usual? If not, why not?

What municipal work has been suspended since the war? State amount uncompleted in dollars.

Can your municipality provide employment for any outside men? If so, how many, and in what capacity?

Give amount of municipal work now on hand and to be completed (amount in dollars).

Give amount of municipal work considered necessary and expedient, if financing is made possible (amount in dollars).

Give amount of your municipal debentures authorized and still on hand.

Give amount of your municipal debentures (a) sold, (b) hypothecated.

What suggestions have you for work for the unemployed in general?

A card bearing the following queries will be filled out by every unemployed man in the city:

Name. Age. Married or single. Family, if any. Nationality. Residence. Trade or occupation. Last regular employment. Date of leaving. Cause of leaving. Have you had any experience at farm work? If so, state nature. Have you friends on farms in Ontario. If so, state where. Have you any income from investments or savings? Health and physique.

TRADES AND LABOR COUNCIL

Notes by Official Scribe.

Trades and Labor council notes

There was a very good attendance at the usual fortnightly meeting of the Peterborough Trades and Labor Council held this week in the Labor hall, George street. J. J. Hartley occupied the chair.

Labor Day Successful.

The secretary of the Labor Day celebration committee reported that the council would more than break even when the final bill had been paid. At the next meeting he hoped to give the balance sheet. The inclement weather had something to do with the gate receipts, but outside of that things were satisfactory.

A Case for the Factory Inspector.

Delegates reported the case of a local factory, having a government order to fill, which was working a night staff of girls and women from 7 p.m. to 7 a.m., for which a princely remuneration of 75c. was being paid. The president thereupon told the emergency committee to get busy, find out the facts, and, if necessary, to notify the factory inspector at Toronto.

The 10-hour day being enforced by the Paving company, in defiance of the 9-hour clause, was remarked upon.

The action of the emergency committee has already been recorded in the press.

Free Labor Bureau.

For the agent of the free labor bureau which the government intends establishing in this city, Thomas Palmer was the man the Trades and Labor council heartily recommended.

The Grand Opera House Again.

With the commencement of the theatrical season comes the old fight between the manager of the Grand and the locked-out stage employes. Representatives from the I.A.T.S.E. reported that Mr. Turner's letter of explanation in the press regarding the non-appearance of Mr. Hackett was erroneous.

Unclaimed Prize.

The first prize of the drawing contest, No. 1388, has not been claimed.

One Day's Pay by De Laval Office Staff

Every member of the office staff of the De Laval Co. gave one day's pay toward the Patriotic Fund yesterday. A very handsome sum was realized.

RATE IS LOWERED

At a special meeting of the North Monaghan council Friday night, in May's schoolhouse, at which all the councillors were present, the township rates were reduced to 3¼ mills, rescinding the rate of 5 mills decided upon on Monday last.

Reeve W. G. Howden opened the subject by complaining that the rates as struck at Monday's meeting were excessive, in view of present conditions. He thought it advisable to lower them.

Messrs. Dobbin and Robson moved that the township rates be left as struck.

Messrs. Foster and Young moved that the rates be changed to 3¼ mills.

Mr. Dobbin called for the yeas and nays, and the amendment, being put, the following vote was registered :

Yeas—Howden, Forster, Young.

Nays—Dobbin, Robson.

The amendment therefore carried.

This means that the overdraft from 1913, which had been provided for in the 5-mill rate, will be carried over until next year, as well as the $400 due on the stone crusher.

A communication was received from Messrs. Wood and Wearing in regard to Lockie's road, and on motion was referred to Mr. Peck, township solicitor, for advice.

REV. DR. BOWLES WILL PREACH

Chancellor of Victoria University at Charlotte St. Church

Rev. Dr. Bowles, chancellor of Victoria University, Toronto, will preach at Charlotte Street Methodist Church, Sunday morning and evening and on Monday afternoon, the corner stone of the new church will be laid by Mr. H. C. Cox, of Toronto. Rev. Dr. Chown, will have charge of the ceremony and he will be assisted by local ministers.

Rev. John Garbutt, president of Conference, will be unable to be present.

City Council Met to Pass Resolutions

At the special meeting of the city council last evening, resolutions dealing with the financial matters of the city were passed.

The public utilities commission was requested to move a hydrant from the front of the Quaker Oats Co. on Hunter street to the south side of the street. Another matter dealing with hydrants was the adopting of a recommendation from the fire, water and light committee to place a hydrant on Romaine street between the G. T. R. and Monaghan road.

The meeting further decided to construct a conduit for wires on Water and Aylmer streets, so as to be prepared to install city lighting after the pavement is laid.

BETTER BABY CONTEST FREE

Much interest is being aroused in the coming "Better Baby Contest" and the methods that are to be employed. Some ask, are there fees to be paid? There are absolutely no fees. Others fancy that mothers and babies, nurses and doctors will all meet in one common room and that there will be long hours of waiting until baby is examined. The committee have a better plan than that.

Mothers first enroll their babies (this takes place in the public library, upstairs, from 3 to 5 in the afternoon, commencing Sept. 21st), then these are classified according to their ages and a postcard is sent to the mothers, telling them on what day and hour to bring their babies for examination. The babies are examined as tenderly and carefully as they would be in their own homes. Each examining physician has a separate room and into this room are admitted only the mother, baby and professional nurse. The time of waiting will be short and can be well employed by talks with nurses, examining the baby's lafette, diet tables and seeing the proper way to wash, dress and put baby to rest. There will also be interesting posters around the room treating of baby hygiene.

All queries regarding this contest will be answered by calling up on the phone Mrs. (Dr.) Sutton, Stewart St., phone number 128.

Money by any other name would be as hard to get.

ENEMY'S ATTACKS REPULSED BY ALLIES AT ALL POINTS

Working From Strongly Entrenched Positions the Kaiser's Armies Endeavor to Take the Offensive But Are Driven Back---French and Pau on Right Wing Trying to Turn the Flank.

LONDON, Sept. 19. — The outstanding fact of the last 24 hours' fighting in France is the failure of the German arms to resume the offensive successfully. All troops at the front agree that recent attacks by them on the French and British armies have met with repulses. An assault delivered Thursday night, with Rheims as its objective, was beaten off after terrific fighting, with large bodies of troops participating. The German anxiety to stem the advancing allies is made increasingly evident by the massing of reinforcements along their entire battle line, extending from Noyon, on the River Oise, to the neighborhood of Metz.

An official communique issued yesterday says:

"The battle continued during the day of Sept. 17 along the front from the River Oise to the Woevre, without important changes in the situation at any point. On our left wing, on the heights to the north of the River Aisne, we have made slight progress against certain points. Three offensive counter-attacks undertaken by the Germans against the English army failed. From Craonne to Rheims we ourselves repulsed some very violent counter-attacks executed during the night. The enemy tried in vain to take the offensive against Rheims.

On the centre, from Rheims to Argonne, the enemy has reinforced himself by constructing important fortifications, and has adopted a purely defensive attitude. To the east of the Argonne, in the Woevre district, the situation is unchanged. On our right wing, in Lorraine and the Vosges, the enemy occupied positions organized on a defensive basis in the vicinity of the frontier."

The excellence of the German artillery fire and the number of heavy guns which they have been able to bring into action has rendered extremely hazardous the use of infantry and cavalry. The allies have greatly strengthened their artillery in the last day, and the battle is now largely an artillery duel. Occasional attacks by one side or the other of the most desperate character merely emphasises the conflict which will ensue when a turn of the tide comes in either direction.

Speculation as to the German plan of campaign is rife on all sides. It is said that the failure of the crown prince to make an impression on Verdun caused a complete upset of the Kaiser's plans, and the continued delay of his heir in retreating from an untenable position further complicated the campaign. He was left almost unsupported by the enforced retirement of Generals Von Kluk and Von Buelow on the German right. This flank seems to be the special objective of the allies. Both Sir John French and Gen. Paul Pau have concentrated their energies on perfecting a turning movement of the enemy's right similar to that carried out on the Marne. The principal results to date have been as light retirement of the Germans on the heights across the Aisne.

Military experts believe that unless the Kaiser's forces can make substantial headway in the next few days that they will be compelled to retire on the line of the Meuse, protecting their communications and attaining stronger defensive positions. On the other hand, if the allies lose, they must reform and fight the battle of the Marne over again. It is believed that the first phase of the campaign has gone heavily against the Germans.

In a speech from the throne, King George yesterday said: "My navy and army have with unceasing vigilance, courage and skill, sustained in association with our gallant and faithful allies, a just and righteous cause. From every part of my Empire there has been a spontaneous and enthusiastic rally to our common flag. We are fighting for a worthy cause, and we shall not lay down our arms until that purpose has been fully achieved."

Reports from Servian sources state that the Servian troops have evacuated Semlin, captured from the Austrians some days since. They claim continued successes at several points.

From official German sources, via Amsterdam, comes the following statement:

"In the battle of Sept. 17, between the Oise and the Meuse rivers, there has been no decisive victory. The indications are that the resistance of the enemy is beginning to decline. The effort made by the French, with great bravery, to break through the German extreme right wing has failed. The centre of the German army is slowly advancing. Sallies by the French division of Verdun have been repulsed without much trouble."

CAPTURE OF SHIPS PART OF WAR GAME

It is generally recognized as a sound principle of international law that an enemy's vessel is liable to capture either in territorial waters or on the high seas. It has been pointed out by a learned writer on the subject that in face of the results maritime capture has often produced it is idle to pretend that it is not among the most formidable of belligerent weapons; one cogent reason being that by rendering sailors prisoners of war it saps the offensive maritime strength of the belligerent to which the vessel belongs. It has been said that this principle has been weakened in modern times. In 1865 Italy adopted a marine code by which the capture of mercantile vessels of a hostile nation by Italian vessels of war was forbidden in all cases where reciprocity was observed, and a similar course was followed by Austria and Prussia in 1866. In 1870 Prussia exempted French vessels from capture without insisting on reciprocity. But special reasons may be assigned for the departure from old methods in those instances, an important consideration being the comparative maritime weakness of the powers concerned at that time. When we come to more recent times, we find that Count Caprivi, Chancellor of the German Empire, in 1892 pointed out that the changes which had come about in the methods of conducting a maritime war did not tend to favor the protection of private property at sea. He said in substance that not naval battles but either invasion or the destruction of the enemy's commerce would in future bring a war to an end. Invasion was often impracticable, and thus the destruction of trade was the one and only method to attain the object of the belligerent power.

Marine insurance is nowadays of an international character; and it is significant that English underwriters deposited some time ago at the Chamber of Commerce in Hamburg an undertaking in writing to fulfil their obligations to German creditors at the due date, war or no war. Such an undertaking could not be enforced at law in the courts of either country either during or at the conclusion of war, at any rate in respect of losses occurring while war was in progress. The courts do not recognize an alien enemy as having any legal standing whatever.

While, however, the enemy's vessels are liable to capture, and goods on board to confiscation, it is generally recognized that destruction is to be avoided wherever possible. Passengers on an enemy's ship would be liable to be disembarked at the earliest opportunity, and they would have no remedy, but they would run little risk of more serious consequences, since it is almost unthinkable that a passenger vessel would resist capture by a man-of-war. Still, it must not be forgotten that a vessel seeking to evade capture would be liable to be fired upon and possibly sunk.

EXCHANGE LISTS

Germany Offers to Advise Britain of Prisoners' Condition

LONDON, Sept. 19. — The official press bureau says the Government has received information that the German Government is prepared to communicate lists of British prisoners in their hands in return for similar lists of German prisoners there. It is contemplated that such lists, which will include information as to the physical condition of prisoners, will be interchanged periodically.

Arrangements are also being taken for the transmission to Germany of letters, parcels and money orders for prisoners.

The German Government intend to permit correspondence between British prisoners and their friends in England.

The Austrian Government, it is also announced, intends to grant similarw facilities with regard to prisoners in its hands.

NO DISMEMBERMENT.

Germany Will Not Give Up an Inch of Territory, Says Bernstorff.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—That Germany will refuse to consider any plan of peace that would deprive her of a single foot of territory was the emphatic declaration of Count von Bernstorff, the German Ambassador here yesterday.

"Disarmament and the suspension of the race for naval supremacy depends upon the sentiment with which peace is made upon all sides," said the Ambassador. "If one square inch of German territory is taken, the German nation will arm to the teeth again. A lasting peace is only possible if the allies recognize the policy of live and let live. Talk of crushing and dismembering Germany must cease. The world knows that Germany never wanted war and it must also realise that Germany is always ready for peace under honorable conditions. And I do not believe that Germany ever could be dismembered."

Count Von Bernstorff is now awaiting the allies' peace plan, it is stated here.

FOREIGN HOLDINGS OF FRANCE AND GERMANY

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Sept. 18.—Cables on Manitoba spring wheat were weaker today, at a decline of 6d to 9d per quarter. The demand was poor, and sales of a few ordered loads of new crop No. 1 northern were made at 39s for October-November shipment. There was some demand from exporters for wheat on spot, and sales of 60,000 bushels of No. 1 and No. 2 northern were made, and 40,000 bushels No. 2 Canadian western oats for prompt shipment from Fort William at 56½c. New crop No. 2 Canadian western oats were offered on spot for September and early October delivery at 57½c; No. 3 at 56½c, and No. 2 feed at 55½c, ex-store.

The export trade in flour was quiet, but there continues to be a fairly good demand for domestic account, and the undertone to the market is firm. Millfeed is fairly active.

The butter market is quiet, and prices would more likely be for round lots. At the auction sale today 27⅝c was bid for finest creamery and refused.

Belgium Deserted

All but Two German Army Corps Have Rushed to France

LONDON, Sept. 19.—The London Daily News has receivew the following despatch from its correspondent at Oudenarde, Belgium:

"Except for two army corps with their supports of marines and old men, which the Belgian army is keeping busy around Antwerp, the Germans have almost entirely left the country. Since last Friday they have been traveling southwest. Their numbers have been given at anything from 30,000 to 60,000. It is certain they have drawn every available man, with the exceptions mentioned, to the front, probably to help in the formation of some strong line of defence, which, taking into account the army's entire lack of support, must be a battleground of the greatest consequence in this section of the war.

If the allies carry this position the rest of the German journey through Belgium will be a rout. But the battle will certainly be the bloodiest of all times. We have yet to learn how the Germans fight in trenches on the defensive.

Everyone here speaks of Valenciennes as certain to be the centre of this defence line.

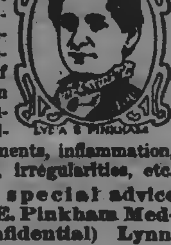
DOCTORS DID NOT HELP HER

But Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Mrs. Bradley's Health—Her Own Statement.

Winnipeg, Canada.—"Eleven years ago I went to the Victoria Hospital, Montreal, suffering with a growth. The doctors said it was a tumor and could not be removed as it would cause instant death. They found that my organs were affected, and said I could not live more than six months in the condition I was in.

"After I came home I saw your advertisement in the paper, and commenced taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took it constantly for two years, and still take it at times, and both my husband and myself claim that it was the means of saving my life. I highly recommend it to suffering women."—Mrs. ORILLA BRADLEY, 284 Johnson Ave., Winnipeg, Manitoba, Can.

Why will women take chances or drag out a sickly, half-hearted existence, missing three-fourths of the joy of living, when they can find health in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?



LYDIA E PINKHAM

COLLINGWOOD HORSE WON TURF EVENT AT FAIR

The ideal weather which favored the Peterboro Industrial Exhibition yesterday made the horse racing and judging of various harnessed horses very successful events.

But one race was held and that of the 2.30 class. Four heats were required to decide the winner which proved Jos. S. owned by Stone of Collingwood. This horse won the last three heats by inches. The first heat was won by Oro Tariff, Fife's horse of Otonabee but the big black dropped back to fifth place in the second heat, fourth place in the third and then came through second in the last, thereby winning second money. Ora Medium, Frank Montgomery's horse, secured third, Little Jerry, fourth; Ester D., fifth, and Tom Hall, which pulled up lame at the end of the second heat, sixth. The time recorded was 2.29¼.

The following was the result:

Jos S.	2	1	1	1
Oro Tariff	1	5	4	2
Oro Medium	4	2	2	4
Little Jerry	5	3	3	3
Ester D.	6	4	5	5
Tom Hall	3	6	x	x

COMMENT
As You Like It

When the official Canadian league batting averages are published it will be seen that Irvine Trout, the Toronto outfielder-catcher, who is now hitting like a fiend with the Toronto International leaguers, is the leader. He has a figure somewhat in the neighborhood of .350. Kelly Harris, of Erie, ranks second.

Fred Schumm's Wall Street report quoted odds of 8 to 1 today on the Philadelphia Americans as the winner of the pennant in that league, and odds of 5 to 4 on the same team to win the world's series.

The same authority offered 10 to 7 on the Boston Braves to win the National League pennant race. New York supporters were asking 10 to 6.

The great work of Wright, Trout and Isaacs in the International League speaks well for the calibre of ball dished up in the eight Canadian League centres. It strikes us that the wise guys on the Erie rags have been slipping one over their readers by running down the class of ball the Canuck Leaguers play. In referring to the work of the above mentioned Charlie Good of The News says:

"Perhaps there is not much difference in the pitching strength of the International and Canadian after all. These recruits do not seem to find very much in any event.

Early this season a wonderful cartoon appeared in some of the eastern papers. It depicted Kipling's famous poem, "The Vampire," and showed Charley Herzog listening to the call of the management of the Cincinnati Red team. In the cartoon were shown the death-like figures of John Ganzel, Clark Griffith, Joe Kelley, Ned Hanlon, Hank O'Day and Joe Tinker. For a time this season it was thought that Herzog would beat the jinx, but events of recent dates would tend to show that Buck will also take his place in the army of ex-managers of Cincinnati.

W. A. Phelon, the sporting editor of the Cincinnati Times-Star, and the Sporting News correspondent from Redland, has the following to say of Herzog's men: "The fielding defence is usually brilliant, and at times phenomenal, and the pitching far from bad, but the punchless pippins cannot flack their flails. One more batsman would electrify the club.'

Take your hats off to Miller Higgins, manager of the St. Louis Cardinals. He may or he may not win the pennant. St. Louis fans say he will. Huggins is not making any claims. But he has proved that he is a manager entitled to consideration. St. Louis fans love him. Last year they didn't. They called him a dub. And when he made his celebrated trade with Pittsburgh, a trade that took Konetchy, Harmon and Mowrey out of the Cardinal camp, he was roundly abused. Konetchy had been the idol of St. Louis, and he seemed a first-baseman who ranked with any in either league. But Koney has not done much with the Pirates; neither has Harmon. And Mowrey has been unconditionally released—fired. Miller and Wilson, two of the men taken in exchange, have developed into stars, and Robinson may yet prove his worth. So Huggins as a trader was a better guesser than Fred Clarke, and Clarke is a wise old owl. In addition to his ability as a manager Huggins is a lawyer and a second baseman. The "lawyers" in the winter and "second bases" in the summer. As a player he is as good as he is as a manager, and he leads his league in his ability to get to first base on a pass.

MARQUAD ON DOWNARD PATH

The Rube is Blamed for the Position of the Giants

It is not known whether that 21-inning game in Pittsburg killed Marquard's arm or not, but it is said that the Rube is about the most pitiful object on the ball field just now. Instead of being the Hero of Nineteen Straight, Marquard is blamed for the loss of the pennant—if the Giants really are to be pushed back by the Braves in the rush for the goal.

It would not surprise fans a bit if Marquard figures in a trade this winter. He is said to have become weary of his surroundings and would like to play somewhere else. It's a sure thing that McGraw will pull some big deals when the snow begins to fly, for he'll never start another campaign with the bunch that is making him sick at heart.

If Marquard and several other players are let out between now and next spring, do not be astounded. Meyers has played poor baseball practically all season. Whether it is due to the alleged fact that the Indian is on the down-grade or not, is not known. Meyers has been a great favorite, always in earnest, hard working player and a gentleman. Hence, it is hard to believe that he will be sent elsewhere.

Merkle has been a sad disappointment as a batsman. He has fallen down again and again when powerful stick work would have won games. The big fellow also has made unfortunate errors and the fans have been "riding" him unmercifully. As for Murray, he has seen his best days as a hitter, while Bescher, a fine batsman and base runner, has failed utterly as a fielder, also being charged with many ivory blunders.

Larry Doyle's let-down with the stick also has been a serious handicap, but he may recover his grip next year. Fletcher and Burns are sure of their berths and McGraw doubtless will hang onto Snodgrass and Robertson. But it looks certain that the Giants' manager will throw out the lines for a new third baseman, a new outfielder, several new pitchers and a catcher.

Three Clubs for Pacific League

Vancouver, B. C., Sept. 19—Frank Patrick, president of the Pacific Coast Hockey association, announced yesterday that there would be at least three clubs in the pro. league this year. If New Westminster is unable to finance a club, Portland will be given a berth along with Vancouver and Victoria.

Unfavorable Prospect.

"Any fish here?"

"Yep," replied the small boy. "But I don't believe you'll catch any."

"Why not?"

"Well, these are what you might call intelligent fish. When they see a lot o' handsome fishin' tackle like yours they get to swimmin' around and admirin' it until they lose their appetites for bait."—Washington Star.

Boston and New York Were Fighting it Out Twenty Five Years Ago

It may be only a coincidence, but 25 years ago the Boston and New York teams in the National league were having a terrific tussle for the National league pennant. The Giants finally won out with an average of .659, having won 83 and lost 43 games. However, on this date a quarter of a century back, the Bean-Eaters were in the lead by one-half a game, having won 71 and dropped 40, while the Giants were winning 70 and losing 40.

Hank O'Day, present manager of the Chicago Cubs, was one of New York's best pitchers then. Buck Ewing was his catcher, and Jim O'Rourke was playing the outfield.

There were two big leagues then as now. The Brooklyn club won the pennant of the American Association, which was then of major league calibre, and the New Yorks and Brooklyns played off for the world's championship. The New York team won by 6 games to 3. The total receipts for the nine games was $23,608, less than one game in a contest of like proportions to-day.

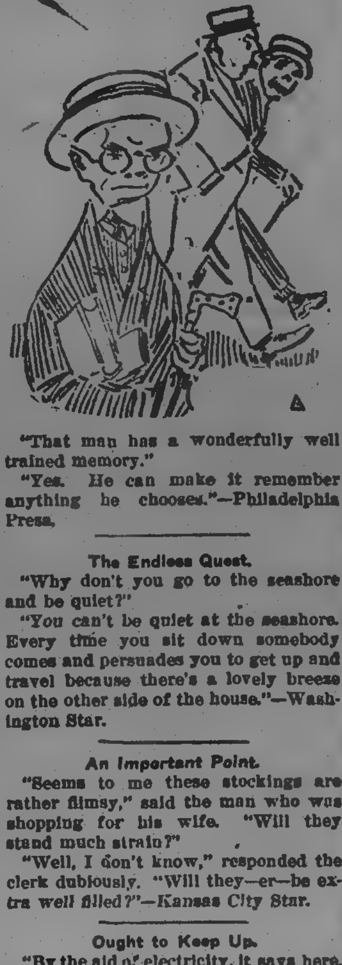
Expressing His Grief.

Passenger—Why does the whistle blow so mournfully every time we pass this place?

Conductor—That's where the engineer first met his wife.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Britishers in New York will start a campaign for a relief fund, part of it to add to the Prince of Wales Fund and the remainder for the relief of British soldiers' families in the United States.

Convenient.



"That man has a wonderfully well trained memory."

"Yes. He can make it remember anything he chooses."—Philadelphia Press.

The Endless Quest.

"Why don't you go to the seashore and be quiet?"

"You can't be quiet at the seashore. Every time you sit down somebody comes and persuades you to get up and travel because there's a lovely breeze on the other side of the house."—Washington Star.

An Important Point.

"Seems to me these stockings are rather flimsy," said the man who was shopping for his wife. "Will they stand much strain?"

"Well, I don't know," responded the clerk dubiously. "Will they—er—be extra well filled?"—Kansas City Star.

Ought to Keep Up.

"By the aid of electricity, it says here, 5,000 photographs can be got out per second."

"Well, this ought to be fast enough to satisfy the average stage beauty."—Florida Times-Union.

Cholly—And was my present a surprise to your sister?

Willie—You bet! Sis said she never thought you'd send her anything so cheap.—Philadelphia Press.

A Milk Shortage.

While traveling through the mountains a young salesman was one day forced to dine at a farmhouse. Not being very well satisfied with his meal of corn bread and bacon, he asked if he might have a glass of milk.

"No," replied his host. "Ah don't reckon you'll find any milk around here since the dog died."

"Since the dog died!" echoed the stranger. "What's that got to do with it?"

"Why," replied the farmer, "who do you all reckon's goin' to go an' fetch the cow?"—Exchange.

This beautiful weather has attracted a great many members to the golf club during the last few days and with reason, as the links are looking their best. The matches in the competition for the prize kindly donated by Mrs. Suckling are being keenly contested and the first round was to be played off this week. Among those having tea on the verandah were noticed Mrs. W. H. Bradburn and Miss Cummings, Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Smith and Mr. Baker, Mrs. Hill, Mr. and Mrs. Goodwill, Mr. and Mrs. Basil Hall, Dr. and Mrs. Cameron, Mrs. Cross, Mr. E. H. D. Hall and Mr. F. D. Kerr.

One of the most beautiful festivals of the year was held in St. John's Church on Thursday evening, it being the occasion of the annual Harvest Thanksgiving. The church was most effectively decorated with flowers, fruit and vegetables suitable to the season. The chancel and pulpit were particularly noticeable and were thoroughly artistic in their arrangement.

The most striking feature of the scheme of decoration however, was the large Union Jack which was draped over the main arch, and which seemed to set the keynote for the whole service, and which fittingly led up to the climax marked by the singing of the Doxology followed by the chorus of "O Canada" and the National Anthem, after the presentation of the Offertory.

A very merry picnic luncheon was held at the golf club on Thursday. More than thirty members were present and all seemed determined to thoroughly enjoy what might be the last large luncheon of the season at the club. In the afternoon those present occupied themselves in various ways, some with bridge, some with golf and a number with the latest fancy work, namely knitting for the soldiers.

Among those preset were Mrs. Gardiner, Mrs. Travers with her guests, Mrs. and Miss Wilson of Picton, Mrs. Coulthard, Mrs. Aylmer, Mrs. Matthews, Mrs. Goodwill, Mrs. Tomlins, Mrs. Duncan Walker, Miss Morrow, Mrs. Hill, Mrs. Eastwood, the Misses Kingan, the Misses Hall, Mrs. Hewson, Miss Lundy, Miss Holden, Miss Nan Hall, Miss Rogers, Miss Dumble and Miss Eleanor Collins.

LANGLEY—REINHARDT.

The marriage of Miss Olive Augusta Reinhardt to Mr. Gordon Russel Langley, both of this city, was solemnized at St. Paul's manse at 2.30 this afternoon, Rev. Win or lose, the Kaiser says he will remember the treason of Italy. It's not likely that it is worrying Italy much whether he remembers it or not.

* * *

It is estimated that the Kaiser owes around two million dollars worth of property in British Columbia. Many other Germans also own property in this province.

* * *

Reports persist in Washington that the Kaiser would like to have President Wilson's offer of mediation accepted. Now that he is on the run, it is not at all improbable that he would consent to mediation proceedings.

Chat With the British Wounded Now in London

Dr. Mather, formerly of Tweed, who is now in London, Eng., in a letter written to Mr. Alger in Tweed gives an interesting account of British wounded he met in the London hospital.

"I thought I would drop you a line regarding an interview I had to-day with some wounded British soldiers who have just arrived here from the fighting line in France. Hundreds of the poor fellows are now being poured into England and distributed in the various hospitals in the city. There are three hundred at the London hospital, and it was with three of these I had a conversation to-day.

"War seems indeed a more awful and real thing when one sees hundreds being carried into a hospital. The wounds of soldiers being brought here are, of course, not of the most serious type, and some of the fellows brought to the London hospital managed to hobble into the wards without much assistance. The more seriously wounded are being cared for nearer the battlefield and will be sent on here as soon as they are able to come. They all looked haggard and worn and show only too plainly the terrible ordeal through which they have passed. Most of the wounds are in the legs and arms. I presume those shot about the head and body are either killed at once or so severely wounded that they could not be brought here.

One little Highland Scotchman belonging to an Argyle regiment had no less than six shrapnel bullets in the left shoulder and right arm, and his comrade, a big, burly Scot, had his one arm shattered by the same kind of missiles. Another fine, tall fellow, with a distinct Irish brogue, a Coldstream Guard, had his head bandaged up for a scalp wound from a rifle bullet. These fellows had all been in the terrific fight at Mons, where the British maintained their ground for three days against the Germans, who outnumbered them 3 to 1. The object of this attack on the German line at Mons was to draw the Germans out in a kind of horseshoe shape and the French were to close in on either side and thus encircle all the Germans engaged, but unfortunately the French could not get there, and the British had to retire to their original position. They all say the fight was fierce and terrible, often so close that the British used their bayonets freely. The Germans, they said, would not face a bayonet charge, but every time would run squealing and yelling like wild animals. They are, however, very persistent in their attacks, coming again and again, although each time being mowed down like grass by the British machine guns and rifles. For the three days the British kept the Germans back without suffering any great loss, but on the morning of the fourth day, about 2 o'clock, the Germans by the aid of searchlights and airmen, got the range of the British trenches and succeeded in dropping their shells with surprising accuracy right among the British. Two Scotchmen said their regiments were 1,400 strong, and of this number 1,250 were missing, being either killed or severely wounded. This was all done, too, in about an hour, so deadly was the hail of German shrapnel.

"The German soldiers, they said, are generally poor shots, but are brave and dogged in their attacks. They denounced in round terms the barbarity and brutality of the German soldiers. The big Irish guard said he saw them killing the British wounded who could not be carried away at the time. Right near the fighting line, they said, there was a little Belgian hospital in which were two nurses and an old priest, doing all they could for the wounded who were brought in. This hospital the Germans ruthlessly shelled, killing the nurses, priest and wounded, who could not get away. The little Scotchman declared he saw them shoot the priest when he was in the act of praying for the wounded. They all said they doubted if a more awful battle was ever fought, and there would not be another like it during the whole war. It seems hard to believe that the German soldiers would be so cruel, but they all three told the same story and pitied the poor fellows who fell into their hands as wounded or prisoners.

"This is surely a terrible war and no one here even ventures to guess when it will end. The English people say that the war on the German Kaiser must go on and his war party must be forever crushed, and they will stick to it until it is done. We must remember, however, that Germany has her millions of well-armed men and although in the end the Kaiser and his party will be overthrown, still they are strong enough and determined enough to inflict tremendous punishments on their opponents. What England needs is more trained soldiers. The English standing army is nothing compared with Germany's four millions. Although Kitchener is making frantic efforts to get a trained army and men are enlisting faster than they can be enrolled, still it will take months to get an army into the field sufficient to cope with the German army. The French, too, are putting forth every effort and have all their forces in the field, but both English and French together are no match for the German army in numbers and training.

"The three wounded soldiers with whom I talked to-day said it was heartrending to hear the cries of the poor people of a village the British soldiers had to abandon, as their houses were being shelled and burned by the German army.

"The efforts Canada is putting forth to help the old land are magnificent and are highly appreciated here. Our Canadian soldiers should have good training before going to the field on active service, otherwise they could not be expected to do as good work. Lord Kitchener will no doubt see to that matter and not let them go to the front until they are fitted for it."

SEA FIGHTS REPORTED; CARMANIA SINKS GERMAN BOAT IN THE ATLANTIC

H. M. Light Cruiser Pegasus is Disabled in Battle With German Battleship Koenigsberg at Zanzibar---Cruiser Cumberland Captures Steamboat and Gunboat Dwarf Wrecks German Steamer.

LONDON, Sept. 21. — H. M. S. Pegasus has been completely disabled in Zanzibar harbor by the German battleship Koenigsburg. Out of a crew of 234, 25 have been killed and 80 wounded.

The Admiralty report says that since the outbreak of the war, the British light cruiser Pegasus, under command of John A. Inglis, has been working from Zanzibar and had rendered very useful services including the destruction of Dar-es-Salaam (a seaport in German East Africa), the sinking of the German gunboat Mowe and a floating drydock.

Early Saturday morning, continues the statement, she was attacked by the Koenigsberg while anchored in Zanzibar harbor cleaning, oiling and repairing machinery. The Pegasus, thus taken at a disadvantage and somewhat outranged by the newer four-inch guns of the Koenigsberg, was completely disabled after suffering a loss, unofficially announced at 25 killed and 50 wounded. This is a high proportion out of a crew of 234.

"The damage done to the Koenigsburg is not known. She was last seen steaming to the southward.

"On Sept. 10 the German cruiser Emden from the China station, after being completely lost for six weeks, suddenly appeared in the Bay of Bengal, and during the period including Sept. 10 to Sept. 14, captured six British ships as follow: The Indus, Lovat, Killim, Diplomat, Frabbock and Katinga, of which five were sunk and the sixth was sent to Calcutta with the crews of the others.

"The British auxiliary cruiser Carmania, Capt. Noel Grant, R.N., went into action Sept. 14 off the east coast of South America with a German armed merchant cruiser, supposed to be the Cap Trafalgar of Berlin, The action lasted one hour and 45 minutes, when the German ship capsized and sank, her survivors being rescued by an empty collier. The Carmania lost nine men killed and five wounded.

The First Lord of the Admiralty has sent the following telegram to Capt. Grant of the Carmania:

"Well done! You have fought a fine action to a successful finish."

The British cruiser Cumberland, Capt. Cyril Fuller, R.N., from the Kamrun river, reports that a German steamboat on the night of Sept. 14 attempted to sink the British gunboat Dwarf, Commander Frederick Strong, with an infernal machine in her bows. The attempt failed and the steamboat with one prisoner was captured.

"On the night of the 16th the Dwarf was purposely rammed by the Nashtigall, a German merchant ship. The Dwarf was slightly damaged, but sustained no casualties. The Nashtigall was wrecked. The enemy lost four white men and ten colored men and eight white men and fourteen colored men are missing.

CATHEDRAL DESTROYED

Beautiful Structure at Rheims Prey to German Vandalism

FRANCE PROTESTS

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Chalons Sur Marne, Sept. 21. In addition to the cathedral at Rheims, the museum, hospitals and city hall have been for the greater part destroyed in the bombardment. Several inhabitants were killed but the Germans have been unable to take Rheims which they evidently desire, so as to obtain command of the railways leading to Charleville, Verdun and Chalons.

London, Sept. 21. — The French foreign office has forwarded to neutral governments a protest against the German bombardment of the cathedral of Rheims, saying it was without even the appearance of a military necessity and for the mere pleasure of destruction. By the Germans on the other hand it is maintained they could not obey instructions to spare cathedral as it was in the line of their fire.

BORDEAUX, Sept. 21.—The Minister of the Interior announced yesterday that the Cathedral at Rheims had been destroyed, and that all the other historic and public buildings of that city had been destroyed or seriously damaged. The Government, he said, had decided to address a note of protest to all the powers.

Official advices state that the city of Rheims is in flames following the bombardment by the German artillery, and that there appears to be little hope of saving the city from destruction.

LONDON, Sept. 21. — The famous Cathedral of Notre Dame at Rheims has been hit many times by German shells during the three days' bombardment of the town, according to The Evening News' correspondent, who viewed the fighting from the cathedral tower on Friday.

"Directly the shells began to hit the cathedral in the morning," says the correspondent, "some German wounded were brought in from the hospital nearby and laid on straw in the nave, while Abbe Andrieux and a Red Cross soldier pluckily went up to the tower and hung out two Geneva flags.

"I believe a shell which hit the building while I was there was a stray shot, for the German gunners could hardly miss so huge a mass, towering as it does above the town, if they really wished to reach it. But the houses close by were not so spared. Shell after shell came whistling towards us and smashed into the houses, one of them just across the cathedral square."

HUGE FORTS BUILT

Germans Have Constructed an Immense System of Defenses

ANTWERP, Sept. 21. — In addition to the semi-circular line of defences to the north of Brussels and Louvain, the German forces have constructed a huge line of fortifications, strengthened by even greater breastworks from Namur through a line passing across Mons to a point near Valenciennes. Like their northern defensive works these ramparts are remarkably stout and efficiently guard the line of communication through Belgium, as well as leave a road 50 kilometres wide, whereby the northern German armies would be enabled to regain the fatherland.

It is reported that the Germans are rushing big siege guns forward to Antwerp from Namur.

Your correspondent has received information from two independent sources respecting the prisoners at Maubeuge. In that city 30,000 French prisoners are guarded by 200 Germans. The captives are territorial army troops. Seven British prisoners are also among the captives there. They are guarded effectually by 30 Germans.

The Germans fired heavy projectiles into Maubeuge at the rate of 70 a minute.

ATTENDANCE TOOK DROP

But 1914 Exhibition Was Improvement in Several Respects

The Peterborough 1914 Industrial Exhibition is over. Thursday, Friday and Saturday of last week were red letter days of the year, they were days when the nickle was the keynote of happiness for men, women and children. Better weather could not be imagined, and a better fair never was held in the city.

The attendance was a trifle smaller than it was a year ago. The directors are more than pleased, and, as Secretary F. J. A. Hall stated, the result was remarkable. All the accounts have not been settled as yet, but it is generally believed that there will be no deficit. The prizewinners will be published in the course of a few days.

The actual figures of attendance and receipts are not obtainable.

LARGER PART OF GERMANS BELIEVED TO BE RETIRING TO DEFEND THE HOME FRONTIER

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Sept. 21.—A Daily Express despatch from Paris says an officer who has returned from Soissons reports that aeroplane reconnaisance has given rise to the belief that the larger part of the German force is retiring, presumably under orders from Berlin, to defend the German frontier, while about 200,000 men remain to hold the present fortified positions and cover the retreat.

London, Sept. 21.—The Daily Chronicle's Paris correspondent, in a despatch filed Sunday, assumes that the western triangle of Noyon, Compiegne and Vic is now in the hands of the allies. The German position, the correspondent declares, "remains very strong, but it has been pierced. The former continuous wall of iron from Compiegne to Rheims now presents rather the appearance of three groups of entrenched hills, which are liable to be isolated and turned.

"The allies have reached the edge of Craonne plateau at Vendresse and Vassogne. There is a substantial breach in the German lines between Laon and Rheims, and it is doubtless this threat of their armies being divided which accounts for the repeated and desperate assaults on the French before Rheims."

Allies Advance On River Oise

Violent Encounters With Bayonet Charges in Region of Craonne --- Artillery Fire Around Rheims

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Paris, Sept. 21.—The official announcement says: "On our left wing on the right bank of the river Oise, we have advanced as far as the heights of Lassigny, west of Noyon. To the east of the Oise and to the north of Aisne, the Germans are again active.

"In the region of Craonne there have been violent encounters with bayonet charges. In the country around Rheims the [illegible] has confined himself to artillery fire. In the centre we ha[illegible]en Mesnil-sur-Hurlus and Massiges.

"On our right wing in Lorraine and Vosges there is nothing new."

AUSTRIANS GIVE WAY TO RUSSIANS

London, Sept. 21.—A despatch from Petrograd via Rome to Reuter's Telegram Co. says the Russians who are pursuing the Austrians along the river San have captured Dubiecko, 75 miles west of Lemberg and have crossed the river despite the attempt made by the Austrians to prevent them.

They captured several batteries, a number of transports and arms and ammunition.

Nothing of importance is reported from the Save-Danube front.* The enemy in retiring from Vishegrad, Bosnia, forty miles south-east of Sarajevo abandoned all his stores. Montenegrins after carrying the fortress of Fotcha and Gorasda in Bosnia captured Jabuka on September 16 and took Rogatica on the 17th. The Montenegrin army is only about ten miles from the Bosnian capital and has captured a large amount of booty.

RUSSIANS DESTROY AEROPLANES

Also Take 15000 Prisoners and Spoils of the Field

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Paris, Sept. 21. — In a message from Petrograd, the Havas correspondent says that during the past three days Russians in Galicia have captured fifteen thousand Austrians including 150 officers. Many cannon, quick-firing guns and supplies have also been taken.

Austrian aeroplanes which flew over the Russian army were destroyed, the correspondent continues. On the body of a dead aviator there were found lists of Austrian reserves together with notes as to their positions which greatly aided the Russians.

JAPANESE DESTROY FORTS WITH BOMBS

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Paris, Sept. 21.—Telegraphing from Petrograd, the correspondent of the Havas Agency says: "A despatch received here from Vladivostock declares that Japanese aeroplanes, through bombs, have destroyed two of the important forts of Tsing Tau."

ALLIES FORGE AHEAD IN THE MOST TERRIBLE STRUGGLE OF HISTORY

In Cold Rain, Fighting Through Mud and Water, Anglo-French Forces Are Gradually Wearing Out the German Armies Along the Aisne, Oise and Woevre Rivers---Attacking Heavy Artillery.

LONDON, Sept. 21.—A correspondent of The Times sends the following despatch from "Behind the British lines," dated Sept. 19:

"The great battle draws to a close. Exhaustion rather than shot and shell had wrought a terrible peace along the river banks—a peace which my experiences of the last few days lead me to believe may be the herald of victory. That, at least, is how I find the situation.

"I have seen our troops and the French go into battle these last days, not as worn and weary men, but as conquerors. I have seen them return wounded from the valley of death with the conquering spirit fanned to fierce fury.

"Here is a typical description from the trenches of the great struggle:

"'We were slowly beating them back. We have to do it foot by foot, for they have huge guns and their shell fire is terrible. But we keep pegging away. How? Well, we dig ourselves in—British lads have learned that lesson—and then we go on fighting and fighting until the moment comes when we can make a small advance. We crawl up again and dig ourselves in, and so on.

"At the end, it, of course, comes to cold steel. We are all right there.

"The scene on the river at night was magnificent and appalling beyond words. The whole valley was swept with a blaze of searchlights from darkness until dawn. Great beams moved up and down, searching the skies and trenches and revealing masked batteries on the heights and dark forms lying along the ridges.

"Here and there a lurid flash revealed the bursting of a shell, or a wisp of fire—a volley from some concealed vantage, and over all rolled the perpetual thunder of the guns—a fierce and thrilling accompaniment.

"An incessant rain, too, flooded the great river, making the work of the heroic engineers a veritable task of Hercules.

"This was a battle to the last ounce of strength, in which man and horse poured out their whole lives in a few moments. Day and night the combat raged without intermission, ebbing and flowing like the tide, seething like a cauldron. And into the hell strong men went down—Oh! It was a brave sight to see them go, gaily and lightheartedly, to return perhaps in a few hours broken for life, or maybe never to return at all, for the loss was terrible.

"The battle westward by the forest of l'Aigle has been carried back from the river bank, a matter of some ten kilometers (about six miles). But at Soissons, the enemy still hold their ground. Here, in the stone quarries above the town they have massed a powerful battery of artillery of such heavy metal that our guns have not been strong enough to cope with it.

"For this reason, and this reason alone, they have been able to withstand our attacks. Happily, the French have now brought up their heaviest guns and are about to open a furious bombardment. One advantage the enemy possessed he must presently lose.

"Understand, this is the hardest fought encounter of the war. It has been a frontal attack against a powerful foe, splendidly entrenched and strongly situated. Only the better fighter wins such a battle. To have conquered at Aisne is to have proved oneself irresistible."

The correspondent speaks of "the strange, almost inhuman courage and eternal cheerfulness of the British, the dash of France, that valliance that makes her troops in attack the most irresistible of the world," and adds:

"To speak of lesser matters, I have seen great train loads of captured German cannon, taken during the last week and still great train loads of captured Germans; German prisoners peacefully at work on the railroads and elsewhere, looking wonderfully happy and contented, and, finally I have seen our splendid airmen performing their reconnaissance work, speeding away to the thrill and terror of a great rally.

"Victory is not yet, but we await the morrow with great hope and confidence."

Reports from the front, says the Exchange Telegraph's Paris correspondent, show that the British and French troops are fighting waist deep in water, the rains having flooded their trenches.

The Exchange Telegraph's Paris correspondent, in a despatch sent at 7.40 o'clock last night, says:

"The steady advance by the British and French on the left is highly important, as the German General Von Kluk's flank is now exposed."

Thousands of Prisoners.

PARIS, Sept. 21—Paris, after having become accustomed to good news during the days of the German withdrawal, was made a little nervous through the silence of the War Office. Now the capital is reassured by the steady file of prisoners arriving from the scene of action. Saturday 1,500 prisoners were brought here. Friday 1,200 arrived and on the preceding days since the Germans first fell back, 1,000 to 1,500 has been the daily average. More than 10,000 prisoners of war are now here.

Reference to Saturday night's official statement which spoke of numerous prisoners further encouraged the people of the city.

It is insisted here that there are continued indications that Gen. von Kluk's army is in a critical situation.

Servian Successes

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Nish, Servia, via London, 10.10 a.m., Sept. 21.—An official communication reviewing the Servian campaign says the enemy's attempts to cross the Drina on the Losnitza-Ratcha line have again failed and all Austrian attempts to cross the Save on the Mitrovitza-Shabatz front have also been unsuccessful.

LABOR CONGRESS IN SESSION

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

St. John, N.B., Sept. 21.—With a large attendance of visiting delegates present, the thirtieth annual convention of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada was formally opened in St. Andrew's rink. The convention quickly settled down to business. Mayor Frink, Commissioner Potts and Hon. J. E. Wilson for the local government gave addresses of welcome.

Committees were appointed and credentials registered. A resolution of sympathetic interest was ordered to be sent to Montreal to the Theatrical Workers Protective Union now on strike and fraternal greetings were extended to other bodies in session.

Debenture Sale.

Fourteen thousand dollars' worth of the city's short term debentures have been sold to a man near Millbrook. With the exception of this sale, the remainder of the debentures have all been taken by residents of the city.

PETERBORO AS A MILITARY CENTRE

Efforts have been made to secure Peterborough as a military centre, in accordance with its size and position. Mr. Burnham has been dealing with this subject for some time, but is not particularly sanguine of anything being done, unless the government finds such a proposition to be an advantage in a military way.

Being a military centre means that barracks would be established.

PETERBOROUGH, MONDAY, SEPT. 21, 1914.

THE RESULT OF FORESEEING THE EMERGENCY.

IN VIEW OF the pea-nut criticism that has come from one or two places in regard to Canada's war preparations, a brief review of the steps taken by the Canadian Government, ought to be sufficient to satisfy the disgruntled. The definite, and business-like action of the Borden Government, taken within a few hours of the declaration of war, was a surprise to the whole of Canada, save those who had the war preparations in hand.

War was declared August 4. Censorship of news began on the day following the declaration. On the day war was announced orders were issued for the detention of ships. Within a few hours steps were taken to prohibit the export of certain articles. Two submarines were purchased, through the prompt action of Sir Richard McBride, the day before war was declared, the last day on which they could have been bought. Mobilization of the militia began on the fifth day of August, though Great Britain did not until the next day formally accept the general offer made on the first of August of such military assistance as might be required in case the Empire should become involved. On the first day of August orders-in-council had been passed relating to the pay and discipline of the naval volunteer force. On the fourth the naval forces and naval volunteer forces were by order-in-council placed on active service. On the seventh the submarines were placed at the disposal of the King. On the sixth the offer of a million bags of flour was made to the Empire.

A fortnight after the declaration of war, parliament had been summoned and was assembled and the Minister of Finance had ready his war estimates and budget, as well as the various financial and commercial measures which the government considered necessary to meet the emergency. It will be generally admitted that these and other preparations, and especially the details of the military mobilization have been worked out without confusion, and notably without hesitation and doubt. All the administrators who had anything to do with the war seemed to be taking up unaccustomed duties, as if they were part of the everyday work.

It may be interesting to the people to know that the smoothness and speed with which Canada's war preparations were carried out were not due to any extraordinary capacity on the part of ministers or officials, but to a conviction that there was an emergency, even a crisis, months before the declaration of war took place. In scoffing at the seriousness of Sir Robert Borden's words, the Liberal press tried to show at the time of the naval debate, that there was no real emergency and that the Conservatives were resorting to stage play. Even at the declaration of war, Liberal papers, led by the Globe, declared that the emergency spoken of by Sir Robert Borden was not the one that resulted in the European war. Months before August all the departments which would be called upon to take action in time of war, were getting ready for the worst, and, subsequent events have proved the wisdom of this action :

Among the documents read by the Premier was a letter from himself to Sir Joseph Pope, under-secretary for external affairs. Sir Joseph had submitted to the Premier a number of documents, including many secret Imperial papers, and had discussed with him a project of organizing a conference of departmental officers:

> "for the purpose of concerting measures to be taken by the various departments of the government primarily concerned, in the contingency of an outbreak of war affecting His Majesty's dominions, and, more particularly, of considering the preparation of a war book which shall set forth in detail the action to be taken by every responsible official at the seat of government in the event of such an emergency."

Sir Robert Borden authorized a permanent conference, composed of Sir Joseph Pope, several Deputy Ministers and others. This conference was organised and had begun meetings as early as January 12 of this year, more than six months before war was declared. Very early in the conference it was decided that the secretaries > "should acquaint each member of the conference of the various contingencies which might arise in the event of which the co-operation of his department would be required ; thus enabling him to decide what steps would be necesary to give effect to the decisions of the conference, and to detail an officer of his department to confer with the secretaries in the actual compilation of the war book."

Sub-committees determined what each department should do in certain contingencies, and worked out its own plan for so doing, and, when arrangements were completed, the whole plan was submitted to the Prime Minister, Sir Robert Borden. Owing to these preparations, the Premier was able to advise the House that each department was in a position to take action without delay, and that these preparations had been made with the knowledge of the Imperial Government. The result was that when war was declared, Canada was able to act promptly and without confusion, in a manner that was amazing to her own people, but even more so to nations outside the Empire who knew nothing of its carefully planned organization.

When Sir Robert Borden spoke so seriously of an emergency ,he saw what was coming. He no doubt had information which he could not make public, nor even present to Parliament ; but, now that war has actually arisen, the importance of his words on former occasions have added weight and should "go home to men's hearts and men's bosoms." Canada has done well in meeting as she has, the grave stiuation that now faces the Empire ; but, had it not been for the Premier's conviction that a crisis was at hand, Canada would not have risen to the occasion in the masterful manner that she has.

IT'S TIME FOR BETTER SHOES.

THE SERIOUSNESS of corns as a defect in men desiring to enlist is an argument against wearing badly-made, ill-fitting shoes. The people should demand better shoes from Canadian manufacturers in future by refusing to buy many kinds that are often on sale in shoe stores. If necessary, we should buy American shoes. It is notorious that Canadian shoe manufacturers produce grades inferior to those of American factories, and there is apparently no reason for so doing. We have the machinery, the leather, the money, the organization necessary. We pay retail prices quite as high as those that prevail in the United States, and there is really no reason why Canadians should not be supplied with proper shoes. Shoemen say there is not the market in this country. That argument was good twenty years ago, but it doesn't apply now. Some say of Peterborough, using the same reasoning, that it is just a big village, and that the people don't want the best articles. That, too, is an antiquated argument, and may explain why a good many things are bought in Toronto that should be bought in Peterborough. Corns, bunions, in-growing toe-nails, fallen insteps, misshapen feet, are, nine times out of ten, the result of wearing improper shoes. It's time there was a change.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

BY THE WAY, what has become of the Germans' cry, "On to Paris"?

OUR POLICIES are as good as gold, says a local insurance company. That may be, but, judging by the banks, most people would prefer gold.

BASING our opinion on an observed over-indulgence in the use of it, we think it is about time most people canned that word psychological.

THE GERMAN CHANCELLOR said it would not do for the safety of the German Empire, to allow Russia time to bring up her vast masses of troops. Russia has the troops, but Germany has the speed, said the chancellor. It strikes us that Russia moved far faster and in far larger numbers than Germany ever dreamed.

PEACE AND WAR.

(W. E. Henley.)

Into a land
Storm-wrought, a place of quakes, all thunder-scarred,
Helpless, degraded, desolate.
Peace, the White Angel, comes.
Her eyes are as a mother's; her good hands
Are comforting and helping, and her voice
Falls on the heart as, after Winter, Spring
Falls on the world, and there is no more pain.
And in her influence hope returns, and life,
And the passion of endeavour; so that, soon,
The idle ports are insolent with keels;
The smithies roar, and the mills thrum
With energy and achievement; weald and wold
Exult; the cottage garden teems
With innocent hues and odors; boy and girl
Mate prosp'rously; there are sweet women to kiss;
There are good women to breed. In a golden fog,
A large, full-stomached faith in kindliness
All over the world; the nation, in a dream
Of money and love and sport, hangs at the paps
Of well-being, and so
Goes fattening, mellowing, dozing, rotting down
Into a rich deliquium of decay.

Then, if the gods be good—
Then, if the gods be other than mischievous,
Down from their footstools, down
With a million-throated shouting, swoops and storms
War, the Red Angel, the Awakener,
The Shaker of Souls and Thrones; and at her heel
Trail grief, and ruin, and shame!
The woman weeps her man, the mother her son,
The tenderling its father. In wild hears
A people, haggard with defeat,
Asks if there be a God, yet sets its teeth,
Faces calamity, and goes into the fire
Another than it was. And in wild hours
A people, roaring ripe
With victory, rises, menaces, stands renewed,
Sheds its old peddling aims,
Approves its virtue, puts behind itself
The comfortable dream, and goes,
Armoured and militant,
New-pithed, new-souled, new-visioned, up the steeps
To those great altitudes, whereat the weak
Live not; but only the strong
Have leave to strive, and suffer, and achieve.

Both Kinds Needed.

(Canadian Courier.)

Down at Val Cartier there are more than thirty thousand soldiers. Most of them were men who had no excuse to stay away. Some of them had to make sacrifices to get there. But each of them will do his bit, whether it be great or small. Some may do it flippantly and lightly; others may be more earnest-minded about it ; but each will be doing his duty according to his temperament. But there are many more thousands who are staying at home to do their bit in a humdrum, obscure fashion, and to them be equal honour and glory. Both kinds make up every great nation.

PUNCTUALITY

By Walt Mason

The punctual man is a bird; he always is true to his word; he knows that the skate who is ten minutes late is trifling and vain and absurd. He says, "I'll be with you at four"; though torrents may ruthlessly pour, you know when the clock strikes the hour he will knock with his punctual fist at your door. And you say, "He is surely a trump! I haven't much use for the chump who is evermore late, making other men wait—the place for that gent is the dump." The punctual man is a peach ;he sticks to his dates like a leech ; it's a pity, alas, that he hasn't a class of bone-headed sluggards to teach. He's welcome wherever he wends ; the country is full of his friends ; he goes by the watch and he ne'er makes a botch of his time, so he never offends. If he says he'll get married at nine, you can bet he'll be standing in line, with his beautiful bride, and the knot will be tied ere the clock is done making the sign. If he says he'll have cashed in at five, at that hour he will not be alive; you can order his shroud and assemble a crowd, clear out to the boneyard to drive. The punctual man is a jo! The biggest success that I know! He is grand and sublime, he is always on time, not late by ten minutes or so.

PALATIAL NEW C.P.R. STEAMSHIP

In keeping with the spirit of progressiveness which characterizes all proceedings of the C. P. R., that company announces the completion of another trans-Atlantic ship of magnificent proportions and equipment.

The name of the new marine monster is the "Missanabie." She is 520 feet in length and 64 feet in breadth, has a displacement of 18,000 tons and a gross tonnage of 13,000 tons, with a passenger-carrying capacity of 1,720 people. All the cabin accommodation is amidships, composed of 2, 3 or 4 berth rooms. A feature of these rooms is the great height, which accordingly gives increased air space and ventilation. A novel note is struck in the drawing room and lounge by the provision of bay windows and having comfortable recessed seats.

The dining room, smoking room, card room, drawing room and lounge were specially designed by George Crawley, the eminent London architect. The general scheme of decoration is of the Georgian period, the furnishings being executed by the well-known firm of Wylie and Lochead, of Glasgow. Great attention has been given to the heating and ventilating of the ship, and is an outstanding feature representing an entirely new departure. The system is a dual one, consisting of two distinct methods whereby every space on board is ensured of a sufficiency of heat and fresh air.

In the most important matter of safety, the arrangements for the launching of lifeboats are very complete and anticipate every contingency which human ingenuity can provide for. It is worthy of note that there are no collapsible lifeboats on board, all being rigid, open lifeboats.

It is anticipated that this splendid specimen of marine architecture will be added to the company's fleet of what are called "one-class" cabin ships, which have become so markedly popular during the last two or three years. These ships carry only two classes of passengers(namely, second cabin and third class). The second cabin is situated in the best part of the ship and includes all the parlors, ladies' rooms, smoke-rooms, etc. The requirements of those who while desiring the best the ship can give, are not inclined to pay the higher rates demanded for such accommodation in ships having two classes of cabins, are thereby splendidly provided for.

The ship will make her initial voyage in her sailing from Liverpool on October 7, and returning from Montreal on October 22.

Through Old Quebec

The sun shone out of a cloudless sky, but there was a cool, refreshing breeze that August morning when the Spectator started out on a day-long drive through the hills that give Ste. Philomene-des-Monts the last part of her name, writes the ever-entertaining Spectator, in The Outlook. The clash of the mowing-machine was heard, and long lines of heavy, fragrant grass lay in the fields. At first the road lay through the valley, the lake to the left. This is the richest piece of farming land in the parish—the prosperous-looking houses and large barns testified to that. Here and there were to be seen survivals of a past epoch — old "weathered" houses with sagging roofs and few and small windows; but the majority of the dwellings were higher and squarer shaped than the types of the last generation's, well painted, and with metal roofs and many and good-sized windows. The Spectator was surprised to see that in many cases the double windows necessitated by the rigors of the Quebec winter had been left up, with no provision for admitting air beyond a few round holes bored in the lower sash.

After some miles the road took a turn at right angles, and the horses began to climb a steep, stony hill road that twisted and turned but went up and up. The Spectator was not allowed to look around until a certain height was gained. Then the horses stopped of their own accord, no doubt from long habit, and he glanced behind him. Far below shimmered the lake, encircled by the blue Laurentides and flecked here and there by a white sailboat; at its northeast end the Maskinonge river flowed out to swell the broad St. Lawrence, twenty odd miles away. As the Spectator gazed at the panorama stretched out miles below, the hoarse sound of a whistle clove the still air—the noontime signal of the great lumber mill that made an ugly gash in the wooded shores of the lake to the west.

Every now and then the Spectator, in passing through the more settled parts had noticed a house with its doors and windows boarded up, yet with crops growing near it and other indications that it was not exactly abandoned. He was told that in these cases the family had gone away simply for a given time, intending to return. When there is a backward season or a drought or a bad lumbering season — for the farmers in Quebec look upon lumbering as a very important side issue, the richer ones taking up contracts, the poorer working as hands — or when sickness or mischance bring straitened days, then Jean Baptiste makes up his mind to go to "the States." He rents his farm, sells his live stock and his furniture, boards up his doors and windows and disappears with his wife and children. The larger the family is in this case, the better, for above a certain age each member is a wage-earner. A year or two passes by, sometimes three or four, and still the farm is tilled by alien hands. But at last a rumor is heard that Jean is coming back, and soon he arrives. Monsieur and Madame Jean very bright and smiling, well-dressed and solvent looking, the children, too, all endimanches on their return to their native heath. It is true they all look very pale and thin; they have toiled hard and unceasingly, from the father down to the youngest worker, and factory life is not conducive to health. But they have lifted the mortgage, and here they are with money to buy new implements and stock and to start life anew in this beloved Canada of theirs.

Ultimate Defeat of Germans Sure.

PARIS, Sept. 21.—Leon Bailby, the journalist, in a brilliant article on the situation says that in the event of a German victory in the war the battle of the Marne must be fought over again. He regards the ultimate defeat of the Germans as assured, comparing the antagonists to two duellists. He says that Germany is in the position of one who depends on a single thrust for his life, while France merely risks a wound in the arm. While the duellist in such straits as Germany would naturally fight for his life, he would incline to a loss of balance with his opponent a master of himself.

Austrians Watch Italy.

ROME, Sept. 21.—A report received here from the Austro-Italian frontier, says that 300,000 Austrian troops are watching the Italian border. Trieste has been left with only a garrison of 20,000 men.

SHE GOT EVEN WITH HIM

By EDITH V. RGSS.

I was studying art in Italy in the hope of being able to return to America and set up as a portrait painter. My headquarters were Florence, where I lived in a room looking out on the river Arno. Being a woman, I had been careful to find a private family who would take me in. One day I saw a little Italian boy about twelve years old playing on the Arno embankment in whom I recognized at once an artist's model. I asked him where he lived, and he took me to his home near by. I made a bargain with his mother for him to come to my room and pose for me at a franc a sitting.

Little Luigi had a pair of eyes the expression of which I could not catch, besides other features which were complementary to that expression. I worked over him for half a dozen sittings, then determined to give up the matter of trying to paint his portrait. But on the day I came to this resolution my landlady told me that a gentleman had taken one of her rooms who, she thought, knew a good deal about art and suggested that I get some points from him.

I showed him my work and my model, at the same time asking what prevented me from catching the boy's expression. He showed me certain lines that I had drawn too heavy, others that were too light and still others that I had left out entirely. I made the corrections, and the picture was improved, but was far from satisfactory. Mr. Warfield told me that I had been working too hard and would do better if I should take more rest.

I followed his advice and, since I had seen little of the environs of Florence, concluded to go about a bit. The next day I made an excursion to Fiesole, on an eminence several miles from Florence and reached by trolley. When I returned in the evening I met Mr. Warfield on the staircase. He asked me if I did not feel refreshed, and I admitted that I did. "I think," he said, "that if you look at your work after a day of rest and recreation you will be better satisfied with what you have done."

True enough; my portrait struck me as being far less imperfect than before. The next morning I had my little model before me again and worked industriously during a whole sitting. Then I put the portrait away that I might not see it till ready to resume my work on it. When I looked at it the next day I found that I had rather injured than improved it. Disgusted, I resolved to spend the morning in the Boboli gardens and, leaving word for Luigi that I would not need him, left the house.

When I came in for luncheon the portrait was on my easel where I had left it. Again I was surprised that it looked so much better than when I had last seen it. "It is remarkable," I said, "how one's physical condition affects one's appreciation, especially of one's own work."

But I injured my work again—that is, in my own eyes, for Mr. Warfield assured me that the picture was growing better every day. And so it was notwithstanding that it seemed to me I could not touch it without marring it. Finally one day on returning from sightseeing the picture seemed to me to be simply perfect. It was not only Luigi, but Luigi living. I showed it to Mr. Warfield, who told me not to touch it again.

I was sadly in need of money and took it to a dealer. He seemed very much pleased with it and told me he thought he could sell it for a good price if there was on it the name of a well known artist. I had not put my name on it, since I was unknown, and thought it better to leave the public in ignorance of the painter. I left the picture with the dealer, telling him to sell it if he got any offer whatever for it. In a few days he wrote me a note saying that he had sold it for 2,500 francs.

Astonished, I hurried at once to his shop and asked him how he had managed to make so ready a sale and for such a price, but his only explanation was that it was a fine bit of work. I returned to my quarters hoping to get a better explanation from Mr. Warfield, but found that he had left Florence.

I told my landlady of my good fortune, but she did not seem to be much surprised. I began to think I had not realized the artistic ability that was in me. The landlady's daughter, though she rejoiced with me, did not seem to wonder at my good fortune.

I sent for Luigi to make him a handsome present in addition to 10 francs I had paid for his sittings. When he came I gave him 35 francs.

"Grazia, signorina!" he said. "Now I have 50 francs to spend."

"Not 50, Luigi—35."

"No, signorina; it is 50. With the 15 francs Signor Warfield paid me"—He stopped short.

"What! Signor Warfield paid you 15 francs?"

"Yes, signorina. But I was to say nothing about that."

"What did he pay you the money for?"

"For sittings. He painted in the picture every day when you were away."

For a moment I was too astonished for words, then I exclaimed: "What a fool I have been! But I'll be even with him if I have to follow him to the ends of the earth."

I kept my word. I married him six months later in Switzerland.

CURIOUS MULTIPLICATION.

You Need Not Know the Table Beyond "Two Times Nine."

What! Multiply 343 by 177 without knowing the multiplication table beyond the "two times nine?" Yes. If you can multiply and divide by 2 you can get any product in the following simple way:

Put down the two numbers side by side and form a column under each by successively dividing by 2 in the first column and doubling the number in the second column. Discard all remainders as you divide and carry both columns in even rows until the last quotient is 1. Then cross out every line across the three columns that has an even number in the first column, add what remains in the second column and you have the product. In the following columns the numbers in parentheses are the ones to be discarded:

85	708	4
(42)	(1,416)	(8)
21	2,832	16
(10)	(5,664)	(32)
5	11,328	64
(2)	(22,656)	(128)
1	45,312	256
	60,711	343

The reason why this comes out so nicely may be explained by means of a third column, showing the successive powers of 2. The powers standing in the uncrossed lines will exactly account for the remainders that were rejected. Their sum is therefore equal to the multiplier, 343, and opposite each is the partial product equal to 177 times the corresponding power of 2.—Youth's Companion.

Passing of Old Houses.

Riders and walkers through the New England countryside and villages learn to look for the venerable houses, many of them centenarians twice over, which not only distinguish this region, but fit into its landscapes with a suitability which newer buildings somehow lack. As this interest grows the observer begins to notice that they are all too rapidly disappearing to give place to modern houses which are certainly no improvement in workmanship and architectural design, and not necessarily superior in comfort and convenience if the old houses are properly handled. In losing these ancient buildings we are losing not only parcels of history. We are losing quite as much a dignified and fitting style of domestic architecture which is all the more effective by being severely plain.—Boston Transcript.

Cooling Water Without Using Ice.

To cool water without using ice get a slender glass test tube from any drug store. Half fill it with nitrate of ammonia salts, fill up with water, cork tightly. Shake till the salt is dissolved. Be careful to wipe the outside of the tube dry in order that all traces of the nitrate may be removed. Place this tube into a glass of water and agitate as you would a spoon. The water is rapidly chilled. The nitrate of ammonia salts can be bought at any drug store. This is a far better way of cooling water than putting ice in it.—New York World.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Sept. 20.—There was a fair enquiry from overseas buyers for Manitoba spring wheat Saturday, but owing to the sharp advance in prices in the Winnipeg market the bids were all out of line and little new business was done. The local market for coarse grain was quiet, but the feeling was about steady. The local trade in flour continues fairly active at firm prices, but the export business is quiet. The demand for millfeed is good.

The butter market is quiet and prices are tending towards a lower level owing to the disappointing demand from the coast for supplies. Receipts for the week were 12,585 packages, as compared with 9636 for the same week last year, but the total receipts for the season to date are 63,744 packages smaller than in the same period a year ago. Cheese was unchanged. Receipts for the week were 41,615 boxes, as compared with 62,473 for the same week last year.

Trade in eggs is fairly active. Receipts for the week 5852 cases, as against 4351 for the same week last year.

CHEESE MARKETS.

LONDON, Ont., Sept. 20.—Nine factories offered 1595 boxes of colored cheese Saturday with bidding 13¾c to 14⅛c and no sales.

ST. HYACINTHE, Que., Sept. 20.—At the dairy board Saturday 225 packages of butter were sold at 27c per lb., and 474 boxes cheese were sold at 13⅝c.

COWANSVILLE, Que., Sept. 20.—At the meeting of the Eastern Townships Dairymen's Association here Saturday 12 factories offered 665 packages of butter. Four buyers present offered 27½c. No sales were made.

BELLEVILLE, Ont., Sept. 20.—Offerings yesterday were: 1325 white and 203 colored boxes of cheese. The sales totaled 675 at 14⅝c, the highest price offered, and 635 at 14 1-16c. The balance of holders refused these bids.

TALES TOLD BY SOLDIERS FROM THE BATTLEFIELDS

A document of intense human interest, recording in simple sailor language the thrilling hours through which the British tars have recently been passing in the North Sea, has been washed up on the beach at Felixstowe.

It is a little paper-covered memorandum book, and here, in sea-sodden pages, is a blue-jacket's record of the Fleet's movements from August 5 till the brilliant British victory off Heligoland a few days ago.

This is how this nautical Pepys of the First Flotilla describes the events on the day of the famous fight:

Aug. 28, 4 a.m.—Started to steam down the coast of Heligoland. Sighted six of our enemies.

7 a.m.—We heard gun-firing. Third Flotilla were engaging enemy.

8 a.m.—We sighted enemy's cruiser. We opened fire. At my gun for about ten minutes. Then "Cease fire."

About five minutes afterwards we sighted enemy's destroyer with funnels shot away.

We open fire on her, but she "nipped." First Division chased and sank her. They rescued prisoners. Defender lowered boats to rescue survivors.

11 a.m.—Standing on upper deck when we were fired on. Cruisers Fearless and Arethusa opened fire. We could not see enemy; too far away.

Frightened Germans.

11.15 a.m.—We sighted enemy's cruiser and at once opened fire. Shots were falling all around us. It was very misty. She had heavier guns than ours.

We were in a tight corner when up came our light cruiser squadron and engaged the enemy. We fired a torpedo. We were very lucky indeed we were not hit.

12 (noon)—Just sighted our battle squadron. Start to look for mines. . . . Arethusa struck in six places. No one hurt.

1.15 p.m.—Went to dinner. Still hear heavy guns firing.

2 p.m.—Laid down and had a sleep.

The diary reveals the almost ceaseless activities of the Fleet since Great Britain declared war.

One day the diarist records that the sailors "are scouring the seas for a four-masted vessel with Union Castle funnels pretending to be a hospital ship."

On August 7 he writes: "Turned out. Hear that German Fleet will not come out and fight us. They have made a base up in Norway. I wish they would come out and get it over!"

At seven o'clock on the following morning the diarist records that the crew "held up a Dutch merchantman." He adds:

9 a.m. — Sighted torpedo boats. They "nipped." We chased them. When we were nearly on top of them and thought we were going to have a scrap we found they were Dutch.

1 p.m.—Thought we were going to have another scrap. False alarm. Turned an altered course for Harwich.

5 p.m.—Just given a Hook of Holland boat a shock.

"All Hell Let Loose."

Writing home to a friend, Trooper S. Cargill says:

The Germans let all hell loose on us in their mad attempt to crush us and so win their way to Paris. They didn't succeed, and they won't succeed. I saw one ghastly affair. A German cavalry division was pursuing our retiring infantry when we were let loose on them. When they saw us coming they turned and fled, at least all but one, who came rushing at us with his lance at the charge. I caught hold of his horse, which was half mad with terror, and my chum was just about to run the rider through when he noticed the awful glaze in his eyes, and we saw that the poor devil was dead.

Tribute to French Women.

Rifleman Cedric Fischer, evidently British to the core, despite his German name, writes:

"The French women seemed to think that the best cure for shrapnel or bullet wound was a bottle of wine and a raw egg. On the Wednesday fight the women brought hot potatoes and new bread right into the trenches and firing line. I can assure you they are the bravest women I have ever met."

Private R. Coombs says in a letter:

"A woman said laughingly to me, 'If you kill the Kaiser, you shall have my daughter.' I replied that I could do that all right, and she should have a hair of his moustache." While F. Bennison, R.A.M.C., declares, "If singing could wipe the Germans out, they would be dead by now."

The Trade That Was Germany's

SOME BENEFITS that Canada might derive from Europe's war are denied us by restrictions of Empire patriotism. The keenest Canadian business man would not willingly profit to-day by a situation that handicaps the Mother Country.

But in the field of commercial activity now open to Canadian manufacturers, there are now—by reason of this unsought war—various opportunities for us, which mean loss to none other than Germany.

Much of the trade that was Germany's in Canada should now become our own. Who but our own Canadian manufacturers should now make the hosiery, the underwear, the paper, the toys, the silver, and much of the chemicals, dye-stuffs, and other things Germany has supplied us!

All this additional business, now so readily tending toward Canadian concerns, will be divided among them in proportions depending upon the aggressiveness with which they, respectively, go after such business.

And in that aggressiveness, as in all commercial campaigning, ADVERTISING must be an important factor.

Doubly important right now—because this trade that was Germany's is going to be apportioned among our factories at once. Our people must have these things—not six months or a year hence—they are buying them now. Stocks are running low, and the firms that ask most insistently for their share are going to get it—large and quickly.

It will be a test.

Advertising will soon reveal which of our industrial enterprises are most worthy and best prepared to profit by Germany's set-back. The firms first to advertise for this business that was Germany's will be the first to profit and the ones to profit most largely when that business becomes Canada's.

Who, among our Canadian manufacturers, is willing to be left out in the cold? Who, among such firms, will fail to advertise?

FLEET IS UNDER COVER

Austria's Navy is Still in Canal at Pola—Dreadnought is Damaged.

ROME, Sept. 21. — Despatches to Rome newspapers declare that the Austrian fleet is still lying in the canal behind the fortifications at Pola. No news of the Anglo-French fleet has been received since its reported bombardment of Cattaro.

The navy yard at Monfalcone is engaged in hurrying the work of completing the armament of a cruiser and a torpedo boat which was not finished when the war broke out.

A despatch from Venice says that one side of the Austrian dreadnought Viribusunit was badly damaged in a fight in the Adriatic but escaped her pursuers.

The Viribusunits is one of four ships constituting the largest type of the Austrian navy.

DEATH OF REV. FATHER O'LEARY

Rev. Father Patrick J. O'Leary, one of the most extensively known priests in the diocese of Peterboro was called to his reward at nine o'clock last evening at the House of Providence. Although Father O'Leary had been in ill-health for many months his death came as a sudden pang of sorrow to his many friends in this section of the diocese.

The late Father O'Leary was born in Douro some fifty years ago and there he spent his childhood and received his early education. Pursuing his studies he entered St. Michael's College at Toronto and on graduating made his theological and philosophical studies in the Grand Seminary at Montreal. He was elevated to the priesthood in December of 1893, by the late Bishop O'Connor and was appointed curate at North Bay. A few years later he was made parish priest of Galway in which capacity he labored for ten years. In 1909 he was transferred to Bracebridge from which he resigned over a year ago on account of ill health.

During the past twelve months he has lived between here and Bracebridge at which parish he was succeeded by his younger brother, Rev. Father Michael O'Leary.

The stern disciplinarians of St. Michael's College and the Grand Seminary, together with his own spirit of self-effacement, made the late Father O'Leary a valiant spiritual soldier. His passionate love for all humanity, his broad sympathies, his single-minded devotion, and his intimacy with all sides of human life made of him a strong champion of the oppressed, a stern opponent of wrong living and a wonderfully potent pleader of His Master's cause.

Besides a sorrowing community the deceased leaves an aged mother, Mrs. John O'Leary, at home in Douro, four sisters, Mrs. L. McDonald, of Douro, Mrs. Thomas Lynch of Otonabee, Mrs. Wm. Holsit of Montreal, and Mrs. John McCann of Bracebridge, also five brothers, Rev. Father Michael O'Leary of Bracebridge, John, Maurice and William in Douro, and Joseph of Ottawa University to mourn his death.

The body will be taken to Douro tomorrow afternoon at two o'clock from the House of Providence, and will be placed in St. Joseph's Church where it will lie in state till Wednesday morning at nine o'clock when requiem high mass will be celebrated and the remains interred at St. Joseph's Cemetery.

The Chilian government has authorized an expenditure of $60,000 in American gold for machinery and supplies to be installed in the government railway shops.

TROOPS ARE REVIEWED

Equipment of Men at Valcartier is Now Nearly Complete

VALCARTIER CAMP, Sept. 21.—On a grassy plain hedged in by the Laurentian mountains, about 25,000 Canadian soldiers were reviewed yesterday for the third and last time before they leave for England, by the Duke of Connaught. It was a splendid day for the greatest military ceremonial parade which has ever taken place in Canada, and thousands of visitors lined the encloure. Practically every man in the rank wore a service uniform, barring of course, the brigade of Highlanders, and carried a rifle across his shoulder, which indicates that the work of equipping the expeditionary force is practically completed, and it will not be long before camp in Valcartier is broken.

When about 17,000 men, attended the church service in the morning there was an impressive ceremony. Rev. Canon Scott conducted the services. In the audience was the Duke and Duchess of Connaught and Princess Patricia, Sir Robert and Lady Borden, Sir George E. Foster, Hon. Robert Rogers, Sir Henry and Lady Egan, American Consul-General Foster, and a number of prominent people from various Canadian cities.

It took nearly two hours for the great mass of soldiers to line up on the parade grounds to get in readiness for the "march past."

The Duke of Connaught appeared on his charger followed by a number of aides and attendants at three o'clock and was met by Col. Sam Hughes and Col. Victor Williams at the saluting base while the massed bands played "God Save the King."

Sir Robert Borden said afterwards: "It was a wonderful spectacle, the most wonderful which has ever taken place in Canada. By their performance to-day there is no doubt that every man will give a good account of himself."

OFFERS BUILDING FOR SOLDIERS

Cordage Building at Disposal of City

G. C. Wainwright, of Montreal, formerly manager of the Bank of Ottawa here, has sent the following letter to Mayor Buller:

Montreal, Que., Sept. 19, 1914.

William Buller, Esq.,
Mayor, Peterboro, Ont.

Dear Mr. Buller,—If a second contingent is mobilized in Canada, it has occurred to me that the government might be persuaded to make Peterborough a centre. In this case we could arrange to let them have the Cordage buildings, which, as you know, are in good condition and are kept heated during the winter. These buildings would make an ideal temporary barracks, and would be quite close to some open spaces for drilling the troops. If you take this matter up with the proper authorities and bring it to a conclusion, it would be a splendid thing for business in Peterborough during the coming winter. It is not necessary for me to say anything further, but the advantages will be apparent to you.

Yours truly,
G. C. WAINWRIGHT.

AUSTRIAN EFFORT TO CHECK RUSSIANS FAILS, AND ADVANCE GOES ON

Siege Artillery is Now in Place Before Jaroslau and Bombardment is in Progress—Fighting Progresses Around Przemsyl—German Army Corps Reduced to Fragments Near Sandomir.

LONDON, Sept. 21. — The official statement from the chief of the Russian general staff, issued at Petrograd last night, says that the Russians are bombarding the fortress of Przemsyl, whose artillery has opened fire.

The statement follows:

"The Austrian troops which attempted to check our advance in front of Baranow and Ranichow in Galicia, were repulsed with heavy losses.

"Siege artillery is now bombarding the fortifications of Jaroslau.

"Fighting is going on against the garrison at Przemsyl. We have replied with artillery fire.

"The Russian troops crossing the forests are finding batteries abandoned by the Austrians."

The following official communication was issued by the Russian legation at Antwerp yesterday:

"The offensive movement of the Germans in East Prussia has been checked by Gen. Rennekampt.

"On the line between Breslau and Ivangorod the Russians have captured part of the artillery, including 36 howitzers, which the Germans are sending from Breslau for an attack on Ivangorod.

"A force comprising one German army corps, under Gen. Von Treyza, again has been defeated near Sandomir so completely that there remains only remnants of the corps in Galicia."

Advice from The Times' correspondent at Petrograd state:

"The Saxon cavalry division which recently arrived in East Prussia from France, has suffered heavy losses. Near Sandomir, Russian Poland, the Russians have again defeated the broken remnants of the reorganized German Landwehr corps under Gen. Woirsch. Here, evidently the Austrians had prepared to cross the Vistula river.

"The seizure of Krsheshov, which is the point where the Austrians would have crossed the river, is of great importance. Krsheshov is a small town on the San river between Jaroslau and the confluence of the San and the Vistula. Consequently with the occupation of Krsheshov the Russian front widens appreciably and is enabled to cross the river at several points simultaneously in considerable force.

"Javoray, where the Russians captured 5,000 prisoners and 30 guns, is 15 miles east of Jaroslau. This the Russians are approaching Jaroslau from the east and threaten to emerge from the fortress after crossing at Krsheshov.

"The relentless pursuit of the Austrians continues. The Russians are forging an iron ring around the Galician strongholds, where the remnants of the Austrian armies are seeking shelter."

The Petrograd correspondent of The Exchange Telegraph Co. sends the following by way of Rome:

"The Russians have completely cut off Gen. Dankl's army, which forms the extreme left of the new battle front from Przemsyl to Cracow (Galicia), and prevented his junction with the forces under the command of Gen. Von Auffenberg. While Gen. Dankl is retreating in a desperate attempt to reach the Cracow fortifications, the Russians are advancing from Sandomir in an endeavor to cut off that retreat as well."

Gen. Dankl Trapped?

ROME, Sept. 21. — The Tribuna's correspondent at Petrograd says that 150,000 Austrians commanded by Gen. Dankl, have been completely enveloped by 300,000 Russians between the Rivers San and Vistula. All efforts at extrication from this plight, it is reported, have proved unavailing.

The Austrian forces in question are said to be entirely without provisions and the Russian commander is said to have sent word to the Austrian general to surrender.

Crown Prince Far Too Brave.

LONDON, Sept. 21. — A despatch from Geneva says the Kaiser, who is still in Luxemburg, has severely reprimanded the crown prince for exposing his staff uselessly to artillery fire in order to see a battle. From Basle to Cologne, and also on the immediate French frontier at Metz-Thionville fortifications are being refortified.

In Berlin and the principal sea ports and industrial towns placards "We Want Peace!" were posted during the night, but were torn down by the police.

German people are beginning to know the truth. German agencies and newspapers neglect the operations in France to magnifying victories in Eastern Prussia.

Duchess Loses Annuity.

LONDON, Sept. 21.—As a result of the European war, the Duchess of Mecklenburg-Htrelitz will lose the annuity of $15,000 allowed her by the British Government.

Dowager Grand Duchess of Mecklenburg-Htrelitz is the granddaughter of George III., and first cousin of Queen Victoria. She was born in 1822 and married at Buckingham Palace to the grand duke in 1843.

Servians Repulsed Austrians.

NISH, Servia, Sept. 21.—Via London.)—It is officially announced that numerically inferior Servian force has repulsed an attack by 20,000 Austrians near Novipazar. The Servians inflicted heavy losses on the attacking force.

TO SUMMON MILK VENDORS TO POLICE COURT

Quality of Milk not Satisfactory to Board of Health

The Port Hope Guide says the milk vendors of that town will be summoned to police court. At a meeting of the board of health the result of the milk tests was the subject of much discussion. At the last meeting of the board the clerk was instructed to notify the milk vendors that the milk was below the standard and that conditions would have to be improved. The last analysis, however, showed very little improvement, and the board decided to have all the vendors summoned before the magistrate to explain.

Dr. Dickinson voted against the resolution.

Mr. Ambrose pointed out that Dr. Dickinson, as medical health officer, should take the lead in these matters. He was paid a salary for his work, still he expected the members of the board to shoulder all the responsibility.

Dr. Dickinson thought the milkmen were using every effort to furnish good milk.

Mayor Bush pointed out that the by-law fixed the milk standard at 3.50. If it was impossible for the vendors to come up to this standard, then the by-law should be amended. It was nonsense to offer excuses every time.

Mr. Fulford said the board had decided some time ago that if the average test came up to 3.50 they would be satisfied.

The mayor informed Mr. Fulford that the by-law fixed the standard, and until the council amended the same it would have to remain at 3.50.

No Place For Thumb Prints.

Mrs. Flatbush—And you think your little boy steals your pies?

Mrs. Bensonhurst—Somebody does, and I suspect Tommie.

"Well, there's a way you can tell."

"How?"

"By the thumb prints."

"Oh, no, I can't. When Tommie gets through with a pie there aren't any thumb prints!"

MANY BIG BATTLES FOUGHT ON SUNDAY

"Will they fight on Sundays?"

That question has often been asked lately, and answered already by the fact that fighting between the troops of the allies and the Germans has taken place every Sunday since the war began.

Great nations at war, indeed, have rarely taken account of Sunday, and some of the most famous battles in history were fought upon the day of rest. The best known Sunday battle of all, of course, is Waterloo, which caused the overthrow of the great Napoleon.

Inkerman was another Sunday battle, while amongst other important fights on the seventh day are Ramilies, one of Marlborough's great victories fought on Whit-Sunday, May 23rd, 1706; Oudenarde, on Sunday, July 11th, 1708; and Malplaquet, on Sunday, September 11th, 1709. It may be recalled, too, that the Indian mutiny broke forth on Sunday, May 10th, 1857.

At sea the best known Sunday battle was when Lord Howe inflicted a serious defeat on the French naval forces on Sunday, the "glorious first of June," 1794.

COBOURG OBJECTS TO HIGH PRICE OF COAL

(Cobourg Sentinel-Star,

At the council meeting on Monday evening the coal question was discussed. It appears that the prices set for the winter for four towns are:—

Cobourg—Egg coal $7.50, nut coal $8.

Oshawa—Egg coal $7.50, nut coal $7.50.

Port Hope—Egg coal $7.25, nut coal $7.50.

Peterboro—Egg coal $7.25, nut coal $7.50.

The last three named places are further away from the Pennsylvania coal fields than Cobourg, yet there is a difference in our prices from their's of 25c. a ton. We don't think it would be any hardship for local dealers to lower the prices to correspond with those of Peterboro, Port Hope and Oshawa—all of which have further to carry their coal.

Houghton, Mich., despatch says the directors of Calumet and Arizona Mining Co. there announce that the dividend due to be declared this month will be passed.

AUSTRALIAN CRAFT LOST

Submarine AE1 Disappears With Thirty-Five Men on Board.

MELBOURNE, Australia, Sept. 21.—(Via London.)—Rear Admiral Sir George Patey, commander of the Australian navy, in a wireless despatch to the Government states that the submarine AE1, which was reported Saturday as lost, disappeared with 35 officers and men on board. Other vessels of the fleet made a search but failed to discover any wreckage. The loss is attributed to accident, as there was no enemy within 100 miles and the weather was fine at the time.

This is the first disaster in the history of the Australian navy. The AE1 was under the command of Lieut.-Commander T. F. Besant.

MANY OFFICERS AMONG KILLED

Latest List Includes Capt. Grenfell, Noted Polo Player

London, Sept. 20.—Captain R. N. Grenfell, the well-known polo player of the Buckingham Yeomanry, attached to the 9th Lancers, was among the officers killed in action in France. His name appears in the list, under date of September 16, issued by the war office to-night.

The list also contains the name of Captain Lord Guernsey, of the Irish Guards, and Captain Lord A. V. Hay, also of the Irish Guards. Col. F. R. F. Boleau, of the general staff, died of his wounds.

The names are given of 20 officers killed, 40 wounded, one who died of wounds and one missing.

Sixteen More Officers Killed.

A second casualty list, made public to-night by the war office, again shows a large number of officers among the killed, wounded or missing. Sixteen officers are reported to have been killed and 38 wounded and 10 missing.

The famous Coldstream Guards and the Black Watch Regiments were among the sufferers, the former having 13 wounded or missing and the latter 10 wounded or missing.

Among the wounded are Lord James Thomas Stewart-Murray, son of the Duke of Atholl. He is a captain of the Queen's Own Cameron Highlanders and won both the King's and Queen's Medals for bravery in the South African war. He is 34 years of age.

Others reported wounded are the Hon. Fitzroy Richard Somerset and the Hon. Nigel Fitzroy Somerset, respectively the eldest and the third sons of Lord Raglan, and Major the Hon. Alfred Henry Maitland, third son of the Earl of Lauderdale.

Lieutenant-Fitzroy Richard Somerset is 29 years of age and belongs to the Grenadier Guards, while his brother is 27 years of age and a lieutenant in the Gloucestershire regiment. Major Maitland is 42 years of age. He has seen active service in both Egypt and South Africa, and has been awarded medals in each campaign for distinguished service.

THE WEATHER

Although today would lie with some of midsummer's hottest ones, we are occasionally being reminded by the few falling leaves that autumn is all its glory will soon be here, and the prospects for autumn foliage being very bright this year are due to the recent heavy rains making the foliage unusually verdant for this time of the year.

On account of these rains the grass is also uuusually green and fresh and stock will be stabled by the farmer this year in excellent condition on account of the verdant pasture.

The official thermometer has registered 86 for several days.

LINDSAY FAIR NOT UP TO MARK OF OTHER YEARS

German Kaiser, Peterboro Fair and the Railroads Are Blamed

(Lindsay Post.)

Although the clerk of the weather dished up perfect weather conditions for the Lindsay Central Fair, the attendance on Friday was not as large as the second day last year. The turnstiles registered some 4,500 in attendance in the afternoon. A combination of circumstances is responsible for the falling off—the German Kaiser, the railroads and the fact that Peterboro fair directors actually purloined Lindsay's fair dates. This had a tendency to draw from the attendance as well as the exhibitors.

Then the European war had its effect, too. Owing to the unsettled condition of affairs as a result of the sanguinary conflict now being waged a great many people in Canada have been stampeded and are viewing things through blue spectacles. They are hanging on to the Cobalt and will not spend money only where it is necessary.

(Lindsay Warder.)

Friday, the middle day of the Lindsay Central, was so far as weather conditions were concerned, perfectly satisfactory, and who ever made the supplications for good weather might next time ask that the crowd would harmonize with the elements. All things considered the fair was a success, even if it did lack in the number of its visitors. Militating circumstances which were unavoidable and not attributable to any neglect on the part of the directorate, were acountable for the shortage of numbers this year. The management on other occasions received reduced rates on the railroads of half fare tickets, while this year one and one-third fare was charged. Peterboro exhibition may have taken away a few who always visited Lindsay, and the universal cry of war by the pessimist probably kept some at home watching their little belongings least they should creep away in their absence.

The total number who entered the gates officially given, was 3,300, or 1,500 less than the second day of last year, but it is expected that today will counter-balance yesterday's deficit.

In the horse stables the exhibits were noticeable deficient, also in the sheep, hog, cattle pens and stalls. The poultry house had some choice birds, but was also behind last year in point of entries. In fruits, roots and vegetables Mr. Connolly stated that there was never a better exhibit. The competition in grain was keen and some choice bags of oats, peas and wheat were shown.

THE EAST END OF LONDON

Church is Doing Good Work Against Great Odds

On Sunday evening in St. Luke's Church, Rev. F. J. Sawers delivered a very interesting sermon on his experiences in the east end of London, England, where, perhaps, the greatest cosmopolitan population of the world is centred.

In the course of the sermon he went on to say that of course every city had its east end where the conditions of the populace are very often squalid. In the midst of this poor quarter of London, the church is doing wonderful work, chiefly by way of street preaching. It is very common to see ministers speaking in the public to an exceedingly large audience.

Then, again, their work is discounted by the street speaking secularists, who are usually to be found in Victoria or High Park, talking lustily against the church, its work, and its upholders, and generally crying down religion in general.

Rev. Mr. Sawers, after listening to one of these secularists address an immensely large audience, and after he was through his tirade of abuse against the church, Rev. Mr. Sawers mounted upon the secularist platform and made an impassioned plea for the church, and refuted much of the sayings of the secularist against organized religion.

Sunday evening in London's east quarter is a scene of saloons wide open and men and women drinking to their heart's content. Shops are also wide open and generally business is going on as if it were an ordinary week day.

Amidst this scene of drinking, gayety, anti-religionists and many sordid amusements, it is not necessary to say that frightful temptations are lurking at every corner.

We may be thankful that such conditions as may be witnessed any time in East London, is not common among our Canadian cities. It is, indeed, something to be thankful for.

THOMAS J. BATES DIES AT SPOKANE

Was Brother of F. W. Bates, Stewart Street

Mr. Fred W. Bates, 654 Bethune Bethune Street, has received a telegram announcing the death of his brother, Thomas J. Bates, at Spokane, Washington, on Friday, September 18.

The late Thomas Bates who was 50 years of age will be remembered by business men of this city who were schoolboys together at the local schools. The deceased was a telegraph operator and he attended school, and made his start in this city. He had been ill for six months. About ten years ago, the late Mr. Bates visited his brother and other relatives here.

He is survived by his second wife and one daughter Miss Ruth Bates of Calgary, who at one time held a position at the local telephone exchange.

HEBREWS OBSERVE THE NEW YEAR

Services Will be Held for Two Days

At sunset last night the Jewish new year started, and exactly at that time all people of Jewish faith in Peterboro and throughout the world began the solemn and joyous festival of Rosh Hashannah, or the Jewish New Year.

The festival marks the beginning of the 5675 in the Hebraic calendar, and, according to rabbinical traditions, this calendar dates from the beginning of the world. For two days of the new year all necessary labor is abstained from and during those two days, solemn and impressive services are being held here and are attended by all of the faith.

Ten days after the festival of Rosh Hashannah is the Day of Atonement, or Yon Kippur. This is a day of feasting and much gayety. The Jewish New Year is celebrated in a somewhat similar manner as by those of the Christian faith.

SOLDIER'S GALLANTRY

Wounded French Officer Insists on Assailant Being Spared

Stirring accounts of the skirmish at the front occasionally get before the public in the form of letters home from soldiers.

Here is one from a young French cavalry officer in Alsace: "I had to leave my station to patrol some wood in front of our line. In the middle of the wood we saw a clearing in which stood a dismounted section of German cavalry at the gate of a large farm.

"The lieutenant in charge of our party at once made up his mind. He took half of the troop to make a detour and approach the farm from the opposite side, while he left me in charge of the rest of the men to attack from the front.

"In a few minutes we galloped on to the farm from both sides. The Germans, hearing the noise of horses' hoofs, ran out of the farm and tried to remount, but we were on them too quickly.

"My lieutenant fell with a bullet in his thigh. 'Never mind me,' he shouted, 'into the farm quick, and cut them up.' We rushed into the farm yard after the foe.

"The Germans took refuge in the byres, and, hiding behind the cattle fired revolvers at us. We soon finished them off. The last, however, was a German sergeant who had shot the lieutenant. He hid behind a cow. I fired two shots, and the animal fell dead.

"I was about to shoot the German when our lieutenant, who had been carried in, said, 'Spare him; take him prisoner.' We quickly disarmed all the prisoners."

Small Farms in War Zone

Most of the Belgian farms are small. A 150-acre farm in Belgian is looked upon as very large. Less than two thousand Belgian landowners own more than 250 acres apiece. More than in England, perhaps, the Belgian buys land for an investment pure and simple without an eye to social position or any intention of cultivating it. He lets it at a rate equivalent to the current rate of interest on the purchase money.

British steamer Caldergrove has been chartered to take 170 cases of oil to New Zealand; Norwegian steamer will carry 19,000 barrels to Scandinavian ports, both clearances from New York.

REV. DR. BOWLES' SERMONS AT CHARLOTTE ST. CHURCH

Large Congregations Hear the Chancellor of Victoria University

REV. DR. BOWLES

The services in Charlotte Street Methodist church yesterday were of an impressive character, indicative of the ceremony, so important to that congregation, of laying the corner stone to-day of their new church. The sermons were preached by the Chancellor of Victoria University, Toronto, Dr. Bowles, to very large congregations. His discourses were delivered with the object of helping people's faith in these days of stress and trial because of the great conflict going on in Europe.

The morning sermon was a discussion of our sense of ignorance and littlenes, showing how out of this very sense of ignorance and littleness came man's feeling of a great destiny yet to be achieved. It embodied the quality of hope. The evening sermon was a consideration of the old, never-ending problem of the world's evil. The music for the occasion was appropriate and deserved much commendation. At the morning service the choir rendered a fine anthem, and Mr. W. F. Skitch sang a solo entitled "Cast Thy Bread Upon the Waters." At the evening service an anthem was sung, and Miss Richardson gave a fine interpretation of Shelley's "Abide With Me."

Dr. Bowles read as his lesson, I Corinthians, chap. 13, and took verse 12 as his text: "For now we see through a glass darkly; but then, face to face: now I know in part; but then shall I know even as also I am known." The prophet came not with lamentations, the speaker began, but with rejoicing and with song. The mind turns back to these words, for they have a great attraction. The mind is drawn to them because they make for us a confession of our human limitations. A proud and self-sufficient spirit does not become us. May we be forgiven for speeches of that sort. In our spirits God has built a confession, and we are priests in more senses than one.

A man who does not know the grace of penitence, who does not know contrition, is not true to our common humanity Nothing makes a man more social than a sense of his own limitations. These words make confession of the imperfect character of our knowledge. Tennyson expressed this thought well in many lines. "An infant crying in the night with nothing but a cry," was one, perhaps an extreme example.

Science and Religious Thought.

Science, some 60 years ago or more, upset religious thought. Before that happened men said the world was 6,000 years old, and one man had figured out the creation to a certain hour in the morning of a beautiful day. Then science said that was not the way the world came into existence, and it rolled the ages backwards and backwards and said the world came into being in a different way by slow development.

You can go too far in belittling your religion, and the speaker instanced the comparison, filthy rags. Others sneer at sacred things and say you can't know—nobody knows what the things of religion are. Some folks say you can't know truth, that it's a dismal grind to seek knowledge. Well, the speaker thought it was the best search. He would rather have what he got from his search for knowledge than money. In this materialistic age men have not sought for gold as they have sought for knowledge. It is a characteristic of the past and present generation to know something. Men have gathered the treasures and made the burdens of humanity lighter through the search after facts.

It takes some knowledge to know how little a man knows. Some do not know enough. There is something in us that makes us say of what we've got, "That's nothing; let us reach out for something more." That is the way we all treat reality.

We have got a lot of facts; we have searched in many directions, but what does it all mean? Here is where the shadows come. What is life? What does it mean?

This text is a soaring confession; it carries one up. Out of it comes the promise that some time we shall surely know. Questions are to be answered. So long as there are problems, there is the instinctive belief that they will be solved. The undying things of our humanity are not knowledge, but faith, charity. We proceed from one thing to another, and in the search leave some things behind. We realize at times that a thing is evil and put it behind us.

When we quit wondering about things, we are pretty nearly dead. Dr. Bowles then told of the old story of Boots and his brothers, a lesson in the old reader, and how Boots was always wondering about things and was laughed at by his brothers, but eventually found knowledge. When there is no sense of the littleness of things, we are nearly dead. Some would die if they got to Heaven—they haven't woke up yet. God expected the mind to be alive and stirred up.

The little side also brings out the other unlimited side, to which we belong. Unbelief speaks to a man out of his littleness and says the path is downward. Faith says the path is to the right and upward, for some day we will stand in the high places and see what we cannot see now. If that power is not ours we are not what we are.

We are not static creatures—we are a procession of people. The scientist cannot grasp the idea of motion, yet the reality of it is with him all the while.

This divine charity is the language af love. So long as love is in a man's soul, there is the prophecy of things to come. Life takes on new things; it has a better future. The mother that cares for her child sees more than the little body of flesh. She sees the boy, the man, all the future of the child. The past is not so great—it is the future that is before us.

Evening Sermon.

The subject of the evening sermon was "The Goodness of God and the Evil of the World." He read the lesson from the eighth chapter of Romans, but there was no text.

Some time ago, Dr. Bowles said, he was asked to write a message to the students, as was customary, and he thought that it ought to have greater gravity and seriousness than was usual when so many men were laying down their lives for a great and righteous cause. That was true for men in the college; it is true for men out of the college.

Some people are never disturbed by problems; their life is a continual song. His words were not so much for them as for those who were oppressed or perplexed by the problems of life.

The possibility of evil is always here. God made men free. We can make a choice, and there is a possibility of making an evil choice. We could not be rational, free beings if this was not the prerogative of our race. Who would ask God to take back this freedom of choice? The dignity of our souls lies in the power God has given us to make free choice, to make free use of our place in this world, and to secure high and lofty achievement.

God's method is development under law. Why does not God put an end to this evil? If we are to be free there must be a possibility of evil in the world, but that does not solve all our problems. We are not made—we are being made. We are in a procession; we cannot break away. At one time you possessed no knowledge; all you had was an instinct for hunger. From a mere animalism you came up through all the stages of development. There is a finality in all of us and the possibility becomes almost a probability. The speaker said he could not conceive of a human life except as a development, something as being left behind. We recognize this thing as evil and leave it behind, push on and seek that which is good. God does not make perfect beings, like a machine that does its work perfectly, so that you can say, let it alone. All your life is an action, a growth, a development by which all may achieve their character and their destiny.

God's world on the whole is good in its entirety. It would be a calamity to blot out the world even with all its evil. It is a wonderful and beautiful world. Yet the speaker thought that optimism in its usual extreme form was a very weak philosophy of life. We want to have a desire for truth and reality, but facts are facts and it does not do to blind ourselves to them. As an illustration he told of a minister who was very much fascinated with a certain landscape and particularly of a solitary pine tree in the distance. Having a photograph taken of it and showing the picture to his friends, they would simply ask, "Whose stable is this?" for in the picture was to be seen prominently a barn or stable. The camera saw all the facts, the minister did not.

He quoted those famous lines from Wordsworth concerning Tintern Abbey:

"For I have learned to look on nature,
Not as in the hour of thoughtless youth,
But hearing oftentimes
The still sad music of humanity."

In spite of all that Huxley and Darwin have written upon the interpretation of nature, there runs through all things the power of God.

Out of darknes and gloom shall come humanity's greatest joy; out of evil and carnage God brought the world. Christ sank on the cross. Out of evil God is bringing good; that is love's message, which he would preach everywhere. He told of the strange idea he had of God when he was young, of hosts bowing down to Him. Some day we shall believe in Christ and understand Him better. We are here to help one another, then we shall understand that the cross of Christ illumines.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

EXPORTS INTO CANADA.

Editor Review,

Sir,—The newspapers contain statistics of the immense exports into Canada by the U.S. of American wheat. All the lake ports are said to be filled with U. S. vessels on this errand. Can you tell why this is the case?

THE DAY

(The author of this magnificent poem, which first appeared in the Daily Mail of London, Eng., is Mr. Henry Chappell, a railway porter at Bath. Mr. Chappell is known to his comrades as the "Bath Railway Poet." A poem such as this lifts him to the rank of a national poet.)

You boasted the Day, and you toasted the Day,
And now the Day has come.
Blasphemer, braggart and coward all,
Little you reck of the numbing ball,
The blasting shell, or the "white arm's" fall,
As they speed poor humans home.

You spied for the Day, you lied for the Day,
And woke the Day's red spleen.
Monster, who asked God's aid Divine.
Then strewed His seas with the ghastly mine;
Not all the waters of the Rhine
Can wash thy foul hands clean.

You dreamed for the Day, you schemed for the Day;
Watch how the Day will go.
Slayer of age and youth and prime (Defenceless slain for never a crime),
Thou art steeped in blood as a hog in slime,
False friend and cowardly foe.

You have sown for the Day, you have grown for the Day,
Yours is the harvest red,
Can you hear the groans and the awful cries?
Can you see the heap of slain that lies,
And sightless turns to the flame-split skies
The glassy eyes of the dead?

You have wronged for the Day, you have longed for the Day,
That lit the awful flame;
'Tis nothing to you that hill and plain
Yield sheaves of dead amid the grain;
That widows mourn for their loved ones slain,
And mothers curse thy name.

But after the Day there's a price to pay
For the sleepers under the sod,
And He you have mocked for many a day—
Listen, and hear what He has to say:
"Vengeance is mine, I will repay."
What can you say to God?

IN THE ARCHIVES

If you find that your knowledge of Canadian history is becoming indifferent as to dates, if your enthusiasm over British victories is on the wane, by all means take a journey to the Dominion Department of Archives at Ottawa.

At once you realize that you can never remember all you see. So you decide to take note of the things which interest you the most. Two beautiful flags, riddled by bullets and showing all the dignities of victory, make you pause on entering the room to the right. Then, when you read that they were Brock's flags in the War of 1812, your slumbering patriotism rouses. They are the very flags which were carried to the fore when victory crowned their reverenced leader at the Battle of Queenston Heights. One was from the regiment of Fifth Canadian Militia, the other from the Incorporated Militia of Upper Canada. There they hang, silent witnesses to the bravery of one of Canada's greatest heroes.

Turning from them, your eye meets an ominous-looking document. It is the offer of $4,000 for the capture of Papineau. This rebellious leader was much sought after by the authorities. Two decidedly different attitudes surely are those presented by the war-stained flags of victory and the bit of parchment!

Right beside the document is another dated 1588, from Baron la Fontaine, asking permission of the French King to bring an expedition out to Canada. Bits of antiquity surely, which remind one that it takes a long time to accomplish the making of a nation.

And you are reminded of the days when the practice of buying and selling slaves formed a great part in the business enterprises of the day. It is quite evident that the good citizens of Lower Canada did not have as many scruples about this trade as history and a sort of shocked theoretical horror would have us believe. For one citizen of Quebec parted with sixty-five substantial pounds for a lusty negro who was imported from New York. The date was 1761, and the receipt is being carefully preserved in the Dominion Archives.

And just while we are writing of documents and parchments and the like we must not fail to mention the old Jesuit manuscripts, which are still in a good state of preservation. There is also an order, of some official significance, signed by Bigot in 1758.

And coming on down to more recent proclamations, one of the most interesting is a petition to Lord Durham, dated 1838, by the Indians, asking for greater freedom of territory. Poor, old red men! Perhaps even at that early date they felt that their lands were soon to be usurped completely, and they driven farther and farther back into the great, unpeopled wilds of the Dominion.

An Indian, when he wants anything very much, will resort to almost any strategy to get it. Ordinarily he is not diplomatic, but when his sense of Indian loyalty is aroused, tact is as natural to him as his usual reticence. A beautiful string of wampum testifies to the tact of the Indians in approaching Lord Durham.

The signature of the heroic Wolfe appears on many papers. These are wonderfully preserved, for their age. They are military commissions for the most part. One must be a patriot when one looks upon the sacred, silent relics which point to the heroism of the makers of the Dominion. All trivial ideas of make-believe patriotism seem as nothing when one looks upon these tangible evidences of great men's worth. If ever patriotism is to be kindled in a schoolboy or girl it will be from seeing the documents and ensigns at the Dominion Archives at Ottawa.

Chinese Rebels Active.

PEKIN, Sept. 21. — Rigid measures, equal to martial law, have been instituted by the Government in a number of provinces and important cities following the discovery that the rebels in the capital were preparing to take advantage of the Government's financial difficulties. There have been many arrests and a number of executions, it is said.

Turkish Envoy in Rome.

ROME, Sept. 21. — The Turkish Minister of War, Enver Pasha, the famous leader of the Young Turk element, is in this city on a secret mission. Grave apprehension is attached to his visit at the present crisis pending in German affairs.

Enver Pasha was chief of staff in the Turkish army before his accession to the Ministry of War. He is known to have strong pro-German inclinations, his appointment to the important post he now holds being due to German influence.

ST. JOHN'S WON CHAMPIONSHIP AND SILVER CUP

Defeated All Saints' at Exhibition Park by 7 to 4

The football match at the Exhibition on Saturday afternoon to decide the championship of the county of Peterborough and thereby win the R. R. Hall trophy, was played between All Saints' and St. John's. The latter won by 7-4. The St. John's aggregation were never in danger, having a lead at half time by 4-1. Mr. Day was referee.

The teams:

St. John's—Goal, Flowers; backs, Perry and Stewart; half-backs, Mason, McKinley and Knight; forwards, Irwin, Bell, Holmes and Padget.

All Saints—Goal, Ridley; backs, Pullen and Wilson; half-backs, Sherman, Edwards and Dyer; forwards, Boycott, Crough, Strickland and Hutston.

COMMENT

As You Like It

Billy Sunday has drafted another one. Pitcher Ferryman, of the Atlantic club, has quit the diamond for the pulpit.

Sam Agnew, of the Browns, is said to be the slowest catcher in the big leagues when it comes to putting on his armour. Our opinion is that he has lots of company in that respect.

A Boston writer notes that it is the first time in 12 years that a Boston National league team has been in the first division. That is so long ago that the players of the team are almost forgotten. They included Fred Tenney at the initial sack, Mal Kittridge behind the plate, and Herman Long at short.

Departing from the established custom of not transferring postponed games, American league clubs will play off in the western cities games which were not played when the western clubs made their last swing through the eastern centres. In past seasons the American league made no effort to settle these games and in some instances a club would be two, three or ever four battles shy of the full schedule.

On almost every paper the name Christie Mathewson appears. One New York paper makes the assertion that he is the greatest athlete in the world. This paper is taking quite a responsibility on itself, as selecting the greatest athlete in the world is a big contract. They mustn't overlook Canada, you know, for this country turned out Walter Knox, all around professional champion, who at the age of thirty-six is still performing wonderful feats on the track and field.

The Vancouver News-Advertiser chronicles as follows:

Although an occasional cable from the old country conveys the information that the Olympic games will be held in 1916, it is doubtful whether any official of the international federation will have the temerity at this time to discuss the Olympiad scheduled for two years hence. We do not think the games will be held, and, futhermore, the big track and field meeting, which is scheduled for next year in San Francisco, is almost certain to feel the effects of the European war. Few people have time for athletic events nowadays.

Heinie Zimmerman, the fiery third sacker of the Cubs, has two weaknesses—umpires and neckties. Heinie, however, dislikes umpires as much as he likes red neckties. And the sight of an umpire acts upon Heinie in much the same way as a red necktie acts on a bull.

It is reported, although the report has not been confirmed, that Heinie has more neckties than Charley Murphy, once the boss of Heinie. But no matter how many ties Chubby Charley has, the fact remains that Heinie has enough to stock up four haberdashery shops and still have left enough to make into a stout rope that could be used in emergency to hang umpires.

While Jake Stallings is trying to win Boston's first pennant in 16 years, the sporting writers are singing his praises and heralding him as the "master builder" of baseball. It never occurred to these dopesters in the past that Stallings was a "master builder," and in the same class with Connie Mack, Johnny McGraw and numerous others. Whether it's generalship or individual brilliancy of the players that wins pennants is an oft disputed point. When he was down and had no talent worth talking about, Stallings, like many other baseball generals, was overlooked, although he must have always possessed the "master mind" which is so much in evidence to-day.

If the Braves do win the National league championship, they will be the first club to do so without having in their line-up a pitcher who had gained national fame at least one year before his club won a championship.

James, Rudolph and Tyler were not in the national baseball celebrity class last season. They didn't step into the hall of fame until the middle of the present season.

The Athletics had their Bender, their Plank and their Coombs; the Cubs their Overall, Reulbach and Brown; the Boston Red Sox their Wood and Collins; the Giants their Marquard, Mathewson, McGinnity (1905) and Tesreau; the White Sox their Ed. Walsh.

All the more credit is due to George Stallings and Johnny Evers.

If they win the National league championship, they will turn a trick no other manager and his first lieutenant have ever turned.

FIRST MONEY FOR JIMMY DIRECT AND DR. JOHNSTON

Although no new records were established by the horses at the Exhibition, the racing was better than ever. Undoubtedly the ideal weather proved of greatest assistance for the grand stand was filled to capacity on Saturday and remained so till the final heats were run off. The 2.15 and 2.50 class were the events for get-away day and for the former four horses were entered and for the latter, three.

Frank Montgomery's Jimmy Direct reached the wire first in the three heats of the 2.15 while P. Stone's horses, Tony Brino and Richard S. of Collingwood secured second and third respectively. Susie Hal, owned by Dr. Johnston, ran fourth. The best time made was 2.15½. The results were as follows:—

Jim Direct, Frank Montgomery, Peterboro	1	1	1
Tony Brino, P. Stone, Collingwood	3	2	2
Richard S., P. Stone, Collingwood	2	3	3
Susie Hal, Dr. Johnston, Peterboro	4	4	3

The 2.50 class was decided by half mile heats, Chas. Fife's horse, Dr. Johnston, winning the first two and also the fourth. The third went to Sam Ridpath's Little Jerry by a nose length after the two horses running neck and neck from the start. The best time was 1.08. The following were the results:—

Dr. Johnston, Chas. Fife, Otonabee	1	1	2	1
Little Jerry, S. Ridpath, Cobourg	3	2	1	2
Ora Tariff, C. Fife, Otonabee	2	3	3	3

THE GERMAN COBBLER

Hans Follows Advice, but it Doesn't Help Business.

By M. QUAD.

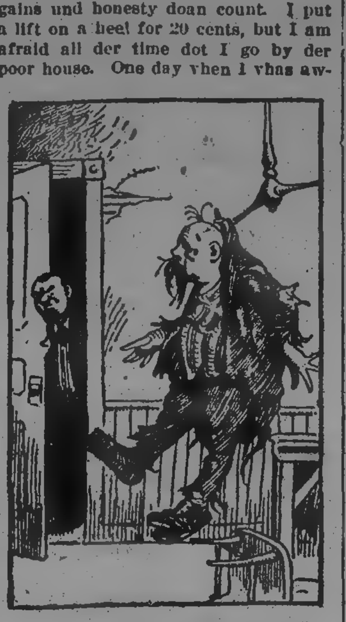
By M. QUAD.

[Copyright, 1914, by Associated Literary Press.]

VHEN I makes oop my mind to come to America an oldt man says to me:

"Hans, you vhill need adwice for a long time oafer there. Der Americans vhas a queer lot. Notting vhas two times alike mit dem."

I belief I know all about it until I get oafer here und open my shop. Den I find out dot I vhas almost a fool. Bargains und honesty doan count. I put a lift on a heel for 20 cents, but I am afraid all der time dot I go by der poor house. One day vhen I vhas awful hard oop I goes by dot little tailor und tells him peesness vhas awful poor mit me, und he says:



"IN TWO MINITS I VHAS WRECKED."

"Hans, somethings vhas wrong mit you. Look at my shop, und see how prosperous she vhas. Purty soon I vhas a rich man."

"Vhell, I like to find oudt vhat vhas wrong," I says.

"Maype I can tell you. If I vhas a customer in your shop, how vould you speak to me?"

"I should say it vhas feefteen cents for a cement patch on your shoe."

"Und no more?"

"Vhell, maybe I says he vhas a hot day."

"Ah, I see. You doan' make some customers feel at home. You vhas cold and distant. Hans, you must be deeferent."

Und he tells me how he does to build oop his big peesness. Next morning der first customer vhas a doctor who like to haf his heels fixed oop. As he comes in der door I holds out my hand und says:

"I vhas glad to see you. Take a seat. How vhas der wife und children? You vhas looking ash bright ash a young man of twenty."

"Look here, cobbler," says der doctor, "vhas it your beesness about my wife und children und how I look?"

Und he goes awhay to some other cobbler shop mit his shoes.

Der second caller vhas a man who looks very solemn, und he wants a cement patch. I shake hands mit him und says:

"You vhas welcome. It vhas a fine day, und it vhas good to see you looking so happy."

"Vhas you talking to me?" he asks.

"I vhas. Sit down and be at home."

"Und did you say I look happy?"

"I neffer see anybody look so smiling."

"Den you vhas a liar! I vhas an undertaker for seventeen years, und I neffer smile. It vhas my peessness not to smile."

Der next who comes vhas a womans. I bows to her, shakes hands und says:

"Be sure I vhas clad to meet you. You vhas looking troubled dis morning. Maype it vhas sickness in der family, or your husband vhas out all night. I sympathize mit you."

Dot womans goes avhay mit a slam of der door, und purty soon a big man mit a red face comes in und yells at me:

"Cobbler, vhat der defils you mean by speaking dis vhay to my wife?"

"I like to make her welcome," I says.

"Welcome, welcome! Do you haf to welcome some folks to a cobbler shop?"

"Und if she vhas in troubles I like to show my feelings und help her out."

"Oh, you would! Vhell, I shall gif you some troubles of your own!"

Und dot man he kicks oafer my bench und throws me about. In two minutes I vhas wrecked. He says to me vhen he goes out dot if I speaks to his wife some more he vhill break all der bones in my body.

I goes by the tailor und says:

"Vhell, you see how she vhas."

"Did you welcome der peoples?"

"I did."

"Vhell, I see how it vhas. I vhas a tailor, und you vhas a cobbler. If a man comes in here to get a coat cleaned he expects to be welcomed and sympathized mit. If a man comes into a cobbler shop he expects you to shut oop and say nottings. Hans, it vhas der vhay in America. You better say you vhas run oafer by a street car!"

Old Sam's Patriotism.

"Marse Tom," said old Sam to his employer, the grocer, "Marse Tom, ouah parson has been a-using a biggety word 'long o' late, and Ah don' know what it means. De word's 'patriotic.' Whut does it mean, boss?"

"Why, Sam," said the grocer, "patriotic means loyal, having love for the country. You love your country, don't you, Sam? Here we are on the verge of war with Mexico, and every man is full of patriotism. If war comes I expect to close up my store and go off to fight. I'm patriotic. And I expect each one of my employees to go to war too. I expect them to be patriotic too.

"You're patriotic, aren't you, Sam? You love the country, don't you?"

Sam scratched his woolly head.

"Well, Marse Tom," said he, "Ah was bohn and raised in de country, but Ise lived in the city nigh on to twenty years now. Ah used t' love de country, but Ah guess Ah likes de city best now, Marse Tom. Yes, sir."—Louisville Times.

GERMANS RETREATING?

Paris Paper Says Enemy Is Moving Back Into Belgium.

PARIS, Sept. 21. — The Echo de Paris states that according to the latest despatches received from Rome, it appears that the German army has begun retreating movements towards the Belgian frontier. This, in the opinion of the paper, would explain the diminution in the intensity of the battle recently noted.

The paper declares that it learns on excellent authority that the battle on the Aisne will soon conclude in a fresh retreat by the Germans in the direction of the forest of Ardennes, where, though greatly enfeebled, they will entrench again."

Allies Slowly Winning.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21.—Advices received at the British embassy last night declared the allies were slowly advancing in the face of a fearful onslaught by the Germans all along the far-flung battle line in northern France. All over the country attacks by the Germans, the despatch said, were being repulsed. The message was very brief, and the embassy did not make public the text.

HIS IDEA OF POLITICS.

Alien's Knowledge of America Makes Even a Judge Smile.

AN apt illustration of an alien's idea of American politics was given in the United States district court a day or two ago when Judge Thomas I. Chatfield was examining an applicant for a naturalization certificate.

"Where are the state laws made?" queried the court.

"In Albany," answered the man.

"Who makes the laws?" asked the judge.

The applicant seemed somewhat feazed by the question, and to aid him in his answer his honor asked:

"Have you ever heard of an assemblyman?"

"Oh, yes," was the reply.

"And what is the duty of an assemblyman?" was the next query.

"To take care of the office of the leader," came the quick response, at which even the dignity of the court sustained a sudden jolt, and Judge Chatfield, who possesses a keen sense of humor and a full appreciation of the eternal fitness of things, was forced to smile.—Brooklyn Eagle.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

PHELPS—NICHOLLS.

At a quiet and select wedding, which took place last Friday evening at the home of Rev. Leonard Phelps, Mark street, Peterborough, Rev. Arthur L. Phelps, B.A., of Toronto, was married to Miss Lila Irene Nicholls, recently of Vancouver, B. C. Among those present was Mr. A. P. McKenzie, M.A., of Toronto, who acted as chief groomsman. The bride and groom left the following morning for Listowel, where they will remain for a few weeks before taking up their residence in Toronto.

Dr. Neal is in Montreal, but will return in two or three days.

Mrs. R. J. Neithercut, Brandon, Man., is the guest of her sister, Mrs. W. R. Turner, 715 Water street.

Mrs. Hugh Mackie and family wish to thank their many friends and neighbors, also L. O. L. Nassau, for many kindnesses extended to them in their recent bereavement.

Mr. W. Rudkins, former industrial commissioner for Lindsay, has returned from New York city, where he has been associated in a business deal with Mr. P. H. Spies, of this city.

Constable Paterson's condition was very grave in Nicholls hospital yesterday, where he is confined with typhoid, but to-day his condition is reported to be better.

On Friday Sergt. Brown of the local police force, who was recently married, was the recipient of a handsome ninety-seven piece china dinner set from his brother officers of the law. He will take up his residence on Water Street in the near future.

RECEPTION TO MR. AND MRS. MANN AT MAYNARD

(Special to The Review.)

Maynard, Mass., Sept. 21.—Over one hundred leading society people of the younger sets in this and nearby towns and many relatives from a distance were present at the beautiful wedding reception given to Mr. and Mrs. William Mann of Peteboro, Ont.

Mrs. Mann who was Miss Mary [illegible]imwell, was married at the Presbyterian church at Peterboro.

The social function given her was tendered by the mother of the bridegroom, Mrs. Grace Mann, a prominent woman of this town.

HERE AND THERE

Here and There [illegible]

Slowly, but surely, commerce must work back to normal conditions.

• • •

The fair would be a rousing success if some such a move were made by the enterprising directors.

• • •

While giving the relief workers credit, we must not forget to give credit to the ladies who have "got down to their knitting."

• • •

The Valcartier soldiers are showing a deep interest in religion, and private prayer is everywhere on the increase among the ranks.

• • •

It's up to the directors of the Exhibition to buy the property and put up a modern main building and several other necessities.

• • •

Many of the teams working on the Patriotic Relief Fund have shown a good deal of "horse-power" and their efforts are to be commended by all.

• • •

The Kaiser must have an Almighty of his own—it's impossible for the Supreme Being to recognize or sanction any of the doings of the Kaiser; yet the Kaiser is still claiming to be, as it were, a heralder from the skies to bring enlightenment to those beings who are ignorant of twentieth century facts in his way [illegible].

YOUNG PEOPLE'S RALLY AT MURRAY STREET

A very interesting sermon was delivered in Murray Street Baptist Church yesterday morning by Rev. J. G. Brown, D.D., of Toronto, on foreign missionary work in India and Bolivia.

In the evening Rev. J. R. Webb gave an excellent sermon to young people, his subject being "Now or Never, a crisis in the Kingdom." Young men of the B.Y.P.U. also assisted in the services.

PATRIOTIC RELIEF FUND

The teams in several divisions have about completed their canvass. They have met with encouraging success.

All the teams are urged to complete their work in the week beginning Sept. 21st, and to hand in the completed lists by Sept. 29th.

These funds are to care for the wives and families of volunteers who have gone on active service, and of those who, in consequence of the war, are in need of relief.

Large sums will be required to prevent suffering.

Liberal contributions are urgently requested.

W. BULLER,
Chairman Patriotic Relief Fund Committee.

CHOICE PROGRAM FOR PATRIOTIC CONCERT TONIGHT

The audience for tonight's patriotic concert in the Opera House is requested to be seated by 8 o'clock as the program will commence sharp at that hour. The contributing artists are also asked to note these facts. They will enter at the stage door.

God Save the King.

When the Salada Tea Company started in business their cheapest tea was sold at 35c. per pound, but the market advanced and they had to raise their price to 40c. per pound. A year passed, the market still kept declining, and the price of Brown Label went down to 25c. a pound. After twelve years the market advanced considerably and Salada Brown Label was advanced to 30c. per pound. The ever increasing price of tea and the extraordinary charges the war has entailed, has compelled the company to advance their Brown Label to 35c. a pound, Blue Label to 45c. a pound, and Red Label to 55c. a pound. In all the period alluded to above, 22 years, the quality has never deviated—it is always of the highest standard possible.

THE ANCIENT STONE SLINGERS

It has been said that Asiatic nations excelled others in the use of the sling, and the slingers of an ancient army used their little weapons with terrible effect. "These natives have such skill," says one old historian, "that it very rarely happens that they miss their aim. What makes them so great in the use of the sling is the training given them from their earliest years by their mothers, who set up a piece of bread hung at the end of a rod for a target and let their children remain without food until they have hit it, when the child who is the victor receives the bread as the reward of his skill and patience."

Bismarck and Music.

Bismarck's utterances regarding music are compiled in a book by Kendell, "Furst und Furstin Bismarck, Erinnerungen aus den Jahren 1846-1872." Kendell once saw the man of blood and iron shed tears during a performance of Beethoven's Sonata Appassionata. His favorite composers were Beethoven and Schubert. The only thing he did not like in their works was the variations. These, he said, "do not speak to the heart." Concerning the sonata just referred to, he remarked: "This is like the singing and sobbing of a whole human life. If I heard this music often I should always be brave."

When the Canadians Fought in S. Africa

That the Canadian troops now assembled at Valcartier will add to the laurels of their country, no Canadian doubts, and several American newspapers that have commented on the matter expect Canadians to particularly distinguish themselves We have some traditions of military service in this country that will compare very favorably with those of much more military countries. In Conan Doyle's history of the Boer war, the Canadians are mentioned more than once, and always in terms of the greatest admiration. In this war four Canadians won the Victoria Cross, which is probably the most highly esteemed military trophy in the world. In fact, we believe that pacificists as most of us are, we would rather have a Victoria Cross than a Nobel Peace Prize. Three of the Canadians who won this coveted trophy were members of the Royal Canadian Dragoons, namely Lieut. Cockburn, Lieut. Turner and Sergt. Holland, and the fourth was Sergt. Richardson, of the Strathcona Horse.

At Paardeburg.

The Canadian got into action first in December, 1899, when the Toronto company of 100 and a detachment of Australians and some English troops made a dashing raid from Lord Methuen's line of communications. They advanced from Belmont, struck at the extreme right of the Boer line, captured a camp and 40 prisoners, and occupied the town of Douglas. The next time they went into action was at the battle of Paardeburg, and the news of their gallantry there is known throughout the Empire. They formed part of the Nineteenth Brigade, under General Smith-Dorrien, who has so signally distinguished himself in France, and this brigade, as Conan Doyle says, was probably the finest in the army. Cronje, with a large force of Boers, was lying entrenched at Paardeburg, and the British had to advance over a level plain. In the first atack they were subjected to withering fire, and had to retire, though Doyle says that the Canadians particularly distinguished themselves "by the magnificent tenacity which they preserved in their attack."

Canadians Led Attack.

After several days of fighting the Canadians and the Gordons had entrenched themselves within 700 yards of the Boer lines, the most advanced position of the army, and one pitch dark night a general attack was ordered, the Canadians being given the honor of leading, the Gordons supporting. On this advance Doyle writes:

"The long line stole through a pitchy darknes, knowing that at any instant a blaze of fire such as flamed before the Highlanders at Magersfontein might crash out in front of them. A hundred, two, three, four, five hundred paces were taken. They knew that they must be close upon the trenches. If they could only creep silently enough they might spring upon the defenders unannounced.

Ninety Yards from the Trenches.

"On and one they stole, step by step, praying for silence. Would the gentle shuffle of feet be heard by the men who lay within stone-throw of them? Their hopes had begun to rise when there broke upon the silence of the night a resonant metallic rattle, the thud of a falling man, an empty clatter. They had walked into a line of meat cans slung upon a wire. By measurement it was only 90 yards from the trench. At that instant a single rifle sounded, and the Canadians hurled themselves down upon the ground. Their bodies had hardly touched it when from a line six hundred yards long there came one furious glare of rifle fire, with a hiss like water on a red-hot plate of speeding bullets. In that terrible red light the men, as they lay and scraped desperately for cover, could see the heads of the Boers pop up and down, and the fringe of rifle barrels quiver and gleam. How the regiment, lying helpless under this fire, escaped destruction, is extraordinary."

Made Cronje Quit.

With astonishingly little loss the Canadians made their way back. Captain Stairs and ten men, however, though unwounded, remained behind and entrenched themselves in a crevice of the river bank overlooking the Boer laager. They were joined by Captain Boileau and 63 men of the Sappers. When day dawned it was found that they were in position to enfilade half a mile of the Boer trenches. After receiving this fire for 30 minutes, Cronje surrendered, realizing that his position was hopeless, and so on Majuba Day the white flag fluttered over the Boer lines at Paardeburg. In April the Canadian infantry under Otter repulsed the Boers at Israel's Poort, and not long afterward, with the Gordons and the Shropshires, carried a strong position at Houtnek by a determined rush. In the relief of Mafeking a battery of Canadian artillery took part, thus sharing in one of the most remarkable performances of the war, after a march of thousands of miles. These incidents are only a few that might be mentioned to show that Canadians have every right to lok forward to the Canadians who go to Europe failing in resourcefulness, courage and discipline to none of the crack regiments of the allies.—Mail and Empire.

ROUMANIA IS READY

Is Expected to Take up Arms Against Austria

BORDEAUX, Sept. 21.—There is a possibility to-day of Roumania entering into the conflict and taking sides with the allies. The greates importance is attached by the French Government to the resignation of the Roumanian Cabinet, especially as it is coincident with the sending of a mission from that country to confer with the Italian Government. This lends belief to the probability that Roumania is only awaiting a favorable opportunity to join with the allies against Germany and Austria-Hungary.

Bulgaria is beginning to show signs of sympathy with Russia, and a desire to go to war. This is shown by the reports received from Bulgaria to the effect that as soon as the news of Russian victories was made public in the land, many demonstrations against Austria were made.

The result of the mission from Roumania to Italy is being received with much interest. It is the general opinion among French Government officials that sooner or later the neutral policy of Italy will have to give way to one of action.

Kaiser Praises His Troops.

LONDON, Sept. 21. — Reports from Virton, not far from Longwy, say that the wounded Prince Oscar has received a surprise visit from the Kaiser. The latter spent a short while with his son then reviewed the Grenadiers.

Speaking to the troops he said:

"The fighting around Longwy will be described in letters of gold on the roll of history, and all our successes we must ascribe to the God of our fathers, who is above us."

"You have fired many rounds; how many hits have you made?" asked the Kaiser of a German gunner.

"About 100 per cent. your majesty," replied the gunner.

DIGNITY OF THE SCOUTS

(By a Londoner, in the Daily Telegraph.)

It happened where one waits for trams near Westminster Bridge. There was the noise of rapid percussion, and ten or twelve youngsters of the Scouts clattered up along the Embankment pavement in double file. The drums were empty oilcans, and the drumming was businesslike. "The British Grenadiers" is almost the only tune that can be monotoned and remain recognisable, and they marched to "The British Grenadiers."

Something about the very young gentleman with a staff, a flourish of ribbons, and many freckles, who led them, must have made a well set-up, grey-haired man in a short coat smile. "'Alt!" said the leader of the Scouts, and they halted. In any case, it would have been necessary, as they had instructions to wait there for further orders. Orders are gospel to Scouts. The young captain, red in the face, threw down the glove at once. "Who . . . . are you laughing at?" The man in the short coat apologized, indistinctly, but with completeness. But the boy was not appeased. "Well, if you want to know, we're doin' our little bit for the country. It ain't much, but may I arst when did you do yours last?" It was a shrewd thrust. The grey-haired man's hand went up, and he gasped, "Touche!" Then came a quaint little scene.

One workman near by waiting for his tram expressed an opinion which reflected upon the grey-haired man. Another, after a moment's gaze, bent forward towards our truculent little sparrow-cock and whispered a word in his ear. I have rarely seen such pluck and misery combined as I saw a moment afterwards on the boy's face. But he never flinched. He called his little company to attention, saluted in their presence, and—begged theg rey-haired man's pardon.

The latter, suddenly become the magician of the tale, shook hands with the boy warmly, colored his compliment with the quiet remark that there were alas! no Scouts when he was a boy, saluted, and went away. I know that he was waiting for the Blackfriars tram, but he had an instinct shared by few. Otherwise he would never have been the great cavalry leader that he is.

He left the rest of us wondering whether we most admired the boy or the man. But we had no doubt that in these strong days the Boy Scouts, if they are led as that little dozen under Boadicea were led, have come into their kingdom. Apart from mere official recognition, great is the dignity of their fellowship today.

BE ON THE WATCH FOR THIS SWINDLER

A slick swindler is operating in Ontario. Upon entering a town he lays in a supply of small glasses, costing 10 cents each. These he fills with earth, into which he places a couple of short stalks of milkweed or any other plant, and then anoints the earth with attar of roses. He is now prepared to furnish confiding purchasers with shoots from the celebrated "Ceylon Rose" at $1.50 each, and does it as fast as he can handle them.

TRINITY CHURCH CORNER STONE WELL AND TRULY LAID

Ceremony is Performed by Mr. H. C. Cox, Who is Presented With Silver Trowel by Judge Huycke

"In the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost, I lay this stone to be consecrated to the service of Almighty God."

With these superlatively solemn words and a tap of the silver trowel as gentle as the accolate of the medieval period, Mr. H. C. Cox of Toronto, son of the late Senator Cox, laid the corner stone of the new Trinity Church yesterday afternoon before an audience that filled to overflowing the massive floor space of the new edifice and also the surrounding ground. The ceremony while not too elaborative, was impressive and left an indelible memory on the minds of the witnesses which time can never erase.

The very name, Trinity Church, brings one face to face with the great mystery of Christian religion and undoubtedly more than one were still further reminded of it when the three Union Jacks were observed flying over the platform which was drapedwith red, white and blue bunting. If one should gaze on a similar scene from afar off, he could not resist being touched with fervor, for truly it will be only when more like ceremonies have been performed and the Christian Churches are far more numerous that the nations of the world will be less anxious to plunge into a general war such as is at present waging, the details of which are more horrible than the crimes recorded in the histories of barbarian ages.

H. C. COX.

Son of the late Senator Cox, who laid the corner stone of Trinity Church.

Immediately after Rev. J. P. Wilson, B.A., pastor of the Charlotte Street Methodist Church which the Trinity Church will replace, had read the invocation the large assembly sang hymn 872 as follows :—

O Lord of hosts, whose glory fills
The bounds of the eternal hills,
And yet vouchsafes, in Christian lands,
To dwell in temples made with hands ;

Grant that all we who here today
Rejoicing this foundation lay,
May be in very deed thine own,
Built on the precious Corner-stone.

Endue the creatures with the grace
That shall adorn thy dwelling-place;
The beauty of the oak and pine,
The gold and silver, make them thine.

To thee they all pertain ; to thee
The treasures of the earth and sea ;
And when we bring them to thy throne
We but present thee with thine own.

The heads that guide endue with skill,
The hands that work preserve from ill ;
That we, who these foundations lay,
May raise the topstone in its day.

REV. J. P. WILSON

Pastor of Charlotte Street Methodist Church.

When Corner Stone Was Laid Forty-One Years Ago

The corner stone of the new Charlotte Street Methodist Church, was laid with the usual ceremonies on Wednesday afternoon by Mrs. Hilliard in the unavoidable absence of Geo. Hilliard, Esq. A bottle was deposited in the cavity containing the date, the name of the town, the denomination and by whom the stone was laid ; also the names of the Governor-General, Lieutenant-Governor, Mayor and Councillors of Peterborough, W. M. Conference officers for the year, the ministers of the town ; the trustees of the church and also the architect and builder. There was also in the bottle, copies of the Review, Examiner, Times and Christian Guardian and minutes of Conference. A handsome silver trowel bearing an inscription commemorating the occasion was then presented to Mrs. Hilliard by the trustees of the church. A Soiree, in contention, was held in the lecture room of the church in the evening. The attendance was not as large as was expected. After tea which was excellent and provided in abundance, the meeting adjourned to the church where they were provided with an intellectual feast in the shape of music by the choir, and stirring and eloquent speeches by the Rev. Messrs. Dewart, editor of the Guardian ; Briggs of Cobourg ; and Howard of Port Hope.

At the close it was announced that another meeting of a social character would be held in the same place on Thursday evening.

SHOULD ARREST THE KAISER

German Humanity League Says That is the Duty

LONDON, Sept. 22. — Members of the German Humanity League, who on Aug. 11 issued the statement that the end of the war inevitably would see the deposition of the Kaiser, have made the following further statement:

"We reiterate as men passionately loving the fatherland, it is the duty of every man who cares for the welfare of mankind, to join hands in arresting the Kaiser and the Ministers around him who are responsible for the appalling crimes perpetrated on non-combatants, which have disgraced our nation in the eyes of the whole civilized world.

"The true and lasting interests of the toilers and wage-earners of Germany can only be served by the complete victory of the allied armies.

"There can be no lasting peace, no security for the rights of man, and no protection of democracy from brigandage and death until the imperial domination of Prussia within Germany is crushed by disarmament and swept away forever."

JUDGMENT MUST STAND

Convicted Shoplifter to Serve Sentence in Mercer

Mr. Burnham has received word from the minister of justice that the judgment in the case of Mrs. Mary Nixon, the young woman sent to the Mercer for one year for shoplifting, must stand. Some time ago the local federal member was requested to bring the case to the attention of the department of justice and he did so. After close investigation the department declines to interfere.

MILITARISM MUST GO

There Can be no Peace Short of Grave Says Churchill

LIVERPOOL, Sept. 22. — (Via London.)—In a speech here last night, Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, referring to the talk of peace by the German Ambassador to the United States, Count Von Bernstorff, said:

"His vague talk of peace is as insincere as the information of which he is the source. Peace with the German people might be arranged in good time, but there would be no peace with Prussian militarism, short of the grave."

England, said the First Lord, did not seek to subjugate Germany or Austria, or their people, however complete her victory might be over them. The worst that could happen to them after the war was that they should be set free to live, and let live fairly and justly.

TO SEND ALL TO THE FRONT

Entire Force at Valcartier Will Form First Contingent

STRENGTH AT 31,200

Second Contingent of 19000 to be Sent Out by Canada

VALCARTIER CAMP, Sept. 22.—Canada will send nearly ten thousand more men on the first contingent than was asked by the British War Office. This announcement was made by Col. Sam Hughes last night, and the decision was the result of a conference between Sir Robert Borden, the Minister of Militia, and Sir George Foster and Hon. Robert Rogers at the camp yesterday. It means that 31,200 officers and men and 7,500 horses will be transported to England, instead of a division of 22,500 men, which was the original plan, following the request of the Imperial authorities. It also means that every officer in training here will be taken aboard, which has caused great rejoicing among those who expected to be rejected. Every man in camp who is fit for active service will comprise the first contingent.

Asked whether any soldiers would remain in training at Valcartier and if there would be a second contingent immediately mobilized, Col. Hughes stated:

"We have decided that every man will be taken from this camp. The firing line from Canada will consist of an army division of 22,500 men, but at the same time we have deemed it advisable to send the rest of the them to act as a reserve, instead of leaving them here and not being able to use them at a time when they are greatly needed because of possible delay in transporting them. As to whether a second contingent will be mobilized, I cannot say. The services of 100,000 can be obtained just as easily as were the services of those at present encamped here. A second contingent will be quickly mobilized if necessary."

The first contingent will consist of nineteen battalions of infantry, including the Princess Patricia Regiment, which is now in training at Levis. This latter regiment will go as part of the first contingent. The original intention was to send only 12 battalions. There will also be three squadrons of Strathcona Horse, three squadrons of the Royal Canadian Dragoons and the artillery of about 4,000 men and many twelve, eighteen and sixty-pound guns.

Sir Robert Borden shook hands with every officer in camp yesterday morning. He addressed the officers of each brigade, telling them that it had been decided to send every officer and man to England.

This indeed was a splendid surprise to the officers, many of whom thought that they would not go owing to the surplus. It is quite possible that many will be unattached and may be used by English territorial regiments. Canada will also contribute about 300 machine guns.

The Duke of Connaught inspected the two cavalry regiments, the Strathcona Horse and Royal Canadian Dragoons yesterday morning. The royal party and Cabinet Ministers returned to Ottawa last night.

Second Contingent Required.

OTTAWA, Sept. 22.—It has been decided to raise forthwith a second contingent of Canadians, 19,000 strong, making 50,000 in all, with the 31,000 going in the present contingent, says a well defined report here yesterday. The second contingent is to be ready to sail for the scene of conflict by Nov. 1.

THE LINE OF THE ALLIED TROOPS

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

"Filed 3.30 a.m." London, Sept. 22.—The Times' military expert says the line of the allies now extends on the east from a point near St. Die through Luneville, Pont-a-Mousson, Etain, Consevoye, Montfaucon, Souain, Rheims, Craonne, Noyon, Lassigny and Roisel to Lecalelet.

The news of the day this expert says: "Is the appearance of a fresh force around Peronne, 17 miles northwest of St. Quentin, attacking the German extreme right at St. Quentin. An English army is near Soissons. On the British left are French troops who probably reach through to Lassigny toward Ham, twelve miles southwest of St. Quentin and are endeavoring to close in upon La Fere, fourteen miles northwest of Laon."

BRITISH STEAMER SINKS; TWENTY-TWO DROWNED

Majority of Passengers and Crew Were Saved by Russian Boat

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Trebisond, Asia Minor, Sept. 22.—Twenty-two persons lost their lives by drowning as a result of the sinking of the British steamer Belgian King near Cape Kureli yesterday.

The Belgian King carried passengers and a crew to the number of 120. Ninety-eight of them were saved by a Russian steamer. It is surmised the accident was due to a mine but the real cause has not been revealed.

Prisoners at Kingston.

Kingston, Ont., Sept. 22.—There are now 200 prisoners of war in the fort, the majority being Germans. It is understood two of the prisoners are in close confinement for misconduct.

Pressing Enemy With More Men and Guns

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Sept. 23.—The Daily News' correspondent at some point south of Vic-Sur-Aisne, France, wires : "What progress the allies have made to-day I cannot say, but I do know we are pressing against the enemy with still more men and heavier guns. All day long reinforcements have been pouring northward. Columns and columns of artillery and munitions have gone along. Some of the French guns are of such formidable type, it is easy to imagine what must be paid whenever they speak.

"I fear, when the cost of victory on this new front is known, it may shock those who at present hardly realize what kind of a war this is, into some dim understanding of it. The vitality of the best of Europe's manhood is draining away rapidly enough to make a whole country one red morass." And among this awful toll of death, many of Britain's best officers are now sleeping their last sleep, while others have received wounds, the scars of which they will carry to the grave.

NO GERMAN WIRELESS IN PACIFIC OCEAN

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Sept. 22.—The destruction of the wrieletss telegraphy station on the Island of Nuar, which removes the last German stationary wireless apparatus in the Pacific Ocean is reported in a despatch to the Reuter's Telegram Co. today from Sydney, N.S.

Amsterdam, Sept. 22. — An aeroplane of unknown nationality dropped a bomb in Maestricht this morning near Brussels, Gate, according to a despatch received here. No lives were lost.

A GAIN OF SEVEN MILES

Allies Drive Germans West Wing That Far

ON THE BATTLE FRONT, Sept. 22.—The western wing of the German line has been thrust back about seven miles during the last 48 hours as a sequel to continuous fighting night and day.

Both armies, despite almost superhuman fatigues, show the utmost determination not to yield an inch of ground without a terrible struggle, but the fresher troops at the disposal of the allied commanders, have gradually forced the Germans to recede.

The Turcos are adding daily to their record of daring achievements. Late Sunday night in a costly bayonet encounter they broke through the German lines without firing more than a few shots, recaptured and brought back four field guns which the French troops had abandoned the previous day. They seemed to disdain the murderous rifle and machine gunfire poured into them, refusing to listen to the officers who tried to keep them under cover.

Cold steel yesterday again played a big part in the battle of the big hosts fighting along the Aisne, the Oise and Woevre. The most remarkable point about the encounters is that the troops scarcely see each other before they actually come hand to hand.

The recklessness displayed at the beginning of the hostilities, with the resultant carnage through the machine guns, has almost disappeared and every movement of the attacking and defending troops is carried out with the utmost caution until the moment of actual contact.

HUNTER SHOT THROUGH BODY BY STRAY BULLET

Walks Three Miles, Rides Ten to Catch Train for Hospital

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Quebec, Sept. 22.—Whilt hunting yesterday in the woods of Lotbiniere County, Alphonse Therrien, aged thirty-two was struck by a stray bullet. It entered the abdomen and went clean through the body.

Therrien then walked three miles through the bush, rode ten miles to catch a train and arrived here today for hospital treatment.

OCCUPY SAMATEVO

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Sept. 22.—A despatch from the Rome correspondent of the London star says that Servian and Montenegrin forces have occupied Samatevo, which was abandoned by the Austrians after an overwhelming defeat.

SITUATION IS IN FAVOR OF ALLIES FOE IS REPULSED

Germans Obliged to Give up Ground on River Oise, Before French Attacks — Progress Made Between Souain and Argonne — Autos, Provisions and Men Captured

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Paris, Sept. 22.—An official announcement says : "Along the entire front from Oise to Woevre, the Germans manifested yesterday, Sept. 21, a certain activity, without, however, obtaining any appreciable results.

"On our left wing, on the right bank of the river Oise, the Germans were obliged to cede ground before the French attacks. Between the Oisne and the Aisne the situation remains unchanged. The enemy has not delivered any serious attack, contenting himself yesterday (Monday) evening with continued cannonading.

'On the centre, between Rheims and Souain, the enemy attempted an offensive movement, which was repulsed. Between Souain and Argonne we have made some progress.. Between Argonne and the river Meuse there has been no change.

"In the Woevre district the enemy made a violent effort. He attacked the heights of Meuse, along a front between Tresauvaux, Vigneuilles and Hendicourt, without, however, succeeding in gaining a position at these heights.

"On our right wing, in Lorraine, the enemy has passed the frontier again, using in the operation a number of small columns. Donestee, to the south of Blamont, has been reoccupied by the enemy.

"During the days of Sept. 20 and 21 we captured [illegible] autos used for moving provisions, together with all the men attached to them. We also captured on these days numerous prisoners."

German Torpedoes Sink Three British Ships

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Sept. 22.—The British warships Aboukir, Hogue and Cressy have been sunk in the North Sea by submarines, according to an announcement given out by the official bureau this afternoon.

Continuing, the announcement says : "A considerable number of the crews of these vessels were saved by H. M. S. Lowestoff and by divers on the torpedo boat destroyers. The Aboukir was torpedoed first. The Hogue and Cressy drew in close to her and were standing by to save her crew, when they also were torpedoed. The warships Aboukir, Hogue and Cressy are cruisers of the same type. Their tonnage and armament are identical. These vessels had a displacement of 12,000 tons and were 440 feet long. Each had a complement of 775 men, including officers and crew. These three cruisers had armaments consisting of two 9.2 inch guns, twelve 6 inch guns, twelve 12 pounders and five 3 pounders. They were 14 years old.

"The Cressy, Captain Robert W. Johnson ; Aboukir, Captain John E. Drummond, and the Hogue, Captain Wilmot S. Nicholson, were armored cruisers of rather obsolete type."

Spent Six Weeks with Fleet Off Heligoland

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

New York, Sept. 22.—Two hundred British warships lie in battle line off the German naval base of Heligoland, so close at times they appear to touch each other, according to Capt. Skelley, of the British Oil Tank steamer San Lorenzo which reached New York today from London.

For six weeks the San Lorenzo was with this British fleet, her officers said, as a supply ship for the oil-burning war craft. She took them 15 thousand tons of fuel oil. The San Lorenzo was with the fleet during the engagement with German cruisers behind Heligoland but was not permitted to see the fighting.

Capt. Skelley said the story was current among British sailors of the fleet to the effect that the British Admiral Sir John R. Jellicoe was aboard the submarine which sank the German cruiser Hela recently. He had no knowledge further than the tale British blue-jackets related to him.

THE HOME RULE BILL.

THE KING has signed the Home Rule Bill, under the authority of the Parliament Act, it having passed the House of Commons three times. Its passage a third time did not necessitate approval of the House of Lords. That was the procedure contemplated when the Parliament Act was passed, for the Liberals knew that the Lords would not pass their Home Rule measure. Hence they made one of the most sweeping and drastic changes in the English Constitution that has ever taken place. But the change has been only partially effective, for the assent to the Home Rule Bill was only given on the understanding that a bill be placed on the statute books postponing its operation, together with that of the Welsh Disestablishment Bill, for a year. In the meantime, the parties will try to come to an agreement on the Irish question, particularly with regard to the position of Ulster. The consolidating force of the present war may facilitate that agreement so that British politics, it is hoped, will have freedom from a problem that has deeply perplexed its statesmen for a hundred years.

A COMPARISON.

IT MAY BE SAID that there was a certain amount of cause for the destruction of Louvain by the Germans, but, admitting the cause as stated, it does not by any means justify the inhuman vandalism of our Teuton enemies. The Belgian minister has addressed a letter to the British in which he reaffirms the official version of the German proceedings at Louvain, against the account of Mr. Irwin and others who have told that there was a certain amount of sniping by the inhabitants after the Germans had entered the town. That we most gladly place on record, and we would add that the only point we have desired to make about Mr. Irwin's version was the point which he himself made, viz., that, if it were true, it offered no justification for the barbarous reprisals taken by the Germans. Mr. Irwin made the striking comment that if, on the same provocation, the Americans had acted in Vera Cruz as the Germans acted at Louvain, they would have left no stone of the Mexican city standing. A war conducted on these German principles upon the ancient and beautiful cities of Europe is inhuman vandalism, which must array against it the whole sentiment of the civilized world. It is the more repulsive when it is waged in the name of "German culture" and "German idealism."

In a letter to the London Times Mr. Alison Phillips quotes a letter from Friedrich Von Gentz, in the year 1815, contrasting what he had seen in the wake of the Prussian and English armies in that year. Of that part of Belgium which had been traversed by the English army he says that "everything is as though in the deepest peace; and if one did not from time to time see foreign soldiers, one would not suspect that war is here." On the other hand, "terrible devastation" was reported of the parts traversed by the Prussian army. It is this long Prussian tradition which crops up again in the idea of making war frightful to the non-combatants. To make an end of this idea for once and all, and of the ideas which go with it in times of peace, is one of the principal objects of this struggle. There can be no peace in Europe and no stable relations between Germany and her neighbors in Europe until she has shaken herself clear of the fatal influence which a barbarous tradition exercises over her life in peace and her conduct in war.

"THE HUN IS AT THE GATE."

HERMAN RIDDER and other Germans resident in America complain bitterly of the partisanship and bias of the American press, says Collier's. Undeniably, our early information was almost uniformly friendly to the allies—and this for the obvious reason that our first war despatches came to us from Paris and London. But the sympathies of our people were not determined by this accident. Moreover, these sympathies are human, not racial. Who of us would not gladly share the generous enthusiasms and aspirations of a nation that has given the world Beethoven, Wagner, and Goethe? But, as this war proceeds, its character as a war against civilization is more and more definitely suggested. Here, for example, is the wireless account of Louvain's fate: "Civilians of the Belgian town of Louvain made a perfidious attack on German troops while fighting. Louvain was punished by the destruction of the city." Misrepresentation, no doubt, like the reports of Prussian mutilations of wounded Belgians and Britons; news coloured to prejudice humanitarians against the Fatherland! But no—the German Embassy at Washington issues this damning news. Prussia is no more ashamed of her Louvain atrocities than of her airmen who threw bombs down upon women and children in Antwerp and Paris. Now, this war is, of course, founded upon a brutal cynicism and total disregard of vows and pledges—that Berlin diplomats refer to sneeringly as "scraps of paper." But what is the conceived advantage, even in a war like this, of turning more than forty thousand human beings into homeless vagrants? Was it to punish the boys who fired from behind hedges and chimney pots at the despoilers of their countryside? If there is any law of nations governing war, Germany put herself beyond the pale in violating Belgian neutrality. Should we, all the same, reserve judgment? In justice, be it avowed, our news from Louvain is not yet complete. That the Prussians stabled their horses in the matchless Hotel de Ville, we know; but why did they burn that edifice and St. Peter's Church, opposite, we cannot imagine. Did they burn the schools of Louvain which have given so many Americans their theologic training? They destroyed the ancient library and the university, founded almost five centuries before Bismarck and Moltke collaborated in fastening Prussia's military yoke on poor Germany's shoulders. Even today, under other auspices than Prussia's, Germany has a great future. But today we mourn Louvain — that held more of beauty within its unfortified zone than all the German Empire has evoked since it rose from battle smoke, forty-three years since, on the fields of France. We mourn the forty thousand homeless ones—the fathers who have lost their children, the motherless ones, all the victims of uhlan blood lust. When we reread the history of Europe in the Dark Ages we shall understand the Goths and Vandals better than before; that much, at least, Prussia is teaching us today.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

HON. DR. BELAND, one of the foremost French Liberal members of the Canadian House of Commons, is in Belgium with his bride, who is a Belgian countess. He tells the story of German conduct from first hand knowledge. Listen to what he says: "If Attila II, Emperor of Germany, chief of the barbarians of the twentieth century, expected this, may I be hanged! For five days he has been blocked tight with 120,000 men by the "little' Belgians of Liege. He rages. He fumes. He issues to-day his third proclamation to his people. He stirs up the ashes of Bismarck. He calls on the memory of his ancestors. . . . The horrors committed in the east of Belgium, at Vise, at Argenteau, and in five or six little villages, are without example in history. Children from seven to ten years old, women and inoffensive priests were shot. The cause of civilization is compromised throughout all the world if the fortune of war favors the Germans."

NOW that the drill season of the local regiment has been resumed, would it not be a good idea for the regimental band to popularize the British army's marching song, "It's a Long, Long Way to Tipperary"? If the C. O. would let his men sing it as they march up-town, it would make a great hit and might prove the best recruiting officer yet.—St. Catharines Standard. Can it be possible that Canadians would add to the horrors of war in this fashion?

WE OBSERVE that a river in the war zone is called "Suippes" (schwipes). We protest against this insertion of slang in the geography taught our innocent and growing youth.

A QUESTION that is bothering us is, when will the Allies attack pretzels?

WHEN Von Kluck is forced back, does he cluck?

Germany and the United States.

(London Spectator.)

Americans might do well to look at the matter from the reverse side and ask themselves what the effect of a German victory would be on the United States. A German victory would mean a great attempt at world-wide domination. Germany would throw out her tentacles into every part of the globe. The republics of South America would be an obvious vantage ground for making her influence felt. The United States might point to the Monroe Doctrine. But what would be the use of that? Germany has shown that she cares for nothing but sheer brute strength. If Americans held to their view that the Monroe Doctrine was an essential instrument of their policy, they would have to create an enormous army—an army at least large enough in conjunction with sea power to be an adequate means of arguing and treating with Germany. This would be opposed to all American conceptions of the proper task in the world for the United States.

They Forget Some Things.

(Westminster Gazette.)

It is natural and inevitable that our compulsory militarists should chop in and say how much better it would have been if we had had Lord Roberts' army and been in a position to send it all abroad instead of the mere 150,000 of the expeditionary force. These people forget, first of all, that Lord Roberts' army was advocated as a home defensive army, and that those of us who suggested that it could or would be sent abroad compulsorily at the beginning of a war, were declared to be guilty of a gross misrepresentation. They forget, next, that it has taken one of the greatest naval and military efforts to get the expeditionary force to France at the beginning of the war, and that this effort has been rewarded precisely because the expeditionary force is of that highly efficient professional quality which can only be provided by voluntary service.

The Brigands Must Be Destroyed.

(La Patrie.)

The German soldiers, officers and men rob, pillage and then burn towns to efface all proofs of their brigandage. They shoot men, women and children to suppress witnesses. It is an army of wild beasts against which the whole world is armed, and it is necesary, once for all, that it shall be exterminated. Whatever may be the various phases of the war, its fate is sealed; Great Britain, France and Russia have solemnly bound themselves not to make peace until it is destroyed.

An Item to Remember.

(Brockville Times.)

There would have been no German brutalities in Belgium if the Germans had kept out of Belgium. This is one little fact for the Kaiser to remember when he says his prayers.

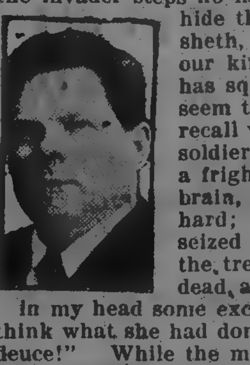
Years of Breeding.

(Toronto Saturday Night.)

The Germans may be able to make a good ship in six months, but it took a thousand years to make the British sailor.

MISERERE

By Walt Mason



Now this mighty war is o'er, and upon fair Zenda's shore the invader steps no more, we shall sing! Now the war dogs hide their teeth and the sword has found its sheth, we shall place a goregous wreath on our king. He has laid all Graustark low, he has squelched the haughty foe, but he doesn't seem to know why he fought; he is trying to recall what it was that stirred his gall, why his soldiers, heroes all, have been shot. Ah, it is a frightful strain on the monarch's weary brain, and he sits in grievous pain, thinking hard; "what had Graustark done to me, that I seized my snickersnee? Hung her washing on the tree in my yard? Now so many men are dead, and the land is painted red, I must harbor in my head some excuse! Now the victory is won, I must think what she had done, that I made the carnage run like the deuce!" While the monarch thinks and thinks, with a brain that's full of kinks, all his stricken country sinks in despair; for the fields are white with bones; orphans' cries and widows' moans, and the old men's sobbing groans fill the air. On the farm the starving cow licks the empty manger now, and no more the shining plow cleaves the sod; for the men who tilled the fields and brought home the golden yields now have journeyed on their shields to their God.

Survivors of Karluk Safe.

NOME, Alaska, Sept. 22. — The eight Caucasian survivors of the Stefansson steamer Karluk, who were taken from Wrangell Island by the schooner King and Winge, and transferred to the U. S. revenue cutter Bear, are still on the Bear under the care of the cutter's physicians. The four Eskimos were landed at Nome. All the parties except William L. McKinlay, the scientist, are suffering from frozen feet.

The captain of the Bear plans to take the survivors to Dutch Harbor, where they will be transferred to the steamer Senator, which will land them at Victoria and Vancouver.

LONDON, Sept. 22. — "All my troops and resources." This is the latest offer of the Gaekwar of Baroda to the British Government, as announced by the Secretary of State for India.

Nearly all the Indian potentates have expressed a desire for personal service in the field, and many have offered the British Government "all I possess."

The Government of Madras will supply a fully equipped hospital ship of 300 beds for the use of the Indian expeditionary force. [illegible]

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

THE CORDAGE WORKS.

Editor Review:

Sir,—The suggestion of making Peterborough a military centre and using the Cordage Works building as a barracks, overlooks the fact that there must be a parade grounds of 50 or more acres in connection with the same.

The Cordage Works was part of a great scheme of advertising Peterborough. Poor Peterborough, how you have suffered and what a reputation you have.

Yours truly,
CITIZEN.

OUTLOOK PROMISING.

Canada's Grain Exports Will Neutralize Financial Difficulties.

GANANOQUE, Ont., Sept. 22.—Canada's business outlook is promising; the first and worst effects of the war will gradually wear away, the higher prices of grains will more than neutralize their shortage in amount, and future agricultural production should be immensely stimulated, enabling the country greatly to increase her exports, thus ensuring payment of interest on her borrowings and other obligations abroad, and the preservation of national credit; the present financial expedients were efficient shock absorbers.

These were the conclusions of Hon. W. T. White, Minister of Finance, in an address before the Gananoque Board of Trade yesterday on "War and General Trade Conditions of Canada."

While international markets were at present closed, said Hon. Mr. White, no doubt borrowing, although on a much reduced scale, would be possible later, and increased thrift on the part of the public would be a material factor in furnishing national working capital. The spirit with which the Canadian community had met the situation was wholly admirable.

With so many men offering their lives for the Empire and undergoing hardships, privation and suffering at the front it was the duty of every man at home to put forth his utmost effort to increase production, to add to the national wealth, that the wastage of war might be repaired and the strength of the nation increased to meet whatever of struggle and stress that may lie before us.

Belgium Refused Bribe.

LONDON, Sept. 22.—In a despatch from Antwerp the correspondent of the Central News declares that the armistice proposal made some days ago by Germany to Belgium provided that the civil government in all Belgian towns should be immediately resumed by Belgium, and the German occupation of these towns be discontinued, on condition that communication with the Germans in France be not interfered with.

Belgium refused to agree, saying to do so would be disloyal to the allies.

Servian Prince Wounded.

PARIS, Sept. 22.—A Nish despatch to the Havas Agency says that Prince George of Servia, while leading his battalion in an assault, was hit by a ball which entered near the spinal column and came out the right shoulder. The wound is said not to be dangerous.

During the early part of the war Prince George was reported to have been wounded.

One report says the Germans will try to get to St. Petersburg, and, having penned these few words, the sturdy author of the report rolled over on his left side and had another dream.

SEALED TENDERS addressed to the undersigned, and endorsed "Tender for Electric Passenger and Freight Elevators, Langevin Block, Ottawa, Ont.," will be received at this office until 4.00 P.M. on Friday, October 9, 1914, for the installation of three (3) standard passenger and one (1) standard freight elevators, in the Langevin Block, Ottawa, Ont.

Plans, specifications and form of contract can be seen and forms of tender obtained on application to this Department, at the offices of Mr. Thos. Hastings, Chief of Works, Postal Station "F", Toronto, Ont., and Mr. R. L. Deschamps, Superintendent of Public Buildings, Montreal, Que.

Persons tendering are notified that tenders will not be considered unless made on the printed forms supplied, and signed with their actual signatures, stating their occupations and places of residence. In the case of firms, the actual signature, the nature of the occupation and place of residence of each member of the firm must be given.

Each tender must be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a chartered bank, payable to the Honourable the Minister of Public Works, equal to ten per cent. (10 per cent.) of the amount of the tender, which will be forfeited if the person tendering decline to enter into a contract when called upon to do so, or fail to complete the work contracted for. If the tender be not accepted the cheque will be returned.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

AN ILLUSION DISPELLED

By JOHN Y. LARNED

When my mother, a widow, died I was twelve years old and was adopted by a lifelong friend of hers, a Mrs. Auchincloss. There was something very romantic in this friendship which I could not understand, but I never saw Mrs. Auchincloss till after my mother's death. I remember when I went from my desolate home to that of my foster mother she said to me:

"Poor boy! I loved your mother, and I will love you for her sake."

Her little daughter, Delia, stood by and said, "And I will be your sister."

As I grew older Mrs. Auchincloss kept her word, only it seemed to me that she loved me as much for myself as for my mother's sake. The day I became twenty-one she said to me:

"Frank, I wish you to marry Delia."

I had thought of Delia as a sister and believed that she had regarded me as a brother. I was somewhat taken aback by this announcement, but somehow it was not an unpleasant one.

"Why, I thought, Aunt Margaret"—I had always called Mrs. Auchincloss aunt, though there was no relationship whatever between us—"that Delia was in love with Dan Gregory?"

"She thinks she is, but that is all nonsense. Dan Gregory is worthless and uninteresting, and Delia will find it out some day. But I don't propose that she shall learn it as his wife. I prefer to marry her to please me, that later on she may be pleased herself."

"That's very complimentary to me," I said, taking Aunt Margaret in my arms and kissing her. "You have been so kind to me that I have no right to refuse you anything. I mean by this that it is not at all contrary to my inclination to marry Delia, but I would prefer that she should love me instead of another man."

Agreeably to Aunt Margaret's request, I went to Delia, told her of her mother's desire and said I should be happy to acquiesce. It was no news to Delia, who had been informed of what was considered best for her. She told me that she would do everything she could in the matter, but she could not give me her heart since that had been given to another. To this I replied that she must be the judge as to whether she would marry me under the circumstances, for my obligation to her mother was such that I would not refuse her any request. But I also told her what I had told her mother—that I would be very happy in a marriage with her provided she would be happy to marry me.

This seemed to have some effect on Delia—that is, in gaining her consent to the match. She had a good deal of character, so much, indeed, that I wondered how she could have given her heart to so shallow a chap as Gregory. She gave me a kiss to seal the betrothal, and, although there was no great warmth in it, there was no ice.

As soon as we became engaged Mrs. Auchincloss seemed greatly relieved. When I proposed that Gregory's calls on Delia might better be discontinued her mother did not agree with me. The good lady seemed to be acting on the idea that the more Delia saw of him the sooner she would find out how little there was in him. However, as soon as he learned that Delia was engaged to me he ceased his calls of his own accord.

After our marriage, by Mrs. Auchincloss' advice, I let my wife alone so far as her disappointment in giving up her lover was concerned. Coming upon her suddenly one day, I found her reading over some of his letters with dimmed eyes. I made no complaint. Indeed, I did not refer to the matter except to speak a word of sympathy. She seemed to be ashamed of her weakness and, putting her arms about my neck, kissed me. The next day I saw some unburned scraps of paper in the fireplace and knew they were Gregory's letters. This seemed to be a turning point in the matter, and in future, whatever may have been Delia's feelings, I experienced no expression of them.

Eight years passed. Delia and I lived in our home alone with our children, while Mrs. Auchincloss lived in another. Indeed, she refused to live with us from the day we were married. One day when I went home from business Delia told me that her mother had telephoned a desire that we should dine with her that evening. We never thought of declining a request of any kind from the good lady and at the hour appointed appeared at her house.

We found Mrs. Auchincloss in the drawing room entertaining a man. Both arose as we entered, and our hostess introduced the man as Mr. Gregory. Delia was a trifle put out and darted a look of reproach at her mother for inviting her to meet her old lover. But the old lady's reason for doing so was soon apparent. Gregory had deteriorated. He was the same man as eight years ago, but the Gregory that Delia had looked upon through the romance of nineteen had been replaced by an unrefined, rather disagreeable looking man whose head was as empty as a pumpkin shell.

Poor Delia! I pitied her having to sit opposite this faded dream through a course dinner. Soon after it was finished she pleaded a headache, and we went home.

I didn't blame her mother for bringing her and Gregory together. She simply wished to kill any germs of absurd romance that might be left in my wife.

Penelope Pairs.

Pert Penelope Perkins, patiently plucking pretty primroses, perceiving Percival Patmore, pretended preoccupation. Percy perspired profusely, penning pensive poetry. Presently, properly primed, Percival promptly proposed. Penelope, prudently pessimistic, playfully procrastinated. Percival, passionately protesting, produced precious presents, promising, pathetically, perpetual protection. Purse-proud, pompous papa, proving pliant, Penelope placidly paired.

Sable Skins.

The costliest sable is the Yakutsk (Russian) skin that runs "silvery"—that has, in other words, a number of equally distributed white or silvery hairs among the soft and silky brown ones. Such skins, of the average size of 15 by 5 inches, are worth $750 apiece. "Topped" sables are dyed ones. They fetch $50 a skin.

Drowsiness.

Drowsiness during the day, if a person has slept well the night before, is often caused by indigestion. Often this is remedied by drinking something very hot, like cocoa or coffee. The brain needs a mild stimulant. Lassitude of the body is not always an indication of illness or laziness.

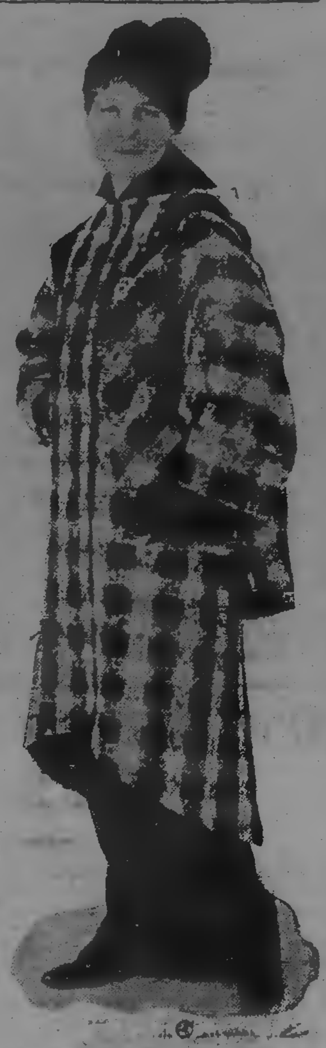
LONG CHECKED COAT.

For Motoring or Traveling This Wrap Has Advantages.



NEW CHECKED COAT.

The coat illustrated here is a handsome affair of green and white check with one of the new turned over collars of velvet. There are epaulettes of velvet combined with fancy buttons on the shoulders. The raglan sleeve is finished with deep turned back cuffs. The coat is suitable for general wear in the fall or makes a convenient wrap for the motorist or traveler.

ADJUSTING WAISTS.

Tape Stretched Across the Back Is Convenient.

Since separate blouses are a necessity with tailored suits here is a good point to remember. Instead of sewing the tape at the waist line down on the waist all around leave the fronts loose and stitch the tape only across the back. This will give ends that can be brought around and tied in front.

You can regulate the fullness much more easily by this method and so prevent bulging in an unsightly manner. Before sewing the tape to the waist be sure you get it adjusted properly at the waist line; otherwise it will be very uncomfortable.

Another good method of keeping skirts and waists together is to fasten a broad stay piece across the back of the waist or blouse. To this fasten large ordinary eyes and sew to the inside of the skirt band heavy flat hooks to correspond. Round eyes buttonholed in twist may be used on silk and sheer waists.

BRILLIANT COLORS.

French Dressmakers Favor Them For Their Most Elegant Creations.

The couturiers of Paris are featuring odd combinations of materials in their latest creations. Silk, linen and pique will be effectively allied in one model, while another is fashioned of voile, silk and batiste.

Blouses have jumper effects of one material worn over guimpes of another, while the skirts are formed of long Dutch tunics and underskirts of contrasting weaves.

Brilliant colors are combined with ecru, white, dark blue or gray. The designs selected are bold and striped fabrics are general favorites, and many of the long tunics are evolved from these striking materials.

Closely Woven Crape.

The popular cotton crape is a very fine, close weaving, resembling its more expensive sister, crepe de chine, and the ratine—or sponge cloth—is also finer and closer than that worn last year. Both come in a large range of colors, of which at the moment pink is extremely fashionable, ranging from the palest blush to the deepest rose tints, also light or dark pekin blue, mauve, mastic and dove gray.

Comfortable Corsets.

A medical man has said that nothing more sane than the new corsets has come into fashion's realm for a long time. The waist line of these corsets is large and the bust low. They are of such shape that full, deep breathing is possible.

Motoring Hats.

The perfect motoring hat is made of satin, corduroy, or it may be of white felt. All of these are soft, shaping themselves to the head in whatever way the fancy of the wearer may dictate.

"I am a general storekeeper at the above address, and on account of the great good I have experienced from using "Fruit-a-tives", I recommend them to my customers. They were a great boon to me, I can tell you, for about two years ago, I was laid up in bed with vomiting and a terrific pain at the base of my skull. The pain nearly drove me mad. Doctors feared it would turn to Inflammation of the Brain, but I took "Fruit-a-tives" steadily until I was cured. I have gained fifteen pounds since taking "Fruit-a-tives", and I verily believe they saved me from a disastrous illness".

Culinary Notes

Dessert Recipes For Hot Weather.

These tested desserts, delicious and simple, with the added virtue of coolness, are suggested for the hot days by Miss Cora E. Binzel, instructor in home economics, University of Wisconsin, extension division:

Watermelon Cups.—Remove the rind and cut the melon into cubes; sprinkle with powdered sugar and lemon juice; chill before serving.

Apple Marshmallow.—Take one cupful pared apples, one-half cupful blanched almonds, one cupful marshmallows, cut in quarters; two cupfuls whipped cream. Combine and chill.

Mousse.—Take one cupful heavy cream, one saltspoonful salt, one-third cupful powdered sugar, one teaspoonful vanilla. Beat the cream, add the sugar, salt and vanilla. Turn the mixture in a tin mold, adjust cover and seal with strips of cheesecloth dipped in melted lard or butter or seal with melted paraffin. This is to prevent salt water from entering the can. Pack the mold in salt and ice, using two parts ice to one part salt. Allow two hours or more for the freezing. This is a delicious, wholesome dessert, very easily prepared and does not require an ice cream freezer. For variety flavor the cream with an ounce of melted chocolate or one-third cupful maple sirup. During the winter the mold may be packed in a mixture of snow and salt. Baking powder or cocoa cans may be used for molds. Fill with water and test to see that they do not leak.

Freshening Vegetables.

Lettuce, parsley and all other green things may be kept deliciously fresh if first washed in cold water, shaken and then packed in a tin pail that has a very tight cover, so that the air may not penetrate to them. This should be kept in a cool place.

In the case of lettuce, when the cover is removed the leaves will pop up, and you will find them almost as crisp and fresh as if they had just come from the garden.

Even lettuce that has wilted will revive wonderfully if subjected to a few hours of such treatment. To purify greens that are to be eaten raw use a pinch of boric acid powder in the water in which they are washed.

Preserving Eggs.

To know how to preserve eggs from the time when they are cheap to the time when they are dear is most important. As they cannot spoil without oxygen, they may be kept for a long time in powdered charcoal, which must be renewed at least once a month.

Glycerin is also an excellent preservative for eggs. A mixture of glycerin with half its volume of water should be prepared, the eggs placed in this solution and kept below the surface by a floating piece of wood.

The same solution will serve for constant use for a long time, other eggs being put in when some are removed. Be sure that the eggs are clean when put in.

Timing the Baking.

A clever woman whose hands and mind were filled with small duties all seemingly to be performed at one and the same time, found her bread and rolls often left just the few minutes too long in the oven so they were not appetising, as she wanted them to be. With her small alarm clock she arranged all this perfectly. She simply set the alarm for the hour that the bread should be looked at, went about her other duties, and at its ring found she had conquered once more by exercising her wits.

Spreading Butter.

There is poor economy in wasting hard butter trying to spread bread, but a knife dipped into boiling water and then used in the butter does away with all trouble and spreads evenly. Especially in preparing sandwiches is it important to have each slice nicely spread with enough, but not too much butter, and this should be done before cutting; then the slices laid ready to have any preferred filling.

Keeping Rhubarb.

To preserve rhubarb so that it may be ready for use at any time wash and cut into small pieces, as for stewing, being careful to remove all strings. Fill the jar to the top with the rhubarb and then stand the jar under a cold water faucet, where the water can slowly run in and out for half an hour. Screw on the cover under water so that no air can get in and keep in a cool, dark place.

The difference between the Kaiser and Napoleon is that Napoleon used to win a fight occasionally.

The Bull-dog Strain

THE bull-dog is typical of the British race--men fearless in attack, grim and determined, tenacious, invincible. We in Canada are proud of the bull-dog strain in us--that quality of blood and heart that makes us dauntless and masterful. The bull-dog strain shows in us and others in times of peril and menace.

Everywhere in Canada manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers of the bull-dog breed are answering the challenges of war—the challenger of trade disturbance and business opportunity. The identity of some of these valiant-hearted merchants and manufacturers is revealed in the advertising columns of this and other newspapers, for advertisements are expressions of courage, tenacity, and mastery.

MERCHANT AT BOBCAYGEON IS ALSO ARRESTED

A. R. Croft Charged With Defrauding Dominion Express Company

Following the investigations made by a C. P. R. detective, and the arrest of Jos. W. Redmond, an express messenger, residing in Bobcaygeon, on the charge of defrauding the Dominion Express company, A. R. Croft, a prominent merchant at Bobycaygeon, was also arrested on a charge of defrauding the company by means of bribery.

Croft will appear for a hearing on Friday. He is out on bail of $2,000.

Redmond, in his statement to the authorities, admitted having carried liquor to Bobcaygeon on the train, without making entries in the books. He received various sums of money.

FINANCIAL SITUATION IS REVIEWED

J. W. Flavelle Against Moratorium for Canada

Toronto, Sept. 22.—"We want no general moratorium in this country; we want no discussion of it in the chamber, much less than in the newspapers. We want no special sessions of Legislatures. We want to preserve the credit of the country by every man standing up and meeting his obligations, which we can do if we only behave ourselves decently."

"There are those among us who came to the conclusion that they would become wealthy without effort. They bought lands and sold them to the other fellow at a big profit. Sensible men knew that the end had to come and that when the bubble was pricked those last in would be left."

"This trouble is not a war trouble. This is a readjustment in the affairs of Canada that was inevitable with or without war."

Such were the sentiments expressed by Mr. J. W. Flavelle in his address to the members of the Canadian Club at their luncheon yesterday afternoon. Mr. Flavelle reviewed the manner in which Chancellor Lloyd George met the financial obligations of Britain owing to the war, and his praise for the provisions made by the treasury in order that the business of the country might be carried on, was unbounded.

The remedy applied in England was not a remedy that could be applied with success in Canada. Britain had no credit; every country in the wide world owed her money, and all its national, industrial and municipal indebtedness was due by the Government to their own people. The situation in Canada was different. All the railway bonds and stocks, much of the industrial bonds and preferred stock, were held abroad.

"Our supreme duty, therefore," continued Mr. Flavelle, "is to preserve the credit of the country above all else. This country borrows money from every country that will give it a dollar, and the obligation that rests upon us is to preserve that credit. It is the life's blood of the country under existing conditions."

Selfish Desire.

Mr. Flavelle referred scathingly to the action taken by the Government of Manitoba in repudiating their obligations, and at the same time authorising the Government to call for a loan of $2,000,000.

"Such actions are based on the selfish desire to get rid of the burden which legitimately belongs to them. You owe $35,000,000 on sterling debentures falling due at the rate of $15,000,000 a year. The next payment it due on the 1st of November and the following one in March. If you repudiate that obligation what would happen? What would be the reasonable thing to happen? The Scotsman would come along and say, 'I want my money.'

"Our duty is to play the game with a good courage and good purpose. There has been far too much disposition to make the first burden rest upon the work people; there are too many work people being dismissed. Too many young lady typewriters are being sent home. If we have entered into an obligation we can't meet, let us start over again, as many must start over again, and learn that honest labor is the only basis on which they have any right to expect success."

The Hon. I. B. Lucas and Sir Edmund Walker were interested listeners.

FURIOUS ATTACKS ON GERMAN RIGHT SUCCEED

GENERAL VON KLUK RETIRING

Fragmentary Reports From Scene of Great Battle Along the Aisne Show That the Allies Continue to Force the Germans Back and Von Kluk is in Danger of Being Cut Off—End of Battle is Near.

LONDON, Sept. 22. — The British and French attack on the German right is succeeding, according to despatches received here yesterday. Gen. Von Kluk is reported to have suffered terrible losses, and to be slowly giving way before the furious attacks of the allies.

The following official statement was issued in Paris last night by the War Office:

"On our left we have advanced along the Oise to the heights of Lassigny. East of the Oise and north of the Aisne the Germans display renewed activity, making violent attacks and bayonet charges. They have been repulsed everywhere. Around Rheims the Germans have not attempted any infantry attacks.

"In the centre, in Champagne, and west of the forest of Argonne, beyond Souain, we have taken Mesnil, Les Hurlus and Massignes. The enemy still holds the country from Thiaucourt to Cannone Passon Chatel.

"On our right wing, in Lorraine and the Vosges, there are no developments. The Germans are fortifying positions on the Delme, south of Chateau Salins."

A Paris despatch states that The Echo de Paris announces that Gen. Von Kluk is planning a retreat to the Ardennes, where a position for another stand has been prepared. A despatch from Rome agrees with the Paris story, but states that Gen. Von Kluk has already begun his retreat.

These reports follow earlier ones, which indicated strongly that Gen. Von Kluk's army was again in a serious position and in danger of being cut off from the main German line.

So serious has the position of the German right become, that it is declared 100,000 men are being rushed to its support from Belgium. The resistance of Gen. Von Kluk's wing has been determined, but the allied forces are continuing their movements in an endeavor to outflank him. This is the nineth day of the battle of the Aisne.

The British and French have been consistently attacking the wing held by Gen. Von Kluk since the battle of the Aisne began, and apparently have been attempting a sort of enveloping movement, which appears to have been partly successful.

A Paris despatch states that reports are continuously being brought in regarding British-French successes against Von Kluk. The allies have been determined from the start to crush the Germans' right wing, and their continued attacks apparently have had their effect, too, on the German centre, for, according to despatches, the allies have made a substantial breach of the strong German line between Laon and Rheims.

A Daily Chronicle despatch states that the success of the allies here threatens to divide the German forces, and is bound to have its effect on the German lines, which must fall back. The correspondent adds that the fighting is continuing desperately, and that the Germans are still holding a strong position.

A Paris despatch yesterday states that a French officer back from the front told of an extended aeroplane reconnaissance, which showed that the Germans were making plans for retiring from their present positions. There was a report, the correspondent stated, that the German commanders had received orders to retire to the German frontiers, leaving 200,000 men to defend the Aisne river positions and cover the retirement.

A despatch to The Express says that reconnaissances by aeroplanes near Soissons show that a large part of the German army is retiring with trains and heavy stores.

Both allies and Germans are making desperate efforts to outflank each other and win a decisive advantage at the Aisne. More than 2,000,000 men are engaged and the artillery fire is terrific.

The German left has fought for days to turn the French right wing resting on Verdun. The latter point is heavily fortified, and must fall before the French can possibly be flanked, thus giving the allies considerable advantage along the battle line as drawn at present.

The weather continues the worst that could possibly be imagined for such a battle as is now being waged, heavy rains continue to fall, and the trenches are filled with water. The British forces have borne the brunt of the fighting in the centre, and charges to carry German trenches have been made across fields swept from end to end by rifle, machine gun and shrapnel fire.

Signs now point to a termination of the battle of the Aisne, which will doubtless prove to have been the bloodiest in all history.

A RAID UNLIKELY FROM ACROSS LINE

The danger of raids into Canadian territory by German sympathizers in the United States is one of the contingencies of the present war which the Canadian Militia Department guarded against on the first news of hostilities in Europe. Sections of regiments are on guard at practically all points where vandalism could cause serious damage. Canal gates, bridges, docks, elevators, etc., are under the rifles of Canadian militiamen.

Many of the stories of attempted destruction resolved into halucinations, but there remained sufficient evidence to prepare the Militia Department for trouble. From two points rumors came regarding conspiracies to wreak vengeance on Canadian property and at both points, Buffalo and Ogdensburg, assurances were received from the local police authorities that their vigilance may be relied upon to abort the plans of any marauding expeditions. Following is a letter received from Michael Regan, Superintendent of Police at Buffalo:

"In reference to the possibility of 'German-Americans' raiding Canada now that England and Germany are in a state of war, I see nothing in conditions here that would warrant such action. The great majority of German-Americans are among the best of our law-abiding citizens, and while they are dearly attached to the 'Fatherland,' have too much sense to attempt the capture of Canada. This Government would soon quash such a movement if attempted. Of course, there are cranks in all communities and as individuals they may be tempted to go over and commit some rash act, but as for a general raid, nothing to it."

Following is a letter from M. T. Power, Chief of Police of Ogdensburg, N.Y.:

"Canadians need have no ground for alarm in the matter of German Americans from United States' boundary points in this section. German Americans and all other Americans are peaceably disposed and do not in any wise intend to violate any of the neutrality laws, as near as I can ascertain."

The only source of trouble, in the opinions of most Canadians, is the pro-German "crank" referred to by Superintendent Regan, of Buffalo, and against his inventions every precaution has been taken. All troops now on guard in Canada are under orders to challenge all strangers and have liberty to fire on any who disobey.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

LONDON'S EAST END.

Editor Review,

Sir,—I say what is Rev. F. J. S. giving us? A street in the east end of London is more respectable on a Sunday than in Peterboro—ask a police officer. And the east end as compared with London's west end is as a bucket shop to a bank. The Reverend gentleman's experiences are superficial. He does not mention that wide open saloons are even wider after leaving London or that more women vanish in Canada every year than in London. To pretend that the disappearance of these women and girls was of a small consequence was a scandal and a disgrace to the Empire.

READER.

P.S.—The east end of London is practically deserted on Sunday.

A EULOGIUM OF WAR.

Editor Review,

Sir,—The remarks of a reverend gentleman on a recent public occasion were largely a eulogium of war. Not that he endorsed all wars or loved them for their own sake but that he might rejoice in his patriotism. The heat of battle pervaded his remarks. There was no prayer for peace. His prayer would be for a peace satisfactory to himself and friends but not one in accordance with the beatitudes. "The meek shall inherit the earth" has not enough ginger in it for him. To give away one's coat and cloak also, to him is no doubt foolishness. To what purpose then is preaching submission to the will of God. Is there such a thing? The reply of the present day apparently is "When it suits us." Such speakers really have no faith in God at all. They show by word and act that they believe in dealing with matters themselves. A prayer to Providence that He will direct and order all things for good apparently depends on the humor or valour of the suppliant. Perhaps it is thought that God knows enough to do so anyhow. The decline of Religion as a vital force such as it was when human sacrifices were made and believed in, is manifest. From the time of primeval man to the Hebrews and Druids the supernal power could be placated only by human sacrifice. Christianity also is founded upon that idea. The same spirit animates the warrior-parson who would have us back to the "good old days" in half an hour if we would let him. No! We slip and fall back but the day will yet come in spite of that strange inconsistency of spiritual love astride a change when war will be rare and hateful. But how can it become hateful if we dwell upon it even on the most peaceful occasions with rapture? Is it any wonder that the laity laugh and that the people imagine it "a vain thing." As a recruiting sergeant he was no doubt a success but as a humble instrument of a watching God who could wipe out Europe with a wave of his almighty hand—not he. What a strange view of life and light such speakers must have. The influence of the churches depend upon their being reasonable.

Yours,

CITIZEN.

KING ALBERT KILLS CHAUFFEUR

Discovered Driver Trying to Betray Him

PARIS, Sept. 22.—The Progres du Nord yesterday relates a remarkable story of the King of the Belgians shooting his chauffeur while the latter traitorously attempted to drive him into the German lines. The King was with his troops at South Antwerp, and ordered his chauffeur to drive ahead.

After a while the King noticed that the driver changed his directions. His Majesty then warned him, and when the chauffeur took not notice, ordered him to halt. This having no effect, King Albert, convinced of his treachery, drew his revolver and shot the chauffeur dead. He himself stopped the car and drove back to the Belgian lines in safety.

In the man's clothing papers were found showing that he had received a German offer of a quarter-million dollars for the King's capture.

APPEAL WON BY HAVELOCK

Village Does Not Have to Pay Damages for Childrens' Death

Today's Toronto Globe has the following:—

Robinson v. Havelock. — F. D. Kerr, (Peterboro) for defendants; D. O'Connell (Peterboro) for plaintiff. Appeal by defendants from judgment of Kelly, J., of March 14, 1914. Action to recover $5,000 damages for death of three children of plaintiff, who while playing in a gravel pit of defendants on August 12, 1913, were killed by reason of overhanging earth falling upon them, alleged to be due to negligence of defendants in leaving the place unguarded and unfenced. At trial judgment was given plaintiffs for $725 and costs. Judgment: Appeal allowed and action dismissed with costs if asked.

LT. COL. STRANGE OFF FOR ENGLAND

Kingston, Sept. 22. — Lt.-Colonel Frank Strange, S.O.O., C.O.C., left at noon yesterday for New York where he will sail in a few days for England on the S. S. Lusitania to attend to the supplying of transports and food for the Canadian Contingent. It is likely that a base will be formed at Aldershot for the Canadian Contingent. He is accompanied by Lieut. Simpson of the G.P.A. S.C.

Citizens in general are pleased to hear of the splendid services that Lt.-Col. Strange will be rendering the Empire and the Canadian Contingent. All feel certain that the affairs under his direction will come to a most successful issue. That he should be chosen for the position again emphasizes the sterling worth of the officers attached to the local division.

Lt.-Col. Strange has seen much service in Canadian Militia. He was made Provisional Lieutenant of the 14th Regiment in 1885 and four years later was appointed honorary captain. He attained his majority in 1901 and two years later was made Lieut.-Colonel in the O.S.C. In 1907 he was appointed to the Canadian Ordnance Corps and was made Senior Ordnance Officer.

He has for years been attached to the Frontenac Club and has acted in the capacity of Honorary Secretary in a very efficient manner. In going to the Old Country he takes with him the best wishes of the citizens for a safe journey, and a safe return to his home town.

Among other things we have a strong premonition that Austria-Hungary is going to lose its hyphen.

However, it is always not well to condemn too rapidly. Those German naval officers may be fine lawn tennis players.

RUSSIANS FOLLOW GEN. DANKL ALONG THE SAN

The Invaders Have Taken Dembica and Are Now Only a Little More Than Sixty Miles From Cracow—Civil Government For Galicia is Organized—Vienna Maintains Silence Regarding Fighting.

LONDON, Sept. 22. — A despatch from Petrograd, via Rome, to Reuter's Telegram Co. says the Russians, who are pursuing the Austrians under Gen. Dankl along the River San, have captured Dembica, 120 miles west of Lemberg, and within 66 miles of Cracow. They have crossed the river, despite an attempt made by the Austrians to prevent them. They captured several batteries, a number of transports and arms and ammunition.

The Russians are now so sure of Galicia that they are organizing a civil government for that region, as well as for Bukowina, the Austrian crown land, of which they are complete masters.

The Germans have retaliated to some extent by penetrating the territory of Suwalki, in Russian Poland, and farther to the north. But the Russians are contenting themselves with defending their fortress until their work in Galicia is completed.

The commander-in-chief of the Russian army has sent the following telegram to Gen. Ivanoff:

"The Emperor has ordered me to transmit to the gallant armies in the southwest his warm thanks for the splendid prowess shown by the Russian troops. I am happy to carry out the will of his Majesty."

Austria Bankrupt.

VIENNA, Sept. 22. — The Vienna papers continue to maintain silence regarding the fighting in Galicia and Servia. They seem, however to draw encouragement from Gen. Dankl's order of the day, which, after praising his valorous troops, admits that they have been compelled to cease the offensive in the face of overwhelming forces.

NEW ONTARIO PRISON FARM NEAR SUDBURY

TORONTO, Sept. 22.—The Ontario Government is projecting still another industrial farm. Hon. W. J. Hanna announced yesterday that 13,000 acres of crown lands in the judicial district of Sudbury had been selected for this purpose and that work on it was beginning at once. The first contingent of men left Sudbury for the new site yesterday and will set up tents until suitable shelters are erected.

The new farm is situated in Burwash Township, at a distance of 21 miles from Sudbury. It is bounded on north and south by the Canadian Pacific and Canadian Northern Railways, and has splendid facilities for stock-raising. It is the expectation of the Minister that the assistance of the Fort William institution and others now planned, that the 2,000 cattle annually consumed in provincial institutions will be supplied entirely by the province.

MAY KEEP PORT OPEN.

Archangel Likely To Be Used In Winter For Freight.

LONDON, Sept. 22.—According to information received by the British Board of Trade, it may be found possible to keep open the Russian port of Archangel to the Arctic Ocean by means of the ice-breaking steamers until the end of November and possibly until the middle of December. It is also hoped to make arrangements for additional berths which will facilitate the discharge of private cargoes.

Archangel is the most northerly point in the railway system of Europe and is the only large seaport on the northeast of the Russian empire. The harbor usually is free from ice only between July and September.

Boy of 15 Kills Farmer.

EMERSON, Man., Sept. 22. — As the result of a feud between Christian Heintz, a farmer living in the district of Overton, about 25 miles south of here, and Alex. Dalishak, the 15-year-old son of a neighbor, the former is dead and the boy is under arrest charged with killing him.

L'Aiglon's Grave Neglected.

"L'Aiglon," the son of Napoleon, was unfortunate throughout his brief life, and his very memory is now neglected. He lies buried in Vienna, and his tomb is described by the correspondent of a French contemporary as a "melancholy spectacle." Only a copper plate attests to the fact that the little king of Rome is buried there, and not a flower decks the grave. This neglect is the more vivid inasmuch as the surrounding royal tombs, including that of his mother, who was an Austrian, are richly ornamented and surrounded with a luxurious growth of flowers.—London Globe.

Servians Not Driven Back.

NISH, Servia, Sept. 22. — (Via London.)—The Servian official press bureau yesterday issued a denial of the report from Vienna that the Servians had retired from Semlin, in Hungary, opposite Belgrade, after losing 6,000 prisoners and several pieces of artillery.

The report admits, however, that the Servians evacuated Semlin on orders from headquarters for strategic reasons. The retirement was accomplished in perfect order and the Austrians did not re-enter the city until two days later.

Defeat Is Admitted.

VIENNA, Sept. 22.—(Via Paris.)—The Vienna papers continue to maintain silence regarding the fighting in Galicia and Servia. They seem, however, to draw encouragement from Gen. Dankl's order of the day, which, after praising his valorous troops, admits that they have been compelled to cease the offensive in the face of overwhelming forces.

The newspapers are appealing daily for more doctors and more surgical supplies.

Paul S. Sheldon, of New York, has been elected a member of the Chicago Board of Trade.

SIFTON BATTERY READY.

Motor Marchine-Gun Battery Leaves To-day For Camp.

OTTAWA, Sept. 22. — The Sifton automobile machine-gun battery, which has been organized at the capital, leaves to-day for Valcartier. The battery consists of 15 protected high-speed automobile frames, on which are mounted quick-firing guns, and about 150 men, the majority of whom are either trained chauffeurs or highly skilled mechanics. It is believed that the battery will be capable of doing deadly work when it goes into action. The detachment also includes high-power automobiles for reconnoitering capable of making about 50 miles an hour.

The St. Paul and Chicago and Northwestern have temporarily stopped work on an elevated track extension in Chicago district.

Trinity Church Corner Stone Well and Truly Laid

Rev. R. G. Peever, B.D., pastor of George Street Methodist Church, then offered prayer after which Rev. John Garbutt, president of the Bay of Quinte Conference, led in reading the 132 Psalm. Rev. Wm. Johnstone, chairman of the district, read the New Testament Lesson from the first epistle of St. Paul to the Corinthians, 3 chapter, 9 to 13 verses. According to the program this was to be followed by an address by Rev. S. D. Chown, D.D., General Superintendent, but owing to his inability to arrive in the city before six o'clock Rev. John Garbutt of Cobourg, gave the address.

REV. DR. CHOWN.

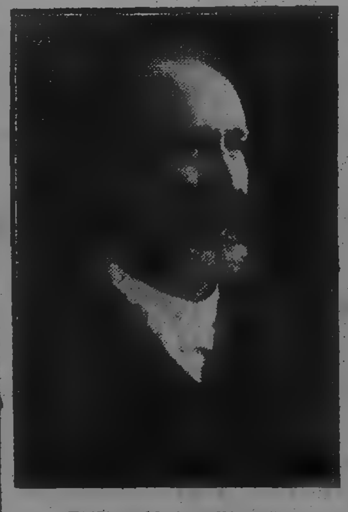
Superintendent of the Educational Department of the Methodist Church in Canada.

Rev. Mr. Garbutt expressed deep regret at the absence of the General Superintendent whose very words, he stated would be an inspiration to the assembly and the occasion. The speaker extended to Rev. Mr. Wilson and the members of the Charlotte Street Methodist Church the greetings of the Methodist Church in Canada, and hoped that when the doors were thrown open and they would assemble to worship Almighty God that He would pour out blessings and fill their hearts with that Christian feeling that urged them to go out among the community and bring back those who have deviated from the straight path of life.

The Church of Jesus Christ enables one to get a better vision of God and was a helpful minister to men. When one had received a vision of God, that is, when the Almighty had spoken to him by touching his heart, he was better prepared to live out a helpful ministery to mankind. Today the world needed a vision of God more so than ever before. The great tendency was to strive for things that perish, and utterly disregard the eternal. If the masses of people had a vision of God the masses people would be transformed because they would have an inward feeling that would prompt them to follow higher motives.

The greatest assistance to enable the people of the world to get a vision of God is the Christian Church. Men and women assemble and wait for the vision of God to come and it does come to the waiting soul, for we are promised that "where there are people assembled in prayer, Christ is in the midst of them. With the assistance of the church that love for God and love for neighbors is always manifested thus through the church the courage is given the poor, the sad and the sick.

Christianity imbues man with the feeling to assist fellow man, to help those in dire success. It is the church that sends man to the highways and byways to reclaim the images of Jesus Christ although perhaps these images have been stained with sin. The more churches that appear the more fully this great work is accomplished. Mr. Garbutt's closing words were in the form of prayer asking Almighty God to bring success to the new Trinity Church and when the last stone was placed and the people assembled and worshipped, that the blessings of God would reach their hearts.



REV. WM. JOHNSTON.

The Chairman of the district who took part in the devotional exercises.

Contents of Box.

Mr. W. G. Morrow announced to the gathering the contents of the box to be placed inside of the stone as follows :—

A Bible, Methodist hymn book, list of all officials of the church, officers of the Ladies' Aid Society and officers of the Sunday School, names of Mayor, city council, and city officials, list of county officials, copies of Daily Review, Examiner, and Times, Toronto Globe, Toronto Mail and Empire and Christian Guardian, Canadian coins, copy of order of service for the day.

His Honor Judge Huycke.

His Honor Judge Huycke in his remarks thought the scene of the laying of this corner stone was indeed beautiful. In was an inspiration both for the present and the future. The laying of the corner stone was but the first of the dedicaton services they hoped to join in later.

It had occurred to Judge Huycke the peculiarity of the three churches being constructed so closely together in the city. The three lots in their uniformity were laid out orignally by the Government for the Church of Scotland, the Roman Catholic Church, and the Church of England, but the Church of England property on which they were now building Trinity Church, by some means was handed back to the Government, later, however, coming into the hands of Senator George A. Cox. He, in his generosity, later gave it to the Methodist Church, and they had seen fit to build a house of worship upon it.

Words would be idle in praise of Senator Cox. The people of Charlotte Street Church knew what a power he was in the church, always looking towards the progress and prosperity of the church. He was not spared to be with them, but God had given them a worthy representative in the person of his son, Mr. H. C. Cox.

Judge Huycke, on behalf of the city and the church welcomed Mr. Cox to the city and the church of his baptism, and on behalf of them presented Mr. Cox with the trowel for the laying of the stone.

The Corner Stone Placed.

Mr. Cox then fittingly laid the corner stone of Trinity Methodist Church with these well chosen words : "In the name of the Father and the Son and the Holy Ghost, I lay this stone to be consecrated to the service of the Almighty God," and with a tap of the silver trowel and a few slight adjustments the principal stone in Trinity Church was laid.

Mr. Cox then addressed the large gathering. He esteemed it a great honor to be associated with the ceremony of the laying of Trinity Church corner stone. Mr. Cox said that he had been born when the church and city was having its inception, and it was his good fortune and privilege to spend his boyhood days in these surroundings, and with his parents who had taken great interest in the work of Charlotte Street Church.

"I appreciate the kindly references to my father and myself, and I know it would have given intense delight and satisfaction to my father had he been here to engage in these proceedings, but we must bow to the inevitable, and by God's will I am placed in the stead of my father to do much of his work."

"I take great pleasure in being here to serve you in such a worthy cause, and I congratulate the directors of this church in the good wark they are doing."

Greetings by the Mayor.

His Worship Mayor Buller said it was a great pleasure to look back at the history of the city of Peterboro and appreciate the wonderful work of the late Senator Cox, to whom so much credit was due for his successful efforts in building up the city. Mayor Buller stated that he had always considered the ground upon which the new church was being erected as consecrated and often thought what an ideal sight it would be to have three churches at the summits of Brock, Hunter and Simcoe Streets. He hoped that the new Trinity Church, its pastor and congregation would meet with every success, both temporal and spiritual. In closing His Worship welcomed Mr. H. C. Cox to the city and referred briefly to the generosity and other good qualities that marked the life of his late mother, Mrs. Cox.

Ministerial Association.

Rev. James Rollins, President of the Ministerial Association, was the next speaker. He spoke of the excellent work of the former pastors of Charlotte Methodist Church, particularly Rev. Dr. Henderson and Rev. T. J. Mansell and said that the present guardian of the flock, Rev. J. P. Wilson, was following in their footsteps. When he leaves he will have performed work that will live after him. He was pleased to note that the congregation called the church, Trinity Church, thus getting away from the usual custom of the Methodists to name their church after a street.

Rev. Mr. Rollins in the course of his remarks brought out a suggestion that met distinct favor with the audience. It was to have the name of Rubidge Street changed to Cathedral Street for as he stated it is very seldom that one will find so many churches on one street in a city of the size of Peterboro. The churches at present on that street are : St. Andrews, St. Peter's, Trinity, All Saints, and Knox, while on the continuation one finds Park Street Baptist and ground for another edifice at the corner of Park and Braidwood Avenue. Mr. Rollin's idea was to have the complete street, including both Park and Rubidge called Cathedral Street.

A Former Pastor.

Rev. S. J. Shorey, D.D., of Lindsay, a former pastor of Charlotte Street Methodist Church was the last to give an address. Speaking, as he was to a former congregation, he had great difficulty in not dealing with reminiscences which however he promised to deal with at night. The laying of the corner stone for Trinity Church meant more than the world could realize. Every Christian Church erected means that the individual would become more and more impressed with the fact that he must be possessed with righteousness, truth and justice and it was only when the individual realized this, that the nation began to realize it. The great conflict at present waging makes one feel like closing the doors of the churches and exclaiming "We have failed." But that is only when in a weakly mood. The stronger spirit urges us to work for the Christian Church and urge on the nations to realize that they, like individuals, must walk in righteousness, truth and justice, then and then only will Christianity be saved.

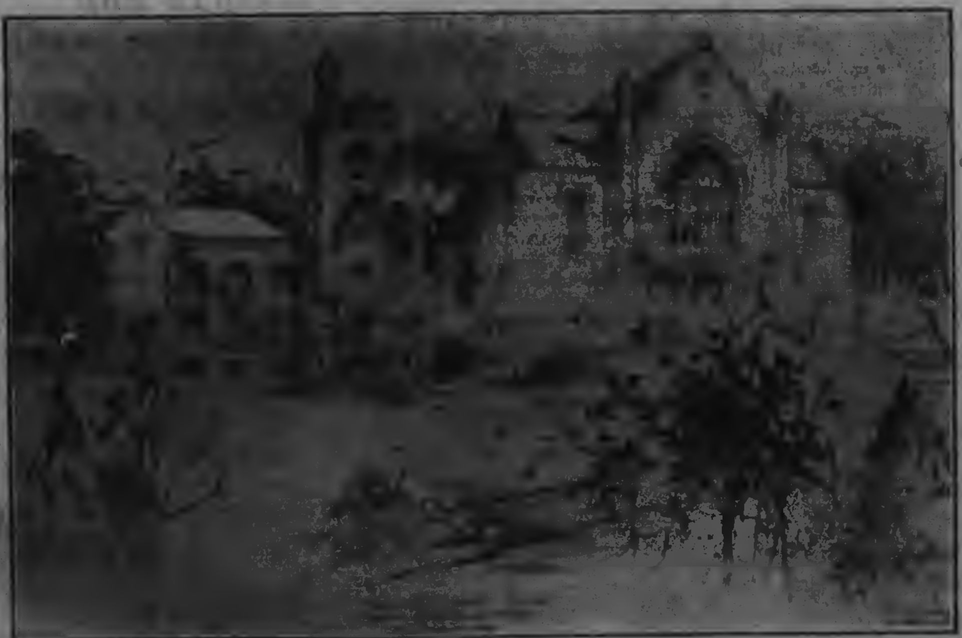
Rev. J. P. Wilson before having the last prayer and benediction pronounced paid a very touching tribute to the late Rev. T. J. Mansell. He stated that he found it difficult to think of the former pastor as deceased for he was living in their hearts and undoubtedly many thought of him during the ceremony and wished that Rev. Mansell might have been spared to see the laying of the corner stone. He was however looking down from his abode of happiness.

The selecting of the name, Trinity Church, was first suggested by the late Mr. Mansell, and the congregation were but carrying out his desires.

Rev. L. Phelps of Mark Street Methodist Church then brought the ceremony to a close with benediction.

The building committee of Trinity church is as follows :

His Honor Judge Huycke, Dr. Morrison, Hon. J. R. Stratton, Dr. Neal, Mr. W. G. Morrow, Mr. R. Neill, Mr. T. E. Bradburn, Mr. John Williams ; Mr. W. G. Morrow, chairman ; Mr. Robt. Neill, treasurer ; Rev. J. P. Wilson, B.A., pastor; Mr. R. F. Downey, recording steward.



Trinity Church, as sketched from the architect's plans. The building will give accommodation to between 900 and 1,000 persons, and will cost in the neighborhood of $60,000.

LARGE BRIDGE AT FRASER RIVER

Harry G. Rogers in Charge of the Inspection

A letter from Mr. Harry G. Rogers, Hope, B.C., says in part :—

I have now finished all of the C. P. R. bridge work being done on the Island at the present time. This was on the extension of the Esquimalt and Nanaimo Railway, running from Victoria to Courtenay at present, a line approximately 135 miles long, and virtually owned by the Canadian Pacific Railway, which has the control of the stock. It is the intention of the C.P.R. to make further extensions up the east coast of the Island, but for the present all the advance engineering parties are called in.

I have been transferred to the mainland again to take charge of the inspection of a large bridge across the Fraser river at Hope, B. C., which is to connect the Kettle Valley Railway with the main line of the C.P.R. When this bridge is completed it will mean the opening up of the Kettle Valley fruit areas, which will give a tremendous boost to that industry there.

This bridge will be quite a structure when completed, being a four span bridge of 235 feet length of spans, double deck, carrying a single track railway deck on the bottom chords, and the provincial highway crossing on top.

Hope is situated 90 miles from Vancouver, on the Cascado Subdivision. The contractors for the bridge are the Canadian Bridge Co., Walkerville, Ont. It is estimated that this will be about an eight months' job, all spans but the first one are to be erected by the cantilever method.

I suppose business in general down there is as much affected by the war as it is out here, where there is practically nothing moving. However the western optimisism is very prevalent, and it is hoped that things will take a brighter aspect before long.

HARRY G. ROGERS,
C.P.R. Bridge Inspector,
Hope, B.C.

P.S.—I had the pleasure of meeting three of my Peterboro friends in Vancouver last week, while at the Vancouver Hotel I met Mr. and Mrs. Waddell and also ran into Herbert Wood who is practising law there.

STIFF FINE ON MOTORIST

Was not in Fit Condition to Drive His Car

In today's police court John Armstrong was found guilty of being drunk on Simcoe Street this morning. Considering that he was on the go rather early in the morning the Magistrate assessed him two dollars.

William Stewart of Omemee, an old friend of the police court was in on a vagrancy charge. Chief Thompson thought he owed the court an old fine and had not been frequenting Peterboro in an endeavor to skip paying. But William said he didn't owe any fine. However, before he was through with today's police court session he had two dollars chalked up against him to be paid in ten days, and was advised to hit the trail for Omemee.

A man was found guilty of driving an automobile on a crowded thoroughfare last night while in an intoxicated condition. He succeeded in damaging a telephone pole and cracking some plate glass. He was fined fifty dollars and allowed ten days in which to pay.

It is worthy of note that the first offence of this nature makes one liable to a $50 fine and the second offence one hundred dollars, in default of payment a substantial time in gaol.

William Curtin was found guilty of conducting himself in a disorderly manner on Reid Street yesterday—two and costs.

Who Caused the War

Impression Made by the British White Paper Upon an American, of Advanced Radical Opinions

"Who Caused the War?" is the title of an article in Harper's Weekly. It is written by Mr. Norman Hapgood, editor of that publication, and represents the impression made by the British White Paper upon an American writer who is known to hold advanced radical opinions. The article is as follows:

It was over a quarter of a century ago, before all the facts were known in regard to the causes of the war of 1870. The exact division between Germany and Austria of the responsibility for the present war may not be known for as long a time. The documents that passed between them must be published, and certain indiscretions must be uttered before we can be sure. Enough is now available, however, to show that Italy was justified when she retired from the Triple Alliance on the ground that this, on the part of Germany and Austria together, was a war of offence. There is no doubt that the effort for peace was led by Sir Edward Grey, with persistence and with skill, up to the moment when Germany declared war on Belgium for maintaining her neutrality; and there is no doubt that his efforts were in every way seconded by France and Italy, and, with one reservation, by Russia.

The most essential facts in the situation are these:

1. Austria is not a nation. She is a dynasty. The House of Hapsburg rules over people who constantly endeavor to separate. The foreign policy of that house is based on the desire to hold its dominions together. Hungary has been troublesome lately. The new Slav province of Bosni-Herzegovina has required much repression. Servia has grown strong and dreamed of leading the non-Russian Slavs. The Hapsburg dynasty needed for its own comfort to reduce Servia. There are always plots and counterplots on both sides. The Austrian government knew well ahead of the plot to assassinate King Alexander and Queen Draga in 1903. It took a cynical attitude toward the murder until the world's outcry led it to express belated horror. When Servia completed a tariff union with Bulgaria in 1905, Austria began a tariff war on Servia. In 1906, in an effort to prove a Servian plot against her, Austria relied on documents that were forged. The murder of the heir presumptive a few weeks ago gave Austria her next chance, and she took it.

2. Russia has made it clear before, and she made it clear this time, that she would not let a Slav state be trampled on. She had to submit the last time Austria moved, because the Japanese war was so recent. She wished to avoid war this time. Indeed, she would have been infinitely stronger in three years than she is now. The correspondence fully shows that she accepted all the suggestions of Sir Edward Grey for a settlement and offered in Vienna any arrangement that did not mean destruction of the political independence of Servia by Austria.

The state of mind of the German cannot yet so confidently be described. Sir Edward Grey on July 10 urged upon the German ambassador in London the desirability of having the expected Austrian demands as reasonable as possible. On the 23rd Grey was informed by the Austrian ambassador to Great Britain that he supposed the Austrian ultimatum to Great Britain would contain something in the nature of a time limit. Grey urged that this point be left out of the first demands, in order to let Russia cool down, and, if necessary, be introduced later. Grey expressed the opinion that if as many as four great powers, Austria, France, Russia and Germany, were engaged in a war, a complete collapse of European credit and industry would accompany or follow the struggle. Count Mensdorff merely endeavored to throw all the responsibility on Russian mobilization. Grey remarked that at such a time of difficulty it required two to keep the peace. On the same day the British ambassador in Rome wrote that the Italian government explained the situation by Austria's need of a "definite success." On July 24 the British ambassador to Russia telegraphed Grey: "President of French republic and president of the council cannot reach France, on their return from Russia, for four or five days, and it looks as though Austria purposely chose this moment to present her ultimatum." On the same day Sir Edward Grey urged on Germany that Germany, Italy, France and England should work together at St. Petersburg and Vienna in favor of moderation. The next day the Austrian ambassador stated to Grey that the Austrian demands were not an ultimatum, but a demarche, and if not complied with the result would be not military operations but military preparations. Grey at once telegraphed this to St. Petersburg and Paris, hoping to make the situation less acute. The answer in St. Petersburg by the minister of foreign affairs was that a different view came from German quarters. Also that Russia was quite willing to accept the four-power plan. Also that the obligations undertaken by Servia in 1908, which Austria says were not carried out, were given not to Austria but to the powers. He believed Austria aimed at overthrowing the status quo in the Balkans and establishing her own hegemony there. He did not believe Germany wanted war, and he thought she could be stopped by England. The next day the German secretary of state said to the British ambassador that "if the relations between Austria and Russia became threatening (italics are mine) he was quite ready to fall in with your (Grey's) suggestion as to the four powers working in favor of moderation at Vienna and St. Petersburg."

If! It was the very urge of war, as everybody knew. On the same day the British ambassador telegraphed Sir Edward Grey: "Language of press this morning leaves the impression that the surrender of Servia is neither expected nor really desired." It is to be remembered that the most prominent newspapers are official and semi-official organs of the government. On the same day the British representative in Servia telegraphed to Sir Edward Grey: "I think it highly probable that the Russian government has already urged the utmost moderation on the Servian government."

The German Secretary of State stated on the 30th that he had put Grey's proposal before Austria and had received no reply.

The telegrams from Rome during these critical days indicate that Italy had been led to expect a much more conciliatory attitude in Germany. On the 31st Grey again urged his four-Power plan, with elaboration, in Germany, even offering to retire from the entente with Russia and France if they did not do their full share, and indicating that if the failure was on Germany's part England would be drawn in.

On the same day the German Chancellor admitted he had heard from Vienna, about Grey's proposal, to the effect that the Austrian Minister of Foreign Affairs would take the wishes of the Emperor in the matter.

On the 31st Grey asked France and Germany if they would respect Belgium neutrality and he urged Belgium to uphold herself.

On August 1st, Grey sent to Berlin a most significant telegram, indicating a sudden change in the views of Austria: "The Russian Government has communicated to me the readiness of Austria to discuss with Russia and the readiness of Austria to accept a basis of mediation which is not open to the objection raised in regard to the formula which Russia originally suggested. Things ought not to be hopeless as long as Austria and Russia are ready to converse, and I hope the German Government may be able to make use of the Russian communication referred to above, in order to avoid tension."

No document is more important than this one in the task of deciding whether Austria or Germany most desired the war. It is accompanied by the Russian telegram, which declared the readiness of Austria to discuss with the Great Powers the substance of the ultimatum to Servia.

Another document shows that the Austrian Secretary of State had called in the Russian Ambassador and urged him to explain in St. Petersburg that the door had not been closed on further negotiations.

The German Secretary of State, when confronted with all these proofs that when Austria was ready to make peace, said that Russia had explained that her mobilization did not necessarily mean war, as she could remain mobilized for months. "This was not the case with Germany. She had the speed and Russia had the numbers, and the safety of the German Empire forbade that Germany should allow Russia time to bring up masses of troops from all her wide domains."

So Germany declared war on Russia, and on France, invaded Luxenburg against her protest, and began the bloody assault on Belgium.

These facts, I think, give the critical points as they are known today. Probably nobody outside of the German and Austrian governments know more, or for a long time will know more. Everybody has here the data for his own guess. Mine is this. The Kiel Canal has just been finished. It about doubles the strength of the German navy. Social troubles in Germany are increasing. Russia's growing strength is a nightmare. Therefore it seems to the German war party to be the psychological moment. It used Austria as a cat's paw, as it has often done before. It encouraged the insulting form of the ultimatum, which fitted in with the Vienna mood. Austrian statesmen at the last moment began to realize what had been done to them as they have realized too late before. So they relented at the end. The German mind had long been made up. Its oligarchy would force the way; it would break any treaties and invade and neutrals; it would crush France, annex Belgium, beat back Russia, and then settle with Great Britain. It possessed a mighty empire of destruction, which might grow less effective, and it would use it now.

Unless to this apparently conclusive proof Germany can pin some very much more effective answer than any she has yet set forth, the moral effect will count in the long run for a great deal. It will not do to talk about "absolute knowledge" that France would have invaded Belgium if Germany had not; or that there was a secret plot between France, England and Belgium, or that Russia was planning to crush Germany; or any other piece of absolute knowledge, for which no single bit of evidence is brought forward. These first battles are being decided largely of military efficiency and preparedness, although even in in first round the tremendous importance of moral feeling and international ethics was shown by the superb fight put up by Belgium and the delay it caused Germany, by the sudden fusion of British opinion in favour of war when Belgium was invaded, and by the neutrality of Italy. If the war goes to a second round, if it is fought out to exhaustion, those moral considerations will count far more. Every man in France knows that he is fighting for a government that desired peace. Every man in England knows that Sir Edward Grey struggled desperately to avoid war. Every man in Belgium knows that an unspeakable outrage was inflicted on his country by a mighty government, ruthless of the consequences to a smaller power. Men in that mood fight long. On the other hand when the terrible pinch of poverty is fully felt in Germany and Austria, will the ordinary German and the ordinary Austrian, as the knowledge of the causes of the war slowly filter into his mind, be prepared for as long a death grapple as those countries which can have no possible doubt that war was forced upon them, and that they are fighting for the principles of mediation and neutrality, against a standard of international conduct that the world condemns? Moreover, the citizens of England, France and Belgium know that if they are successful, peace will be established as far as possible on a basis of good will to all nations; whereas if Germany wins, the Prussian war party will insist upon terms intended to crush the national life of all the countries now in arms against her.

When I was a small boy I possessed a thirty-six calibre six-shooter. This weapon made a strong impression on my imagination. I had day-dreams of what heroic feats I might perform with it. One day my Newfoundland dog developed a skin disease. He was an old and valued friend, but the gardener said he ought to be shot. I had no reason to suppose the gardener knew anything about it. I was afraid, however, that if I delayed action, the dog might be killed otherwise and I lose the opportunity to try my revolver. I went upstairs, got my revolver, found the dog asleep and shot him in the head. The bullet glanced, and I shall never forget the look of reproach he gave me as he howled and slunk away. The die was cast and then I had to finish the job. Scarcely has a month passed in all the years since then that I have not remembered this deed with horror. It was not that I was cruel. It was that my mind was affected by the pistol.

On the same day Sir Edward Grey telegraphed to his minister in St. Petersburg that the sudden, brusque and peremptory character of the Austrian demarche made it almost inevitable that in a very short time both Russia and Austria would have mobilized against each other. Presumably Vienna and Berlin knew the inevitability of this this as well as Grey. The German ambassador on the 25th read Grey a telegram from his foreign office saying that Germany had not known of the stiff Austrian terms beforehand, "but that, once she had launched that note, Austria could not draw back." On the same day Russia urged that Austria's time limit on Servia be prolonged to give the powers time to examine the promised data. England backed this request. The Italian ambassador to England on this day went to see Grey, and expressed strong approval of his position. The next day the German ambassador to Vienna expressed to the British ambassador to Vienna the belief that Russia would not go in, as the days of the Pan Slav agitation were over and a general war would re-open many matters in which Russia was interested, such as Swedish, Polish, Ruthene, Roumanian and Persian questions. "As for Germany, she knew very wel what she was about in backing Austria in this mater." On July 26 Grey again urged his four-power conference. France and Italy accepted at once. Germany, through headquarters at Berlin, said it was "not practicable," although, according to the German ambassador in London, she approved it in principle, and Russia said the arrangement was satisfactory. Grey called the attention of Austria to the fact that the British fleet was to have dispersed that day, but as the situation had developed it could not be dispersed. At the same time he was beginning covertly to threaten Austria and Germany; he encouraged Russia. To Austria and Germany he emphasized the fact that Britain might be drawn in. To Russia and France he emphasized the equaly true fact that it would all depend on developments.

The Russian ambassador at Vienna urged that the Austrian ambassador at St. Petersburg be given full power to continue discussion with the Russian minister Baron Macchio, the Austrian under secretary for foreign affairs, said he would submit this suggestion to the secretary. The next day the secretary himself gave Austria's position to the British ambassador "His excellency declared that Austria-Hungary cannot delay warlike proceedings against Servia, and would have to decline any suggestion of negotiations on the basis of Servia's reply. The prestige of the dual monarchy was engaged, and nothing could now prevent conflict."

On the same day the German imperial chancellor sent word to Grey that he agreed with Austria that Austria's quarrel with Servia was a purely Austrian concern, with which Russia had nothing to do. The next day the chancellor stated that he had just told Austria he agreed with her position about Servia's note.

The next day the British ambassador in Berlin telegraphed Grey that Germany was complaining of France's recalling officers on leave, while Germany was doing the same thing, but denying it. Partial Russian mobilisation was announced this day, as Austria had definitely declined direct conversations with Russia. Russia's foreign minister urged the revival of Grey's four-power plan. He was asked if she would accept an idea that had been suggested by Italy, that Servia might be willing to back down still further to the powers than she had to Austria, and he consented to this. He also said he did not care what form the four-power plan took. The British ambassador in St. Petersburg telegraphed to Grey: "I fear that the German ambassador will not help to smooth matters over, if he uses to his own government the same language as he did to me today. He accused the Russian government of endangering the peace of Europe by their mobilization, and said, when I referred to all that had been recently done by Austria, that he could not discuss such matters." On this day came the Austrian Emperor's impassioned appeal to his people.

Meantime Italy was telegraphing Berlin, urging it to take part in the effort for peace.

On the 29th Grey, talking to the German ambassador, revived his four-power plea. "I urged that the German government should suggest any method by which the influence of the four powers would be used to prevent war between Austria and Russia. France agreed. Italy agreed. The whole idea of mediation or mediating influence was ready to be put into operation by any method that German could suggest, if mine was not acceptable. In fact, mediation was ready to come into operation by any method that Germany thought possible, if only Germany would press the button in the interests of peace."

Then, on the same day, came Germany's attempt, fully familiar to the world, to buy British neutrality promptly refused by Grey. On the 29th the Austrian ambassador informed Grey the war with Servia "must proceed." Austria could not continue to be exposed to the necessity of mobilizing again and again, as she had been obliged to do in recent years. On the same day the British, French and Russian ambassadors in Vienna spoke to the German ambassador there, who expressed surprise that Servian affairs should be of such interest to Russia. The British ambassador on the 30th telegraphed to Grey: "Unfortunately the German ambassador is himself so identified with extreme anti-Russian and anti-Servian policy prevalent in Vienna, that he is unlikely to plead the cause of peace with entire sincerity. Although I am not able to verify it, I have private information that the German ambassador knew the text of the Austrian ultimatum to Servia before it was despatched, and telegraphed it to the German emperor. I know from the German ambassador himself that he endorses every line of it."

Russia, on the 30th, offered to stop all military operations if Austria, realising that her conflict with Servia had assumed an international character, would declare herself ready to eliminate from her ultimatum points which violated the principle of sovereignty of Servia.

WOMEN FROM 45 to 55 TESTIFY

To the Merit of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound during Change of Life.

Westbrook, Me. — "I was passing through the Change of Life and had pains in my back and side and was so weak I could hardly do my housework. I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it has done me a lot of good. I will recommend your medicine to my friends and give you permission to publish my testimonial." — Mrs. LAWRENCE MARTIN, 12 King St., Westbrook, Maine.

Manston, Wis. — "At the Change of Life I suffered with pains in my back and loins until I could not stand. I also had night-sweats so that the sheets would be wet. I tried other medicine but got no relief. After taking one bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I began to improve and I continued its use for six months. The pains left me, the night-sweats and hot flashes grew less, and in one year I was a different woman. I know I have to thank you for my continued good health ever since." — Mrs. M. J. BROWNELL, Manston, Wis.

The success of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, is unparalleled in such cases.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

Germany's Wireless

The world's biggest wireless station is situated at Nauen, just outside Berlin. From there the German war lords direct the progress of the conflict.

Messages can be despatched by its agency, not only to any part of Germany proper, but to her warships in distant waters, and to her colonies in Africa and Asia.

The system of wireless in use at Nauen is known as the telefunken meaning "sounding spark," and this exactly describes it. Sounding sparks! That is what you are listening to when you place a telefunken receiver to your ear.

No words, of course, are audible; only the short and long sounds of the Morse code, the signals sounding very much like musical notes—a series of notes, all of the same tone and pitch—played on an ordinary whistle. Yet anybody who understands the code can talk or listen at will across thousands of miles of empty space.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 21.—Wheat prices opened ¼c to 1¼c higher; oats ¼c to ½c higher, and flax ⅝c to 2⅝c lower. Following the opening there were further advances in wheat and oats, influenced by the higher Liverpool prices for spot. Later prices eased off considerably on the pressure of heavy offerings. The range in wheat prices up to noon was 2c to 2½c. At noon October was $1.11⅞, December $1.12⅞, and May $1.19⅞. October oats were 49⅝c, and December 49¼c. Trading was fairly active, and exporters were both buyers and sellers on today's market. Wheat closed ⅜c to ⅝c lower; oats ⅛c to ¼c lower. Flax prices showed extremely weak, and closed 5c to 5½ cents lower. In cash lines there was good trading in the early hours, but the demand was slow later for all grades. Millers and exporters bought moderately.

Cash grain closed—Wheat, ⅝c to 1c lower; oats, ¼c lower; flax, 5¼c lower, and barley 2½c higher for No. 4, others being unchanged.

Winnipeg cash: Wheat—No. 1 northern, $1.11½; No. 2, do., $1.08; No. 3, do., $1.03; No. 4, 95½c; No. 5, 88½c; No. 6, 84c.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Sept. 21.—The outside demand for Manitoba spring wheat was better today, and, as the prices bid were 3d to 6d per quarter higher, sales of a few loads of old crop were made to London and Dublin, but there was no enquiry for coarse grains. The local trade in oats continues quiet, the demand being only for small lots to fill actual wants, and prices show no change. In flour, the feeling is firm, with a fair amount of business doing for local account. A fairly active trade continues to be done in millfeed.

The butter market is weaker, and the finest creamery at the auction sale today sold at 27½c. There is a fair enquiry for cheese from the cable, but the volume of business doing is small, owing to the uncertainty of making shipments. The exports for the week were 33,272 boxes, as against 50,106 for the corresponding week last year.

Eggs were active and firm.

CATTLE MARKETS

UNION STOCK YARDS.

TORONTO, Sept. 21.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Yards were 183 cars, comprising 3276 cattle, 650 hogs, 2234 sheep and lambs and 207 calves.

Butchers' Cattle.

Choice heavy steers sold by the load at $8.60 to $9, and one lot of seven extra choice steers were sold at $9.35; loads of good, $8.25 to $8.50; medium to good, $7.75 to $8.15; medium, $7.50 to $7.75; common to medium, $7.25 to $7.50; inferior heifers, $6.50 to $7; choice cows, $6.75 to $7; good cows, $6.25 to $6.50; medium cows, $5.75 to $6; common cows, $3 to $4.50; choice bulls, $6.75 to $7.50; common bulls, $5 to $6.25.

Stockers and Feeders.

There was a fair supply, but quality was not up to the requirements of the demand. Choice steers, 800 to 900 lbs., sold at $7.25 to $7.50; good steers, 600 to 700 lbs., at $6.75 to $7; stockers at $5 to $6.50.

Milkers and Springers.

A moderate supply of milkers and springers sold at prices ranging from $60 to $95 each, and one extra choice cow at $110.

Veal Calves.

Receipts were light and prices very firm. Choice veal calves sold at $10 to $11; good at $8.50 to $9.50, medium at $7.50 to $8.50, common at $6.50 to $7.50, inferior at $5.50 to $6.50.

Sheep and Lambs.

Receipts were large. Sheep sold at steady prices, but lambs were easier and not all sold at the close of the market. Sheep, light ewes, $5.75 to $6.50; heavy ewes and rams, at $4 to $5; culls, $2.50 to $3; lambs, the bulk sold at $7.75 to $8, with a few at $8.25; culls, $6 to $7.

Hogs.

Selects, fed and watered, sold at $9.25, and $8.90 f.o.b. cars at country points, and $9.50 weighed off cars.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, Sept. 21.—At the Montreal stock yards west-end market the receipts of live stock for the week ending Sept. 19 were 2900 cattle, 3500 sheep and lambs, 2700 hogs and 700 calves, while the offerings on the market this morning for sale amounted to 3100 cattle, 2500 sheep and lambs, 1500 hogs and 500 calves.

One of the features of the trade continues to be the very limited supply of good to choice butchers' cattle coming forward, which has created somewhat of a scarcity of these grades, and in consequence the tone of the market for such was stronger at an advance in price of 25c per 100 pounds as compared with a week ago. Another feature of the market was the liberal supply of canning stock offered, which had a depressing influence, and prices declined 25c to 50c per 100 pounds, but at this reduction some drovers refused to sell, and one of the principal dealers in this class of stock shipped ten carloads to the Buffalo market, while others sold bulls at $4.75 to $5 and cows at $3.75 to $4 per 100 pounds. There was a good demand from butchers and packers for the best grades of cattle, and at the above advance noted a fairly active trade was done. A few small lots of picked choice steers sold at $8.75 to $9, and full loads of good steers brought $8.25 to $8.50, but the bulk of the trading was done in cattle ranging in prices from $7 to $8 per 100 pounds.

EAST BUFFALO LIVE STOCK.

EAST BUFFALO, Sept. 21.—Cattle—Receipts, 5,400; slow; prime steers, $9.50 to $10; shipping, $8.60 to $9.35; butchers, $7.25 to $9.50; heifers, $6.25 to $8.35; cows, $4 to $7.50; bulls, $5 to $7.50; stockers and feeders, $6.25 to $7.75; stock heifers, $5.25 to $6.

Hogs—Receipts, 17,000; active; heavy, $9.50 to $9.60; mixed and yorkers, $9.60; pigs, $9.50 to $9.60; roughs, $8.25 to $8.50; stags, $6.50 to $7.75.

Sheep and lambs—Receipts, 12,000; sheep active; lambs dull; lambs, $5 to $8.40; yearlings, $4.50 to $7; wethers, $6.25 to $6.50; ewes, $2.50 to $5.75.

AN ENERGETIC GENERAL

Von Der Goiz One of the Kaiser's Leaders, a Tireless Soldier

Field Marshal von der Goltz who was named by the Kaiser as military governor of Belgium after the German occupation of Brussels, was the organizer of the worst beaten army in modern history. Kirk Kilisse and Lule Burgas were assumed abroad to have buried Goltz Pasha's reputation.

But a different opinion prevails at the German General Staff. Von der Goltz is Inspector General of the Second Army Section. His reputation as an organizer rests in his own country on his work as General of the First Army Corps—the Russian border legions—at Konigsberg, which he commanded between 1902 and 1907. The assignment to the command of the corps of his native East Prussia was particularly agreeable to him and to the material with which he had to work.

GENERAL VON DER GOLTZ

At Konigsberg Goltz had full play for his tactical genius. He devoted his energies to developing the strategic training of the First Corps, which will be called upon to bear the brunt of the fighting with Russia. He inculcated relentlessly in officers and troops the doctrine that soldiering is all work and no play, and himself served as a tireless example of the theory. His critiques of manœuvre were extraordinarily instructive. New points of view were constantly being revealed by him. An officer who served in Goltz's corps was looked upon as having studied the art of war at the fountain head.

Goltz is 70 years old, and has been writing, fighting, and working for more than 50 years of the time.

MYSTERY OF THE EEL.

Just How Its Existence Ends, or Why, No One Seems to Know.

Of all the forms of fish science has studied the eel is the most remarkable and the least understood. Its life history is mysterious and as slippery as its own skin.

Its breeding grounds are the mid-Atlantic, at what depth nobody knows. During the year the larval eel remains at sea it never eats and grows constantly smaller. It finally starts swimming toward the mouth of some fresh water stream—often one that is a thousand miles away.

On arrival at its destination the eel promptly changes from the thinness of a visiting card and a transparency that permits only its glistening black eyes to be seen to the pigmented snakelike fish that is trapped and speared on the coast and in the rivers.

As soon as the eel has brought forth its first spawning of 15,000,000 to 20,000,000 eggs it dies, but just how its existence ends or why it should be cut off so short remains a mystery. One thing is certain, no adults come in from the sea, no adults remain in the streams.

The eel is a vertebrate animal which emerges from an egg less than one-twenty-fifth of an inch in diameter. It grows to a length of three inches in perhaps a year, and during that time is buffeted about on the high seas and drifts over a distance of 1,000 miles or more.

Yet during all this period the eel takes no food whatever and is doubtless incapable of doing so, owing to the unprepared condition of its digestive organs.—New York American.

A high school professor, drawn on a jury, was late in court, and the judge made him stay in during recess. That must tickle his pupils.

Miss Commissioner Davis' triumph over the rebellious prisoners on Blackwell's island is militancy of a high order properly directed.

THE SPORTING WORLD

COMMENT
As You Like It

Why do the Athletics persist in leading the American League? For this season the answer is that they lead the league in club batting, fielding, sacrifice hits, stolen bases and runs.

Ty Cobb had six hits in two games on Sunday. When the Georgian begins hammering the pill like that it's a safe bet who's going to lead Ban Johnston's circuit.

Pitcher Alexander, of the Phillies, won his twenty-fifth victory of the season on Saturday when he defeated St. Louis by 7-0. That earned for him the bonus of $1000 promised him during the spring training trip.

Just how the National Commission will regulate the world series is still a guess. Whether they will alternate daily between Boston and Sleepy old Philadelphia, or whether they will play two games in one town and then change, will not be known until the pennant in both leagues is clinched. It would be easier for all concerned to play two games in one city and then shift and would saxe expenses.

The Regina Province says:—

This year's series will also demonstrate how much the American League outclasses the National, as in addition to the Athletics and Braves clashing, there will be the two New York teams, the brace of Chicago clubs, and the St. Louis duo. The Boston Red Sox will likely play either the Philadelphia Nationals or the Dodgers. Then, perhaps, Pittsburg and Detroit will stage a series.

The O. R. F. U. will invade the East according to a despatch from Ottawa. A team has been organized in the Capital to play in the senior series of the association along with Hamilton Rowing Club and the Toronto R. and A. A. The new club will be a strong aggregation made up of several players who belonged to the Rough Riders and also many Ottawa College students. The withdrawal of Parkdale made it possible for the entrance of a team from Ottawa, and it is expected that next year there will be a team in Montreal, making the O. R. F. U. a worthy rival of the "Big Four."

The 1914 season has been a heartbreaker. There have been profits here and there, of course, of which the two greatest are New York and Boston, but for most of the magnates the pickings have been as scarce as fishworms on a desert. The Federals are in so deep that they can't let go the horns of the bull. They have not been able to dispense real major league baseball, but they have made such a dent in the organized brand that in all the leagues under the National agreement the game has declined. All hands are sick of the war, and the chaotic conditions it has brought about.

Christy Mathewson is having a very tough year. He has been beaten hard and more frequently than he likes to think about. But the greatest humiliation that has come to him is a severe trimming at checkers. Baker, just the name Baker, has long been a hoodoo to the great Christy. You all remember a certain Matty all by his lonesome. Well, in Chicago, where the lake breezes waft, there are two Bakers, father and son. These two Bakers dote on the little game of checkers. So does Mathewson.

When last in Chicago the great pitcher was bored, tired of hearing baseball chatter, and he took a saunter around town. He wandered into the board of trade smoking room. He was announced, but several fans recognized him and greeted him warmly. He was soon at his ease in the midst of an admiring throng. Charles E. Baker and his son, Charles, jun., were deep in a game of "your move," over in one corner.

Matty could not keep away. He soon sat down opposite the elder Baker and was beaten three times running. Then the younger Baker duplicated his father's feat, and Matty wandered sorrowfully away murmuring: "Baker, Baker? Where have I heard that name before? Baker."

The trouble between Frank Chance and the management of the New York American team has brought to light trouble which many of the ball players on the big circuits knew existed. Chance had not had a free hand in the management and has ben hampered in many deals which he desired to put through. For instance, he desired to buy Hoblitzell from Cincinnati for $3,000, and the Red's first baseman got away to the Red Sox. He has made a great record with the Boston team. Hoblitzell was a good ball player but had trouble in Redville and could not show his best.

Frank Chance is pretty sore at the whole business, and he thinks now he will quit baseball. However according to many dopesters, among them Christie Mathewson, it is thought that after a chance to rest and think it over he will be back in the game. It is almost a certainty that many clubs will be after him. Chance was always a Cub at heart and it is generally understood that Chance would like to close his days of baseball as the leader of the Cubs. "He does not look familiar," says Christie Mathewson, "out of a Cub uniform and he does not feel right. Now that Murphy has been eliminated from the Cubs, Frank Chance may again wear one."

Considering that Hank O'Day is about due for the can, the dope of Big Six looks about right.

Johnson Fanned Twelve.

Chicago, Sept. 22.—Walter Johnson triumphed over Faber yesterday in a 13-innings' pitching duel, with the score 6 to 1 in favor of Washington over Chicago. The end came in the thirteenth, when Faber weakened under the strain. McBride was hit by a pitched ball, Johnson walked, and Moeller singled to right, scoring McBride with the winning run. Johnson also scored when Collins' throw went wide to the plate. Two more runners got on the bases and scored on Gandil's home run. Gandil made four of the eight hits made off Faber, and one of them was a home run. Johnson struck out twelve men, ten of whom fanned in the first nine innings, which is a season's record for him. WAR IS WHAT?

Some Varied Points of View That Reach Far, Far Apart.

The Enlisted Man—A chance to break the deadly routine of the parade ground with some real excitement. In isolated cases to provide opportunities for military or political advancement.

The Business Man—A period of economical depression, often followed by large failures and the consequent loss of the public's investments.

The Volunteer—A stern patriotic duty to be entered upon without inquiry as to its justice or injustice.

The Philosopher—An unintelligent and gross instrument for the settlement of the world's unavoidable quarrels.

The Historian—A logical, if somewhat regrettable, method of arranging the world's boundary lines.

The Optimist—The natural strife of humanity, tending toward the general betterment of the social cosmos.

The Pessimist—The natural strife of humanity, tending toward the general destruction of the universe.

The Mother—A long vigil in an empty room and a memory of child voices forever stilled.

The Wife—A husband gone, a home destroyed and a woman's heart broken.

The Seer—The last great barrier between civilization and the millennium. —Life

RACING FOR SLEEP.

Running Around the Bed Is Said to Induce Drowsiness.

There is nothing in the world quite as exasperating as not being able to go to sleep when you want to, and persistent insomnia is one of the greatest curses of mankind. But many people suffer from insomnia from lack of knowing many of the simple devices that have been used in the past to provoke sleep, and Sir James Sawyer in a recent work points out how valuable some of these simple means have been.

Few plans are more successful, he suggests, than that of running around the bed, particularly if the night is cold. It will be remembered that Charles Dickens, who was greatly afflicted with sleeplessness, declared that if he could lean on the bedpost in thin attire, in which he usually slept, until he got chilled clear through the return to a warm bed would produce a drowsiness that led him along the path of sleep.

William Harvey, the discoverer of the circulation of the blood, was a believer in the circulation of the bed also. He declared that for sleeplessness nothing was better than to jump out of bed suddenly, as though frightened, race around the bed with very little on until the skin was cold and the body heated and then jump back into bed. Not only was the exercise good, he believed, but also the feeling that one was being withheld from going to bed caused a desire for it, which prepared the mind for sleep when once more lying down.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A Late Book.

Mrs. Hoyt, who became the possessor of a fortune by the death of an aunt, did not like to admit her ignorance of any subject.

One afternoon she had a call from a prominent society woman, and the conversation turned upon books.

"Have you read Shakespeare's works?" asked the caller.

"Oh, yes, indeed," replied Mrs. Hoyt, "all of them—that is," she added hastily, "unless he has written something very lately."—National Monthly.

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

It is a curious world. Some people have trouble because they haven't money, and others have trouble because they have.

Some people are so set in their way that they hatch out a lot of disagreeable ways.

Enterprising perseverance is the quality we so much admire in ourselves, but have noticed that sometimes it looks like stupid obstinacy in others.

Be just to your neighbor, for you don't know how soon he may have a chance to sit in judgment on you.

And the sad part of it all is that the back number invariably thinks he is it.

One argument in favor of woman suffrage is that women are going to get it.

Home without mother is like shortcake without strawberries.

We undoubtedly have many things to be thankful for, but we usually are so busy contemplating our ill fortune that we haven't time.

Taking things on trust and tradition may be beautiful and ideal, but seldom does it pay the bills.

When a woman can't stand off a bill collector she then proceeds to sit down on him.

The humble rolling pin often constitutes itself an entire woman's club.

A Snap.

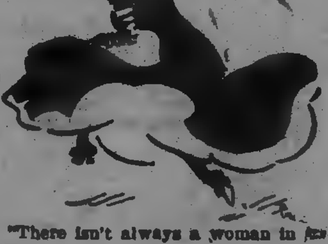
My little cousin Marguerite
  Has everything her way.
She doesn't ever do a thing
  But run around and play.
She sasses back like anything
  And gets her apron soiled,
And all the aunts and uncles say,
  "Too bad that she is spoiled."

Her mother says: "I wish you'd try
  To be more ladylike.
It isn't nice when you get mad
  Like naughty boys and strike."
But she pretends she doesn't hear,
  And when her ma is through
She simply goes ahead and does
  The things she wants to do.

And all the neighbors in the row,
  You may be sure, are shocked.
When she's around the hired girl
  Must keep the pantry locked.
She tears her dresses shamefully
  And gets her stockings wet,
And no one round dares say a word
  To papa's little pet.

She plays with little alley kids
  And lets them call her "sis,"
And she has just a lot of fun
  That other children miss.
Down in the basement with the cats
  You're apt to find her coiled.
She always has a bully time.
  I wish that I was spoiled!

Getaway.



"There isn't always a woman in the case."

"For example?"

"When she gets out of it."

They All Would.

"You are just an average man."

"You are frank and penetrating."

"Thank you."

"But how did you guess it?"

"You have just demonstrated that you yearn to get rich quick."

Financial.

"Love will find a way."

"That sounds all right, but something more is needed."

"Well, what?"

"Somebody to pay the way after love has found it."

Desired Evidence.

"You should love the right."

"I am perfectly willing to, but"—

"But what?"

"I'd like some evidence of reciprocation."

Justified.

"Do say something."

"What for?"

"Oh, nothing."

"I never give something for nothing."

Where He Gets Off.

"He is so crude."

"Yes, but he always gets there."

"Where?"

"Oh, the place he wasn't going."

That's the Question.

"One man is as good as another."

"Which other?"

MR. BOWSER REFORMS
Wakes up to a Realization of His Domestic Blessings

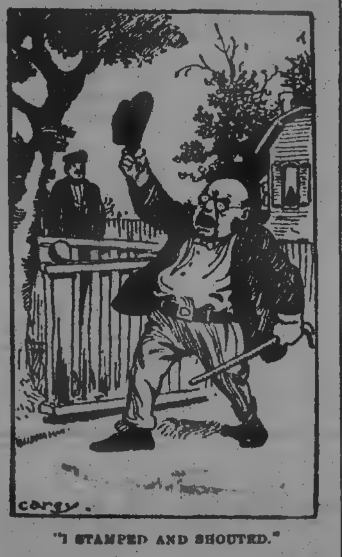
By M. QUAD

[Copyright, 1914, by Associated Literary Press.]

MR. BOWSER was due at his house at 6 o'clock, and Mrs. Bowser was wondering what sort of a new fad he would bring with him, when he suddenly opened the door. As he didn't give the door a kick and a bang when he opened it, she knew that he hadn't had a row with the street car conductor en route. As he was humming a tune she knew that he hadn't found a clothespin or a shirt button on the steps, and would bring no charge of reckless extravagance against her.

"Ha! little woman, but here you are!" he exclaimed as he caught sight of her. "Dinner's all ready, of course? You never keep me waiting, and you always have something good. I never come home without patting myself on the back over my good luck. Everything gone all right with you today?"

It wasn't an extra good dinner. The butcher had sent a poor roast, and the cook had had trouble with the range, but as Mr. Bowser plied his knife and fork he complimented everything. He also complimented Mrs. Bowser on her personal appearance and the cook on her culinary skill, and yet Mrs. B. was uneasy. As dinner ended she almost hoped to hear him say he was going around to the club for an hour or two. He had no such idea in his head, however. As he reached the living room he lighted a cigar and dropped into a chair with the observation:



"I STAMPED AND SHOUTED."

A Home Worth Having.

"Well, but this is home! This is the way for a man to live! A man who has a home like this ought to be kicked for complaining about anything. Did I leave you any shopping money this morning?"

"I—I think not," she replied.

"Then I must have forgotten it. I meant to have left you $20. Just put me in mind of it tomorrow, will you? By George, but how neat and cozy this room looks. We ought to have a little more light, though."

"I'm trying to keep the gas bills down, you know."

"Never you mind the gas bills, little one," he said as he rose up and lighted all the burners. "You are naturally saving, but there's no need of pinching. Just use all the gas you want to and don't scrimp on coal. Didn't I see you fixing up a dress the other evening?"

"I was altering it over in hopes to make it do," she explained.

"Well, throw it away and go down and get a new one. I want to see you well dressed, and there's no call to alter old garments. Go to the best dressmaker and have the latest style."

"You are awfully kind and good!" she murmured as she forgot the peril of the situation for a moment.

Mrs. Bowser Deserves It All.

"No thanks, please. You do deserve all I can do for you. If there's a better little wife in all this big world, I'd like to hear of her. The trouble is that I don't half appreciate you. Only the other day I was thinking things over and I realized to the fullest extent that but for your influence I should never have been the man I am. I've made blunders enough, heaven knows, but if it hadn't been for you I should have made hundreds more. Just think of the tomfool fads I have indulged in, will you?"

"They weren't so very foolish," she protested.

"You say that to let me down easy, but I realize how often I have made an ass of myself. Ah, there's the cat. Kitty, kitty, kitty!"

The cat came out from under the lounge and sprang to Mr. Bowser's knees, and he stroked her back and toyed with her ears and said:

"Just a cozy little family, aren't we? Do you remember that one night about two weeks ago we differed as how to spell the word 'wagon?' I said there were two 'g's' in it, and you said there was one. I want to ask your forgiveness. Of course you were right."

"There's nothing to forgive," replied Mrs. Bowser. "People are often mistaken about a word."

Humbly Seeks Forgiveness.

"But I got mad and called you an idiot. I wish some one had been at hand to kick me. About the winter coal bill—I said we had burned a ton a week and jumped up and down and bulldozed around, and it's a wonder you kept your temper as you did. Please forgive me for that."

"You thought you were right."

"Yes, but I made a fool of myself, as I had a hundred times before. Even if we had used a ton a week you couldn't help it. You don't make the weather. If there was ever a wife who looked after things around the house with a determination to help her husband it is you. I don't believe 2 cents' worth of stuff is wasted in a year."

"I try to do my best," she responded, but at the same time wishing that Jones or Brown would come in and interrupt the conversation.

"Do you remember the night I came home and found a clothespin on the doorstep?" continued Mr. Bowser, with evident enjoyment. "I busted into the hall and made as much fuss over that old clothespin as if it had been a diamond sunburst. I stamped around and shouted and bulldozed and spoiled the whole evening. Mrs. Bowser, why didn't you bristle up to me and tell me to shut right up or you'd leave? If you had hit me with a crowbar that night, it would have served me right. Have you—can you ever forgive me?"

"There was a strange man here this afternoon," she said, determined to break up the conversation at all hazards, "and I think he wanted to see you about land."

Asks For His Old Love Letters.

"Well, let him come when I'm home. I believe you told me long ago that you had saved all my old love letters. Suppose you get 'em down, and we'll read 'em over."

"I—I don't think I could find them tonight. Shall we run into Brown's for an hour?"

"I'm too comfortable to go out. Wasn't it funny about my trying that barefoot cure? When a man starts in to make a fool of himself the way I do every little while, somebody ought to take a club to him. If I bring a baseball bat home, will you whack me with it the first time I act like an idiot?"

Mrs. Bowser was about to make an excuse to leave the room when the cook came up with a bill. It was a balance of 31 cents owing the butcher. Mr. Bowser was smiling all over as she handed it to him, but no sooner had he glanced over it than a thunder cloud took the place of his smile, and he shouted:

"What's this? What's this? You've been running in debt again!"

"The butcher couldn't change a bill," explained Mrs. Bowser.

The Magic Spell Vanishes.

"Debts, debts, debts!" exclaimed Mr. Bowser as he flung the cat half way across the room and jumped up and swung his arms in the air. "Woman, haven't I warned you a million times about this reckless extravagance? If I gave you $1,000 a week to run this house on you'd still be in debt! Of all the extravagant, reckless spendthrifts I ever saw, you are the worst."

"But it wasn't running in debt. I had a bill, and he couldn't change it. I expected to pay it tomorrow."

"What's tomorrow got to do with it? I tell you not to run in debt, and you defy me. I'm looking at the principle of the thing. Mrs. Bowser, this is too much—too much!"

"You are getting excited over nothing," she replied. "We had to have meat, and the butcher couldn't change a $10 bill."

"Wreck, ruin and the poorhouse!" he groaned as he walked about. "It's no wonder I'm old and bent and gray before my time. Thousands of clothespins on the front steps, tons of broken dishes in the backyard—waste and extravagance everywhere! And you sit there and smile over it! I am about to retire to the library. I desire to arrange my business affairs and see if I've got 2 cents left. While I am doing so you can break up the chairs, smash the piano and kick holes in the carpet. Good night, madam!"

And when he had gone the cat sat beside Mrs. Bowser and looked up into her face with what one might think was sympathy.

Content With His Lot.

A Floral Chameleon.

A marvelous flower has been discovered in the isthmus of Tehuantepec. Its chief peculiarity is the habit of changing its color during the day. In the morning it is white; when the sun is at its zenith it is red, and at night it is blue. The red, white and blue flower grows on a tree about the size of a guava tree, and only at noon does it give out any perfume.

FINE PROGRAM BY LOCAL ARTISTS

Patriotic Concert Delighted Opero House Audience

The patriotic concert given last night in the Grand Opera House by local talent was a shining success. In all approximately $155 were realized which will be donated toward the Patriotic Fund. The large audience was very appreciative and so well they might for never was Peterboro's talent presented in such an excellent manner. The vocal selections were especially good and the only regrettable fact was that encores were missing, because of the length of the program.

To Messrs. J. J. Turner and Sons the citizens are indebted. They provided the Opera House, ushers, assistants and orchestra as well as handsomely decorating the stage.

The following composed the committee in charge :— Chairman, John Crane ; Secretary, E. Read ; Mrs. J. H. Renwick, Misses Ada Richardson and Ida Sanderson, Messrs. R. J. Devey, John Allan, John Smith and H. C. Treneer.

RECEIPTS OF CONCERT $155

The committee having in charge the patriotic concert desires to express their sincere thanks to Mr. Turner, for the use of the opera house ; to the Review, Examiner and Times, for cards, tickets and programmes, respectively ; to the J. M. Greene Music Co., for piano ; the Fuel & Cartage Co., for carting same ; to Mr. Stocker, for bill posting ; to the Opera House orchestra, 57th Battalion band, and all those contributing to the programme, and to many others who offered their services.

The total receipts were approximately $155, and as there were no expenses, this sum will be paid over to Treasurer Adams of the Patriotic Fund.

YOUNG MAN IS FOUND DEAD

Cecil Roy Herring, Bethel, was found dead in bed this morning by his grandmother, Mrs. Samuel Tapscott. Deceased was 24 years of age, and for some time past has made his home with Mrs. Tapscott. Yesterday he was about as usual and in the afternoon went autoing. As he was not up at the usual this this morning, Mrs. Tapscott went to his room, but life was extinct. Dr. Aldrich was called and it was found that the young man had been dead for some time.

An inquest was deemd unnecessary.—Port Hope Guide.

MANY NURSES FOR OVERSEAS SERVICE; MISS BLEWETT LEAVES

Ottawa, Sept. 22.—The selection of officers to command the Canadian division will be announced from Valcartier within the next two or three days. One of the difficulties which has been encountered is that of choosing commanders when the supply is vastly in excess of requirements, but the work is well advanced.

As previously intimated, the organization of supplimentary corps will follow immediately upon the despatch of the first division, and will consist of 16,000 men, who, with those already raised, will make a total of 40,000. Then there will be further drafting for wastage and disability.

The mobilization of these supplementary forces cannot be at Valcartier, and the previous intimation that it will likely be at Maritime province points is affirmed. At yet, however, no detailed arrangements are concluded.

A selection has been made of 96 nurses to accompany the division, but the list is not expected to be made public until the nursing sisters report at Quebec, as they are notified to do on Wednesday.

Miss Beatrice Blewett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. Blewett, Reid St., left this afternoon to report for service with the Canadian nurses.

SUPPLIES FOR TYPEWRITERS HAVE INCREASED IN PRICE

New York, Sept. 22.—A continuation of the present European situation will have its effect upon the manufacture of carbon paper and typewriter ribbons. In the manufacture of these articles various colors and dyestuffs are used, and in nearly all of these colors there is a considerable shortage, certain colors being unobtainable. Prices have been advanced anywhere from 10 to 300 per cent. for some colors since the war began, and even at the advanced prices are not buyable.

The colors and dyestuffs, such as green, purple, blue and red, are imported principally from Germany. Unles a substitute can be manufactured in the United States, the shortage will cause some disadvantage to the trade and some will be forced to shut down entirely. The latter refers especially to those firms that have large contracts with the government for supplies of this sort. These firms are seeking their supplies from sources other than those from which they have been getting them.

LARGE GATHERING ENJOYED THE NEW ENGLAND DINNER

It was estimated that over five hundred people gathered at the Charlotte Street Church to enjoy the New England dinner provided by the Ladies' Aid. The enthusiasm and interest displayed in the earlier ceremony did not wane in the evening and many were the eulogies heaped upon those responsible for the fine cooking. One disappointment befell the gathering at the evening program, when it was announced that Dr. Chown of Toronto, the superintendent of the educational department of the Methodist Church, was unable to be present. However, the remainder of the program was carried out to the satisfaction of everyone.

MANY BABIES ARE ENROLLED

Ladies Are Kept Busy Recording Names for Contest

The enrollment for the better baby contest began yesterday, and from 3 to 5 the ladies in charge were kept very busy recording names and addresses. All classes of the community were represented, and it is evident that the mothers of Peterborough are alive to the benefit of this contest. Register early. The enrollment takes place at the public library, downstairs, from 3 to 5 p.m. every day this week.

PATRIOTIC RELIEF FUND

The teams in several divisions have about completed their canvass. They have met with encouraging success.

All the teams are urged to complete their work in the week beginning Sept. 21st, and to hand in the completed lists by Sept. 29th.

These funds are to care for the wives and families of volunteers who have gone on active service, and of those who, in consequence of the war, are in need of relief.

Large sums will be required to prevent suffering.

Liberal contributions are urgently requested.

AS TAY PAY O'CONNOR M.P. SIZES UP EARL KITCHENER

(By T. P. O'Connor, M.P., in Colliers.)

In studying Lord Kitchener, one has to get rid of the legendary Kitchener, and try to reconstruct the real man. The silent Sphinx ; the emotionless machine ; the harsh and heartless commander ; all these picturesque phrases which have been applied to Lord Kitchener, sometimes by graphic friends and sometimes by virulent foes, are absolutely misleading.

Lord Kitchen doubtless, like all great men of action, can keep his own counsel ; but the silent Sphinx when met at a dinner party is eager to talk, and talks admirably, with a certain directness and terseness as of a man of action, but not without imagination, and with great insight. When he is in the intimacy of his own room at night and with only a friend or two, he can talk the whole evening through ; and nobody thinks of interrupting the stream of interesting reminiscence and shrewd comment.

The emotionless machine has, as a matter of fact, plenty of emotion, though well under restraint ; and the harsh and heartless commander is considerate to subordinates — scarcely says a harsh word—never utters a harsh comment behind anybody's back, and often has distinguished himself from more excited subordinates, not by the rigor, but by the greater humanity, of his judgment and action. This man without emotion has, in reality, a keen and abiding sympathy with those Eastern people among whom his life has been mainly spent ; he has had to slay many of them, but they were the oppressors, and it was to save the oppressed. He speaks their language, understands their nature, sympathizes with their wrongs, is indulgent to their weaknesses ; and works incessantly for their spiritual and material elevation.

This man, who has fought such tremendous and historic battles and confronted great odds, is yet a man who prefers a deal to a struggle ; and, though he can be so stern, has yet a diplomatic tact that gets him and his country out of difficult hours. The nature, doubtless, is complex, and stern determination and tenacity are part of it ; but there is also the other side, which is much forgotten—especially by that class of writers who have to describe human character as rigidly symmetrical and unnaturally harmonious.

No Trouble to Reach the General.

That cold and penetrating eye of his makes it impossible to imagine anybody taking any liberties with Lord Kitchener ; yet one of his greatest qualities, at once useful and charming, is his accessibility. Anybody who has anything to say to him can approach him ; anybody who has anything to teach him will find a grateful learner. This is one of the secrets of his extraordinary success and universal popularity in Egypt. Lord Cromer was a great Egyptian ruler, and his services are imperishable and gigantic ; but Lord Cromer was the stern, solitary, and inaccessible bureaucrat who worked innumerable hours every day at his desk, never learned the Arabic language, and possibly never quite grasped the Arab nature. Lord Kitchener is the cadi under the tree. The mayor or the citizens of the little Arab village can come to him, and the old soldier, and even the fellah, alone ; and they will find Lord Kitchener ready to listen and to talk to them in their own tongue, to enter with gusto into the pettiest details of their daily and squalid lives, and ready also to apply the remedy to such grievances or to supply such wants as commend themselves to his judgment.

Kitchener's Real Distinction.

A great soldier certainly ; but perhaps a greater organizer than anything else. This is his supreme quality, and for that quality there is necessary, above all things, a clear, penetrating brain. He doesn't form any visions—as Napoleon used to complain of some of his marshals. At school he was celebrataed for his knowledge of mathematics, and especially for his phenomenal rapidity in dealing with figures, and it was not accident that so truly a scientific mind found its natural place in the engineers. A mathematician, an engineer, a man of science, a great accountant — these things he has been in all his enterprises. It was these qualities that enabled him to make that astounding railway which brought Cairo almost into touch with the Caliph, who, with his predecessor, the Mahdi, and with his tragically potent ally, the hungry and all-devouring desert, had beaten back so many other attempts to reach and to beat him.

An Illuminating Bit of Biography.

What, then, is the real Kitchener; what lies at the root of his nature; what is the explanation of the extraordinary things he has done and is doing? I go back first to his father as a light thrown on his career. A retired officer, English by birth, a visitor to Ireland almost by accident, with but a comparatively small fortune, he suddenly sees an announcement of the sale of a large estate in the county of Kerry at the low price which followed the devastation of the famine of 1846.

He settles down on the estate ; he at once sets to improving it, to draining it, fencing it, doing all the things which are natural to a real farmer, but which were all neglected under the indolent and wasteful rule of that unfortunate class of old Irish landlord who wrecked himself and so many others. This soldier buys more land, improves it, sells it at an advantage ; in short, he makes order out of chaos and makes money where his predecessors had lost their all. To some extent, but of course on a mightier scale, his son might be described as an improving landlord. He has the instinct of order, the instinct to improve, the irresistible impulse to make material changes for the benefit of those he governs. He is ceaseless in work for the improvement of Egypt since he went there ; he has drained the delta region and will add millions of acres to the cultivable land of Egypt. You should see the enthusiastic light in his eyes and hear the swell in the voice as he talks of seeing land open to the toil of man which, for centuries, had lain derelict in morass and under water.

I attribute something of the Lord Kitchener we know to the fact that though English by blood, he spent the first years of his life in wandering over the hills and looking down on the sea-tossed shores of County Kerry. That tact which enabled him to settle the issue with Marchand, the French explorer, at Fashoda, suggests some of the lessons in the soft answer which Ireland can teach. You remember how, when it was possible that a collision between him and Marchand might mean a war between England and France, Lord Kitchener sent some fresh vegetables and champagne to the daring explorer, who had gone through the hunger, thirst and hardship of the desert for months. Marchand had to go from Fashoda all the same, but he went with no personal grievance.

If I look for the roots of Lord Kitchener's greatness I trace them to intense ambition to succeed, to make the most of his opportunities —above all, to the incessant desire to work and fill every hour of his days with something done. He is sent as a youngster to Palestine; through peril to life, through great privation, through heart-breaking drudgery, he pursues his work until he has completed a map of all western Palestine, to the amazement and delight of his employers. And he values this experience so largely because he learns Arabic, and, above all, he learns the Arabic character. One of the chroniclers of his career makes the apt observation that, while the baton of the marshal is in every French soldier's knapsack, Kitchener found his coronet in the Arab grammar. But how many soldiers or men of any class would have devoted the leisure hours of a fiercely active task like Kitchener's in Palestine to the study of one of the most difficult of languages?

How Kitchener Chooses His Help.

The choice of subordinates is one of Lord Kitchener's greatest powers. He nearly always has had the right man in the right place. And his men return his confidence, because he gives them absolute confidence. He never thinks of asking a subordinate whether he has done the job he has given him ; he takes that for granted, knowing his man ; and he never worries his subordinates.

This is one of the reasons why, though he works so terrifically, he never is tired, never worried. He sits down at his desk at the war office for about ten hours a day ; but he sits there calmly, isn't ringing at bells and shouting down pipes ; he does it all so quietly that it seems mere pastime ; and the effect of this perfect tranquility produces an extraordinary result on those who work with him. They also do their work easily, tranquilly, and without feeling it.

INSPECTORS ARE NOT AUTHORIZED TO TAKE FEES

Farmers have complained that they have been charged a fee for the inspection of hogs, by the government inspectors at the Matthews-Blackwell plant. The fee they say is eight cents.

An explanation by Mr. Matthews is unavailable till he returns to the city.

The Department of Agriculture, however, points out that fees should not be charged. The Minister has written to Mr. Burnham as follows : "Just a brief note to say that our inspectors at packing houses are not authorised to collect fees. They are salaried officers of the department and it is certainly against our rules for them to accept remuneration from those who sell meat to the packing houses."

Ontario Osteopaths to Meet.

The annual meeting of the Ontario Association of Osteopathy will be held in Toronto, October 30. The most spectacular feature of this convention will be the actual demonstration upon a local patient of the wonderful new method of correcting spinal curvature in one operation, instead of taking two or three years to do it by the old-fashioned methods. This work will be shown by Dr. E. G. Detwiler, of London, Ont.

Invitation to Choristers.

The Peterborough Choral society, in view of the near production of the oratorio "Judas Maccabaeus," cordially invite all readers of music to help. The second practice will be held to-night in the collegiate institute at 8 o'clock. The executive committee will meet after the practice. The members of the Conservatory orchestra are asked to bring their stands, and a splendid rehearsal may be expected.

Gift From Dr. Bridge.

Dr. Bridge, the famous organist and composer, has paid a compliment to the musicians of Peterborough by forwarding copies of Rudyard Kipling's poems, "The Ballad of the Camperdown" and "Song of the English," set to music by himself, to Mr. R. J. Devey, conductor of the St. George's Choral society (as it was then known). The production of "Judas Maccabaeus" last April was noted in English musical papers under the heading of "Oratoria in Canada," and the noting by Dr. Bridge shows his kindly interest in world-wide productions.

"We had only two options before us," said the Salada Tea Company, "to either lower the quality of Salada Tea or advance the price 5c. We decided upon the latter and feel sure we will get the same support from the tea-drinking public as we have had for the twenty-two years past." Salada Brown Label is now sold at 35c. a pound, Blue Label at 45c., and Red Label at 55c. a pound.

MINISTERS ENDORSE FUND

Requires and is Deserving of Large and General Contributions

The Ministerial Association is preparing a letter to be read in all the churches of the city next Sunday. Only one part of this letter has been given out for publication. It refers to the Patriotic Fund as follows :

We most heartily endorse the Patriotic Fund for the giving of deserved help to the wives and dependents of our soldiers and for the alleviation of distress, directly caused by the war.

This fund, in our judgment, requires and is deserving of large and generous contributions.

As to the distribution, in the interest of the community, the greatest care should be exercised to guard against pauperization and to foster and preserve that healthy and independent self respect, which should ever characterise all British Canadians.

BOMBARDMENT BY FRENCH AT CATTARO.

Bordeaux, Sept. 23.—The minister of marine announced to-day that a French fleet has landed heavy guns and a detachment of gunners at Antivari, Montenegro. The guns will be mounted on Mount Lovchen, whence they will open an energetic bombardment on the forts and harbor of Cattaro. The forts at the mouth of the Cattaro harbor were destroyed some days ago by a bombardment carried out under the direction of Admiral Dela Payrere.

BRITISH AVIATORS DROP BOMBS AT CENTER FOR ZEPPELIN WAR CRAFT

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Antwerp, Sept. 23.—A successful raid by a squadron of five English aviators on the German aviation camp at Bickendorf near Cologne, is reported. Bickendorf is the center for the Zeppelin air craft and according to the story the Britishers from a height of 1500 feet dropped bombs that set fire to the hangars. Four of the aviators returned to the point of their departure while the fifth was obliged to descend owing to engine trouble but succeeded in landing in Belgium.

BERLIN ADMITS THE LOSS OF SIXTY THREE THOUSAND, INCLUDING THREE GENERALS

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Berlin, Sept. 23.—The casualty list published today totals 5,895 names and brings the total published so far up to over sixty-three thousand. What period of war this total covers is not stated but today's list includes three generals all killed and one of them on August thirtieth. On August twentieth and twenty-second, the 174th Regiment lost its colonel, thirty-eight officers and 1846 men.

GUNS AS GIFT OF CANADA

Field Artillery to be Given the Premier Announces

OTTAWA, Sept. 23.—An important statement in regard to the Canadian expeditionary force was issued by Sir Robert Borden yesterday on his return from Valcartier.

Announcing the gift of a large number of guns to the Imperial War Office, Sir Robert says:

"The great demands upon the British Government in supplying guns and rifles have made it assential that Canada should assist in every possible way.

"Therefore, in addidtion to the 70 field guns and the machine-guns with which the Canadian expeditionary force is equipped, we are arranging to supply the British Government with the following:

"1. Forty-seven 18-pounders of the most modern type, which had been ordered by the Canadian Government in Great Britain before the outbreak of war, are to be handed over to the British Government.

"2. Fifty-one guns of the same type, which the Department of Militia has on hand. These will be forwarded on the transports.

"3. Six 60-pounders, which will also be sent forward at the same time.

"4. About thirty machine guns ordered by the Canadian Government in England before the outbreak of war. All this is being done by the Canadian Government at the request of the War Office, in order to assist in equipping the great army which is being assembled in the Mother country. It is also expected that a considerable number of rifles will be supplied from Canada to the War Office."

DEPARTMENT WILL LOOK INTO COMPLAINT

Washington, Sept. 23.—Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, the British Ambassador, has called to the attention of the State Department the activity of German organizations in the United States, and has asked an investigation into the report that certain of them are preparing for a warlike action against Canada in the event of a decivise defeat for the allied powers on the European battlefields.

The Ambassador informed the Secretary of State that he believed the headquarters of the societies contemplating such operations are in Cincinnati. The State Department will look into the complaint.

FARMERS DO NOT GIVE MUCH HELP TO SCHEME

Toronto, Sept. 23.—The general expectation that the farms of the province would take a prominent part in relieving unemployment in the congested centres by supplying numbers of men with work at moderate or even nominal wages over the winter, has not been realized. Apparently the farmers of Ontario have all the help they need and are reluctant to take on men if they can get along without them, even though the question of wages is a secondary one for the time. The department of agriculture has worked hard to open up employment in the rural districts, both by means of advertisements in the daily newspapers and through the farmers' associations and district representatives. In addition to the work done in this way, some 40,000 application forms have been circulated.

So far, however, the department's hard work has given little result. It is said that the total number of applications for extra help since the move was set on foot does not exceed one hundred. The men working for the relief of the unemployed in the big industrial centres are coming to realize that little help can be expected from the farmers and that construction and other public work must be provided.

EXCHANGE OF PRISONERS

GENEVA, Switzerland, Sept. 23.—(Via Bordeaux.)—The office opened by the Red Cross for the postoffice, exchanging information concerning prisoners of war, is now in full operation. The letters received, which average 1,500 daily, are being handled by polygot secretaries, who understand all known tongues.

WIRELESS IS BUSY

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23—On complaint of the British Embassy the Department of Agriculture has begun a search for a mysterious wireless plant supposed to be operating in the mountains of the Pacific coast. Information furnished to the Department is vague, but apparently the plant is busily engaged in sending messages uncensored by the Federal Government.

INSPECTOR DOES NOT TAKE FEES

The government inspector at Matthews-Blackwell Co.'s plant here, Dr. W. A. Henderson, denies that he has received any fees for government inspection of hogs, as alleged by several farmers, who complained to Mr. Burnham, M.P. There is no doubt concerning the fact that farmers have been charged an extra fee by reason of the presence of the government's inspection. That the inspector was guilty of any impropriety, we did not insinuate, but the Review is necessarily bound to place before the public matters of prime public importance given in good faith and founded upon apparently just causes.

Priests Take Part in Forty Hours Devotions

The forty hours devotions have been held in St. Martin's church, Ennismore, during the past few days. The devotions opened on Sunday evening with benediction of the blessed sacrament and a sermon by Rev. P. McGuire, of Downeyville, and closed with high mass this morning and a sermon by Rev. Father Bretherton, of Hastings. During the devotions Rev. Father McGuire, of Douro; Rev. Father Galvin, of Norwood, and Rev. Father J. J. O'Brien, of the Church of the Sacred Heart, preached eloquent sermons. Upwards of 900 received holy communion. On Monday His Lordship Bishop O'Brien and Very Rev. Dean McColl were in attendance.

ADVANCING RUSSIANS HAVE TAKEN GALICIAN STRONGHOLD

Stories by Survivors of Disaster to the Warships

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Ymuiden, Holland, Sept. 23.—The following story of the torpedo attack on the British cruisers is from survivors landed here. The Aboukir was the first ship struck. About six o'clock in the morning she received three torpedoes and an explosion of terrific force, blew out a big section of the bottom at her bow, capsizinz the ship. The crew had not time to launch lifeboats and tried to save themselves [illegible]mping into the water. The Aboukir was out of sight beneath the wa[illegible] in three or four minutes after the explosion.

BELIEVED ABOUKIR HAD [illegible] MINE.

The Hogue which was nearby, heard the explosion and realized the danger at once, although at first, those on board her believed their sister cruiser ship had struck a mine. The Hogue immediately launched numerous lifeboats and began to save the swimming survivors but while this was going on the Hogue herself was torpedoed, apparently in exactly a similar manner as the previous ship, three shots reaching her hull. The Hogue sank n a few minutes but the greater part of her crew were saved in their own boats.

THE CRESSY'S SHOTS WENT HOME.

The Cressy at this point discovered the presence of two German submarines, on the way to attack her and began shelling them with heavy projectiles. The Cressy's marksmanship was excellent and both submarines were demolished according to survivors. This statement is not confirmed from official sources.

Meanwhile from the other side, the Cressy herself was torpedoed in two places and sank immediately. When the attack occurred, the cruisers were steaming in line ahead three miles apart, and the presence of submarines was unsuspected, until two of them were sighted by the Cressy. No other ships were in sight at the opening of the attack but the Dutch steamer Flora came in view on the horizon just after the Hogue sank.. The captain of the Flora saw only the Cressy and was about to steam on his way when he saw the Cressy suddenly keel over and go down. He immediately steamed towards the scene and lowered his boats.

TWO SUBMARINES DESTROYED.

It was then for the first time that he understood three cruisers in all had been sunk. He picked up many sailors clinging to spars and to pieces of wood. Among survivors is the captain of the Hogue. The captain of the Flora says several English sailing boats are coming to Ymuiden with more survivors. From conflicting accounts given by survivors it seems there were three German submarines in the attacking party.

All hands agree that the Cressy as she sank was bravely firing her guns at two of the German submarines and these are reported to have been sent to the bottom. As the Flora was getting ready to steam away with the rescued sailors, some British destroyers appeared in sight. The sailors are far from being discouraged at the mishap and express the conviction that Admiral Jellicoe will now teach the Germans a lesson and that ships of the line, when they come into action, will amply avenge the destruction of the cruisers.

Capture of City Will Aid in Operations Against Przemysl—Reports From Berlin to the Effect That Breslau is Cut off From Communication Indicate That Russian Attack Has Begun.

LONDON, Sept. 23.—The Russians have followed up their successes in Galicia, where a third great battle is about to begin, if it has not already begun, by capturing the important fortress of Jaroslau, on the River San, just north of Przemysl, which they are surrounding. The Russian flag now flies over the town. Jaroslau is an important railway centre and commands the position to the San river, and its possession will greatly assist the Russians in their operations against Przemysl, where a strong Austro-German force is prepared to offer stubborn resistance, in the hope at least of detaining the Russian armies which are needed to take the offensive against Germany.

The Servians report another victory over the Austrians, who thus far have suffered severely on all sides. This engagement occurred near Kroupani on the Drina, where the Austrians attempted to invade Servia, but were driven back. This attack accounts for the Servian offensive movement.

The Servians and Montenegrins are within ten miles of Sarayevo, and the Austrians have made one sortie from the town, according to a Rome despatch, but quickly turned back in the face of the opposing forces.

There is a rumor, too, that Essad Pasha, the former Albanian Minister of War, as a result of an agreement with the Servian Government, will lead an Albanian army into Herzegovnia by way of Cattaro.

Petrograd despatches state that the Russian army in Austria has enveloped Jaroslav and Przemysl and is now pushing on to attack Cracow. These three fortresses are the only important points in the invaded province still held by the Austrians. A five-hour truce, the first of the war, was granted by the Russians at Przemysl, to permit burial of the Austrian dead.

When the Russians reach Cracow it is expected that a terrific battle will ensue. The fortifications of the city are thoroughly modern and everything is in readiness for a desperate resistance. Austrian reserves and the German landwehr in large numbers, have come up to support the retreating armies. Non-combatants in large numbers, are leaving the city and the Russian attempt to carry the city will be resisted to the last. More than 1,000,000 troops are on the defenders' lines.

Breslau Attacked?

BERLIN, Sept. 23.—(Via Rome.)—All telegraphic and telephonic communication with Breslau suddenly ceased yesterday.

It is feared that the Russian centre may have pushed forward and be attacking the city.

Breslau is one of the links of the chain in the Oder line of fortifications. After Berlin, it is the second largest city in Prussia, with a populaton of 500,000, and is the capital of Silesia. It occupies an important strategical position in Oder, and is a city of great historical interest, with magnificent buildings. It has been prepared for a possible raid by the Russians, and the last reports available from there stated that there was a very strong German force between it and the eastern frontier, also that artillery sent from it to the support of Germans in Russian Poland had been captured.

For some days, however, Petrograd has hinted at unexpected developments, in which the Russian centre army of 900,000 men would figure. This immense army was reported to be marching through Russian Poland, but no hint has been given as to its object or its destination.

Breslau is one hundred and ninety miles southeast of Berlin, and about sixty miles from the frontier of Russian Poland.

BATTLE OF THE AISNE MAY LAST FOUR DAYS LONGER

Terrific Struggle Was Carried on Throughout the Entire Night of Monday and Tuesday Found the Allies in Rather Better Positions---Germans Surprised by Allies in Western Section and Ground Held.

AT THE BATTLEFRONT, Sept. Sept. 23.—(Via Paris.)—Not a moment's respite was given Monday night to the German forces entrenched along the 90-mile front running along the river Aisne and Oise and extending into the Woevre district.

The batteries of the allied forces never ceased firing entirely all night although their activity diminished somewhat after sundown.

The Germans occupying the trenches kept constantly on the alert but until two o'clock yesterday morning no aggressive move was started from the allies' lines facing them. Then all the allied batteries seemed to open fire together and every point along the front became very active.

At the western end of the line the allied infantry gathered in the trenches and simultaneously at various points crept out and advanced cautiously in wide open lines towards the German positions. The French and British on several occasions succeeded in surprising and driving back the occupants of the German trenches, but only after the most stubborn fighting and after heavy losses both to the attacking and to the defending forces. In every instance the allied troops retained the ground captured and immediately dug themselves in.

Further east the Germans themselves developed a strong attack but were beaten back with the bayonet only to return again and again, to be finally driven off to their original positions. The allied commanders were able to give the troops who had been occupying the advance firing line a welcome rest, pushing to the front fresh brigades of batteries hitherto held in reserve and which were only too anxious to come into actual contact.

Military experts estimate that nearly 2,000,000 or more men are now in the zone where the battle has been in progress ten days.

May Last Four Days.

BORDEAUX, Sept. 23.—"The battle between the Oise and the Meuse probably will last three or four days longer," says The Temps in a military review yesterday, "but reports indicate that the resistance of the enemy is weakening. Another effort and French territory will be free of them. It will be hard, however, for we shall have many victims.

"Our advance between Rheims and the Argonne seems to show the greater part of the German army in retreat by way of Belgium. West of the Meuse they are already making extensive defensive works on the Sambre."

French Official Bulletin.

PARIS, Sept. 22. — The official statement issued by the French Government last night says merely that there is no change in the situation.

The following announcement was made in Paris yesterday afternoon:

"Along the entire front, from the Oise to the Woevre, the Germans manifested yesterday, Sept. 21, a certain activity, without, however, obtaining appreciable results.

"First, on our left wing on the right bank of the River Oise, the Germans were obliged to cede ground before the French attacks. Between the Oise and the Aisne the situation remains unchanged. The enemy has not delivered any serious attack, contenting himself yesterday, Monday evening, with a continued cannonading.

"Second, on the centre, between Rheims and Souain, the enemy attempted an offensive movement, which was repulsed, while between Souain and the Argonne we have made some progress.

"Between the Argonne and the River Meuse there has been no change.

"In the Woevre district the enemy made a violent effort. He attacked the heights of the Meuse along the front between Tresauvaux, Vigneulles and Heudicourt, nine miles east of Peronne, without however, succeeding in gaining a position on these heights.

"Third, on our right wing, in Lorraine, the enemy has again passed the frontier, using in this operation a number of small columns. Donessee, to the south of Blamonte, has been reoccupied by the enemy.

"During the days of Sept. 20 and 21 we captured twenty automobiles used in moving provisions, together with all the men attached to them. We also captured on these days numerous prisoners belonging to the 4th, 6th, 7th, 8th, 9th, 15th and 16th German army corps, to the Bavarian Landwehr, and to the reserve corps.

"Concerning the Russians in Galicia, the rear guards of the Austrian armies have been pursued by the Russians, and have suffered considerable losses. Russian troops have come in contact with the Austrian garrison near Przemysl. The heavy Russian artillery is bombarding the fortifications of Paroslav."

GROWTH OF THE LABOR CONGRESS

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

St. John, N.B., Sept. 23. — The presentation of reports occupied the most of this morning's session of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada. The report of Secretary-Treasurer Draper showed a total membership of 80,000. Receipts showed a considerable increase.

PETERBOROUGH, WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 23, 1914.

LET US KEEP THE NAME OF RUBIDGE.

WE HAVE received two or three communications criticising the Rev. Mr. Rollins for his suggestion, made at the laying of the corner stone of the new Trinity Methodist church, that the name of Rubidge Street should be changed to Cathedral Street. Mr. Rollins was, doubtless, not cognizant of the historical associations connected with the good old name of Rubidge, and was merely taking account of present day developments. Moreover, what he said was only a suggestion, dependent on the support of a majority of the people. If they do not want the name changed, Mr. Rollins will surely offer no objection. In a growing city like Peterborough, that sprang from very small beginnings, there are names deeply associated with the early struggles of pioneers to do their share in an Empire building as important as it was obscure and commonplace. These names, historic as they are, have lost their meaning to many of the younger generation, absorbed in the pursuit of trade and knowing not the life that once was characteristic of this province. It is a new life, an entirely different life, with changed outlook and pursuits, one that has arisen quickly and can be excused for being too busy to preserve as deep a recollection of the early days as one could wish. Nevertheless we should keep alive the old associations, and, if the name of Rubidge is meaningless to many, if it has a somewhat uncouth sound, yet it is a good name and has much more significance than the mechanical one suggested. "What's in a name?" So long as it has any meaning whatever, everything is in a name. By all means let us keep the name of Rubidge where it is.

THE DESTRUCTION OF THE CATHEDRAL OF RHEIMS.

STUDENTS, in our High Schools, read in their ancient history of Greece and Rome, that the Romans carried from the cultured sites of Hellenic art whatever treasure they fancied. Greek cities famous for their learning, their painting, their sculpture, lost in wars with the Roman people a great many of their finest creations. Cities, beautiful as art and wealth could make them, were sacked and despoiled, artists and sculptors were made slaves, and in the Italian Peninsula arose with Rome, cities shining with a borrowed lustre, but which, nevertheless, were for a long period centres of art and trade. Fortune passed from the land of Phidias to the marts of Rome, yet not without its compensations, its tragic losses, its development along new lines. Then, one day, there came upon the plains of Italy the hordes of wild barbarians called Vandals, who had no taste for art and culture, but merely thirst for blood and destruction. The old days of confiscation were repeated with added force, and Imperial Rome herself was despoiled and sacked and almost dismantled. But all that is read in ancient history. It happened a long time ago, when men were savage and uneducated. Men have become enlightened since then and civilized

So we were taught, but the despatches have confirmed the destruction of one of the most beautiful works of art in Europe, the Cathedral of Rheims. It has been totally destroyed by German shells, and yet it was neither in the path of German artillery attack, nor could its destruction be of any material advantage to their cause. It was simply destroyed for the mere love of smashing things, and illustrates a case of pure Prussian vandalism.

This Cathedral of Rheims was one of the most noted structures in the world, and perhaps the most beautiful and most celebrated of all French churches. There Joan of Arc was consecrated and there all the Kings of France were crowned and buried. The cathedral dated back to the thirteenth century; its architecture was of the purest Gothic, and the central window was without equal in the world. The western front, with its triple portal, was adorned with six hundred statues, and the rose window was filled with amber-colored glass dating from the thirteenth century. Its interior also was filled with art treasures, the accumulation of centuries. Here, for six centuries, the coronations took place. It was the Westminster Abbey of France.

What advantage could there be in destroying this treasure of a rich and varied past, let us again ask? It was of no military importance to the Allies, much less the Germans. When the war is over, such buildings as private houses and factories can be replaced with money, but not the great cathedral. Its destruction constitutes a dead loss to civilization. Its value lay in its associations, its memories of departed kings and wars of long ago, its connection with those far-off yesterdays that we are accustomed to regard as so rude in comparison with our own higher civilization, culture and fine ways. For centuries men worshipped at its alter, with what varying ideas of religion and of God were characteristic of each passing age. Wars came and governments changed, generations were gathered to the tomb, new philosophies became old and discarded, yet the Cathedral of Rheims remained, still serving the living, still preserving its rich and intricate association with a long historic past. All the wealth in the world cannot replace it. With gold, another edifice could be erected, but, however beautiful and costly it would be, it could not preserve the old connection with the past. Echoes of the shouting when a king was crowned, or of the solemn requiem masses when a royal warrior was layed beside his fathers, would not be there. A memory—a closed book that cannot be opened—is now all its charm, all its appeal to the historic imagination.

Had this story been in ancient history, we would have thought it according to the standards of those days. But we thought, in this age, men went to war for a principle or a system of government, and not for the pure love of fighting and destruction. Germany has rolled her culture back a thousand years, and makes, by her wanton destruction of the treasures of Louvain and Rheims, the necessity for her decisive defeat imperative, and the duty of those who have any respect for public law and art. Red Cross flags flying from the Cathedral towers, showing that wounded Germans and French were sheltered there, made no difference. Truly, the Hun is at our gate, and a bitter retribution is due those who have made Attila's methods the rule in the present conflict.

AN OBSERVATION ON THE PATRIOTIC CONCERT.

THOSE who had the details of the Patriotic Concert in charge are to be congratulated on the splendid character of the program. Every number was deserving of praise, but if we might mention any in particular we would name the duet by Miss Allen and Mr. Maurice Park; the solos by Miss Richardson, Mr. Ed. Hanra[illegible] Miss Hanson, and the violin selections. We [illegible] wish, however, to offer any detailed [illegible]m, but rather draw attention to the qual[illegible]he concert, staged, as it was, by local talent. It has been a mystery to us why the people of this city are not favoured more with the work of their own people. It seems to be the fashion not to consider them of much importance, but to pay high prices to travelling companies, many of which are of mediocre ability. Perhaps the local productions have not been well suited to the population of this city. We think that criticism explains most of the failures, and would apply to such a production as the Judas Maccabaeus—an excellent composition, but beyond the majority of people, and appealing, therefore, to a class of people too limited to assure success. Judging by the applause at the Patriotic Concert, the audience, which was representative of this city, was well pleased. The truth is, in a small city, there needs to be a certain amount of variety. It does not do to offer them too big a dose of the classical "stuff." The people do not care for it, because they do not understand it, but a variety [illegible] from light to classical takes better. If lovers of good music, song, etc., want to build up here an appreciative audience for the better class of compositions, it should be done by some such gradual educative process as varying their programs. People have to have a taste for things before they like them.

$1,500 in a Shell.

(Tid-Bits.)

Every time a big gun is fired, $1,500 goes in smoke and a splash, and there are 372 such guns in the fleet which Admiral Callaghan led out of Spithead recently. Torpedoes cost ten times as much, but they have the advantage, from the taxpayers' point of view, that they can be picked up again after they have been fired in practice.

Many of the big ships burn oil fuel as an auxiliary to their coal, or at least are fitted for that purpose, but there are 127 torpedo craft, besides the submarines, which burn oil fuel alone. In the aggregate their tanks and double bottoms can accommodate 10,315 tons of fuel, for which we have to pay $25 a ton.

Coal is not so expensive, but it does not go as far. If the 27 Dreadnoughts now in full commission were sent on an eight hours' full-power coal-burning run, they would consume 4,320 tons of fuel, running up a bill of some $15,000.

If a single Dreadnought battle squadron of eight ships were ordered to steam at full speed for 24 hours and to fire each gun and each torpedo tube once, the cost to the nation would be approximately $1,000,000, allowing nothing for the depreciation of material.

A New Day in War.

(Christian Guardian.)

We had to rub our eyes when we read it, and rub them again to be sure that we did not read amiss. Lord Kitchener, the British Minister of War, the man of iron and of blood, was counselling the soldiers going to the front to fight the battles of the Empire, and here was the sentence that met us right in the middle of his address: "You can do your own country no better service than in showing yourself in France and Belgium in the true character of a British soldier by being invariably courteous, considerate and kind." Does history record any soldier, in the long story of fighting, ever having received such an admonition from his great commander-in-chief? If so, we do not know of it. And, though fighting in Belgium and France is hard and bloody and brutal, somehow we feel that that advice points to the coming of a new day. Courtesy, consideration, kindness, are somewhat new soldierly virtues, but are good ones.

Women Work While Men Fight.

(Guelph Herald.)

We are getting back very largely to primitive conditions these days—and when this is said it is not with reference to the atrocities which are alleged to have been committed, showing, if true, that the brute in man is not far buried—but to the fact that in Europe the men are off to the war, while the women and old men are left to do the work. In France, Germany, and in many parts of the British Isles, it has been, and will in all probability next year continue to be, no new sight to see women engaged in the harvest fields, getting in the crops and preparing for another season.

A Lesson Being Learned.

(Springfield Republican.)

To make friends, other countries have made concessions; and every concession, every friendship, has made stiff, unyielding Germany furious. There are times when a little tolerance, a little abatement of even rightful claims, may win suppport worth millions of armed men, and this is a lesson which recent German diplomacy has failed to learn.

Getting Serious.

(Montreal Star.)

Any villain who extracts "graft" from the necessities of a people in war-time should not be fined or imprisoned—he should be shot. This is as true of Canada as of Belgium.

HUNTING

By Walt Mason

I bought a fine, new-fangled gun, and said, "I'll shoot about a ton, of rabbits, owls and jays; with cartridges and kindred goods I'll roam the prairies and the woods, and thus spend pleasant days. It's long since I have tasted game; domestic meats are all the same, they're tasteless, stale and flat; so I shall wander far and near, and shoot a groundhog or a deer, a chipmunk or a cat." So off I strode, and I could feel within my breast the Nimrod's zeal, I had no caitiff fear; but everywhere I went I found, on posts, or sticking in the ground, this sign, "No Hunting Here." I walked about a thousand miles, and saw, on fences, trees and stiles, the same dodgasted signs; and farmers, when they saw me come, would say, "Keep off my land, by gum, or you will pay a fine." Ah, it would be pleasant to hunt, and do the joyous nimrod's stunt, far from the madding crowd, but for that sign, which ruins bliss, and is about as bad as this: "No Trespassing Allowed!" Is there no place where one can take his nice new gun and shoot a snake, a tree toad or a fly, and not behold those signs which say, "These grounds are private—keep away!" I pause for a reply.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

MR. ROLLINS' SUGGESTION.

Editor Review,

Dear Sir,—If Rev. Mr. Rollins cannot think of anything more inspiring for his addresses than an insult to the founders of Peterborough he had much better keep quiet. Capt. Rubidge, R.H., was a British naval officer of distinction who lived retired on the very property Trinity Church is now being built upon. The village of Peterborough gave his name to the street. To many the Rubidge family a somewhat large connection is a valued memory. I suppose Mr. Rollins will advise the old residents of this city to go further in the same direction. A more ill-advised and insulting exhibition it has not been my lot to read.

Yours,
PRO. SOUTH END.

CATHEDRAL STREET?

Editor Review,

Sir,—I was surprised and somewhat annoyed in reading the account of the ceremony in laying the foundation stone of the new Trinity Church, at a suggestion offered by one of the clergymen "that the name of Rubidge St. should be changed to that of "Cathedral Street" because there happens to be half a dozen churches on it, one of which is St. Peter's Cathedral (which by the way faces Little Hunter Street and not Rubidge Street.)

Some excuse may be made for the gentleman's ignorance of local history, he being a recent arrival in Peterboro, perhaps he is not aware of the origin of the name given the street more than 60 years ago, and I was sorry to see that among the group of speakers present, no one entered a protest against the innovation.

Rubidge Street was named after the late Captain Rubidge, R.N., who as a junior officer, fought in the battle of Trafalgar under Lord Nelson. After retiring with the rank of captain he came to Canada and settled in Peterborough, and for many years filled the office of county registrar, highly esteemed as a citizen and a gentleman. Another fact to associate his name with that of the street was that he occupied for many years the very site on which the new church is being erected.

The fad for changing nomanchature of streets and places without sufficiently good reasons, is to be regretted. Would it be desirable to change the name of "Water Street" to "Doctor Street" because there are half a dozen doctors living on it?

There are several near relatives and a host of old friends of Captain Rubidge still living in Peterborough, to whom such a change in name of street would be very unwelcome.

Yours truly,
OLD CITIZEN.

Last January we placed large import orders with our European potters for crockery and china ware. We have now during the past month received the goods, at prices lower than any previous buy, and we intend that not one farthing's worth of goods will be raised in price. You will find, as usual, that our prices will stand any competition that you can put up against us. If you want a Dinner Set, Tea Set, Chamber Set, Lamp or China Ware, Wall Paper, etc., our prices must surely appeal to you.

15 only 97-piece Dinner and Tea Set combined, each piece perfect, per set $6.95

10 Dinner Sets, 97 pieces, each piece with gold line enameled decorations, per set $9.85

5 China Sets, 97 pieces, with gold handles. Kermis shaped cups, pink rose decoration, per set $15.95

Now is the time of year that we take for clearing out our Wall Paper. Look at our south window for ridiculous price cutting.

An Ownerless Million

How an Immense Amount of Money Can Cause its Possessor Annoyance and Trouble.

By THOMAS HOWELL HEATH

I jumped on the Congressional Limited one winter afternoon as the train was moving out of the Washington station.

It was a hurried business trip to New York, of which I had only an hour's notice. I had the afternoon papers and a small hand bag.

When shown to my seat in the parlor car I noticed that the chair next to mine was occupied by a woman; also that she was pretty, aristocratic looking and dressed fashionably.

So far as could be seen, she had nothing in the shape of bundles or baggage with her except what appeared to be a lot of stationery wrapped in pink paper and tied with a red cord, which she kept on her lap and carelessly handled from time to time.

Just before the train reached Philadelphia she got up, stood a moment apparently undecided and then, turning to me and extending the box in pink, surprised and pleased me by asking with a smile, "May I trouble you to look after this?"

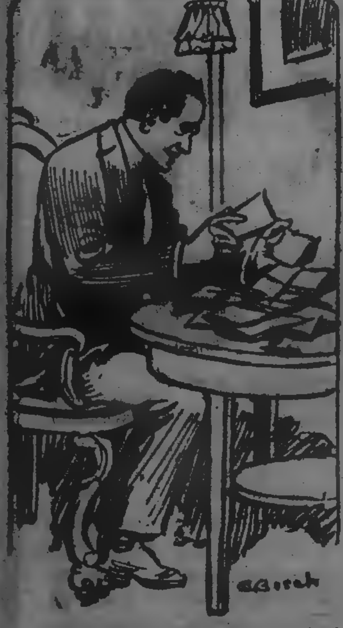
"Certainly, certainly, with pleasure," I replied as soon as I could get my wits together, but she had not waited to hear.

She had left the pink covered box in my hands and had gone, I supposed, to the buffet car.

After the train had left Broad street station and the woman had not returned I asked the porter what had become of her and was astonished when he said that she had got off at Philadelphia.

It was evident that the pink covered box had been intentionally left with me, but why, and what did it contain?

Great as my curiosity was to know the contents of the box, I would not unwrap and open it in the car, and when I did open it in the privacy of my room in a New York hotel I was very glad that I had placed that restraint upon myself.



A MILLION DOLLARS ALL IN MY POSSESSION.

What sort of stationery do you suppose was in that pink covered box?

Ten packages of crisp, new United States $1,000 gold certificates, with a band of paper around each package as they used them in banks. Upon each band was written "One Hundred Thousand Dollars," 100 notes in each package, a grand total of $1,000,000.

My first impulse was to take the million dollars and go to Europe on the first available steamer.

Impulse, did I say? It was really a calm determination that lasted through the greater part of the night and included the selection of a steamer sailing the next day and was not abandoned until my avarice was convinced that a large reward, at least 10 per cent of the whole, perhaps double that, would be offered by the owner of the money, who would be sure to advertise for its return.

The decision that it would be better to have one-tenth of a million as a reward for honesty than the entire million as a weight upon my conscience was not easily arrived at, but, once reached, it was clung to with all my strength.

Sleep was entirely out of the question with $1,000,000 in cash in the room with me. I spent the night thinking, and such thoughts!

In the morning I tore up the box, which had really originally contained stationery, and carefully dropped the pieces into a waste pipe. The money I wrapped in my nightshirt, which I put in the hand bag.

This hand bag was near being the death of me that day.

I ate breakfast with the hand bag in my lap and one hand always touching it and attended to the business which had carried me to New York without ever once letting it loose, and I am sure I never took my eyes entirely away from it once while on the train returning to Washington.

I bought all the New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore papers, but there was no advertisement in any of them concerning the loss of a large sum of money.

Another sleepless night in the room with a million dollars followed my return to Washington. The next morning I hired a box in a safe deposit vault and got rid of the awful and wearing responsibility.

I waited a week, and still there was no advertisement of the lost fortune. My associates began to comment on my increasing restlessness and nervousness and to suggest that I would better take a rest.

I intended to take a long rest and a luxurious one as soon as the ownership of the million dollars was settled.

Perhaps the money was stolen property and the thieves were afraid to advertise its loss. I concluded to advertise for the owner myself.

After many advertisements had been written and torn up I decided on this:

> Large sum of money left on Congressional Limited between Washington and New York. Will be restored to owner upon proper identification. Address Caretaker, P. O. box 181, Washington, D. C.

For a full week this was run in all the daily papers of Washington, Baltimore, Philadelphia and New York at an expense to me of $39.70. I took receipts from each paper and preserved them as souvenirs of my stay in millionairedom.

I had any number of answers, but none of them got within a million miles of my million.

Having sought diligently for the owner of the million dollars and spent my own good money freely in advertising, without success, was I not now the legal and legitimate owner of it?

That question had my poor brain doing a continuous twenty-four hour stunt. I answered it in the affirmative twenty times a day, but the plaguy thing wouldn't stay answered.

I began to feel quite as worn and haggard as I looked and to wonder why the possession of a million dollars, with the probability that it would all be mine growing into a certainty, did not bring me more pleasure. I asked myself whether all millionaires were as much troubled about their money as I was.

Six weeks had passed since the million dollars was placed in my possession, and I began to make plans as to what I would do with it. I no longer expected the owner to turn up.

I had not mentioned the money or the odd manner in which it had come into my possession to any one and was still undecided as to how I should account for my sudden wealth when I began to spend the money.

After mature deliberation I decided to make my appearance as a man of wealth gradually.

I would make a deposit of $10,000 in one bank.

After taking ten of the $1,000 notes from my safe deposit box it occurred to me that it would be a good idea to carry them to the United States treasury and get notes of smaller denominations for them.

On reaching the cash room of the treasury I handed the ten $1,000 notes through the wire wicket teller's window and asked that he give me fifties for them.

It did not surprise me to notice a rather astonished and startled look on the teller's face as he took the notes or that he should step to one side and examine one of them carefully through a glass.

I did not suppose that ten $1,000 notes were passed through the wicket very frequently by any one except runners for the banks; consequently it seemed the natural thing that they should be carefully examined.

His deliberation, however, in counting and recounting those fifty dollar notes was getting on my nerves, and I was about to speak impatiently to him when I felt a light touch on my shoulder and a low but distinct voice said near my ear, "I want you."

"Well, I'm here," I answered, facing the speaker impatiently. "What do you want with me?"

"I want you to go with me," he replied with a smile, without raising his voice.

"Why should I go with you?" I asked rather sharply. "I don't know you."

"No, but I think you'll go," he answered in the same exasperatingly calm tone.

"Why?" I demanded, somewhat frightened by his manner, without having any clear idea why I should be.

"Because," he said, almost in a whisper, "you are under arrest."

"What for?" I managed to ask, at the same time trying hard to think of any reason why I should be arrested.

"Trying to pass counterfeit money," he replied, turning back his coat and allowing me to see the United States secret service badge he wore.

"You are out of your head," I retorted angrily, but at the same time the awful truth flashed upon me—my million was counterfeit.

"That may be," he said as he reached for the notes, which the teller handed him, each with the word "Counterfeit" cut across its face. "You can talk about that to Chief Wilkes. Come!"

Fortunately I was well known to Chief Wilkes. He not only accepted my story, but added to it by telling me that the woman had learned from a confederate on the train that his men were hot on her trail and, being obliged to get rid of the counterfeit money somewhere, had given it to me, thereby securing her own release when she was arrested and searched immediately after leaving the train.

The chief went with me to the safe deposit vault, got the rest of the counterfeits and destroyed them. He congratulated me on getting out of an ugly predicament so easily.

To this day I am unable to say with certainty whether relief or regret was my stronger feeling over the loss of the ownerless million dollars.

Newspaper Reporters.

I have always had great sympathy for newspaper reporters—a class of men generally about equally feared and criticised. During a large part of my life since my graduation I have been brought in constant contact with the men of this profession. Only on rare occasions have I suffered at their hands serious injustice, due either to deliberate intent or to gross misunderstanding. I have generally found them courteous and considerate, honestly desirous of getting the truth and of reporting it accurately.—Abbott's "Reminiscences" in Outlook.

STUDIES FROM MOVIES

Deposed Emperor of China Has Novel School

The dethroned Emperor of the Celestial Empire—still a mere child—is permitted to retain his full rule over state in private life.

He is living with a dozen or so of very exalted relations of the Imperial clan in a great country palace some distance outside Peking, and is being educated almost entirely by picture films.

"The boy," says a Chinese maquess of the third degree, involuntarily inclining his head as he referred to his fallen emperor, "is a fine little fellow, and could be very happy if circumstances would permit of his living in Europe on the enormous income which still remains to him and has been guaranteed by the Republic.

"But, unfortunately, the imperial one must be jealously guarded and preserved from outward communion with ordinary people and especially from 'foreign devils.' Otherwise most extraordinary revolution is occurring in what is the usual education of an imperial prince of China, and particularly in that of a young emperor.

"He is actually being informed," continued Mr. Thang, "that there are other lands outside China, and of equal, even greater, power; that there are a fair number of kings and emperors on this earth, and that they are not barabarians, as was ever the creed in China in regard to other nations, but might be considered by an unprejudiced mind as passably civilized. These things are being impressed upon the boy-emperor largely by kinema pictures.

"Hundreds of films have been imported into China showing European cities, and also Japanese and Indian scenes. The interior as well as the exterior of houses and palaces are depicted, and everyday life of prince and peasant, with all the grades between, have been filmed for the imperial teaching. The emperor is being made acquainted with the faces of monarchs and statesmen and of other leading men of the world outside China.

"The boy is shown pictures of marching armies and of fighting ships of every description. He is not bored with technical scenes, first, because he is too young; and, second, because wonders of machinery or intricate manufacture are hardly novelties to the Chinese mind.

"But the boy is being taught the history and habits of Europeans and many other things which, if he lives, may inspire him some day to place himself and his acquirements at the service of his country.

"What may happen then is, as you say, on the knees of the gods—we say that also; but if ever the millions upon millions of China become civilized and capable of taking the initiative like Europeans—well, there will indeed be something of a Yellow Peril.

"Chinamen, properly armed, properly drilled, and instilled with the lust of conquest, could sweep Europe even as the Tartars, who became Teutons, did in the days of Atilla. I am an educated Chinaman, was sent to Europe for schooling. Fortunately for 'foreign devils'—perhaps for us also, you are thinking—there are not many of us who are educated."

The Slow One.

"Would you," he said after they had been sitting in the dark for a long time, "be angry with me if I were to kiss you?"

She was silent for a moment. Then in tones the meaning of which was not to be mistaken she replied:

"What do you suppose I turned down the light an hour and a half ago?"

And yet he wondered, poor fool, how other young men who had started far in the rear were able to pass him in race of life.

TEASING TRIFLES.

It's over small and trifling ills
We make the largest fuss.
We grumble at the little things
Because they are not thus.
A corn not any bigger than
A rounder's diamond stud
Arouses us until we roar
And almost call for blood.

The larger troubles as they come
We meet without complaint
And master them or pass them up,
Nor at their frownings faint,
But when a collar button falls
And rolls beyond our eye
We raise the roof and scare our folks
And every passerby.

We bear the burdens of the day
With fortitude and grace,
Despise the turmoil and the toil
And all the shadows chase,
But when a shoestring peddler takes
A minute of our time
We rise in wrath and storm and rage
And stop just short of crime.

But there is some protection in
This method of attack.
The big ones call forth some respect,
The small ones can't strike back,
And when we stamp them in the ground
Or at their presence chafe
We know as well as any one
That we are playing safe.

Defined.

"What would you call a confidential friend?"

"One that listens to all your troubles."

"Yes."

"That is the confidential part."

"I see."

"And never tells you his."

"Yes."

"That is the friend end of it."

Regret.

Regret is a dangerous thing. You let a little one no bigger than a mustard seed into your heart, and before you know it you've hatched out a whole brood. Everything is woven into a pattern of the whole, and the Lord knew the figure he had in mind.—Ellen Glasgow.

She Bolted.

"What did your wife say when she saw you dance three times with that pretty young woman?"

"Nothing. She just bolted the party."—Detroit Free Press.

The Best Defensive is An Ardent Attack

IN CHESS, in play, in war, and in business the best defensive is an ardent attack.

Leadership and success are not mere matters of position and resources. They are matters of spirit.

The spirit of leadership and success shows itself in aggressive action.

In Canada eventual leadership and success in manufacturing, wholesale and retail enterprise will belong to those who push forward now and always. Those who seek merely to conserve their position, become stationary and expose themselves to the dangers of ultimate destruction.

These are the lessons and facts of history.

The occupation of new fields of trade and the winning of new customers are achieved at the least cost of money and time by the adoption of a strong, constantly-maintained and prudent policy of advertising in the public press.

Maintenance of attack wears down resistance

TRAINING NEEDED BY THE TERRITORIAL TROOPS

"The nation's task now is to make armies," writes Professor Spencer Wilkinson in a recent issue of the London Morning Post. "Anyone who has read the accounts of the fighting at Mons and at Cambrai," he continues, "will see that only first-rate soldiers will be able to stand in that kind of fiery ordeal." He accordingly proceeds to discuss the training needed by the Territorials, as follows:—

"Living together in complete units at full strength, the Territorial troops must be gradually gaining that quality of cohesion which marks an army. Daily marches will harden them for the field. Their officers are keen and intelligent and many of them have studied war. What they are now acquiring is the confidence which comes from practice. But there is one other thing which is indispensable to give officers and men the spiritual quality which will enable them to emulate the achievements of the army now in France. That one thing is the power to shoot straight. It is everything.

"The weapon with which the infantry soldier destroys his enemy is the 120 bullets which he carries. The rifle is merely a machine for directing them. Give a recruit a rifle and he will be afraid of it. When he fires it kicks him, and the bullets seem to go everywhere except to the particular point at which he thought he was aiming. A man in that condition is bound to be afraid when he hears the enemy's bullets whistling past him in the air. He may hope that one of his bullets may hit the enemy but in his heart he is quite sure that it will not. But let the recruit be quietly taught to handle the rifle; let him practice every day on the range firing in every practice only a few deliberate shots, and let this practice be continued day after day for weeks. By degrees the man will find that he can hit the target and even the bulls-eye. The practice should begin at short ranges, and continue until the recruit has reached the stage when he knows that at short range he will hit the target and probably the bull's-eye. Then the bulls-eye may be diminished and, in proportion to the power the recruit has acquired the range may be lengthened. The object is not merely to teach the man to hit, but to give him the knowledge that he can do it and the confidence that comes of that knowledge.

"The second stage consists in practice against the kind of targets which are offered by the battlefield, small objects, moving objects, objects that appear and disappear. Only constant practice will give the necessary skill. Yet only in proportion as this skill is really acquired can the man be expected to rely upon himself. All this is a matter of individual training; it is an education which each man must conquer for himself, of course, under proper guidance and instruction, the mastery of his weapon.

"Then comes the third stage. A group of men, each of whom has made himself a good shot, must be placed under a leader for the attack by bullets upon a group of targets. They must be extended, must advance towards the target as they would in battle, and halt from time to time to fire. In these conditions they will be disciplined by the fact that every shot means a bullet fired. This collective practice must aim at something more than mere steadiness; it must convince the soldiers of the value of control. A description of two exercises will illustrate what is meant. Suppose a squad of ten men with ten rounds apiece advancing from a distance of a thousand yards against a row of ten targets representing men lying down a few yards apart, and let each target be such that when hit it will fall down and disappear, the targets being numbered from one to ten. It is assumed that the men's previous training has been such that each of them may be expected to hit his target with at least one of his ten bullets. In the first practice each man will aim every time at the target corresponding to his own number. When the ten rounds have been fired all ten targets should be down, but they will fall irregularly. In the second practice all the ten men will fire at the one target named by the leader, beginning with number one. In this case the targets will go down in orderly succession, one at each round. The men will then be asked to consider the frame of mind of the enemy represented by the targets, which kind of practice would be most likely to make an enemy's squad of ten men go away. They will say to themselves that any ten soldiers lying down and exposed to fire will expect some of their number to be hit. So long as the hits are irregular each of them will trust to his luck and keep his place, hoping that his own turn will not come. But if they fall in regular order, beginning from a flank, by the time the first five are down the sixth, unless he is an absolute hero, will be off. In this way the men of the practice squad will perceive the nature of the effect on the enemy's spirit of a fire which is directed and controlled. A perfectly disciplined battalion would be one which was accustomed to advance for a thousand yards in extended order, firing bullets at targets.

"All that is required to make the Territorial Force a first-rate army is daily practice with bullets against targets, beginning with individual practice until that has produced its full results, and then going on to field firing by squads, by platoons, and by companies. The only requisites are plenty of ammunition and plenty of ground. Ten rounds a day per man for thirty days fired attentively would put the infantry of the Territorial Force at least on a level with the infantry of any Consinental army. A second ten rounds a day for a second month would make them the best shooting troops in the world.

"These shooting practices properly arranged will occupy each company only a fraction of each day, the rest of the time is available for marching and for the various branches of instruction in evolutions and in field service."

Sugar From Germany Forbidden.

LONDON, Sept. 23.—Because the British Board of Trade has been apprised that German merchants still are disposing of sugar through Holland, notwithstanding the prohibition of its export by the Government of the Netherlands, the British Government has forbidden the importation of all sugar from Holland.

MOUNTED CORPS IS FORMING

Vancouver Colonel Raising Force of Expert Horsemen

OTTAWA, Sept. 23.—Col. James MacDonell, a Vancouver contractor, has been authorized by the Minister of Militia to organize a mounted corps of some 500 men, who will go to the front. They will all be expert riders and crack shots and will be recruited chiefly from the interior of British Columbia. A large number of men, hearing that such a body was suggested, have already applied to be taken and have offered to furnish their own horses. The equipment will be paid for by Col. MacDonell and associates in British Columbia.

There will be a number of machine guns taken also, these having been donated by prominent citizens of Vancouver.

Recruiting will begin as soon as the first contingent sails from Quebec and Col. MacDonell has been at Valcartier and Ottawa in connection with the matter.

French-Canadians To Recruit.

MONTREAL, Sept. 23.—A delegation of prominent French-Canadians will shortly visit Ottawa for the purpose of securing the sanction of the Prime Minister for the incorporation of a regiment recruited in Quebec for foreign service in the next contingent sent from Canada. An organization has already been formed to raise the regiment.

The presence of this regiment at the front, it is felt by French-Canadians, would do away once and for all with the suggestions that have been made that the war is not popular in Quebec.

Anxious to Please.

'So you are expected to do a kind act every day?"

"Yes," replied the Boy Scout.

"How about to-day?"

"Well, the teacher has been having a little trouble with me. Don't you think I might stay away from school and give her a rest?"

MORNING POST ROLL OF HONOR

A great English newspaper, the Morning Post, made the publication of the first great casualty list, which showed a loss for Sir John French's army of some 5,000 men, the occasion of a noble and high-spirited article, "The Roll of Honor," which is here reproduced in part:

To-day (said the Morning Post) we publish the first instalment of the list which we have called the roll of honor, the list of our soldiers who have died in defence of their country. And we desire to use the occasion, which some may think melancholy, but we regard as glorious, to enforce the appeal for more soldiers in the cause for which these men have died. There are many who speak hardly of war, as a thing altogether evil, bearing fruits only of suffering and misery. They point to the rare handiwork of God destroyed in an moment, and to the labors of man brought to naught. Such critics of war dwell exclusively upon the loss to the individual, his personal suffering, the extinction in this life of the divine spark, and the agony and deprivation of those other individuals who depend upon the extinguished life. We agree that there is much to be said for this censure of ward; but we hold, nevertheless, that there are evils worse than the swift calamities of battle. A shameful peace, by which, for the sake of material comfort and security, a nation sold its honor and betrayed its friends, would be a calamity far worse than war. Fighting may arouse certain evil passions of cruelty, but such a peace would nourish evils more injurious to the soul of a nation—sloth, the desire for comfort, selfishness, cowardice, greed. These vices are worse for a nation than the manly animosities of war. As to death, it may be an evil, but it is an evil which comes to all soon or later. And we cannot think that death on the field of battle is a greater ill than death upon the sick bed by the more gradual processes of disease. For in war the mind is so set upon victory and the heart so full of the ardor of conflict, that the very pangs of dissolution lose their terrors. In the heat and fury of battle the terrors of death are little regarded. What in peace is dreaded above all things, in war is rather besought and courted. For in the height of such a crisis men feel their lives are nothing and that victory is everything.

Perhaps, after all, this view of death is not a fallacy. What matters is the life of the race; in the life of the race lies the immortality of the individual. The soldier dies that his country may live, and if his race survives in the spirit of the race, and in death partakes of its life. The soul of England is the soul of the sum of Englishmen living and dead. The slain in battle still live in the soul and character of the people. These great spiritual trials and exhaltations which we call wars and battles mould and shape the mind and character of future generations of Englishmen. Individuals die that the nation may continue; if the sacrifice were refused the nation itself would become a thing diseased and corrupt. Therefore war is not altogether an evil; it cleanses and purifies; it invigorates the national sentiment and intensifies the national life. In this war every Englishman must feel a keener sense of the national spirit, a new feeling of friendliness and brotherhood towards the rest of his nation. It is a communion of the national spirit which draws us all together and makes us feel that we are not individuals merely, but parts of a great whole, whose destiny and interests are of infinitely higher importance than our own.

These feelings are felt by all, and therefore we are sanguine enough to think that our roll of dead will be our best aid to recruiting.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

KINGSTON'S GOOD WORK.

Editor Review,

Sir,—The Patriotic Fund for Kingston has been opened. The first day's subscriptions netted $30,000 and they expect to increase this amount to $50,000 in the next day or two.

How does this compare with Peterboro, a place of equal population and supposed to be more industrially progressive?

Yours truly,

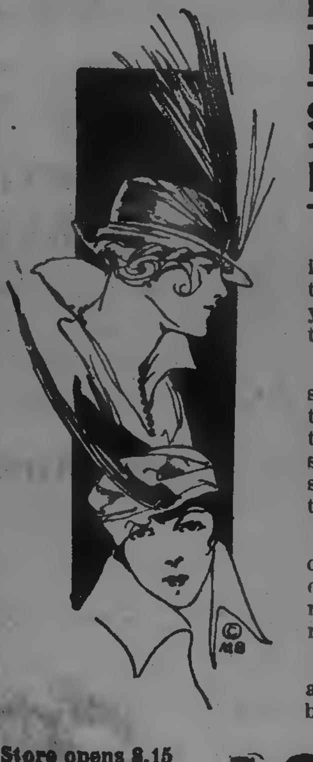
TURNBULL'S



Individuality is a Dominant Feature in the Cressman Showing of New Fall Millinery Styles

A visit to our Millinery Parlors will prove of great interest to the ladies of Peterborough. We've many new things to show—radical innovations that will appeal to you because of their ingenuity. They are the style-thoughts of master milliners of two continents.

Of course the velvet hats hold the centre of the style stage this season; and when you see and try on some of the shapes, and note their becomingness, you will agree that they are worthy of first place. The wide brimmed sailor, the close-fitting turban, and the long, narrow boat shapes will prove almost irresistible to milady who wishes to follow the fashion tendency.

The trimmings are formed almost invariably of ostrich—straight ostrich, burnt ostrich, and various other ostrich trimmings. Other trimmings are formed of monkey fur, hackle, gold and metallic flowers, wings and mounts.

We invite you to see this display, for beyond doubt a hundred surprises await you, both as to beautiful and becoming styles and extraordinary values.

SOLDIERS OF THE KING

There were two hundred and sixty-five men drilling at the armouries last night and a large number of spectators. A very lively game of indoor baseball was played after drill. The men received pay, which action had been decided on, instead of the trip to Windsor.

Following are the orders for the week:

For general information it is noted that an order-in-council was passed on the 4th of September, 1914, approving of a grant of separation allowance to wives and families of non-commissioned officers and men of the non-payment active militia, while on active service at the following rates:— Rank and file, $20 per month, sergeants and staff sergeants, $25 per month; warrant officers, $30 per month; lieutenants, $30 per month; captains, $40 per month, majors, $50 per month; colonels and lieutenant colonels, $60 per month.

These rates are subject, however, to proviso that there may be deductions from the above separative allowance, any amount, whch is being received by the beneficaries in payment in whole or in part of the salary which the husband or father was receiving at the time of his enlistment.

Payment of this separation allowance will be carried out from militia headquarters and cheques to those entitled to the same will be issued monthly, and to the families of those concerned.

All uniforms and equipment in possession of non-commissioned officers and men who proceeded to Valcartier camp and who later were rejected and returned to their homes must be handed in to the Regimental or company stores immediately.

The regiment will parade hereafter weekly on Tuesday evenings, until further orders.

Leave of absence from parade is hereby granted to Captains McLean and Higgins and Lieutenant Hook.

The regimental band by permission of the commanding officers will give a patriotic concert in the armouries on Friday, Sept. 25th, at 8 p.m. A silver collection will be taken and the proceeds given to the patriotic fund raised by women of Peterboro.

By order.

D. WALKER,
Major Adjutant.

STREET CAR TRIED CONCLUSIONS WITH THE STEAM ROLLER

What might have proved a very serious accident happened yesterday when street car No. 30 crashed into the road roller on George St. above McDonnel. The road roller was in the act of backing up when a south-bound George Street car came along travelling at a fair rate of speed. The motorman it is claimed did not sound his gong. He applied his brakes when he was about two rail lengths from the roller. The consequences were that the car collided with the roller, and one side was grazed by the front wheel of the roller. When the car struck the rear wheel, it was brought to a very sudden stop. There were a few passengers aboard, and they received a sudden jolt. This is the second attempt of a street car to move the 15 ton road roller, that has proved unsuccessful. Car. No. 15 was put on the route while the other car is being repaired.

ANNETTI KELLERMANN IN NEPTUNE'S DAUGHTER

"Neptune's Daughter" a photo-drama will be presented for the first time at the Grand next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, and gives Miss Annette Kellerman a long pantomimic part to play, in addition to which she is shown in old and new feats of diving.

As a phantasy of the sea, the picture has diverting and original qualities. Miss Kellerman, often called a mermaid, appears like one this time. Surrounded by some forty sisters she swims and dives about the shores of Bermuda.

Angela, her youngest sister, is only six years old. Annette and Angela are caught in a fish net one Sunday afternoon, and while Annette escapes, Angela is badly wounded while being rolled to land covered deep in sea-weed she does not attract the attention of the fisher folk. A little later Annette swims up and carries off the dying little mermaid to Neptune's cave. There Annette swears an oath of vengeance against all mortals. Obtaining a charm which will transform her into a girl, she sets out to punish those who are responsible for Angela's death.

After a long series of adventures, Annette loses the charm and has to remain a mortal, though an exalted one, for she becomes the queen of the handsome young king who has just overthrown a usurper to his crown.

Some remarkable scenes in this photo-drama show Miss Kellerman feeding a cave full of fish, doing high dives from perilous cliffs, struggling with a hired assassin on the water, and dancing classic dances as a woodland nymph.

A lawyer living on Broadway, New York, yesterday attempted suicide by cutting his throat and taking acid. He will probably live, as the cut was not deep, neither did he take much acid.

INDEPENDENT TIRE COMPANY FINALE

Toronto, Sept. 23. — An order winding up the Independent Tire Co. of Toronto was made by Mr. Justice Middleton at Osgoode Hall yesterday on the application of Edward Maurer & Co., of New York, who claim to be creditors for $14,066.33. It is said that other creditors have claims totalling $60,000.

In the petition it is alleged that the company, which was incorporated in 1911, lost $62,500 in the past year, and that it paid out of its capital commission on the sale of shares to the extent of $52,165. The paid-up capital amounts to $248,837.50.

BRAVE TO THE DEATH

AIX-LA-CHAPELLE, Sept. 23.—The head of the Red Cross division in Rhineland tells a remarkable story of a Belgian telephone girl at Dahlen, who telephoned Belgian officers at the forts that they were not properly placing their shells. By following her instructions they were able to regulate their firing effectively and the telephone girl was killed by a shot which destroyed the office from which she was directing the operations.

Tries To Reach Rheims.

ROME, Sept. 23.—(Via Paris.)—Cardinal Lucon, Archbishop of Rheims, has sent a message from Paris to the Pope, saying that he is doing all in his power to reach Rheims where the great cathedral has been destroyed by German shellfire. He has been unable to do so, however, owing to the occupation of the town by the French forces. The Pope has asked for a report regarding the destruction of the famous edifice.

MAKE CHEESE FOR THE FUND

Factories Will Unite, to Give Aid Next Wednesday

NO GRANT FOR FAIR

Mr. Flavelle Takes First Selection on This Morning's Board

At the meeting of the Peterborough cheese board this morning, Wednesday, Sept. 30, was selected as the day when the various factories will make cheese, and the sum realized from the sale will be donated to the Patriotic Fund. The committee appointed to supervise the plan is composed of President W. C. Switzer, Secretary E. Hawthorne and Mr. R. Duff.

The question of granting $15 to the Peterborough Exhibition was brought up by Mr. Gillespie, but several of the members thought that it was Norwood's turn to receive the grant.

Help Next Year.

After some discussion it was decided not to make any grant this year, and give both exhibitions similar amounts next year.

The cheese was boarded as follows: Keene, 75; Warminster, 60; Shearer, 90; Selwyn, 75; Villiers, 105; Warsaw, 100; Westwood, 130; Oakdale, 65; Daisy D., 70; Myrtle, 110; Ormonde, 140; Young's Point, 40; Lang, 105; Indian River, 75; East Emily, 10; Treewern, 90; Norwood, 130; Fleetwood, 80; Killarney, 115; total, 1,755.

Mr. Flavelle opened at 14 cents, Mr. Gillespie offered 14⅛, Mr. Cook 14¼, Mr. Gillespie 14 5-16, Mr. Cook 14⅜, Mr. Morton 14½, Mr. Cook 14 9-16, Mr. Morton 14⅝, Mr. Cook 14 11-16, Mr. Morton, 14¾, Mr. Flavelle 14 13-16, Mr. Morton 14 13-16 (for the board), and Mr. Flavelle 14⅞. The latter's selections were East Emily, Myrtle, Shearer, Keene, Treewern and Indian River. The remainder was secured by Mr. Morton at 14 13-16. The board adjourned for two weeks.

POLICE WILL LOOK INTO TWO CASES

John O'Reilly in today's police court pleaded guilty to a charge of drunkenness. He was remanded one week in which time his case will be investigated in connection with several movements on his part.

Margaret Tucker appeared on a charge of vagrancy. She refused to answer any questions whatever, and when asked if she was guilty, did not have anything to say. Her case was remanded for investigation.

PART OF DRYDOCK SCHEME WILL BE PROCEEDED WITH

Is Limited to the Construction of Drydock Alone, But Delay Will be Caused

It will be gratifying to the public to find that the abandonment of the dry dock scheme has not been total. The whole scheme was composed of two parts. The original part was under public works and comprised the dry dock and the roadway approach to it. The railways and canals department decided to add to that a comprehensive scheme which has been referred to in these columns and much larger than the public works scheme but owing to difficulty in acquiring land the Minister of Railways and Canals has reserved notice of abandonment of his scheme. It may be said that the latter's plan was very largely his engineer's suggestion. The dry dock was Mr. Burnham's suggestion which was adopted by public works on the report of the engineer.

The Review understands that Mr. Burnham is advised this morning as follows: "As you the aware we have expropriated one and thirty-three one hundredths acres which gives us quite sufficient land for the dry dock and the roadway approach thereto. Attached I am sending you blue print of plan which shows exactly the property this department requires and has expropriated. The plans have been revised and have now been returned to Ottawa leaving out the repair basin, wharf, etc., etc., and limiting the proposal to the construction of the dry dock alone." This will be very satisfactory so far as it goes although it will necessarily result in a delay of the whole scheme which will not in all probability be gone on with till spring, especially as the delay by the contractor in the contract below Campbellford postpones the deep draught opening of the canal until next spring.

PUBLIC WANT BOOKS RELATING TO WARFARE

Librarian is Preparing List to Help the Reader

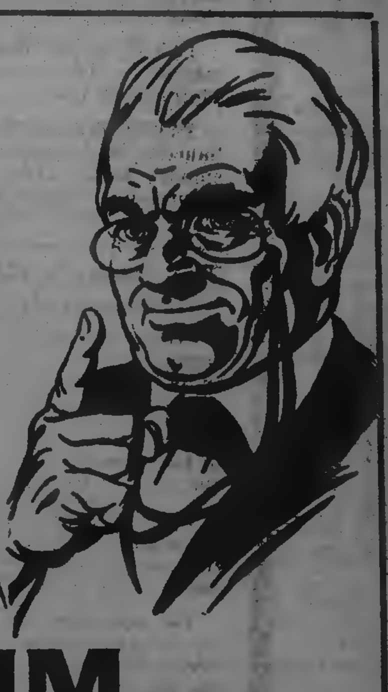
There are fewer books of fiction and other classes being issued at the public library these days as the public mind is turned towards books which deal with wars. The newspapers and magazines are also coming in for more than the average share of attention.

Periodicals pertaining to the present war, the Franco-Prussian war and famous battles of history, are read with avidity. In order to help the reading public to obtain the volumes in the library on subjects relative to war, the librarian has in preparation a list of books under this category which will be issued in a few days.

SAVINGS AND LOAN COMPANY GIVE $1000

In addition to giving the Grand Opera House free for the patriotic concert, J. J. Turner & Sons have also sent in their check for $50 to the Patriotic Fund.

Mayor Buller has also received the handsome donation of a check for one thousand dollars from the Toronto Savings and Loan Co., and the assurance that if more is needed this company will further help the fund.



Reliability

is what a doctor must be assured of in recommending a food or drink. He must know that it is honest, efficient, pure and wholesome.

In cases of nervousness, heart flutter, headache, biliousness, indigestion, etc., where the patient is a tea or coffee drinker, most doctors order: "Quit tea and coffee and use Postum."

Doctors recommend Postum because they know that it is a pure food-drink—absolutely free from the drug, caffeine, which makes tea and coffee injurious to most users.

It is significant that thousands of physicians not only recommend, but themselves use

POSTUM

—its worth having been fully demonstrated, not only in the home, but in Sanitariums, Hospitals and Colleges.

POSTUM now comes in two forms:

REGULAR POSTUM—must be well boiled—15c. and 25c. packages.

INSTANT POSTUM—soluble—no boiling—made in the cup with hot water, instantly. 30c. and 50c. tins.

Both kinds are delicious—cost per cup about the same—sold by Grocers everywhere.

TALES TOLD BY SOLDIERS FROM THE BATTLEFIELDS

What may be called the first Canadian letter from the British front reached London last week. It is addressed to Mrs. Carey by her son, Geoffrey, a member of the Canadian Pacific Staff in London, who is now with the forces on the Continent as an interpreter. Mrs. Carey has three sons, all of whom have joined the colors and have been in the Canadian Pacific service.

Sunday, Aug. 30.

My Dearest Mother, — I have a sense of humorous satisfaction in launching a "bolt from the blue." Je suis en France ; mais c'est a peu pres tout ce que je puis vous dire. For obvious reasons I cannot disclose my whereabouts or very much news, and my letter must be short, or it won't go through. I came over via S——, had a very bad night on a coil of rope, and in the evening I and several other chaps became disconnected from the column together with the supplies and baggage which we were in charge of. We had an adventurous camp life for two days and nights, and then managed to report ourselves to the right quarter. If I had not known French we should have been wellnigh stranded. However, I have been retained at one of the bases, and my surroundings are very interesting. We all sleep anywhere in the open air and eat the plainest of food ; but no one thinks of grumbling. We are much better off than the French troops. We are continually being shifted about at extremely short notice, but the organization of everything . . . transport of horses, supplies, ammunition, camps with electric light, men's quarters giving ever satisfaction, and so on; it is really marvellous. Everything runs smoothly and quickly, and all of us are in the best of spirits.

Sometimes we are fortunate enough to get a paper and sometimes to get to town. I was not paid before going, neither have I any pay book, so that I possess at present just a few sous. There are really lots of small articles which we cannot do without, such as bread (we get tired of biscuits), milk (for our tea is strong), papers, drinks during the heat, etc., and as prices are up our sous are treasures. However, we pull along very well, and if you don't often hear from me, please don't get anxious, as I cannot always communicate. We are received here as heroes, and are greeted in broken English by almost every passer-by, especially the children. On several occasions kind people have called us in and supplied us with free drinks and fruit.

FROM A SAILOR ON THE BRISTOL

The following letter, written to his parents by a young gunner with the North Atlantic Fleet, appears in the Bristol Times.

We are on the track of the German ships out here, and last night the Bristol fired on one, but she was a very fast boat, and ran away out of sight. We caught her coaling from a merchant ship, but before we could get in range of her she was off, steaming twenty-seven knots, and as we can only do twenty-two you see we were handicapped; but, nevertheless, all are quite confident that if we do drop across her fair and square we shall sink her in about ten minutes. But the worst of it is she keeps running away. Dear mother and father, I don't want you to worry about me and if anything does happen and we all get killed you will always be proud to say that your son died with a good heart, fighting for King and country ; and who could die a better death ? I am not a bit worried myself, and the excitement is great.

AN OFFICER'S WARNING

A young officer who had seen the whole course of the campaign from the landing of the British troops writes :

I wish you would try to make the people of England understand that they should be most exceedingly thankful that they are living on an island and not in the midst of the dreadful things which are happening on the Continent. To enforce upon the public that England must fight this thing out, and must conquer even if it has to spend the blood of its young men like water. It will be far better that every family throughout England should have to sorrow for one of its members than that England should have to go through similar ordeals to those which Continental countries are suffering.

The sight of the old women and men fleeing from village to village; young mothers and babies in arms with their few personal effects on their backs, or in some more fortunate cases with their goods and chattels surrounding the aged grandmother stowed away in an old farm cart, drawn by a nag too venerable to be of service to the State ; this is what one has seen daily.

Picture to yourself our night marches with the burning villages on all sides set fire to by German shells—and the Germans have been rather careless whether their shells struck fortified and defended positions or open ones. In some cases the fires were caused intentionally by marauding patrols.

Do not imagine that things are not going well with us. We are all satisfied and confident of the end ; but at the same time the only possible end can be gained by sacrifice on the part of those at home only. All is well with me personally ; I have a busy time, but it is most interesting work.

"WE MADE NO MISTAKE."

A Coldstream Guardsman, writing of the fighting near the forest of Compiegne, compares the sight of the Germans issuing from the trees to a cup final crowd at the Crystal Palace.

"You couldn't miss them. Our bullets ploughed into them, but still they came for us. I was well entrenched, and my rifle got so hot I could hardly hold it. I was wondering if I should have enough bullets when a pal shouted, 'Up, Guards and at 'em!' The next second he was rolled over with a nasty knock on the shoulder. He jumped up and hissed, 'Let me get at them!' His language was a bit stronger than that.

"When we really did get the order to get at them we made no mistake, I can tell you. They cringed at the bayonet, but those on our left wing tried to get around us, and after racing as hard as we could for quite three hundred yards we cut up nearly every man who did not run away."

Referring to the cavalry he writes: "You have read of the charge of the Light Brigade. It was nothing to our chaps. I saw two of our fellows who were unhorsed stand back to back and slash away with their swords, bringing down nine or ten of the panic stricken devils. Then they got hold of the stirrup-straps of a horse without a rider, and got out of the melee. This kind of thing was going on all day.

"In the afternoon I thought we should all get bowled over, as they came for us again in their big numbers. Where they came from, goodness knows; but as we could not stop them with bullets they had another taste of the bayonet. My captain, a fine fellow, was near to me and as he fetched them down, he shouted, 'Give them socks, my lads!' How many were killed and wounded I don't know; but the field was covered with them."

THE CITY FARM

Every back yard garden is potentially a little farm. The man who has a suburban home or a summer country farm of, say, anywhere up to ten acres, can enjoy his agricultural avocation all the more if it is run along sound business lines.

Quite apart from the mere pleasureure and recreation to be derived from cultivating the ground, there is another problem, one that more vitally concerns most of us, and that is its profitable cultivation. "Does it pay" is the test that, after all, must be applied to many of the problems connected with rural life. Small profit is there other than the satisfied personal vanity in growing immense crops or enormous specimens if those things are produced at a cost out of proportion to their actual value to the consumer. It has been shown time and again that a small piece of ground can be a material factor in helping to solve the problem of economical living. The bounty of the earth will yield an adequate return under successful management.

Rural living and love of the country are not by any means entirely concerned with the esthetics. We can plant trees and shrubs and flower borders for beauty and harmony of landscape design, but we have also got to live ; and living can be made even more worth while if one's natural enjoyment and recreation is made a source of actual profit.

There are many little problems concerning the little farm which will find a place from time to time in this department. The experiences of little farmers everywhere, your own experiences in particular, are not without their interest and lesson to others. Tell us, and tell the others, what you have learned; perhaps your effort, laid before another similarly placed, will help much. Tell us the facts.

APSLEY NEWS

Apsley, Sept. 23.—Mr. Bert Lean attended the fair at Coe Hill on last Saturday.

Mr. Norman Lean has returned from attending the fall assizes as juryman at Peterboro.

A few from here attended the Dummer L.O.L. excursion to Chemong recently.

Miss Grigg of Roseneath is visiting relatives here.

Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Lean and Master Tommy visited friends in South Burleigh on Sunday.

The funeral of Mrs. James Young took place from the family residence on Sept. 13 to the Anglican Church where service was conducted by Mr. C. R. D. Booth thence to the Union Cemetery for interment.

The grim monster again visited our locality and claimed Mr. Peter Windsor of Anstruther as his victim. Death was not unexpected for he had been in poor health for some time. The funeral service was conducted by Rev. Wm. Keer, pastor of the Presbyterian Church and the remains laid to rest on Sept. 17 in the Union Cemetery. He leaves to mourn his loss a wife and five small children. We extend our sympathy to the bereaved family.

CHICAGO, Sept. 22.—Increasing domestic supplies and the fact that a lull seemed to have occurred in the export trade, put the wheat market today under a good deal of selling pressure. The close was heavy at 2½c to 3c under last night. Corn showed a net loss of ⅝c to 1⅛c, and oats of ½c to ⅝c to ¾c. In provisions, the outcome varied from unchanged figures to a decline of 25c.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 22.—The easiness of Monday was continued today, altho selling pressure was scarcely so pronounced. Liverpool cables were also influenced, futures being easier. Wheat opened unchanged to half-cent lower, oats ⅛c lower, and flax half-cent lower. The range in wheat later was 1c to 1⅜c generally lower. Oats and flax were also weaker. At noon wheat for October was $1.09⅝, Dec. $1.11¼, and May $1.18¼. The volume of trading was light. The weather thruout the prairie provinces has been fine, with a little rain in Manitoba and light frosts further west.

Closing figures were 1⅞c to 2c lower for wheat and 1⅛c lower for oats.

In cash circles there was very little doing, the demand for all grades of wheat being slow. Oats were only fair, flax quiet, while barley was more active. Cash grains closed: Wheat 2c lower, oats 2c lower; barley unchanged, and flax 1c lower.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Sept. 22.—There was a fair enquiry from foreign buyers for Manitoba spring wheat today at a decline in prices of 6d per quarter and as prices in the Winnipeg market were also 2 cents per bushel lower at the close exporters were in a position to accept some of the bids, and sales of 100,000 bushels were made for October-November shipment, but there is no demand for coarse grains. The trade in grain in the local market continues quiet, the demand being only for small lots to fill actual wants. There is a fair enquiry for spring wheat flour from foreign buyers, but owing to the unsatisfactory condition of the ocean freight situation little business of any importance is being done. The local trade is fair and the tone of the market is firm. Demand for millfeed continues good.

KRUPP GUN WORKS A GIGANTIC CONCERN

The world's greatest gun factory at Essen, Germany, employs something like 70,000 people. It is somewhat difficult to estimate the extent of the Krupp works, for, apart from the steel works and coal mines at Essen there are iron ore mines, foundries, shipbuilding yards and steel works in other parts of Germany, also in Spain and in other countries.

There is preserved at Essen the original little Krupp workshop, where 104 years ago, Friedrich Krupp tried to make cast steel, the secret of which was guarded in England. His experiments at first were a failure. Persevering, however, he managed to produce cast steel, but found that the demand was not sufficient to keep his works going.

Friedrich Krupp died in 1826 a disappointed man, but before he died he confided to his 14-year-old son Alfred the secret of making cast steel. The boy left school and worked at the crucibles, and the attention of the world was first drawn to his work by his exhibits at the Great Exposition of 1851, when he showed a cast steel ingot of 4,500 pounds, and a six-pounder cannon, also of cast steel. Eleven years later he showed a steel ingot nine feet high, four feet in diameter, and twenty-one tons in weight. This secured his fame, and in 1861 Prussia adopted Krupp's breech-loading cannon-guns which largely contributed to the German success in the French war of 1870.

Little did Krupp dream when telling his son the secret of making steel, that his little forge would grow into the giant works of to-day, which have a capital of $45,000,000. But although it was Alfred Krupp who thus laid the foundation of this great firm, it was his son Friedrich who developed it on modern lines and who extended it until became the world's greatest war factory. He died in 1902. Leaving no son to carry on the management, he directed in his will that the property should pass into the possession of his eldest daughter, Bertha to be managed as a joint stock company by a board of six members, and it was thus that Bertha Krupp became the world's greatest heiress. After her marriage her husband, who, by the Kaiser's request, assumed the name of Krupp, became president of the board.

Every miracle of machinery is to be found at the Krupp works in one or the other of the sixty-five departments, from the $500,000 steam-hammer "Fritz," which has a falling weight of fifty tons, and yet can descend so lightly as to crack a nut without injuring the kernel, to the 5,000-ton hydraulic press, which shapes eighty tons of crucible steel blocks as easily as tinfoil.

POOR SHOOTING BY THE GERMANS

It Took Gunners an Hour to Sink the Indus

CALCUTTA, Sept. 22.—The crews of the six British steamers captured by the German cruiser Emden in the Bay of Bengal, five of which were sunk after the crews had been taken off, arrived here yesterday afternoon. They made light of the German shooting.

George Read, second officer of the Indus, says that his ship was intercepted on the morning of Sept. 10 by the Emden as she was coming up the bay. The Germans had intercepted all wireless reporting the movement of the ships and so knew the positions of all the vessels in the bay. The cruiser fired ten shots at the Indus which, however, was not sunk until more than an hour after the attack began, the German marksmanship being very poor.

At This Time in the Garden

Pick out the cool days for getting on the roof of the green house to replace broken panes, oil the ventilator hinges and fix things up generally. Inside the house the benches should be looked over carefully, the soil mixed and put in place, and pots, flats, sand boxes for cuttings, and all implements gotten together. If you have had any severe fungus epidemics in your benches, you had better completely replace the soil or bake it, a little at a time. Also paint the inside of the benches with an antiseptic paint that is made for the purpose.

"Rube" Cook has made arrangements for the Cubs to play exhibition games in Cuba during November.

Of the 24 players batting for .300 or better in the Federal League, 19 are former American or National League players.

According to unofficial National League averages, the Pittsburg Pirates are last in team batting and first in fielding.

Eddie Gerard is following Shag's idea of putting his team at soccer to enable them to get into good condition.

No doubt the Cardinals' and Browns will play to big crowds when the St. Louis city championship is staged next month.

Catcher Roger Bresnahan has been coming through with some classy stuff at second base for the Cubs during the absence of Bill Sweeney.

Manager Hinchman of the Columbus club has displaced the veteran John Titus of Kansas City as leading batter in the American Association.

George Davis the Braves' youthful pitcher, is a Harvard Law School student. He formerly pitched for the Williams College nine and once had a trial with the New York Yankees.

Neither the Braves or the Giants are very strong in the way of heavy clouters. Grant is the only Giant and Connolly the only Brave who has been able to travel in the .300 set.

"Hank" O'Day tried to sign Mike Mowrey, recently released by the Pirates, but Sir Michael's demand for $800 a week for the rest of the season crabbed the deal.

Manager Clark Griffith of the Senators says the Boston Red Sox are the greatest team in the country. That doesn't help the Sox beat out Connie Mack.

The Davenport team, champions of the Three-I league, was one of the very few teams in organized baseball that held first place practically throughout the entire season.

Larue Kirby has not been able to hit so well for the St. Louis Feds as he did for Mobile earlier in the season. He had a batting average of .328 in the Southern League, while .267 is his Federal mark.

George Krichcer of the Atlanta Southern league team is planning to get into vaudeville. Kricher has a reputation as a clown on the diamond, but he is a valuable ball player as well.

ENTRIES WANTED FOR ATHLETIC MEET THANKSGIVING DAY
JUNIOR AND SENIOR EVENTS

The results of the efforts of the physical director at the Y.M.C.A. and others in the interest of an athletc meet on Thanksgiving Day, will be awaited with interest. It will be no easy task to arouse fresh enthusiasm in athletics as the youngsters, generally speaking, and their elder brothers are not any too fond of passing up the numerous forms of entertainment and getting down to the hard work of training for various events.

There are exceptions of course and the tide may turn. If interest can be renewed in athletics, the new physical director at the "character factory" will have accomplished much. Interest in athletics means a decrease in the glare of other attractions, which have little real benefits and in the majority of cases are harmful.

It is proposed to carry out a program of events at Riverside Park on Thanksgiving Day and volunteers are wanted. A good stiff competition will do a lot of good. The trials at speed and strength will be continued and probably next season, it will be possible to start the ball rolling in earnest.

On the card for the day will be a road race, in which Smoke, the Indian runner from Chemong village, will take part. A number of Indians are also anxious to take part in a tug-of-war and have stated their intention to throw their caps into the ring.

There will be events for both juniors and seniors and all information will be given on application to Mr. Carson, at the Y.M.C.A.

COBOURG BOWLERS ENLARGE THEIR GREEN

Cobourg, Ont., Sept. 23.—The Cobourg Lawn Bowling Association have secured more land and yesterday morning work was commenced enlarging their grounds. As soon as the work is completed the association will have a bowling green second to none in any town in Ontario. Taking this into consideration, and the crack teams in connection, other associations will have to look well to their laurels or next they will go down to certain defeat.

Hamilton Tigers have passed Ross Craig up. He refuses to be either coaxed or led back to the fold. With the Human Ram and Clark as spectators the Jingle Kings' wing line will not be as strong as in other years.

Frank Heffernan, who has been in Montreal on business is expected back in Toronto today and will in all probability be out with the T. R. and A. A. The Star says:—

"The T. R. and A. A. back field looks like Vivian, Heffernan and De Gruchy."

Arthur Bues, the third sacker of the Skeeters has been secured by the Cubs and if he shows big league class Heinie Zimmerman, the fiery third baseman of the Windy City aggregation may go to New York Giants. At that Heinie would help McGraw out of a great difficulty. Herzoog and Shaeffer left too big a hole.

The Calgary Herald says:—

When the annual meeting of the Alberta Amateur Hockey association is formed, the delegates will have some questions to settle. At least it will be between this body and the Amateur Union. During the summer there were a lot of baseball games played around Red Deer, Olds, etc., and some of the players were not in good amateur standing. Others in the same league were in good standing and also play hockey. These players were notified by Secretary James Mann that they would be blacklisted if they played. But they played. President Pearson states that they will not be allowed to compete in the hockey games this winter and he is only right. There is far too much of this going on anyway. The Hockey association in this province is run in a pretty clean way. Since taking hold of it, Mr. Pearson has made a success of it. Last year the association developed the intermediate end of it and also made a success of that. In getting two such officers as Robert Pearson and Jimmy Mann to guide the affairs the delegates made no mistake, and if the same two men can be prevailed upon at the next meeting to continue, the league will be better off. Both are to be congratulated upon their work.

GERMAN SHIP CAPTURED

British Cruiser Berwick Makes Prize of Spreewald, an Armed Merchantman.

LONDON, Sept. 23.—The Hamburg-American Line steamer Spreewald has been captured by the British cruiser Berwick in the North Atlantic Ocean, according to an announcement by the Admiralty last night. It was stated also that two colliers had been captured.

The Spreewald was fitted out as an armed cruiser. The two colliers carried 2,600 tons of coal and 180 tons of provisions for the German cruisers in Atlantic waters. The Berwick is commanded by Capt. L. C. Baker.

The total number of German vessels which, according to latest reports, have been captured by British vessels at sea or by British port authorities is 92. Ninety-five German vessels were detained in British ports at the outbreak of the war.

Seventy British vessels were held in German ports at the commencement of hostilities, and since then 12 British sea-going vessels out of the upwards of 4,000 carrying an oversea trade have been captured and sunk at sea.

The Spreewald is a steamer of 2,214 tons. She was last reported as having sailed from Antwerp July 12 for the West Indies, and to have arrived at St. Thomas, D.W.I., Aug. 4.

Last night London's Gazette contains a list of eighty-six German and Austrian vessels detained or captured by the Russians.

SERAJEVO IS TAKEN

Victorious Balkan Armies Reach Bosnian Capital

BIRTH PLACE OF WAR

LONDON, Sept. 23.—The Rome correspondent of The Star says the Servian and Montenegrin troops have occupied Serajevo, which was abandoned by the Austrians after an overwhelming defeat.

Serajevo is the birthplace of the present war, for there occurred the assassination of the Austrian heir-apparent, Archduke Francis Ferdinand, and his wife, which led to war between Austria-Hungary and Servia.

Monday an official report stated that the Austrian army was completely demoralized and panic-stricken and "flying before the Servians and Montenegrins, who were then only fifteen kilometres from the Bosnian capital."

The battle which has been in progress for several days near Krupani, on the Drina river, has, according to an official announcement made yesterday, ended in complete disaster for the Austrian army.

The announcement declared that 160,000 Austrian troops were engaged in this encounter, while the Servian forces included various bodies of men who had been concentrated along the Drina, reinforced by troops hastily recalled from Semlin and Slavonia. The fighting was very sanguinary.

AUSTRALIANS TAKE NAURU.

Germany's Last Stationary Wireless Station Gone In Pacific.

LONDON, Sept. 23.—The destruction of the wireless telegraph station on the Island of Nauru, which removes the last German stationary wireless apparatus in the Pacific Ocean, is reported in a despatch to the Reuter Telegram Co. yesterday from Sydney, N.S.W.

The British flag now flies over the island, though the German governor and his staff have been allowed to remain.

Scattered fighting has taken place at Rabaul, Neupommern, an island in the Bismarck archipelago. The natives, under German leadership, proved troublesome, but the Australian landing party took to cover cleverly and suffered no losses.

After this skirmish Rabaul practically surrendered.

Rules of Fair Play Broken.

LONDON, Sept. 23.—Sir John French, in his report, says:

"The Germans are a formidable enemy, well trained, long prepared and brave. Their soldiers are carrying on the contest with skill and valor. Nevertheless, they are fighting to win anyhow, regardless of all rules of fair play, and there is evidence that they don't hesitate at anything in order to gain victory."

A cook in a Brooklyn restaurant was fatally scalded when a coffee urn was accidentally overturned.

HISTORY IN BLOOD

LONDON, Sept. 23.—"What history does our lord the king-emperor desire written? Let us know and our blood will write it." This cryptic message has been received by the King from Major-Gen. Sir Pertab Singh and Col. Maharajah Bikaneer, two of the most powerful princes in Indian hierarchy. Both have offered men and money, in addition to their personal services in the field. They are veteran soldiers and very well known in European diplomatic and sporting circles.

FORTY THOUSAND GOING.

Canada's Contingent Will Total That Before January.

OTTAWA, Sept. 23.—It is understood that by January next Canada will have abroad, either in the fighting line or in England, upwards of forty thousand men. The 31,000 to be sent from Valcartier will in all probability go to a Canadian depot in England, from which they will be sent to the front when thoroughly efficient. To fill up the gaps in the ranks caused by casualties and sickness recruits will be sent from Canada to this depot from time to time, probably bringing the total sent from Canada to about 41,000 by the first of the new year.

Announcement that the entire force at Valcartier would be sent abroad is hailed with satisfaction by officers and men and will end any dissatisfaction that may have been caused by the uncertainty as to who were to be left behind had a smaller force been sent. It was understood that the decision was reached in a Cabinet Council at the military camp over the week-end.

INTERVIEWS FABRICATED.

No Truth In Burns and Grey Stories Says British U. S. Embassy.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.—The British Embassy last night issued this statement:

"Certain persons have been circulating in the press reports of speeches supposed to have been delivered by British statesmen, such for instance as that attributed to Mr. Burns, which is a pure fabrication.

"Recently a statement has been made as to a speech of Sir Edward Grey, in which he is quoted as saying that 'There shall be no peace until Germany is humbled to the earth, her territory divided between Russia and France and her commerce definitely delivered to England.'

"Sir Edward Grey never delivered such a speech, and the statement is obviously circulated with a view to mislead public opinion."

Mean to Destroy Rheims.

LONDON, Sept. 23.—A Paris despatch to The Express says:

"Military experts here believe that the Germans intend to raze the entire city of Rheims. While the city itself is immaterial from a military standpoint, it is the centre of a district of the highest strategic value. The German forces in great strength are close to the city on the north side while the French batteries occupy the heights to the south.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

BROWN—MERRELL.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized this morning when May Phedora, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Merrell, 561 Homewood Ave., was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Arthur Leslie, son of Mr. and Mrs. P. E. Brown of Meaford. Miss Kathleen Merrell was bridesmaid, while Mr. Chas. Allison, Port Hope, acted as groomsman. After the ceremony a very dainty wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride.

On their return from a short wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Brown will take up residence in Port Hope.

The bride was the recipient of many beautiful gifts, among which was a handsome set of table cutlery from the office staff of the De Laval Co.

MILLAR—HATTON.

A quiet but very pretty wedding was solemnized last Wednesday evening at St. John's rectory, Lakefield, when the Rev. H. A. Ben Oliel united in marriage Miss Alma, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Hatton of Young's Point, to Mr. Melville Millar of Lakefield.

The bride who wore a charming dress of blue silk with hat to match was attended by her cousin, Miss Eva M. McNaughton, who also wore a beautiful dress of navy blue serge with hat to match. Mr. Wm. Millar, brother of the groom, acted as best man.

After the ceremony they returned to the home of the bride where the wedding dinner was served. The bride received many beautiful and costly presents. Mr. and Mrs. Millar will reside near Young's Point.

Mrs. S. C. Warne has returned from Toronto.

Mr. Leo. Derochor of Ottawa, is in the city.

Friends of Miss William and Eugene Donovan will be pleased to learn that they are rapdly convalescing after their illness of typhoid fever.

Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Vanstone celebrated the 25th anniversary of their wedding on Friday, Sept. 11. Mr. and Mrs. D. A. Sisler, Akron, Ohio, Mr. and Mrs. H. Gilbert and babe, Peterboro, were home to enjoy the occasion with their parents. All have returned home after having a most pleasant time.—Bowmanville Statesman.

Mr. Jack Carson, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Carson, Romaine street, who is home from Tete Jean Cashe, B. C., on a vacation, received notification that his services as a telegraph operator were required at Valcartier at once. Mr. Carson was out of the city when the word arrived, but in all probability will leave for the camp in the course of a few days. He has been employed in several centres of the G. T. P. in Western Canada as telegraph operator and train despatcher.

Lieut. Harold Matthews wishes to thank the following ladies, who have contributed sweaters, caps and other articles for the comfort of the men in his battery, Canadian Field Artillery: Mrs. Aylmer, Miss L. MASSED BAND CONCERT FRIDAY

Patriotic Program to be Given at Armouries

The citizens were given a treat at the Patriotic Concert on Monday night and another splendid program is being arranged for another concert in the armouries, Friday night, by the 57th Regimental band and the Temple Band.

Seventy or more musicians will take part in the selections by the massed bands, and there will be several solos by the individual bandsmen.

LANSDOWNE LODGE HELP THE FUND

At the regular meeting of Lansdowne Lodge, Sons of England, a donation of $5 was made to the Patriotic Fund. The lodge had hoped to present a larger amount but their excursion, the proceeds of which were to be given to the fund was very poorly patronized and there was a deficit of about $10.

S. A. Oke, the delegate to Supreme Lodge at Windsor gave a report on the sessions.

Miss Richardson is Appointed to Faculty of Local Conservatory

The Conservatory of Music management announced the appointment to the faculty in the vocal department of Miss Ada Richardson, soprano soloist to the Charlotte Street Methodist Church. Miss Richardson requires no introduction to the people of Peterborough, as her work both in church and in the concert field is already well known. She was formerly a pupil of David Dick Slater, A.R., C.M., the well known vocal teacher and composer, of London, Eng. Miss Richardson will begin her duties at once, and may be consulted at the conservatory.

A crowd gathered and stoned a chauffeur whose car had run over a boy of nine in New York. The mob chased the driver to the police station.

Mrs. Hart S. Farlco, a tennis player of national repute, was one of the three probably fatally injured in an automobile accident at Plainfield, N. J.

PRESIDENT OF UNION GIVES ADDRESS TO YOUNG PEOPLE

The Young People's Union of Murray St. Baptist church held a special rally meeting last night which was largely attended by the young people of the church and at which were also representives from Park St. and Gilmour Memorial Baptist Churches. The speaker of the evening was Rev. H. R. Nobles, B.A., B.D., pastor of Christy St. Baptist Church, Toronto, and President of the Baptist Young People's Union of Ontario and Quebec. Mr. Nobles took as his subject "The Best Young People in the Universe" and gave a most scientific treatment of the problem which faces every society of young people in church work. He impressed upon his hearers the truth that their work while primarily church work is really community work and he warned them that the winter's work of the society would be efficient only as it effected for good the community to a greater or lesser extent. There should of course be extensive work on the part of the members but this extensive work must be largely supplemented by extensive work. We help ourselves by helping others and that society is dead which is not extending the gospel of neighborliness into the community in which it finds itself. Mr. Nobles said he was afraid people were not very anxious to hear the gospel of Christ but he was very certain that people everywhere are anxious to feel the effects of Christian teaching in human life. We must carry the leaven of Christian brotherhood into every home in the community if we would achieve the best results as a Christian society. At the conclusion of his address Mr. Nobles pointed out that socialism is making rapid advances everywhere in spite of the acquiescence to the present war and that Christianity must be prepared to show that it has something more powerful in uplifting humanity and levelling classes. Mr. Nobles showed himself to be a master in the science of social service and his hearers were delighted with his witty, forceful and most interesting address. Special music was rendered by Misses Maysie Armstrong and Lillian Garbutt and Messrs. Jas. Browne and Harry Hill which was much enjoyed and appreciated.

HARVEST FESTIVAL SERMON PREACHED BY ARCHDEACON CODY

It was with deep interest and attention, that the parishioners of St. George's Anglican Church, listened to the Venerable Archdeacon Cody of Toronto, who preached a special and appropriate sermon, when the harvest festival service was held last evening.

The Rector, Rev. Jas. Price was assisted by the local Anglican clergy and the service which was fully choral, brought hearty responses from the very large congregation.

The sermon by Archdeacon Cody was a beautifully worded discourse and besides being appropriate to the occasion, was of particular interest to the parishioners of St. George's Church, and as such, will not fail to make an impression.

The spirit of British and Canadian patriotism, also was manifested, to a very high degree and the service was brought to a conclusion, all too soon, for the congregation.

FUNERAL OF LATE FATHER O'LEARY

The funeral of the late Father Patrick J. O'Leary took place this morning at St. Joseph's Church and Cemetery, Douro. The solemn requiem high mass was sung by Rev. Father Michael O'Leary, a brother of the deceased, assisted by Rev. Father McGuire of Douro and Dean McColl, as deacon and sub-deacon. The sermon was preached by Monsignor Casey of Lindsay while His Lordship Bishop O'Brien, D.D., also spoke a few words. Bishop O'Brien officiated at the grave. The pall-bearers were Rev. Fathers P. McGuire of Downeyville, M. O'Leary of Bracebridge, Scanlon of Grafton, M. McGuire of Douro, Guiry of Lindsay, and J. O'Sullivan of Port Hope. Rev. Father McAuley and Father Galvin assisted in the choir.

Fire at Lafayette Avenue.

The fire department were given a run at 3.05 this morning to 33 Lafayette avenue. It is thought that one of the boarders had been smoking in bed. The blaze was extinguished by chemicals. The damage amounted to about $50.

Red Cross Apepal.

An urgent appeal for additional supplies from the Red Cross headquarters at Toronto has been received by the local committee. Donations of material or money will be thankfully received. They may be left with the treasurer, Mrs. F. L. Roy, 308 Rubidge Street.

Employes Helped Too.

One of the first contributions received for the Canadian Patriotic Fund by the Montreal committee was $20,000 given by the Imperial Tobacco Co., of Canada, Ltd. In addition to that the employees have given $8,764. This sum was raised by taking one day's pay off every salaried man.

Long Trip for Ambulance.

Two hundred and fifty miles is a long way, and when it comes to travelling that far with a motor ambulance it is "quite a bit farther." Monday night Mr. Manson Comstock returned to the city after making a trip of that length. He left here Sunday morning at 10 o'clock for Tamworth, the town where Dr. Robinson is alleged to have perpetrated the atrocious crime of murdering Blanche York. Mr. Comstock arrived there at 8 o'clock at night. At 9 o'clock Monday morning he started out with a patient for Lindsay. The patient was an elderly lady who could not travel via train owing to ill health. Lindsay was reached without an accident or stop, at 10.30 that night, and a few minutes after midnight he arrived in this city.

RUSSIANS ON VERGE OF COMPLETING FIRST STAGE OF MOST COLOSSAL MILITARY OPERATION EVER UNDERTAKEN

Conquests in Galicia Give Russia the Control of the Greatest Supply of Gasoline in Europe --- Czar's Forces Now Operate to Cut Off the Austrians From Their Last Galician Fortress

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Sept. 24.—Virtually no new information has reached London this morning concerning the progress of events in the western war area, but from the east comes news which here is taken to show that Russia has almost captured the first stage of what may be considered in its entirety the most colossal operation ever undertaken by a military power.

The fall of the Austrian fortress of Jaroslav virtually completes the investment of Przemysl, as far as the lines of communication are concerned. Even the continued occupatilon of Cracow by Austrian and German forces has not aided in the junction of Austrian and German armies which is necessary to keep Russia from overrunning Galicia and pushing the armies of Austria back to the ridge of the Carpathians.

By her conquests in Galicia, Russia now controls the greatest supply of gasoline in Europe. This product is of the utmost importance to Russia, because of her necessity for motor transport.

The Russian movement is now described as a huge wedge, the right line of which extends roughly from Libau, on the Baltic, along the railroad line to Warsaw. The Russian general Rennenkampff is guarding this line. It protects the Russian sources of supply and prevents any outflanking movement against the Russian army of attack, which already, according to news in London, is beginning to operate in the direction of Posen and Breslau, in Germany. The left of this line rests on Warsaw, from which point railroads tap the rich and populous district extending to Odessa. The occupation of Galicia links up the Warsaw railroad system and is regarded in London as insuring both supplies and reinforcements for the attacking army. That the stage is virtually set for this attack, is indicated by news that the Germans are hastily reinforcing their line between Thorn and Kalisz, this latter point being southeast of Posen, even to the extent of abandoning their positions against General Rennenkampff.

Not only have the Russians cut off Austria's domestic supply of gasoline, but news from Roumania that the exportation of coal has been forbidden, may be followed by a similar measure affecting gasoline. This would virtually deprive Austria and her ally of this very necesary product for their automobile transport and aerial service. Without the necesary transports, together with absolute command of her few railroads which are no longer threatened by the invaders, English observers expect Russia to continue to move with that rapidity which has in the past amazed military experts. It had been predicted, on account of her lack of railroad facilities, Russia would take six months to get as many men into the field as she has already stationed along the line of this great wedge in two months' time.

PREVENT JUNCTION OF ARMIES.

London, Sept. 24.—All possibility of Austro-German forces near Przemysl effecting a junction with other armies further west, has now been excluded, says a despatch from Petrograd to the Morning Post.

To the south of Przemysl Russian operations are now being directed with a view to the capture of Khyruv junction station, 20 miles south of Przemysl, which will completely cut off the Austrians' last Galician fortress from railway communication in any direction, and give the Russians command of all routes towards Cracow and lines passing into Hungary.

The position now held indicates the rolling up of Austrian forces right up to Cracow.

GERMAN DEFEAT IS REPORTED.

London, Sept. 24.—The Paris Matin prints a despatch from Petrograd stating that Germans who drove General Rennenkampff back into Russia, are reported to have suffered a great defeat at Subir. The Russians have reoccupied Soldau, in East Prussia, on the Polish frontier.

BRITISH TO MOVE AGAINST TSING TAU.

Tokio, Sept. 24.—The war office makes the official announcement that British troops under Brigadier-General Nathaniel W. Barnardiston, commander of the North China forces, landed on September 23 in the neighborhood of Tao Shan Bay, to participate in movements against the Germans at Tsing Tau.

WANTED TO EXPEL BOURASSA

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Montreal, Sept. 24.—An attempt was made this afternoon to expel Henri Bourassa, the Nationalist leader, from the Canadian Club at a banquet held in the Windsor hotel, at which the Belgian delegation to President Wilson were present. A resolution calling for Bourassa's expulsion was tendered, but the chairman, Dean Adams, would not accept it, as it was out of order.

Winnipeg, Sept. 24.—The provincial police have been notified that a Galician farmer at Otterbonrne has shot dead one of his fellow countrymen and fatally wounded another.

THE CANADIAN VOLUNTEERS ARE OFF TO FRONT

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

St. John, Sept. 24.—The announcement that 32,000 Canadian volunteers had gone a day or two ago to the front was made by the minister of labor, Hon. T. W. Crothers, at this morning's session of the Canadian Trades and Labor Congress here. Mr. Crothers said the department was investigating the retail food prices at 57 points in Canada.

Resolutions passed called for the abolition of private detective agencies in Canada. Pending such action, the resolution calls for legislation regulating these agencies.

APPEAL IS DISMISSED

The appeal of the defendant from the judgment given by the chancellor in this city on April 28 in favor of the plaintiff for $2,334, in the case of Brightman vs. Quigley, was dismissed with costs at Osgoode Hall, Toronto, yesterday. D. O'Connell acted for the defendant and S. T. Medd, for the plaintiff.

Report is Corrected.

The Review was requested to-day by Mrs. Bradley, 33 Lafayette street, to make known the fact that the fire at her residence at 3 o'clock yesterday morning was not caused by one of the boarders smoking, as stated in a report which appeared in another paper.

Hope of India Lies With England

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

New York, Sept. 24.—A noteworthy interview with Aga Khan, recognized as the head of sixty million Mohammedans in India is cabled to the Tribune. He says Germany made a mistake about India as she did about Ireland and anybody who counts on India to be false to England will "come a cropper."

Aga Khan has directed the Khoja Moslems, of whom he is religious as well as the temporal head to place their services and resources at the disposal of England and has himself volunteered to serve as private in any infantry regiment of the Indian expeditionary force.

Many of his fellow countrymen have been in German African colonies he says and knows what the Germanization of India would mean and they know that England's exit from India means Germany's entrance. The one hope of India lies with the King, Emperor and his government. He said he was asked if Indian troops would be able to stand before the German army never having faced white men before. "I think so," he replied smiling. "If need be there can be seven hundred thousand or seven million." That would not be a great many out of three hundred and twenty million people.

ARTHUR GOODMAN INJURED WHEN PLATE GLASS CASE FELL

At the C. P. R. freight sheds about 9 o'clock this morning Arthur Goodman, of this city, was seriously injured when a large plate glass case weighing about a ton overturned and fell on him. Several men were in the act of loading the glass on a wagon. When the case was raised and the man taken out from under, he was found to have very serious injuries. Medical aid was secured at once, after which he was rushed to Nicholls Hospital.

The plate glass is for the Braund building on Charlotte street.

ATTEMPTS OF ENEMY TO ENTER FRANCE ARE SOON STOPPED

ADMIRALTY MAKES REPLY

To Charges Made by German Minister

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Sept. 24.—The British admiralty has issued a formal reply to the statement given publicity by the German minister at Copenhagen to the effect that British officers fired on drowning German sailors after the naval engagement off Heligoland, and that a British shell was thrown into a lifeboat containing German survivors of the fight. The admiralty admits the charge that a shell was thrown, but explains the circumstances as follows: "Every effort was made to save life until the German cruiser of the Stettin class appeared on the scene and opened a heavy fire on the British destroyers and the small boats. The destroyers were forced to retire in order to avoid destruction. The Goshawk removed her men from this boat, leaving it to German prisoners, nearly all of whom were wounded. It is to be regreted that a bluejacket on the forecastle of the Goshawk, exasperated at the inhuman conduct of the German cruiser, threw a projectile, which couldn't possibly under the circumstances have exploded, into a small boat as it drifted past his ship. This no doubt is the incident referred to by the German minister at Copenhagen. It cannot be defended, but the act was done under considerable provocation and was surely a trivial offence compared to that of the German cruiser, who fired many shells at the boats of the British destroyers while they were engaged in humane and chivalrous action."

Allies Left Wing Between Somme and Oise Rivers Advance — Peronne Occupied and Held --- Germans Remain Well Entrenched Between the Oise and the Aisne — No Changes in the Centre and Right

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Paris, Sept. 24.—The following official announcement was made this afternoon:

"First—On our left wing, between the river Somme and the river Oise, our troops have advanced in the direction of Roye. A detachment occupied Peronne and held this position in spite of a spirited attack on the part of the enemy. Between the river Oise and the river Aisne the enemy contineus to maintain important bodies of troops, well entrenched. We have made a slight advance to the northwest of Berry-Au-Bac.

"Second—On our centre, between the Rheims and Argonne district, the situation shows no change. To the east of Argonne and of the heights of the Meuse, the enemy continued his attacks, delivering them with especial violence. Fighting continues, accompanied by alternate retirements at certain points and advances at others.

"On our right wing there has been no change of importance.

"In the region of Nancy and in the Vosges, certain detachments of the enemy have again attempted to enter French soil, driving back light covering bodies of our troops, but their offensive was soon stopped.

In Galicia the Russians have taken possession of Jaroslau and are completely investing Przemysl, and continuing their offensive movement on Cracow.

U. S. WIRELESS STATION MUST CLOSE.

Washington, Sept. 24.—Secretary of the Navy Daniels today ordered the Marconi wireless station at Siasconset, Mass., closed at noon to-morrow, in consequence of the failure of the company to give assurance that it would comply with the naval censorship regulations.

ANOTHER TRAWLER IS DESTROYED.

London, Sept. 24.—Another Grimsby trawler was blown up by a mine yesterday in the North Sea. The vessel remained afloat ten minutes, which enabled all members of the crew to escape, except one deck hand, who was killed by falling debris.

TURKISH AMBASSADOR TO LEAVE STATES.

Washington, Sept. 24.—The Turkish ambassador has informed President Wilson that he does not alter the views expresed recently in a published interview, and will leave the United States within a fortnight. This announcement caused a profound sensation. Coupled with the concern evidenced by the administration regarding an interview attributed to Baron Von Schoen, of the German embassy, yesterday, it was interpreted as an indication of President Wilson's determination to silence dangerous comment by foreign diplomats. The Turkish ambassador had compared Armenian massacres to negro-lynchings and the employment of the water cure by Americans in the Philippines.

BERLIN POSTERS SAY "WE WANT PEACE."

London, Sept. 24.—Despite the watchfulness of German authorities, says a despatch from Copenhagen to the London Evening News, posters proclaiming "We want peace; down with the Kaiser," are appearing on the walls of buildings in Berlin.

Travellers driving through the city between railway stations are ordered to keep the blinds of their vehicles drawn, so that the posters may not be seen.

CITY TAKES POSSESSION OF LOCAL POWER PLANT

Another Chapter on Hydro Electric Program--- Service of Power and Light Will Continue Without Interruption

This afternoon, Mayor Buller, "convoyed" by his lieutenants entered the domains of the Peterboro Light and Power Co., and formally took possession of the company's property.

Thus Peterboro possesses a light and power plant and in other words, the power and light is owned by the citizens.

A by-law authorizing the city, through its officers, officials or employes, to enter and take possession of the company's property was passed at a meeeting of council last night. The by-law was submitted by Ald. Johnston, chairman of the power committee.

Mayor Buller, R. H. Parsons, H. Evans, A. Fitzgerald, J. H. Greer and G. N. Gordon, were appointed to take this action.

Another by-law, appointed R. F. Ross, Montreal, as arbitrator for the city, in the arbitration proceedings which will follow at a later date. The city has paid into court $100,000, the amount named by the Hydro Electric Commission. The company feel this amount does not represent the value of their property and it remains for the board of arbitrators to give a verdict.

"Juice" is Ready.

Ald. Green asked if all arrangements had been made for a supply of power and light.

"Yes," answered the Mayor, "the hydro commissison have made all arrangements and operations will continue, just the same as though nothing had happened."

Mayor Buller also announced that two engineers of the commission would be in the city today.

Several of the aldermen felt that the case was complicated and that care should be taken, in the action of the morrow. Ald. Duffus and Duncan thought that a competent person should be on hand to check the list of assets.

T. F. Chairman of the Utilities Commission who had been called to the meeting, discussed with the aldermen, different points in the operation of taking possession of the plant. It was explained that once the city took possession, the Utilities Commission stepped in and took full charge.

Mr. Matthews said the Commission had knowledge of the rates now charged the customers of the company. As for a possible change in the rates, he expressed the opinion that these rates would stand for at least a year. The Mayor expressed himself in a similar manner.

There will be some expenditures, including, according to the Commission's chairman, one thousand new metres.

SIR ADAM BECK

Some time ago, when the hydro-electric proposition was first taken up by the city Sir Adam Beck told Peterboro citizens that when the city was ready to do business, the Hydro-Electric Commission would supply the power. This was a puzzle for many of the ratepayers. But the city has finally started in business and Sir Adam has kept his word.

CASUALTIES AT SEA

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Sept. 24.—The Admiralty list of casualties among officers serving aboard the torpedoed cruisers contains 24 names from the Aboukir, 25 from the Cressy and 11 from the Hogue.

In the list of saved appear the names of Captain Drummond of the Aboukir and Captain Nicholson of the Hogue.

WILL BE SENT HOME

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Sept. 24.—It is announced officially from the Hague that British survivors of the cruisers Aboukir, Cressy and Hogue lost in the North Sea, at present being held by the Netherlands Government will be released and sent home.

IS ACQUITTED ON THEFT CHARGE

James Parcels, of Havelock, was this morning acquitted by His Honor Judge Huycke on the charge of stealing goods on May 19 from the storehouse of a junk dealer of that town. Two boys gave evidence to the effect that they saw Parcels in the building, lighting matches, and coming out with a bag. The owner of the storehouse was a Russian who has gone to war and therefore could not attend the trial. As no witness had seen Parcels with the goods, and no evidence was given to show that he had attempted to sell them, Judge Huycke decided that the evidence was insufficient to convict. G. N. Gordon acted for the accused, and Mr. Wearing for the crown.

German Trouble Maker Shells City of Madras

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Sept. 24.—A Madras despatch to the Reuter Telegraph Co., dated Wednesday, describes an attack of the German cruiser Emden on that port. It says: "The German cruiser Emden appeared off Madras Tuesday evening and shelled the city. Two oil tanks were set alight and are still burning.

"The telegraph office and some houses on our harbor were also hit, but the damage is slight. On our guns replying, the cruiser ceased firing, extinguished her lights and disappeared. The whole engagement lasted 15 minutes. There was little or no excitement, and only three Indians were killed."

LECTURES ON THE WAR.

A FEW DAYS AGO the Review suggested that the universities should utilize their extension department in regard to the present war. We suggested that co-operation between all the universities for this purpose would be desirable, and this may yet be done. We are glad to see that the University of Toronto has taken definite action in this regard. At a meeting held last Saturday President Falconer announced that the University of Toronto will offer the public courses of lectures dealing with the causes and effects of the present European war. The lectures are being arranged by the departments of history and political science, and societies throughout the province who desire the lecturers should apply to Dr. Abbott, secretary of university extension.

We trust that Peterborough will avail itself of this opportunity and arrange for as many lectures as possible. Care should be taken to eliminate overlapping, in case lecturers come from another university that has not made any arrangement with the University of Toronto. However, as men usually treat the subjects they discuss from an original standpoint, it would be no great defect if some repetition did take place. We think the Collegiate Assembly Room or some place of as good accommodation should be used for these lectures. There are several societies in this city devoted to literary or scientific interests, and they should co-operate so that no impediment would militate against the success of any lectures delivered here. Thus the evening devoted to a lecture should not be used for other meetings. The secretaries of these organizations should get together and communicate at once with the University of Toronto. We would like to see some prominent citizen act in this matter, because someone has to take the initiative and "start things going."

"COMMON SENSE FINANCING."

ST. PAUL, Minnesota, proudly claims to have found a broad, safe way out of municipal "money troubles" and an equally infallible method for sinking the spur of self-interest into the flank of a lethargic citizenship.

"Ten-dollar bonds" is the answer. Sold every day in the week, except Sunday, over the broad counter in the treasurer's office at the city hall! No favorites! First come, first served! Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded!

Since July 20, 1913, when the great idea blossomed, over one million dollars' worth of the $10 slips have been sold to the people. The real people: Newsboys, clerks, day laborers, struggling professional men—all that vast army of workers that lives in fear of a rainy day—make up the daily stream that flows in and out the doors of Treasurer Farnsworth's "store."

The thing is simplicity itself. Anyone able to read print can understand it. The "bonds," in reality, are participating-certificates, representing a $10 interest in a bond. They bear four per cent. interest, payable on the second day of January and July each year, and can be bought or cashed in any month or any minute. Over the counter hangs a great chart that shows to a penny just what a certificate is worth each day. A buyer puts down his $10 and as many cents as the accrued interest demands. When he sells he collects his principal and interest to date. The chart kills the mystery of bookkeeping absolutely.

It is difficult to tell which party to the arrangement is more delighted—the people or St. Paul. The city, for instance, is no longer forced to cool its heels in the antechambers of the bond-dealers or to sell securities below par. The individual investor supplies an insatiable market, and, best of all, the interest that used to go far, far away now stays at home.

As for the people's end of it, each certificate is a first mortgage on every building, park and street in the city, and a first lien on taxes. What bank can offer such security?

There is also the inducement that the certificates can be cashed in at any time without a second's warning. Savings-banks, as every one knows, have a way of demanding thirty or sixty days' notice of withdrawal in times of stress or panic, just when the agitated depositor is most in need of his money. They likewise persist in figuring interest on six-months periods only, so that a dollar banked in September does not begin to draw interest till the following January. The four per cent. interest on the "ten-dollar bonds" starts with the purchase and continues until the very minute of sale.

No red tape! Money on demand! Absolute security! No lost interest!

Excited and fired by success, St. Paul has thrown off its hobbles and is earnestly endeavoring to kick holes in the established horizon. With each new bond-issue, cut up into nice, inviting little $10 slices, absorbed by local purchase, what's to prevent the gradual acquisition of all outstanding securities, so that eventually the entire bonded indebtedness of the city will be owned by the citizens? For St. Paul to-day is paying almost $600,000 annual interest on bonds owned in Wall Street.

It was thought that the aggregate cash savings of the people constituted the largest amount of real money in the country. Massed in savings-banks and insurance companies, the hoards of the humble many make the ocean of credit upon which the mighty few launch their vast enterprises.

WHAT THE BOND ISSUE DEMANDED.

Quite obviously, local assimilation of a bond-issue demanded three things: bonds in no larger denomination that the average savings-bank deposit; their sale over a counter, just like butter and eggs; and the right to cash them without notice or loss of interest. Even then, however, the city could not be expected to twiddle its thumbs waiting for a quarter-million bond issue to be swallowed in $10 bites. Some benevolent middleman was necessary, and the final Johnson answer was the Sinking Fund Committee.

This local body, created to accumulate funds to pay the interest on the city's indebtedness and to retire bonds at maturity, has broad discretionary powers with regard to investments. Instead of letting this mass of money lie in banks at a low rate of interest, why not have the Sinking Fund Committee buy the proposed bond-issues, and then resell them to the people in small sums?

This was the idea that Colver spread out before Comptroller Handy, who, with Treasurer Farnsworth and Mayor Keller, constituted the Sinking Fund Committee of St. Paul. After looking it over from every angle, the three officials decided to take the plunge. Quite gingerly several small bond-issues were bought in, and the participating-certificates printed.

Although scarcely three days were allowed for publicity, there was a bargain-counter rush the moment the doors opened. Before the close of the first day the committee began buying more bonds, and also invested in $35 0,000 of the city's four per cent. tax-levy certificates.

There was ample need for these purchases, as the first three days saw the sale of $140,000 worth of the $10 slips and $83,000 of the tax-levy certificates. By December 1, more than $1,000,000 of the former and $2,400,000 of the latter had been sold over the treasurer's counter, making a total of three and a half millions of the obligation of St. Paul sold to citizens in four months. According to latest advices, the average daily sale is $5,000.

Of course the plan has met with opposition. The savings-banks don't like it, nor are the public-utility magnates pleased with something that points a way to municipal ownership. Litigation was threatened and every one expected a suit or injunction proceeding—that is, every one but the members of the Sinking Fund Committee. Not for nothing had these shrewd gentlemen inserted the following paragraph under the word "Conditions" on the back of each participating-certificate: "The Sinking Fund Committee reserves the right to recall, discharge, and cancel this certificate upon payment of principal and interest up to the date of retirement."

As simple as effective! If any certificate-holder should go to court, the committee can merely mail him a cheque and recall his certificate.

SOME CRITICISM.

The preceding article from Everybody's Magazine, is worthy of consideration. It should, however, be remembered that it is dealing with conditions as they exist in the United States, not Canada, and hence the argument does not necessarily meet the financial problems of Canadian cities. In the first place, the denominations appear too small, but would be popular in American cities. This popularity constitutes a serious danger, for members of the local municipal governments, realizing how popular they are and how easy it is to obtain money in this fashion, would be tempted to use it injudiciously, that is, to embark on too great or unnecessary expenditure. Then, local capital such as that relied on in this scheme, has narrow limitations, and, if it were ever exhausted, calamity would be a possibility, because, supposing there were a rush or panic to redeem or sell them, there would not be funds to meet it. It may be said that the nature of the certificates does not necessitate redemption before maturity, but, to keep them from falling in value, such would be a necessity. There is always this fact to remember, that a debt is a debt, an encumbrance on the resources of the municipality, no matter whether it is owed locally or to a foreign bond-house. The greater the debt, the heavier is the burden on the local tax rate, and, if municipalities are given a free hand, there is a tendency to spend more than their resources will allow. That occurred once in Canadian history, so that legislation had to be passed limiting the financial undertakings of municipal corporations. On the whole, we do not like the scheme proposed and would not recommend it as it stands. It tends to go beyond its purpose by replacing savings banks and by infusing into the circulation of money a kind of local media of exchange. Savings banks are a legitimate business, performing natural functions, and municipalities should not interfere with local business concerns by making their bonded debts interfere with banking business. The low denominations mentioned permit a certain amount of circulation which is foreign to the original object.

However, the idea could be applied with profit in this country. Certificates should be large enough to prevent exchanging from hand to hand like money. Dealings in this manner should be safeguarded and limited by law, so that municipal credit in this country would not be injured by over-indulgence.

War and Revolution.

(August Bebel, 1911.)

Our rulers think that the same enthusiasm will reveal itself, in a future war, as in 1870. They have made the calculation without the host, and the host are we. And we are getting more numerous every day. That we are making more and more socialist soldiers every day, is known to all the sparrows on the roof. The gentlemen above us may find this unpleasant, but it is so. We have whole regiments, whole brigades from the big towns. Inquire among the engineers, among the artillery, go wherever intelligence is needed, and you will find socialists. When once, in 1905, I referred Prince Buelow to these facts, and declared that behind every war in the future there lurks a revolution, he frankly admitted it and said, "That is precisely the reason we do not make it."

THE WEATHER

By Walt Mason

The weather still is free to all; to lordly baron in his hall, to tiller of the ground; the queenly dame has all she wants, and in the washerwoman's haunts there's weather by the pound. No greedy dealer can remark, "Alas! the prospect's pretty dark, with war in foreign states; our native weather won't suffice, and so we've had to raise the price three bucks per dozen crates." No trusts, to heap coin in their tills, can buy up smaller weather mills, and corner the supply; no Wall street pirates with their snares can cinch the weather unawares, and send the price sky high. We're paying more for cheese and bread, for meat and milk and melted lead, for all the things we wear; for coffins, codfish, corn and cakes, for raisins, rinktums, rags and rakes, for bear grease for our hair. We're paying more for all we use, for shaves, for sugar and shampoos, for rought on rats and rice; but still the good old weather's free, Dame Nature's gift to you and me—they cannot raise the price! What though all other boons may fail? What though we all may go to jail, as bankrupts, shorn of scads? No tyrant hand can from us wrest the blessing that we love the best—the weather of our dads!

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

THE FEE QUESTION.

Editor Review,

Sir,—The newspapers seem to hedge on the packing house inspection fee question. Several farmers came to me and complained that they had been charged fees at the packing-house to cover inspection and that Mr. Matthews had sent them to me for explanation. I wrote the minister. He replied at once that no one had a right to collect inspection fees for the government as they were not charged by the government. To reach the farmers it was necessary to go to the press. There is no need of anybody's trying to scare people by threats of legal proceedings in the matter. This is a matter of public concern and the complaints made were made by reputable men. All such matters must be investigated and they will be investigated so long as I have anything to do with representing either the people or the government.

Yours,
J. H. BURNHAM.

Russia's Successes.

PARIS, Sept. 24—A Havas Agency despatch from Petrograd says that the army journal publishes the following list of Russian captures in Galicia from Aug. 10 to Sept. 14:

Seven flags, 637 guns (of which 28 bore the initials of Emperor William), 44 machine guns, 823 cases of ammunition, one general, 435 officers and 63,631 soldiers.

IN TIMES OF WAR

"When England is at war, the Empire is at war."

The phrase trips lightly off the tongue. Yet how few amongst those who use it stop to consider its full significance.

More than one-fifth of the land surface of the globe, and above one-fifth of its population—21 per cent. and 22 per cent. respectively, to be precise—are included in this Empire of ours. The actual area is about 12,000,00 square miles, and its population is approximately 400,000,000. All these vast far-flung territories, every single one of these hundreds of millions of people, are open to attack once Great Britain goes to war.

The sea frontiers of the Empire, along which the enemy's warships are able to sail, and upon which, of course, it is possible for them to descend, extend 66,573 miles—considerably more than twice the circumference of the globe. The land frontiers, equally vulnerable to the enemy's armies, are 29,470 miles in length.

In addition, it must not be forgotten that half the shipping of the world flies the British flag, and all these harmless merchantmen are liable to capture by the enemy directly war is declared.

The German for submarine is "unterseeboot." Hence the U in U 15.

PLAN TO INVADE CANADA.

British Ambassador Spring-Rice Reports Proof of Scheme.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24. — Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, the British Ambassador, late yesterday submitted to the State Department what he characterized as documentary evidence of a plan on the part of a number of German organizations in Cincinnati and vicinity to invade Canada. The Ambassador is serious in his statement that these plans must be investigated, frustrated, and punished by the United States Government. Immediate steps to ascertain the truth of the rumor will be taken by the State Department, it was announced.

Secretary Daniels has again deferred action in the case of the radio station at Siasconset, which he has threatened to close for a violation of neutrality. Daguerre.

The inventor of the process of photography was Louis Daguerre, born at Cormeilles, France, in 1789. He was first employed painting scenes for the theatre, and while thus at work he discovered the method of representing night and day by the illumination of a transparent canvas painted on both sides. This was in 1822, but as early as 1814 Nicephore Niepce had made some experiments of photography on metal. In 1826 he and Daguerre became partners, but in a few years the former died, leaving Daguerre to develop the remarkable art. The French Government gave the medal of the Legion of Honor to the inventor of the daguerreotype.

Italian Deputy Ends Life.

VENICE, Sept. 24.—Guido Fusinato, a member of the Italian Chamber of Deputies, and formerly Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs, committed suicide here yesterday.

While visiting friends, he shot himself in the heart with a revolver, and died soon afterwards. Illness is ascribed as the reason for his act.

Signor Fusinato represented Italy at the last Hague Peace Conference.

Saved Treasures of Louvain.

BERLIN, Sept. 24. — (Via The Hague.) — The official report of the German art commission for Belgium states that all the art works and monumental buildings in Louvain and in Liege were saved. The only exceptions were the contents of the library building at Louvain.

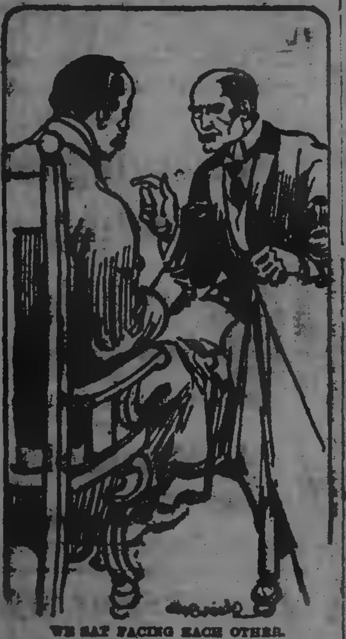
MY SHADOWER

An Exciting Episode in Mexico Under President Huerta

By JOHN TURNLE

I was a banker in the City of Mexico in the latter part of the Diaz regime during the revolution that deposed him and the one that raised Huerta to the dictatorship. It was soon after Huerta came to power that about $50,000 disappeared from the vaults of the bank with which I was connected. The best detectives in Mexico were put to work to find out who was the thief and what had become of the money, but they never succeeded in getting the slightest clew.

During the period when Huerta was acting as provisional president—that is, before he had declared himself dictator—I was a commercial traveler in northern Mexico. The Constitutional [illegible] were in possession of that part of the country, and traveling was dangerous. In the first place, the region [illegible] by robbers; in the second [illegible] was liable to be attacked [illegible] or rebels, and in the [illegible] from Mexico City ran [illegible] taken for a spy.



WE SAT FACING EACH OTHER.

[illegible] dinner one day at a hotel in Chihuahua, looking up suddenly, I met the gaze of a man bent on me intently. The moment I looked at him he dropped his eyes to his plate. Two or three times after that during the meal I looked at him just in time to catch him turning away his gaze. He did not look like a soldier or a fighter of any kind. He wore mutton chop whiskers and was bald on the top of his head.

I was fearful that I had seen him, or, rather, he had seen me, at the capital; that he was in sympathy with the rebel cause—the Constitutionalists held the place—and suspected me of being identified with the Huerta government. I arose from the table before I had finished my dinner in order to get away from him.

I was making for home, because on account of the troubled conditions of the country the selling of goods was out of the question, and left immediately for Santa Rosalia, about a hundred miles to the southward. There I stopped over to try to collect a debt. The day after my arrival I was looking out of a window when, on the other side of the street, I saw a figure suddenly emerge from behind a tree box. It was the man who had stared at me at Chihuahua.

I now became thoroughly alarmed. Either the man had spotted me for a spy and was dogging me with a view to turning me over to the rebel authorities or he was after several hundred pesos I had on my person. If the former was his object he would watch for his opportunity when near a band of rebels; if the latter, when he could get me alone, though I rather suspected, in this event, that he was in league with a band of robbers.

I was a long distance from Mexico City and despaired of getting through without giving the man his opportunity. We were constantly falling in with rebel troops, and I was at times obliged to move through lonely places. I was armed—every one in Mexico carried a revolver—but what use would weapons be to me against a band of rebels or robbers who quite often were both?

I left Santa Rosalia at midnight, hoping to elude my shadower, and instead of going by a direct route toward home I struck out for Parral. I thought it best to stop at the latter town for a day or two in the hope of losing my man and remained within doors most of the time. But the second evening of my stay there I went out on the street to get a little air, for the day had been intensely hot. Stopping to look into a shop window, who should I see inside but the man whom I was trying to get rid of. He was not purchasing anything, but was talking with the shopkeeper. I had no doubt that he was describing me and asking the man if he had seen me.

I slunk back to my hotel and went to my room.

I remained housed for three days; then, thinking that possibly I might have given my shadower the slip, I continued my journey. A week passed, during which I was moving slowly southward. I began to feel easier with regard to him, for it seemed that if he was still on my track I should have seen something of him. It was evident that he had lost me without having found an opportunity to turn me over to one of the rebel commanders or rob me. I was getting nearer all the while to federal territory, and if I could once get within it would feel comparatively safe.

I was doomed to disappointment. Tampico seemed for me the easiest point to reach, and from there I might go by sea to Vera Cruz. Both places were then in federal hands, but before I reached Tampico it was besieged by rebels. At Victoria I heard of the rupture between Huerta and the United States.

Puzzled as to what to do, I stopped where I was. I was in rebel territory and could not get into the federal lines. Foreign refugees were leaving Mexico when they could, and I was tempted to do the same. But I had lived a long while in the country, and if I were to go away from it I did not know how I would make a living.

I was walking through the town one day when suddenly I encountered my shadower face to face. On this occasion he seemed as much rattled at the meeting as I. He started, put his hand to his hip, thought better of the movement and did not draw his weapon. I followed his movements exactly.

"You villain!" I exclaimed. "Raise a finger against me and I will kill you."

"If you do my secret will be buried with me," he said, very much excited.

I gathered courage. For some reason, either because he was unaided or because we were on a public street, I seemed to have the advantage. I concluded to permit him to explain his object toward me if he would without betraying my ignorance of it. I glared at him and said nothing.

"I am ready to restore the whole amount," he said, "not that you could, in the present state of the country, compel me to do so or imprison me for the crime."

"Go on," I said without indicating that I did not know what he was talking about.

"The fact is," he continued, "that I have not had a moment's peace of mind since I took the money."

"That is the usual result with new criminals," I put in, still ignorant of what money he referred to.

"Not a cent has been wasted, not a cent spent. The bills are in packages just as they were taken from the safe."

A sudden light broke in on my dull brain. This man who I supposed had been shadowing me had considered me his shadower. Truly, a guilty conscience needs no accuser.

"Where are they?" I asked.

"I'll never tell until I am promised immunity from prosecution."

"Will you be content with such a promise from me?"

He thought awhile before replying to this, then said: "I suppose I'll have to be content. You were an official of the bank. In these times we can't choose our methods. My principal motive is to get the matter off my hands and off my conscience."

"Very well; so far as my promise of immunity goes I will give it, and I think it will be respected by the others concerned. If the whole amount taken is restored I am quite sure you will not need to fear prosecution."

"Come to my room and draw up the papers."

I went with him and, as we sat facing each other, listened to his recital as to how he came to take the money:

"One of the clerks in the bank was a friend of mine. I had been for years in the employ of a safe and lock company. The clerk suggested how easy it would be for him to admit me to the safe and for me to pick the lock and take enough money to make us rich. We both fell under the temptation. On pretense of being behind with his books he worked at night, took me in when no one but himself was there, and I opened the safe and took the money.

"I carried it northward, crossed the Rio Grande and buried it in a metal box in the state of Texas. The clerk who admitted me to the bank became panic stricken at what he had done and would not accept a cent of it. I dared not spend it, for I knew detectives were watching me, as they watched all intimate friends of the bank's force. And that's the reason why the secret service men never got on to who took the money. None of it was ever spent."

The man concluded by saying that he had known I was an officer of the bank and asked me to tell him how I had spotted him. Then I confessed that I was perfectly ignorant of his being the thief of the money lost until he told me that he was. But he was so relieved to get the matter off his mind that he did not regret the mistake.

After I had sworn to the man to keep the secret pertaining to himself and the clerk who had helped him we started together for the Texas border, crossed it in a lonely place on the north bank of the Rio Grande and dug up the stolen bills. I deposited the money, dividing it among several different Texas banks, and wrote those concerned on its return an account of the adventure by which I had discovered it.

I gave the man who had returned it funds for his immediate use from my own pocket, and he went I know not whither. My terror when I supposed I was in danger of my life was turned to amusement at the denouement, and the further I pass from the former the more I derive of the latter.

Continental English.

The idea that English is to be the universal language of the future seems to be spreading. Certainly thousands of Europeans struggle bravely with its rules and idioms. Here is a sample of the progress that has been made in one quarter. It is taken from the advertising matter that a large continental hotel publishes in the form of an elaborate illustrated booklet:

"Its spacious dimensions, exquisite comfort, elegant fashion of its furnishing, the unobjectionable prerogatives as to the produces of its kitchen and contents of its cellars, beside the distinguished managing, which, assisted by well experienced attendants, does its utmost in always duly treating—all this united already for many years past obtained a general renown, even abroad too."

Maubeuge Full of Spies.

PARIS, Sept. 24.—A resident of Maubeuge, who has just returned from that town, says that city during the siege was full of secret German agents. The French discovered a subterranean telephone which was being used by a German emissary to inform the German officers of the French dispositions. Every sortie of the garrison failed because the Germans were ready, having apparently been forewarned.

WOMAN'S BEST MEDICINE

Mrs. Kelly Advises all Women to Take "Fruit-a-Tives"

HAGERSVILLE, ONT., AUG. 26th. 1913.
"I can highly recommend "Fruit-a-tives" because they did me an awful lot of good and I cannot speak too highly about them. About four years ago, I commenced taking "Fruit-a-tives" for a general break-down and they did me a world of good. We bought a good many dollar's worth, but it was money well spent because they did all that you claim for them. Their action is so pleasant, compared with other laxatives, that I found only pleasure, as well as health, in taking them. They seemed to me to be particularly suited to women, on account of their mild and gentle action, and I trust that some other women may start taking "Fruit-a-tives" after reading my letter, and if they do, I am satisfied the results will be the same as in my own case".
MRS. W. N. KELLY

"Fruit-a-tives" are sold by all dealers at 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c, or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

IRVING'S HEAD.

Why the Spot That Washington Touched Could Not Be Seen.

Among Dr. George Haven Putnam's early recollections was a meeting with Washington Irving. He tells of it in his "Memories of My Youth." The Irving home was near Yonkers and the Putnam family occasionally visited their neighbors. Dr. Putnam remembers one Sunday afternoon when his father was busy arranging some of Mr. Irving's papers and the old gentleman took pains to give him some word about his own childhood. "His mother told him some years later, when he was old enough to be interested in historical events and personages, that when he was a year old the nurse, taking him out in his baby carriage, saw at the corner of Broadway General Washington passing by on horseback. The nurse, holding up the little boy, called out to the general that here was a boy that had been named after him, and she hoped that the general would be willing to give the boy his blessing.

"Little Washingtons were not so plenty in 1784 as they became in later years, and the general was quite ready to delay his ride for the purpose of giving a greeting to his little namesake. He took the boy up on the saddle and, placing his hand upon the little one's head, gave him a formal blessing. I looked up with interest at the head that had been touched by Washington, and then found myself perplexed at Mr. Irving's word that I should not see the spot on which the general's hand had rested.

"I spoke to my father afterward about the incident, and he said, 'Why, you stupid, don't you know that Mr. Irving wears a wig?' "

EMPEROR PENGUINS.

Very Ceremonious They Are With Their Bows and Speeches.

In Sir Ernest Shackleton's "The Heart of the Antarctic" there is a chapter by James Murray, the biologist of the expedition, on those queer creatures, the penguins. The following is an extract:

"Their resemblance to human beings is always noticed. This is partly due to their habit of walking erect, but there are truly a great many human traits about them. They are the civilized natives of these regions.

"Emperor penguins are very ceremonious in meeting other Emperors or men or dogs. They come up to a party of strangers in a straggling procession, some big, important, aldermanic fellow leading. At a respectful distance from the man or dog they halt, the old male waddles up and bows gravely till his beak almost touches his breast. Keeping his head bowed, he makes a long speech in a muttering manner, short sounds following in groups of four or five. Having finished the speech, the head is still kept bowed a few seconds for politeness' sake, then it is raised, and he looks in your face to see if you have understood. If you have not comprehended, as is usually the case, he tries again. He is very patient with your stupidity.

"Their most solemn ceremonies were used toward the dogs, and three old fellows have been seen calmly bowing and speaking simultaneously to a dog, which, for its part, was yelping and straining at its chain in the effort to get at them."

Everything For the Best.

"I can't bear that man."

"Why?"

"He bores me with his lies."

"You don't know what he knows; that is the reason you are bored."

"What's that got to do with it?"

"If he told the truth he would be horridly disagreeable as well."

Couldn't.

"My bread just won't rise," complained the disheartened wife who was trying to make her first loaf.

"Perhaps the price of wheat has fallen," suggested her logical minded husband.

TEA CADDIES.

No Table Is Complete Without One o These Attractive Articles.

The tea caddy is a most important adjunct of the tea table, for unless the container of the tea is tightly closed the aroma will quickly escape. China caddies to match tea sets are always liked, but they and the silver caddies usually have single covers which do not close tight.

Japanese pewter caddies beautifully hand wrought are among the very practical ones that look well with any fittings. They have double covers, the inner one sitting into the top by the pressure of the air and the outer sitting out around the rim and also closing by the pressure of the rim.

They cost from $3 to $8 and hold from a quarter to a half pound. But even with these a small quantity of tea should be bought at a time.

Tea deteriorates with time in the best of receptacles. It should always be kept in a cool, dry place.

And on Washday, Too!

Giving Birds a Chance.

If man's instinct as a hunter could have been diverted from birds to insects the history of economic affairs, and especially of agriculture, would have been very different. But he has continued killing birds, not merely as a sport, but often for greedy traffic, long after the need to do so passed away. The time has come when governments must take serious thought for the protection of bird life in order that plant life on which human sustenance depends may not be jeopardized and destroyed.

Culinary Notes

The Ice Supply.

It is much more injurious to food to keep it in a refrigerator with a scant supply of ice than to leave it covered on a pantry shelf where there is a good supply of fresh air. If one must be economical with ice wrap each cake in a piece of old woolen blanket, which must be removed and boiled in water and baking soda once a week.

Useful Hint.

If you will take freshly gathered green corn on the cob or carefully shelled peas or beans and dip them in boiling water, then dry them in a room in which there is a free circulation of air, they will keep for a long time and retain much of their freshness and flavor.

When a kettle is badly burned, do not fill it with water, but set it aside to cool; then put in a handful of washing soda and water and allow it to boil for an hour or more.

A cupful of vinegar added to the water in which colored clothes are washed will often prevent the color from running.

Add a few crumbs of bread to scrambled eggs. This will improve the dish and make the eggs go further.

"WANT AD"

The "want ad." has grown from a little used force in business life into one of the greatest necessities of the present day.

Business men nowadays turn to the "want ad." as a matter of course for a hundred small services.

The "want ad." gets work for workers and workers for work.

It gets clerks for employers and finds employers for clerks. It brings together buyer and seller, and enables them to do business though they may be thousands of miles apart.

The "want ad." is the great force in the small affairs and incidents of daily life.

CHOLERA OUTBREAK

Among the Wounded in the Austrian Army

VIENNA, Sept. 24.—(Via Paris.)—Nine cases of Asiatic cholera have been discovered among wounded soldiers in Hungary, according to an official announcement by the Hungarian Minister of the Interior. The announcement has excited great apprehension throughout the dual monarchy.

It is learned here that the first suspected case of cholera in Hungary was that of a wounded soldier who was brought on Sept. 15 to Bekescsaba from the Galician battlefield. The bacteriological examination clearly showed Asiatic cholera.

Both Austrian and Hungarian Ministers of the Interior are taking the utmost precautions against a spread of the disease.

GERMANS HAVE LOST ELEVEN MILES IN THE BATTLE OF THE AISNE

Military Experts Expec. a General German Retreat Within the Week But French War Office Advises Patience Because of Strong Entrenchments of the Enemy—Wednesday's Fighting Severe.

PARIS, Sept. 24. — Gen. Joffre, the commander-in-chief of the French army, is devoting much attention to the western wing on the battle line, where the fighting has been incessant night and day. The allies, since the beginning of the battle of the Aisne, havo pushed back the Germans a distance of nearly 11 miles, forcing them to seek a further defensive position on the plateaus and in the rough country, which, however, offer excellent opportunities for entrenchment. Despite these advantages, however, the German army is losing ground at nearly every point and military experts express the conviction that before the week is out another great retreat of the German armies will be in progress.

The Headquarters' Staff has been enabled to make a long movement forward towards the north. The town of Soissons has been subjected to a furious German bombardment for nine days. The cannonade starts each day at dawn, and continues until eight o'clock in the morning. It then ceases, and begins again at four o'clock, continuing until seven in the evening. The cathedral and other buildings have been greatly damaged.

The German artillery is posted to the northeast of the town, while the French guns occupy an emplacement to the southeast. There appears no necessity for the shells to fall on the town itself, as the French troops are stationed a considerable distance from it.

Noyon is also suffering from the German gun fire, but the fine cathedral up to the present has escaped.

Yesterday's advance of the allied troops entailed very severe fighting, in which the artillery played a large part. The combat had lasted for twenty-four hours, but eventually the Germans yielded ground after sustaining a large number of casualties. The allies were also heavy losers. Many ambulance trains have left the front for provincial cities, carrying German and French wounded.

The French official communication after announcing that there has been no change in the situation on the battlefront since the issuance of the previous communication, makes some comments on the battle of the Aisne.

The text of the announcement is as follows:

"There has been no change in the situation since the last communication.

"The battle which is in progress along the Aisne has extended over eight days but it should cause no surprise, if one recalls the Russo-Japanese war.

"The battle of the Marne was an action undertaken in the open field which began with a general resumption of tho offensive by the French army against the enemy, who did not expect it and had not had time seriously to organize defensive positions.

"The same cannot be said of the battle of the Aisne where the adversary who was retreating, stopped and took possession which, by the nature of the ground are very substantial in themselves in many places and which he has been able gradually to improve as to organization.

"This battle of the Aisne therefore presents, on a large part of its front, the character of war by assault similar to the operations in Manchuria.

"It might be added that the exceptional power of the artillery facing each other—the heavy German artillery against the French 7.5 centimeter cannons—gives a particular value to the temporary fortifications which the two adversaries have drawn up.

"The task is therefore to take whole rows of entrenchments, each one protected by very close defences, particularly rows of barbed wire, with mitrailleuses in concealed positions.

"In these circumstances progress of necessity must be slow. It often happens that the progress of the attacks only amount to from 500 meters to one kilometer a day."

RUSSIANS WILL NOT STOP TO TAKE AUSTRIAN FORTRESS

Official Bulletin From Petrograd States That Russians in Pursuit of Enemy Have Reached Veschloky—Jaroslau Was Taken at the Point of the Bayonet—Germans Retreat Northward From Miawa.

PETROGRAD, Sept. 24. — The Russian general staff has issued the following:

"In continuing the pursuit of the retreating Austrians the Russian troops have reached Veschloky.

"In the region of Przemysl the operations of the Russians are progressing with success.

"Upon the German front the Russian troops are in close contact with the enemy, but no battle has yet taken place."

Jaroslau was carried at the point of the bayonet and not surrendered as at first reported, according to latest advices from the front. The Russian hosts advanced irresistably and literally overwhelmed their opponents, although the Austrians succeeded in destroying a good part of the two years' supply of munitions which the fortress contained. Despite this, however, valuable captures were made.

The Russian War Office states that many members of the Landwehr corps are surrendering, believing that they are being sacrificed by their commanders in order to preserve intact the first line corps. A large part of these corps are also Slavs and they show decided disinclination to fight the Russians. Dysentery is likewise taking a terrible toll in the Austrian ranks, on account of poor sanitary arrangements and inferior food supplies.

Przemysl will not be carried by attack, but masked with a sufficient number of troops to permit the advance on Cracow, as the Russian field forces are sufficiently large to spare this force. In fact the armies are said to be greatly in excess of the number required for present operations. The River San is being bridged by the Russians and a forward movement continues all along the line.

Germans In Retreat.

LONDON, Sept. 24.—A despatch to the Exchange Telegram Co. from Petrograd says that German columns which, in considerable strength, crossed the Russian frontier at Miawa on Sept. 20, have retreated northwards.

It is reported, says the correspondent, that the German troops in the fortified towns on the left bank of the Vistula, on the frontier between Thorn and Kalish, have received large reinforcements. The valley of the River San contains quantities of valuable booty taken by the Russians.

The Germans are said to be massing their troops at Kovno for a strong offensive movement. They have withdrawn large forces from Russian Poland.

Servians Route Austrians.

NISH, Servia, Sept. 24. — The following statement has been given out; "After a nine days' struggle the Austrians, whose wings both have been beaten completely, are in full retreat along the whole front from Liubevie to Loanites. The Servians are pursuing them strongly. Servian columns from Vishegrad and Baina Bashta continue their progress into the interior of Bosnia."

BELGIANS ON THE MARCH

Are Reported to Have Attacked the Enemy at Brussels

LONDON, Sept. 24.—The London Daily Telegraph in a despatch from its correspondent at the Belgian army headquarters says:

"Once more the gallant Belgian army is in the field. Several divisions emerged on Tuesday, from the ramparts of Antwerp in a sortie against the German army corps based on Brussels. It is premature yet to give details of the localities, but I may mention that with the mixed column of artillery, infantry and cavalry, I found myself yesterday well on the road to Brussels. All along the line the Belgians are in touch with the enemy, still holding much the same front — Melines, Tirlemont, Louvain —as during the last four days of battle, when large German forces were kept busy and prevented from reinforcing the army in France. The advance guard of the column which I accompanied exchanged shots with German outposts on the main road only thirteen miles from the capital.

A despatch to the Central News from Antwerp says:

"Fifteen hundred Germans arrived this morning at Ath, 15 miles northwest of Mons, Belgium, coming from France.

"The outskirts of Brussels have everywhere been mined and strongly entrenched. The entire German garrison has left for Ath, Tournai and the adjacent districts, where barricades also have been erected to prevent the Belgians falling on the Germans should the Germans be compelled to retreat from France."

PEKIN, Sept. 24. — The Chinese Government has replied to the protest of Germany against the landing of Japanese troops in China, disclaiming responsibility for the violation of her neutrality, which, she says, she is unable to defend.

AN ARREST IS EXPECTED

Police Have New Evidence Favoring Dr. Robinson

NAPANEE, Ont., Sept. 24.—After five hours deliberation in which the evidence of seven witnesses was heard the grand jury on the case of Dr. Clifford K. Robinson, the young Kingston physician, who stands charged with the murder of Blanche L. (Happy) Yorke, of Tamworth, returned a true bill yesterday afternoon.

The case was enlarged to the spring assizes to allow the defence time in which to secure additional evidence which T. C. Robinette, K.C., calculates will clear the physician of blame in connection with the young woman's death.

It is authoritatively stated that the defence next spring will be that Dr. Robinson did not know the woman's body was buried in his cellar, and as proof it will be pointed out that the severing of the limbs from the trunk was undoubtedly the work of an amateur and not of a practiced physician.

It is expected that another sensational arrest will be made in connection with this case as a result of some new evidence secured by the police.

Wilson Adheres To Position.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24. — President Wilson yesterday refused to change his attitude toward the Colorado strike situation, and indicated that the mine operators must accept the basis of settlement already agreed to by the miners or stand responsible before the country for the result.

It was said at the White House last night that the President will stand behind the original plan of settlement, which was drawn up by a mine operator and a miner named by Secretary of Labor Wilson.

British Moratorium To End.

LONDON, Sept. 24.—After lengthy consultation with the interests concerned the Government has decided that this is the time to bring the present moratorium to an end with as little delay as possible. No further extension of the moratorium in so far as bills of exchange, obligations in retail trade, rents, etc., are affected, will be made. The moratorium applies to debts of other kinds until Nov. 4, when it will come to a definite end.

TEMPER OF THE CZAR'S PEOPLE

Big Contrast to Indifference When at War With Japan

A feature of the world struggle is the serious and exalted temper of the Russian people—an utter contrast to the indifference or aversion with which they regarded the war with Japan. That was an adventure into which the government blundered in carrying out a policy in which the people took no interest ; this is a fight of the people. The wonderful scene at Moscow at the opening of hostilities showed that "the most religious people in Europe" entered upon the war as upon an act of religion. After the war had been in progress about three weeks the well-informed Petrograd correspondent of the London Morning Post made some striking remarks :—

A Wave of Sobriety.

The term during which all the drink shops of every class in Russia were closed under mobilization orders expires a week today. The extraordinary sobriety witnessed throughout this period inspires reformers with the hopes that the people may be brought to realize its advantages. It must be understood that this sobriety is less due to the mere closing of the drink shops, which has always been done before without materially affecting drunkenness, than to the sudden consciousness of the people themselves that in the face of a great national crisis the sacrifice is just and right. Upon this consciousness the reformers build, and the Government proposes to extend the absolute prohibition of the sale of alcohol for another month. The new police orders forbid the serving of drink even in restaurants except as an acompaniment of food, and absolutely prohibits its sale in bottles for taking away or the supply of persons who have had enough already. All places trading in alcohol in any form are shut and sealed, and new supplies can be got only on the production of a police certaficate.

The enormous revenue from the drink monopoly, which amounted in 1913 to $400,000,000, is by far the largest item in the Russian Budget, but it is recognized that even its total sacrifice would be rapidly compensated by the increased earning power of the whole nation. There have been no cases of hooliganism, knifing, robbery with violence, and only a dozen ordinary thefts. During the whole period only eight cases of drunkenness have been detained. The hospitals alone usually have several score of cases of delirium tremens, while the ordinary cases of drunkenness are beyond estimation, as they are merely flung into the cells and released when sobered. During the mobiliation there have been only five cases in the Hospital of the Incurables, who made themselves mad by drinking methylated spirits, furniture polish, and similar ? HTH

TO CONVOY CONTINGENT

British Fleet Commander Arrives at Valcartier

VALCARTIER CAMP, Sept. 24.—Admiral Wemyss, commander of a fleet of British battleships, cruisers, and other craft, came to the camp yesterday and was in conference with the Minister of Militia with reference to convoying the troopships which will carry the Canadian expeditionary force to England. It was said that the British fleet consists of 20 ships. The route to England is absolutely clear and there is no possible danger of interference by German cruisers. Any of the enemy's ships that may be in the Atlantic are bottled up along the seaboard.

The soldiers are still in training at Valcartier, contrary to numerous rumors to the effect that they are now on their way to Ireland. When the force will leave it is impossible to say. Drilling of a strenuous nature was carried on yesterday as usual.

The big guns of the artillery roared during the afternoon while shells were being tested on the mountain side. The field artillery carried out a tactical scheme with great success.

REVENUE CUTTER IS WRECKED

SEATTLE, Wash., Sept. 24.—The United States revenue cutter Tahoma is a total loss on a reef ninety miles west of Kiaka Island, in the Aleutian Chain, according to wireless advices received here early yesterday. Her crew of nine officers and sixty-three men was taken off by the steamer Senator, bound from Seattle to Nome.

In making jam from half to three quarters of a pound, instead of one pound of sugar will be found sufficient if the jam is boiled a few moments longer.

Several weeks the Germans have waited to revenge their heavy loss in Heligoland Bay. And it would be unwise for the British navy to start out right on the spur of the moment to revenge their recent heavy loss when the German navy is right on the alert, and expecting an attack any moment. In all probability when it is least expected the British navy will strike back.

First Anniversary of Bishop O'Brien at St. Peter's Cathedral

His Lordship Bishop O'Brien, D.D., celebrated his first anniversary of his elevation to the episcopate, this morning at St. Peter's cathedral, by singing pontifical high mass. Monsignor Casey, of Lindsay, was high priest; Very Rev. Dean McColl, deacon; Rev. Father O'Sullivan, of Port Hope, subdeacon; and Rev. Father Phelan, chancellor of the diocese, master of ceremonies.

The cathedral was filled to overflowing, the majority being children of the separate schools of the city. The communicants were exceedingly numerous. Bishop O'Brien made a few remarks in reference to the good feeling that had existed since his appointment to the bishopric, and hoped that it would still continue.

The short ends of candles melted and mixed with equal parts of turpentine make a fine polish for hardwood floors.

In mixing pudding or cake with a wooden spoon, beat the mixture with the back of the spoon. It is far easier and the material becomes beautifully light in half the time.

REGISTER IF OUT OF WORK

Three Days for Registration at Council Chamber

A systematic effort is being made by the Industrial Association of Ontario, a branch of which is being formed in Peterborough, to, so far as possible, keep Canadians busy. The aim of the association is to provide remunerative employment as opposed to direct relief to the unemployed, "Work not charity" is the motto it has adopted.

Accurate information is required in each municipality of the extent of unemployment from time to time and the causes of such unemployment in order that an earnest endeavor may be made to better industrial conditions in the province generally. It is confidently expected that important industrial centres like Peterborough will benefit considerably through this association.

To make the scheme a success it is absolutely necessary that each person in this city out of work register at once at the city council chamber, Simcoe Street, which will be open for registrations for three days, Friday to Monday, September 25th, 26th and 28th, from 10 a.m. to 12 noon and from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m. Any person not able to come personally may send a member of his family to obtain a registration card.

BLIND PIGS IN HAVELOCK?

Citizens Are Asking for a General Clean up

From what we have been able to gather from rumors, Havelock bids fair to lose its name of observing the law in regard to "blind piggeries," says the Standard. Recent convictions for drunkenness, and the knowledge that other cases are pending, go to show that the law is being broken very frequently of late in this respect, and fair minded citizens are asking for a general clean up by the Department. The action of the License Department or the License Inspector, in hiring Wm. Parcels to do detective work, is not generally commended by our citizens who are conversant with Parcels' reputation, or the value of his oath.

Train Service Changes

Effective Monday, Sept. 21st, the morning train for Lakefield will leave at 7.00 a.m. instead of 8.35 a.m. and morning train from Lakefield will arrive Peterboro 8.05 a.m. instead of 9.50 a.m.

Effective Monday, Sept. 28th train service between Lindsay and Haliburton will be changed as follows. Train now leaving Lindsay at 8.20 p.m. will be cancelled and new train will leave Lindsay 2.40 p.m. running through to Haliburton returning leave Haliburton 6.00 a.m. arrive Lindsay 8.50. a.m.

FRUIT DEALER IS FINED $100

Pleaded Guilty to Selling Liquor Without License

Before Magistrates Joyce, Mathison and Duff at Havelock, Mike Farda, a fruit dealer pleaded guilty to selling liquor without a license and was fined $100 and costs or in default thirty days in jail. He was given five days to pay the fine.

W. H. Moore, K.C., acted for the license department, and G. N. Gordon defended.

Says the Standard: The witness against the defendant was Wm. Parcels of town, who swore he purchased a drink of gin from Farda on Friday night last, and that he was promised $5 by Constable Post for helping to obtain the evidence. Constable Post corroborated Parcels' evidence, having witnessed the sale through the back window of Farda's store. The Constable also swore that Farda gave him a drink of Scotch whiskey on Saturday morning when he went there to serve him with the summons, and that the $5 Parcels was to get was to be paid by License Inspector Williams, who had also engaged Parcels for detective work on another similar case, the details of which have not yet been completed. Mr. Moore wanted a charge made against Farda for allowing liquor to be consumed on his premises, but Mr. Gordon succeeded in pursuading the authorities to forego additional charges providing that he pleaded guilty on the original count.

RELIEF COMMITTEE GIVES OFFICER $200 TO AID THE NEEDY

The Relief Committee met in a short session yesterday afternoon. Relief Officer Miller presented his weekly report showing that $179 had been utilized for charity purposes during the past week. Most of the money had been given out in small amounts such as three, four and five dollars. The meeting decided to furnish Mr. Miller with $200 for the coming week. The Mayor reported that the Toronto Savings and Loan Co. had made a donation of $1000 to the fund for which the committee expressed its gratification.

THE CLEARING HOUSE

The following statistics were today given out by the manager of the clearing house:

Total week ending Sept. 24, $440,821.

Previous week, $411,966.

Corresponding week last month, $367,968.

WOMEN'S WAR FUND

There will be a meeting of the Women's War Fund Committee, tomorrow, Friday, Sept. 25th, in the recreation room of the Armouries at 4 p.m. sharp. Will every member of the committee kindly be present?

SUSPECTS ARE GIVEN LIBERTY

No Evidence to Connect Them With Assault

Louis Derry and James Wallace were let go in today's police court on the charge of having assaulted Mr. J. Cook, of Westwood, while he was passing through a lonely spot driving his cattle to pasture. Evidence required to convict them had not been found by County Constable Dickson of Westwood. Both men said they had been looking for work on the Trent Canal, but were unable to get any. Percy said he came from Quebec and Wallace originally came from Dundee, Scotland. They were dismissed on the understanding that they would leave the city immediately.

E. J. Levis and Wm. Nelson were charged with keeping a house of ill-fame on Brock Street. Levis was present and pleaded not guilty to the charge. Bertha Green was charged with being an inmate of the house and pleaded guilty. The case was remanded until Wednesday, September 30th., for future investigation.

BAND CONCERT

The patriotic band concert to be held in the armouries to-morrow night at 8 o'clock, under the auspices of the women's committee of War Fund, will undoubtedly be an exceedingly fine entertainment. The three bands, the 57th Regimental, the Salvationists and the Bugle band, will take part, as well as several vocalists. A silver collection will be taken up.

The three bands will assemble in the 57th band room on Simcoe street at 7.30 and march to the armouries, playing Semper Fidelis.

TRIBUTE BY AMERICAN SOCIALIST

The Cause is at Stake in Present Conflict he Says

An American Socialist, Mr. Charles Edward Russell, has addressed the following letter to Mr. H. M. Hyndman, the Chairman of the Socialist Party in Great Britain. The letter was written at the Hague and dated August 23rd:—

Dear Comrade Hyndman:— I was delighted to have your most kind fraternal, letter, and to see that your perception of things was not astray about the present situation. I should have known it. Some of the comrades seem to be strangely muddled. The cause of Socialism, as well as the cause of political democracy, good faith, national honour, morality, and everything else that decent men care for, is at stake in this horrible conflict. If the principle should once be established that big nations should have no obligations to respect their solemn guarantees to small nations, there would come such a flood of reaction and of the supremacy of mere brute strength as would overwhelm us for years. Socialism is true, right and moral; it can have no tolerance of international brigandage such as Germany practised on Belgium. If nations may violate faith shall individuals be any better?

I am not fond of the Government of Great Britain, but I confess that I do not see, in the main, how it could have done otherwise. Let any doubter read the correspondence; that seems to me conclusive. I acknowledge also, that in times gone by I have been in error about the British armament. If it were not for the British navy today we should be at the mercy of the bandittit of Berlin, and civilization would go backward four hundred years, and remain there for the rest of this generation. Great Britain stands between us and a catastrophe beyond description. So long as we have the conditions that produced this war we must remember that a part of these conditions is the necessity of being prepared to repel the assaults of capitalistic savagery. I am glad to read your analysis, and to note your faith in the eventual triumph of righteousness. Here, at times, we are overwhelmed with news that almost makes us doubt. Still, it cannot be that the world is to be overshadowed by a cloud so dark. But these are sadly trying times. I cling to the hope that before we are through with this ordeal men will become so utterly sick of slaughter that they will be willing to consider the source of war and ready to eliminate it for ever.

With best wishes, yours fraternally,

CHARLES EDWARD RUSSELL.

Claimed Advantage for PETERBORO Secured by C. B. Routley

Last January we placed large import orders with our European potters for crockery and china ware. We have now during the past month received the goods, at prices lower than any previous buy, and we intend that not one farthing's worth of goods will be raised in price. You will find, as usual, that our prices will stand any competition that you can put up against us. If you want a Dinner Set, Tea Set, Chamber Set, Lamp or China Ware, Wall Paper, etc., our prices must surely appeal to you.

15 only 97-piece Dinner and Tea Set combined, each piece perfect, per set $6.95

10 Dinner Sets, 97 pieces, each piece with gold line enameled decorations, per set $9.85

5 China Sets, 97 pieces, with gold handles. Kermis shaped cups, pink rose decoration, per set $15.95

Now is the time of year that we take for clearing out our Wall Paper. Look at our south window for ridiculous price cutting.

TALES TOLD BY SOLDIERS FROM THE BATTLEFIELDS

A stalwart chap of the Cheshire, relating his war experiences, said:

"Our Cheshire chaps were also badly cut up. Apart from the wounded, several men got concussion of the brain by the mere explosions. It was awful! Under the cover of their murderous fire, the German infantry advanced to within three and five hundred yards of our position. With that we were given the order to fix bayonets, and stood up for the charge. That did it for the German infantry! They turned tail and ran for their lives.

"Our captain cried out, 'Now you've got 'em, men!' But we hadn't. Their artillery begins with that to fire more than ever, and before we could almost think what to do, fresh lots of the 'sausages' came along, and we had to beat a retreat.

"During the retreat one of our sergeants was wounded and fell. With that our captain runs back and tries to lift him. As he was doing so he was struck in the foot and fell over. We thought he was done for, but he scrambles up and drags the sergeant along until a couple of us chaps goes out to help 'em in. You should have seen his foot when he took his boot off—I mean the captain. It wasn't half smashed."

A Living Screen.

In a leter to relatives at Jarrow, James Scott, reservist, in Netley hospital, states that the British soldiers at Mons dropped like logs. Germans were shot down as they came up, but it was like knocking over beehives—a hundred came up for every one knocked down. The Germans were the worst set of men he had ever seen. Their cavalry drove women and children in front of them in the streets of Mons so that the British could not fire.

In the Trenches.

One British aviator had both legs broken.

"I shall be ready for work again before the war is over," he said, in reply to my enquiries.

In fact, that was his one anxiety.

One of our men told me that we played a trick on the Germans which the British learnt in the Boer war. The enemy, before sending on their infantry to attack the position, opened with a terrific artillery fire. This was on Tuesday; our force was retiring—"by orders," emphasized my informant.

"Well," he went on, "our artillery suddenly began to drop. One by one the guns gave out barking.

"'What's up now?' I said to——

"A few more minutes of heavy firing from the other side, then their infantry came on in solid formation. We received them with rifle fire. Still they came on; still we mowed them down.

"They were getting closer; we could see the dense masses moving.

"Then suddenly the whole of our artillery opened fire. You see, they had not been silenced at all. It was a trick to draw the Germans on.

"They went down in whole fields, for our guns got them on the open ground, and, of course, they soon had enough. It was impossible for those behind to come on past their dead.

"Then the order came to fall back to another position. We don't like this falling back, but you can't get all you want in this world."

I spoke to another of our men. He knew nothing.

"All I know was dust, heat, sweat and thunder."

"What did you do?" I asked.

"Oh, I just plugged in the cartridges and pumped them out into the Germans.

"It was rather curious," he went on, warming up to the tale; "you found yourself firing at, say, one man, and you saw a hundred go down. You could not tell what you hit; but no one seemed to miss, judging by the massacres that kept happening.

"I got a slight wound, but knew nothing about it—felt nothing, until a man next to me says, 'Don't give it all to me, Fred.'

"Then I saw I was bleeding a bit."

"What is the one dominant feeling the first time you are under fire?"

"Mine was thirst," he said simply, "and I think that was general. You see, all them guns suck up the air, and ———, who is scientific, explained to me that the hot guns and the shells draw all the moisture out of the air, too. So it can't be helped," he added cheerfully.

"Cool Drollery."

"Ah! It is the cool drollery of your men that is just splendid," said a French officer who had been on the right of our position and had been part of the force driven in upon the British right flank. "Just splendid," he kept repeating. "There is nothing in the world like it.

"Three of your soldiers argued about the merits of Gunboat Smith—then they stop and fire steadily, laughingly. When the 'cease fire' sounds, then they begin again on Gunboat Smith.

"I said to one, 'We shall beat the Germans nearer Paris and finally rout them.' 'Why not do it here,' he said to me, 'and save us and them walking all that distance?'

"Several of your men asked me if they would see Paris when they finished off the Germans. If I live they shall come I have their names and addresses and they will be the honored guests in my house."

AUTOMAT BEATS MAN.

Mechanical Chess Player Can Make Competitor Keep to the Rules.

Is the day near at hand when science will be able to create a human being? This question may well be asked when one considers the latest invention of that king of automat inventors Senor Torres y Quevedo, member of the Spanish Academy of Sciences. Senor Torres caused a sensation some thirty years ago by inventing a machine which would solve algebraic equations. Then he invented a balloon which would direct itself and could attain a speed as great as the fastest Zeppelins.

The latest product of this wonderful laboratory, says a Paris dispatch, is a machine which plays chess and which seems actually to accomplish the work of a human brain. Senor Torres thus describes his own invention:

"It is true that the game which the automat plays is not very complicated, but, nevertheless, for its opponent to win he must know how to play. The automat uses the white king against the castle and the black king. Its game is won in advance, but it must follow a certain course which leads it up to the finish.

"When the automat's opponent moves the black king the automat begins by seeing if the movement conforms with the rules of the game. If not it protests by lighting a lamp. If the move is according to the rules the automat, taking into account the position of the three pieces decides what is the best move and then makes it. Thus the game continues until the automat has checkmated the black king.

If the automat's opponent should make a mistake, as I said before, the automat protests by lighting a lamp. But it will tolerate only three mistakes. Then all its lights go out, and you may move your pieces as much as you want—the automat has finished. If you wish to begin a new game you invite the automat by a special movement to play another game. If it accepts it will turn out all its lights, place its pieces on the board in their original positions, then wait for you to make the first move.

"The old automats, the most celebrated of which were those of Vaucanson, imitated the appearance and the movements of man. To-day this idea has been abandoned, and intricate machines, which look like nothing but machines, have taken their places. The self directing torpedo is a good example of an automat. The difficulty does not lie in the work of its helmsman, but in the determination of the movement to be executed. The machine deduces this movement from indicators by purely mechanical means. This, as in the calculating machines, is the brainwork of the man that the machine accomplishes.

"It is not to be denied that automats can have sensitive organs (monometers, thermometers, compasses, etc.,) permitting them to recognise the circumstances which determine their movements, but science refuses to admit that they can possess the analogue of a brain. But I believe I have shown that this possibility theoretically does not offer the least doubt. Automats can be made as complicated as one may wish."

Two Story Lake In Mexico.

One of the wonders of Mexico is the salt producing lake near Salinas station on the Tampico division of the Mexican Central Railway, 72 miles west of San Luis Potosi. It may well be termed a two storey lake, for at times there is a lake of fresh water overlying the salt lake. A water tight roof of green mud separates the fresh from the salt water. For a large part of the year there is no fresh water lake there. The sun licks it up soon after the rainy season is over. The salt secured from this lake goes all over Mexico. The lake has been worked about 65 years. The whole town of 5,000 people makes its living from the salt.

SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Lesson XIII.—Third Quarter, For Sept. 27, 1914.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, John iii, 14-21 (Quarterly Review)—Golden Text, Rev. iii, 11—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

LESSON I.—The Laborers in the Vineyard, Matt. xx, 1-16. Golden Text, Matt. v, 45, "He maketh His sun to rise on the evil and the good and sendeth rain on the just and the unjust." He compares His people Israel to a vineyard in Isa. v and is grieved because they disappoint Him in the matter of fruit. Here it is a question of labor and reward. Many are mere hirelings and serve Him for so much. Better leave it all to Him.

LESSON II.—Greatness Through Service, Mark x, 32-45. Golden Text, Mark x, 45, "The Son of Man also came not to be ministered unto, but to minister and to give His life a ransom for many." While He talked of suffering they thought only of position in His Kingdom. When Peter asked Him not to think of suffering He said that savored of man and Satan, not of God (Matt. xvi, 23). Let us lay it well to heart.

LESSON III.—Blind Bartimaeus, Mark x, 46-52. Golden Text, Isa. xxxv, 5, 6, "Then the eyes of the blind shall be opened, and the ears of the deaf shall be unstopped." The blind man realized his need and his opportunity and would not be quieted. Such perseverance wins, and he was heard and answered and followed Jesus in the way. More requests would be granted if He could see like results.

LESSON IV.—The Pounds and the Talents, Luke xix, 11-27; Matt. xxv, 14-30. Golden Text, Matt. xxv, 21, "Well done, good and faithful servant; * * * enter thou into the joy of thy Lord." Saved by grace in order to work and then rewarded according to our works. His word to each is, "Occupy till I come." He gives opportunities, works in us and through us and gives us the credit of it.

LESSON V.—The Triumphal Entry, Mark xi, 1-11. Golden Text, Zech. ix, 9, "Rejoice greatly, O daughter of Zion. * * * Behold, thy King cometh unto thee." All that has ever been written concerning Him must be fulfilled (Luke xxiv, 44) and as literally as was this prediction. Literal, unless plainly a figure, is the only way to read the Bible, and we shall always find everything just as He said or as it is written (Luke xix, 32; xxii, 13).

LESSON VI.—The Barren Fig Tree, Mark xi, 12-26. Golden Text, Matt. vii, 20, "By their fruits ye shall know them." The apparent loyalty to Him of the last lesson was not real. They were, like the fig tree, all leaves, no fruit; all outward. Instead of prayer communion with God, it was merchandise even in the house of prayer. Their need and ours was faith in God without doubting.

LESSON VII.—The Wicked Husbandmen, Matt. xxi, 33-46. Golden Text, Matt. xxi, 42, "The stone which the builders rejected, the same was made the head of the corner." This is another vineyard story, but this time it is a question of fruit for the owner, instead of which His servants are ill treated and His own son slain. But the rejected Son will yet be the accepted Messiah at the end of this age.

LESSON VIII.—The Weddding Feast, Matt. xxii, 1-14. Golden Text, Luke xiii, 34, 'Oh Jerusalem, Jerusalem, * * * how often would I, * * * and ye would not!" The lessons of this portion are somewhat similar to the last—a slighted and despised invitation, with ill treatment of the messengers and the self righteous presumption of one who would not accept a wedding garment. Everywhere and at all times it is the same story of man's enmity to God (Rom. viii, 7, 8).

LESSON IX.—A Day of Questions, Matt. xxii, 15-22. Golden Text, Matt. xxii, 21, "Render therefore unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's and unto God the things that are God's." The unsaved bear the image of this world and its god and can only render service to him. The saved ones bear the image of God and are expected to serve the Living and True God, living only to please Him and desiring only His approval.

LESSON X.—The Great Commandments, Mark xii, 28-44. Golden Text, Luke x, 27, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, * * * and thy neighbor as thyself." It is never a question of our keeping the law, which is intended to show us our guilt and is too holy for sinful man to keep, but the one great question for us is, What think ye of Christ? What is our relation to Him? Is our all fully yielded to Him?

LESSON XI.—The Ten Virgins, Matt. xxv, 1-13. Golden Text, Matt. xxv, 13, "Watch, therefore, for we know not the day nor the hour." As we saw in our lesson, this probably refers to Israel at the time of the return of Christ with His church after the marriage of the Lamb, but the message for each believer is to see that our lamp is filled, well trimmed and always burning.

LESSON XII.—The Judgment of the nations, Matt. xxv, 31-46. Golden Text, Matt. xxv, 45, "Inasmuch as ye did it not unto one of these least, ye did it not unto me." Salvation depends upon our union with Christ, and all else depends upon our understanding of our oneness with Him. We must see ourselves, if we are redeemed, as sharing His throne and His glory. Then we shall never wonder if we are either sheep or goats in Matt. xxv.

FEELS LIKE A NEW WOMAN

As Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Dispelled Backache, Headaches and Dizziness.

Piqua, Ohio.—"I would be very ungrateful if I failed to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound the praise it deserves, for I have taken it at different times and it always relieved me when other medicines failed, and when I hear a woman complain I always recommend it. Last winter I was attacked with a severe case of organic weakness. I had backache, pains in my hips and over my kidneys, headache, dizziness, lassitude, had no energy, limbs ached and I was always tired. I was hardly able to do my housework. I had taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound on one other occasion, and it had helped me so I took it again and it has built me up, until now I feel like a new woman. You have my hearty consent to use my name and testimonial in any way and I hope it will benefit suffering women."—Mrs. ORPHA TURNER, 431 S. Wayne St., Piqua, Ohio.

Women who are suffering from those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should not doubt the ability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore their health.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

Methodist Conference Begins.

OTTAWA, Sept. 24.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier, N. W. Rowell, K.C., Hon. Martin Burrell, Minister of Agriculture, and Mayor McVeity of Ottawa joined last night in welcoming to the capital the three hundred and fifty delegates to the quadrennial general conference of the Methodist Church in Canada, which opened its sessions yesterday morning. The Duke of Connaught and Sir Robert Borden were unavoidably absent.

Her Opportunity.

The man hater had just announced her engagement.

"But you always said that men were horrid creatures," said her friends

"So they are," replied the bride to be, "and here's my opportunity to punish one of them."

They all agreed that it was real noble of her

Rheims Can Be Restored.

LONDON, Sept. 24. — The Paris correspondent of The Daily Mail has just returned from a second visit to Rheims, where he made a closer examination of the cathedral, the danger from falling beams and stonework no longer preventing entry. In his report of this examination he says:

"Thirteen out of 130 German wounded in the cathedral perished in the flames and their blackened corpses are still lying among the cinders. Many beautiful statutes in the west front of the cathedral are headless. The belfrey collapsed and the bells were melted in the conflagration. It is, however, chiefly the nave which suffered, and the restoration of most of the damage seems possible."

Clip all bastings to be removed at five or six inche intervals. They can then be pulled out without wrinkling the fabric.

Keep Up The Momentum

ONE of those pessimistic individuals who are going about talking war-time depression was overheard to say:

"Rather than lose money in my business I shall cease spending money on development. I may not MAKE any money during the war—but by great economy in the conduct of my affairs I shall at least avoid LOSING any."

And then he mentioned advertising as one of the things he would do without, until the war is over.

Without going into the merits of his general policy of retrenchment, let us see what happens when such a man stops advertising.

Advertising is most effective when continuous. Its main purpose is to set up a momentum of reputation, prestige, and good-will, that LATER ON creates sales.

So, if a manufacturer fails to keep up his advertising to-day—if he lets the momentum of his business-creating campaign cease—where will his sales be three months or a year hence? What of his business when the war is over? What will it cost him to set the wheels in motion again?

If we believe, and experience compels us to believe, that advertising builds reputation, prestige, good-will—what utter folly to stop the process of that reputation building, just because there's a war in Europe!

THE SPORTING WORLD

HOME RUNS GALORE IN INDOOR BALL LEAGUE

Bugle Band Downed by Company 8, After Scoring Five Runs in First

A goodly share of the excitement in the Electric City last night was in evidence at the armouries, when two games in the indoor baseball league were staged. The double engagement was as interesting as a world's series battle. It would appear that the boys in red, who have jumped into the game, are due for a good time.

In the first struggle the Bugle Band were handed a defeat by the home run hitters of Company 8, to the tune of 11 to 9. The Eights got away like a shack afire and grabbed five runs in the first frame. The signals for the inside play of the bandsmen apparently were badly twisted, for instead of gentle taps in the infield, the Eights poled out everything from two baggers to circuit trips. It was some slaughter.

The buglers started to mix things up in the succeeding inning, but Captain Park's sluggers again got busy, and, helped along with some ivory plays on the part of the opposition, emerged from this thrilling fray with a lead of two runs.

The score :—

B.B. ....2 0 0 0 7 0 2—9
No. 8..........5 0 0 0 2 2 x—11

Batteries : Gibbs and Butcher ; Hardill and Turner.

In the second game No. 5 Company defeated No. 3 Company, after an exciting game, by 24 to 16.

GIANTS ARE ELIMINATED

New York's sympathisers may still cling to the chances of the Giants, but figures will give them small comfort. The Braves have 16 more games to play, while the Giants are down for 15. If McGraw's club is to overcome the six-game lead of Boston, it is most essential that the weather be fair, for a postponement will be almost as deeful as a victory to the Braves.

If the Boston club wins only half of its remaining games, it will be necessary for the Giants to capture 12 out of 15 to win the flag. If Boston carries off 10 games and loses 6, the Giants must win 12 victories out of 15 to capture the pennant.

By winning 12 games out of 16 the Braves can clinch the National league pennant, for then the Giants would finish second, even by winning 15 straight.

KING EDWARD GIRL'S ATHLETIC SOCIETY

A largely attended meeting of the girls of the King Edward school was held yesterday afternoon for the purpose of organizing an athletic society in connection with the school. The officers chosen were : Hon. president, Miss Rannie ; president, Miss Sisson ; vice-president, Miss Elliott ; secretary-treasurer, Miss Adams.

GOLF

All wishing to compete for the ladies' championship, will please hand in their best score card signed, to Mrs. Mead, by the first of October.

The third draw for Mrs. Suckling's prize is as follows :

Mrs. Aylmer—Mrs. Goodwill.
Mrs. Tomlin—Miss N. Hatton.
Miss Cavanah—Miss Dumble.

To be played by Friday.

There will be a picnic lunch Wednesday 30th, 12.45 sharp. A medal round will be played afterwards and it is hoped there will be a very large attendance.

HUNGARY GAINS IN PATENT WAR

VIENNA, Sept. 24.—(Via Paris.)—In consequence of the reported action of the British Parliament in canceling Austrian, German and Hungarian patent rights in the British Isles, the Hungarian Cabinet has empowered the Ministry of Commerce to adopt immediately extraordinary rules regarding patent rights and trade marks in Hungary.

It is asserted that 3,358 British patents have been granted in Hungary, as against 280 Hungarian patents granted in Great Britain.

Humor and Philosophy

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

It would not matter so much if my lady should mistake the waste paper basket for her new hat, except for the litter when she inverted it.

It is easy to give advice, but just suppose for a minute that you had to take it yourself. Gracious!

Some people are naturally truthful, and others acquire that trouble breeding condition only by persistent effort.

Perhaps there is some one who understands the tariff, but if so he is wisely keeping still.

The man who takes things as they come and never lets go is the man that is heard from later.

The results of money saving may be comfortable, but the operation isn't nearly as exciting as that of money spending.

People talk a lot about liking to take chances, but they never are willing to let a sure thing get by in order to take a chance.

All optimistic things may not be paying, but did you ever notice that all paying things are looking toward optimism?

Her Preference.

"Will you be my wife, my dear?" said the aged millionaire to the pert young thing.

"Well, there is only one thing that I would rather be," she admitted reflectively.

"And what is that?"

"Your widow."

What Is?

"Ma!"

"Yes, my son."

"You say there is a place for everything?"

"Certainly."

"Well, what is the proper place for improper things?"

DEATH LIST IS 1,400

Survivors Tell Thrilling Story of Disaster to British Cruisers.

Reports From Various Points Show Naval Activity In Mediterranean and Baltic—Two Austrian Ships Are Disabled and Russian Cruiser Is Said to Have Sunk Three German Ships of War.

HARWICH, Sept. 24.—It is now expected that the death roll of the marine disaster in the North Sea, whereby the British cruisers Aboukir, Cressy and Hogue were sunk by the Germans, will reach about 1,400.

It is learned from the survivors that the whole affair was so brief that it seemed but a nightmare.

A survivor of the cruiser Aboukir, who was picked up after he had been in the water for four hours, is of the opinion that all the men between decks must have gone down with the ship.

The steward who had been in charge of the canteen aboard the ill-fated cruiser Hogue, was first apprised of the accident by seeing the Aboukir listing.

"Those sights," he said, "will ever be graven in my memory. In a few moments the sea seemed dotted with human heads. Our crew lowered the boats immediately, when suddenly the Hogue received a blow that shook the ship from stem to stern. We saw the periscope of a submarine traveling very quickly through the water. In a moment the gun at our bow banged and the periscope disappeared. Within a quarter of an hour the Aboukir received another heavy blow. Soon the waves were washing over the men's feet and the captain shouted the order, 'Every man for himself!' Then with a rush the men began diving overboard.

"From the water we saw the figure of the brave captain standing meditatively at the stern and a mighty cheer arose from the throats of all the men who saw him, those who were in the lifeboats and even those who were swimming.

"I swam for two hours before I could reach a boat. Two were crossing my path in the water, but each was filled to overflowing with survivors, and there was no room for me. I was on the point of giving up when another boat came along, and I was pulled into it to safety."

French To Attack Cattaro.

BORDEAUX, Sept. 24.—The Minister of Marine announced yesterday that a French fleet has landed heavy guns and a detachment of gunners at Antivari, Montenegro. The guns will be mounted on Mount Lovchen, whence they will open an energetic bombardment on the forts and harbors of Cattaro, in Dalmatia. The forts at the mouth of the Cattaro harbor were destroyed some days ago by a bombardment carried out under the direction of Admiral de la Peyrere.

Austrian Ships Disabled.

ROME, Sept. 24. — The Austrian armored cruiser Kaiserin Maria Theresa and the torpedo cruiser Admiral Spaun have put into Sebenico, a port in Dalmatia badly crippled. The cruiser carries a complement of 502 men and has a tonnage displacement of 5,187 tons; the Admiral Spaun is of 3,500 tons displacement, with a crew of 320 men. Details of the engagement are not available.

Trawler Sunk By Mine.

LONDON, Sept. 24.—The Grimsby trawler Kilmornock was sunk by a mine in the North Sea Tuesday. Only three members of her crew were saved. The trawler was blown in two and went down immediately.

Russian Cruiser Sunk.

PARIS, Sept. 24. — The Russian cruiser Dayan has been sunk in the Baltic Sea, near where a German cruiser and two torpedo boats were engaged in laying mines.

Germans Lose Cruiser.

LONDON, Sept. 24.—According to a message from Paris to the Central News a Russian cruiser has sunk a German cruiser and two torpedo boats in the Baltic.

BARRICADES NEAR BRUSSELS.

Germans Are Preparing For a Retreat Through Belgium.

ANTWERP, Sept. 24.—The Germans at Ternath, south of Brussels, have felled 10,000 trees and prepared barricades, in which they have mounted guns directed toward Merchtem, with the object of preventing the Belgian troops from Antwerp falling upon them if the Germans retreating from France have to traverse Belgium. The entire German garrison at Brussels has left for the Ath and Ternath districts.

One thousand five hundred Germans arrived at Ath yesterday in some disorder, coming from France.

The entire neighborhood of Brussels is entrenched and mined.

A German aeroplane flew over Ostend yesterday.

May Need Newfoundlanders.

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., Sept. 24.—It is thought probable here that as a result of the heavy losses of the naval reservists in the North Sea fight yesterday, Newfoundland reservists whose services heretofore were not needed, will now likely be called to the colors.

Fears for Stefansson.

NOME, Sept. 24.—Capt. Bernard of the schooner Teddy Bear, fears that Vilhjalmur Stefansson, Ole Andersen and Stergent Stergensen, will never be heard from again.

Easy Enough.

"He overheard them making love."

"What did they say?"

"Nothing."

"A deaf man could have overheard that."

Loves Us Not.

He'd like to have a chance to shove us.
Between the past and you and me,
I feel that Castro does not love us.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

The Misses Wilmott are visiting in town.

Mr. D. C. MacRostie returned from his vacation on Tuesday.

Miss Florence Gladman returned from Parry Sound on Saturday.

Mr. R. G. Wright, Toronto, is in the city.

Mr. W. Franks, Toronto, is a guest at the Enowden House.

Mr. H. C. Markell, Ottawa, is here on business.

Mr. Lorne Thorne of Millbrook is in the city.

Rev .L. Phelps, is attending the Methodist Conference at Ottawa.

F. C. Ryams, Toronto, is the guest of friends in the city.

Mr. F. C. Bennett, Toronto, is visiting in the city.

Misses J. Heron, and A. Clarendon, New York, are staying at the White House.

Miss Estelle Cuffe spent the week-end with her parents on Homewood avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Hall returned from Stoney Lake to be present at the Langley-Rheinhart wedding.

Mrs. James Kendry has gone to Toronto to spend a few days with Mrs. Burnham.

Mr. George Burnham passed through Peterboro on Tuesday on his way to join a shooting party.

Mr. Reginald Scadding of the Canada Life Insurance Company was called to Toronto on account of the illness of his wife, but returned on Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Whitby were in town last week, when Mr. Whitby acted in the capacity of "best man" to Mr. Gordon Langley.

Mr. John S. Watson, of the Bank of Commerce, who is a lieutenant in the Royal Naval Reserve, is awaiting a summons to report for duty.

Six Kingston nurses, Misses E. Mercer, S. Arnold, C. MacAllister, B. Wiloughby, A. Hinchey, and Lillian Pugh, have left for Valcartier, on active service.

Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Duffus, Romaine St., announce the engagement of their daughter, Mary Loretta, to Mr. Basil Anderson Cooke, of Peterborough, son of Dr. E. J. Cook, Sheffield, Eng. The marriage will take place in October.

Mr. and Mrs. David Conroy, Peterborough, announce the engagement of their third oldest daughter, Daisy, to Mr. Stephen J. McGarry, son of Mr. Daniel McGarry of Seattle, Washington. The marriage to take place quietly in November.

The harvest festival of St. George's church was held on Tuesday evening. The church was beautifully decorated, and the choral service was rendered in a manner which would do credit to many much larger churches.

The special preacher for the occasion, Archdeacon Cody, of St. Paul's church, Toronto, preached one of his usual eloquent sermons, and was listened to with rapt attention by the large congregation present.

The Golf club, as is usual on a fine Saturday afternoon, was the scene of several enjoyable teas. Mr. and Mrs. Basil Hall entertained a number of guests who were staying in town after the wedding. Others were: Mrs. Ritchie, Mr. and Mrs. Mulholland, Mr. and Miss Doble, Miss Halliday, Dr. and Mrs. Cameron, Mrs. Aylmer, Mrs. Cross, Mr. F. D. Kerr, Mrs. Gardiner, Mrs. Hill, Mrs. and Miss Denison, the Misses Kingan, Miss Rannie and her aunt, Mrs. Wilson.

The patriotic concert in the opera house on Monday evening gave an excellent opportunity for the display of local talent, and Peterborough has indeed reason to be proud of her musicians.

The audience was a large and most enthusiastic one, and the chorus of "Rule Britannia," sung under the leadership of Mr. George Chandler, was most inspiring.

Among those present were: His Worship Mayor Buller and Mrs. Buller, His Honor Judge Huycke, Sheriff and Miss Hall, Mr. and Mrs. Rollins, Mr. and Mrs. Pogue, Mr. and Mrs. Webb, Mrs. Travers, Mr. and Mrs. Campbell, Dr. and Mrs. Young, Mr. Wainwright, Mrs. Ritchie, Miss Halliday, Mr. and Mrs. Eastwood, Mr. and Miss Dobie, the Misses Eastwood, the Misses Hatton, Mr. and Mrs. Claud Rogers and Miss Mamie Rogers, Mr. and Miss Rogers and Mrs. Fairweather, Mrs. Palmer, Dr. and Mrs. Scott, Miss Sanderson and Miss Marguerite Sanderson, Mr. and Mrs. John.

BUY IN PETERBORO

At this time, particularly when the war has such an effect upon general trade conditions, the Review urges citizens of Peterborough and vicinity to buy in Peterborough. This is no more than loyalty to the stores here. Distant hills always look green, and the hustle and bustle of big city shops is fascinating to many, but even those who go over the river to buy will admit that everything considered, they can do just about as well at home. Patriotism assumes many forms and one of them is support for home stores and industries. Buy here and help to keep local people employed and money in circulation.

THEATRICAL

As was expected, it was the same May Robson that delighted audiences in "The Rejuvenation of Aunt Mary" that pleased the people in the opera house last night. The title, "Martha-by-the-Day," explains that the chief character went out working by the day, scrubbing, washing and doing anything else handy, to keep her family in respectable surroundings. Claire Lang, whom she has befriended, meets a wealthy young fellow, Frank Ronald, and thereby begins a romance. Claire becomes governess of Ronald's nephew, and the romance proceeds. Martha is innocently involved in a theft committed by Ronald's sister, from which Martha's old mother accidentally extricates her, and everything ends as it should.

The play is more sentimental and has a deeper touch of pathos than "Aunt Mary" or "A Night Out," and hence is not so attractive as those rollicking scenes from the former plays. In "Martha By-the-Day," however, greater scope is given the characters subsidiary to the leading lady. The play was different from what we expected and what Miss Robson usually presents, but is a pleasing variation from past comedies.

Jane Heron, as Mrs. Sherman, was good, as was Anita Clarendon as Cora, and Lois Clark made an excellent old lady. Julie Herne, as Claire Lang, did not make love as we are acustomed to see it on the stage, and that, if anything, is an improvement. The company is a strong one and presented a play to the people of this city that was altogether pleasing.

OBITUARY

DAVID McGRATH.

The death occurred this morning of David McGrath in his 75th year. Born in Ireland, he came to this country when very young and had resided in these parts for about sixty years. He was highly respected by a large circle of friends and his death will be deeply regretted.

Left to mourn his loss are two daughters, one at home, and Mrs. F. Bissonette of East City, also two sons, John and David, both at home. His wife predeceased him three years.

The funeral will leave the family residence. Concession 12, lot 32, Otonabee, Saturday morning at 9 o'clock, to St. Peter's Cathedral, and to St. Peter's Cemetery.

REV. H. A. FROST MADE CHAPLAIN

Rev. H. A. Frost who supplied the pulpit in Charlotte Street Church this summer for some weeks has received, we understand, an appointment as chaplain to the Canadian Army Corps at Valcartier and will shortly leave for the military camp.

ANCIENT MUSIC

Exploration in Bible lands has led to the discovery of a wealth of materials throwing light upon the arts and crafts which are referred to in the Old Testament. The discoveries relating to music have a charm all their own, and excavations at Nipper show, among other things, a shepherd of 6,000 years ago sitting on the grass with a lamb on one side of him and his dog on the other, lazily plucking at the strings of a leathered-covered lute. Prof. Garstang unearthed three actual instruments of Beni Hassan—a large harp, a pair of long reed flutes and a timber drum—all found in tombs dated between the age of Abraham and that of Moses.

REGRETTED DEATH OF R. E. WOOD

Death claimed a very prominent citizen in the person of Mr. R. E. Wood, County Crown Attorney, at St. Joseph's Hospital, early this morning.

It was known for some time that Mr. Wood was in failing health, still his many friends were hoping to see him about again. The announcement of his death comes as a shock to all.

The late Mr. Wood has been a life long resident of Peterborough, having been born in South Monaghan 68 years ago. He studied law at Victoria University which was at Cobourg at that time. After graduating he entered partnership with the late Mr. Hatton and after a few years he entered partnership with Mr. Geo. Edmison. Later he received the appointment as Crown Attorney.

He was a Mason, and a past master of Corinthian Lodge; he also was district deputy G.M. for the district of Ontario. The late Mr. Wood served as president of Peterborough Law Society, and as president of the Peterborough Club. He was a member of St. Paul's Church and sat on the board of management.

Left to mourn his loss besides his sorrowing widow are three sons, Herbert and Arthur practicing law in Vancouver and Edward, a physician in New York City. The funeral will be held Saturday morning from St. Paul's Church. At 11 o'clock a short service will be held and interment will take place at the Little Lake Cemetery. Friends and acquaintances desiring to view the remains will have the opportunity of doing so from 10.30 to 11 a.m. in the guild room of the church.

His Honor Judge Huycke made the following references to the death of Mr. R. E. Wood at this morning's sittings of the County Judge Criminal Court.

"Gentlemen of the Bar:

I must ask your indulgence for a moment this morning before the regular work of the court proceeds. I desire to mention a subject of very great pain and grief to us all. I have just been given, gentlemen, on coming into the room the sad information that the friend of all of us, Mr. R. E. Wood, the Crown Attorney and Clerk of the Peace of the County of Peterborough has during the night that has just gone, passed into the Eternal World. It is not unexpected in a way. Before this all knew how seriously affected Mr. Wood has been for some time and we knew the end was certain but we did not and could not know when to expect it, whether soon or for some time. However the end has come and Mr. Wood is with us no more. It is a matter of great sorrow to every one in the city and county of Peterborough, but more particularly to those associated directly or indirectly with Mr. Wood in his work of the administration of justice. During the five years I have been here as judge Mr. Wood has been of great assistance to me. He was a faithful, painstaking, conscientious officer. He did his work in the plain trying path of duty. He was conscientious in every respect, and I wish to say more, he was fair. Fair not only to the Crown, because that was his duty, but I think he was fair in connection and with respect to the persons whom it was his duty to prosecute. If at the close of a case he thought there was a sufficient case for conviction he pressed for a conviction strongly, but if he thought there was a doubt about it he was fair enough to admit it, and to deal with matters accordingly. I am satisfied to say that does not apply to all Crown Officers. I think it does to most of them, but I feel it does not to all of them. The loss of Mr. Wood in his public capacity will be a gap not easily filled in this city and county. It is not for us, for me or any of the rest of us to trespass beyond, into the relationship of his family. To those who have lost a father and the sorrowing widow who has lost a husband, the touch of sorrow is so great and deep and so tender that I would fain not draw the veil aside. Speaking specially for myself alone and for the bar and all the officers of this county, I tender all sympathy to Mrs. Wood and her sons in this very very sad hour.

Mr. Gordon also addressed the Court as follows:—

Your Honor, as I am a senior member of the bar present in Court many members not being present on account of being unacquainted with the fact of Mr. Wood's death, which has just only been announced to me, I feel it is incumbent on me to say a few words respecting the relations of the late Mr. Wood to the Court and to the members of the Bar of this County. During my nine or ten years stay in the City of Peterborough, I have been intimately acquainted with Mr. Wood by reason of being frequently in the Courts where he acted as a Crown officer.

As your Honor has said his treatment of those accused was always fair. In every instance where there was that reasonable doubt so often mentioned in Criminal Courts and Mr. Wood was satisfied of it he always fairly and frankly was willing to allow it and concede in consequence, the right of the accused to his liberty. Knowing him as I have for a number of years as a fellow solicitor and neighbor I feel very deeply indeed the loss that I have personally sustained. During my whole practice in the City of Peterborough I have heard from no one, solicitor or layman, aught but words of kindness and respect for our late fellow solicitor, and as I believe he has been in practice here since the 70's that would appear to me strikingly to speak for his many good and sterling qualities, especially as it came within his duty very frequently to set the law in motion against those who might be personally acquainted with him. It is a matter of very great regret to me that on this sad occasion we have not a greater number of our bar present, but that is because the sad news is yet not generally known, the President of the Bar Association however informs me that he is about making arrangements for the whole Bar of the County to attend the funeral services of our late associate and to pass resolutions fitting the sad occasion to be sent the members of Mr. Wood's family.

DEATH CLAIMS SIR J. P. WHITNEY

RUSSIANS GAIN ON SOUTHWEST LINE

PETROGRAD OFFICIAL STATEMENT

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Petrograd, Sept. 25.—An official announcement from Grand Duke Nicholas, commander-in-chief of the Russian forces in the field, says: "On the southwest front Russian troops have taken possession of the fortified position of Czyschky and Foulstyn, which covered Khyroff and other positions in the Radymno region (between Jaroslau and Przemysl), taking all the enemy's artillery. The Przemysl garrison has evacuated Bourgade and Medyka and has been repulsed at an eastern segment toward the line of forts.

"There has been no fighting on the German front."

RHEIMS CATHEDRAL BOMBARDED AGAIN.

Bordeaux, Sept. 25.—It is announced officially in Bordeaux this afternoon that the Germans last night recommenced the bombarding of the Rheims cathedral.

Bordeaux, Sept. 25.—The French foreign office to-day made the statement that General Stenger, commanding the 53rd German infantry brigade, had issued an order, of which the following is a translation: "Make no prisoners; shoot all who fall into your hands, singly or in groups, and despatch the wounded, whether armed or unarmed, as the Germans must leave no Frenchman living behind them."

ZEPPELIN VISITS OSTEND AND DROPS THREE BOMBS

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Ostend, Sept. 25.—A Zeppelin airship dropped three bombs yesterday. One of them struck a bridge on the outskirts of the town; another fell in the harbor, and another on the premises of a wholesale fish dealer in the fish market, partly wrecking the building. The explosion made a great cavity in the ground and badly damaged all the surrounding houses. It also extinguished the street lamps, destroyed electric wires and created a panic.

GERMANS RETREATED BECAUSE THEY HAD TO AND DO NOT NOW ADVANCE BECAUSE THEY CANNOT

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Sept. 25.—The correspondent of the Daily News telegraphing Tuesday from outside of Paris says "The battle now proceeding is of course beyond description. No one man can see it, and it would take a good walker for instance, at least a fortnight, to get from one end of the line to the other. You still come across croakers who are convinced yet that the Germans are playing a subtle game; that they have something up their sleeve and will presently give an alarming surprise which they now are carefully developing behind their lines and come back to Paris. The common sense of the matter is that the Germans went back from the Marne because they had to, and they do not advance now because they cannot. There is nothing more mysterious in their plans than that, and allies cannot make quicker progress because the Germans are very many, are well armed, have strong positions and know that if they break now they break for good.

Their prolonged and formidable resistance is no more mysterious than their retreat. Luck is almost as important in warfare as good soldiers. Admitting the value of that essential, it is safe to say, the Germans will never get back to Paris, they will see Berlin first.

NORWEGIAN BOAT SUNK BY MINE

Chief Engineer and Assistant Were Killed

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Sept. 25. — A South Shields despatch to the Central News says the Norwegian steamer Heevik has been totally destroyed by striking a mine in the North Sea.

The chief engineer and one of his assistants were killed but the captain and crew of fourteen were rescued by a British warship and brought to South Shields.

American Sympathy

The Review was shown this morning a letter from Urban A. Woodbury, ex-Governor of Vermont, to Mr. W. C. Austin of this city in which the ex-Governor expresses himself and his sympathy as follows:

"The war is horrible. No milder word can characterize it. God grant victory to the allies and a speedy and honorable peace."

THE PETERBORO PUBLIC BUILDING

May be Some Delay for a Short Time

The federal member received a letter from the Hon. Robt. Rogers, Minister of Public Works, this morning, saying that although the turmoil incident to public business just now might delay the public building for a short time it would not be long.

GERMAN POST TAKEN WITHOUT OPPOSITION

Surrendered to Rhodesian Police Last Monday

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Sept. 25.—A Pretoria despatch to Reuters says it is officially announced that the German post at Schuckmannsberg near Zambezi, surrendered without opposition on September 21 to the Rhodesian police.

German residents were taken to Livingstone.

PREMIER OF ONTARIO PASSES AWAY SUDDENLY AT HIS HOME

Sir James Whitney Was Seized With a Hemorrhage at Noon

Lady Whitney and Daughter Were At His Bedside

THE LATE SIR JAMES WHITNEY.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Toronto, Sept. 25. — Sir James Pliny Whitney, Premier of Ontario, died suddenly at twelve o'clock today at his home, 118 St. George Street. Lady Whitney and Miss Whitney were the only persons at the bedside.

Dr. Herbert J. Hamilton had been hurriedly called but when he arrived the premier had passed away. Sir James' death was due to cerebral hemorrhage caused by hardening of the arteries. He had been confined to his home through illness since August 1. Since that time he had spent the days in bed while on different occasions he was able to sit up.

At 12 o'clock the nurse attending Sir James noticed a change. His wife and daughter were summoned to the bedside, where the premier lay with eyes closed. He opened them, looked at wife and daughter, smiled, closed his eyes, and passed away. Sir James was seventy years of age. Although during the last few days there had been apparent improvement, and attending physicians hoped to get him out again, his death caused no surprise among medical men.

Lieutenant-Colonel Honorable Sir James Pliny Whitney, Kt., K.C.M.G., LL.D., D.C.L., K.C., Prime Minister of the Province of Ontario, Canada, since 1905, and leader of the Conservative party in the Provincial House since 1895, was born in Williamsburg, Dundas County, Ontario, in 1843, being a son of Richard Leet Whitney and Clarissa Jane Fairman, his wife, and a descendant of United Empire Loyalist stock.

James Whitney spent the early boyhood of his life on a farm in the Township of Osnabruck, in the County of Stormont, on the St. Lawrence front, where his parents moved a few years after his birth. He was educated in the local public school and at the historic Cornwall Grammar School. He began the study of law in the office of the late John Sanfield Macdonald, Premier of the old Province of Canada before Confederation, and the first Provincial Premier of Ontario after Confederation.

Represented Dundas for 20 Years.

Mr. Whitney was called to the Bar in 1876, and began the practice of his profession at Morrisburg. In 1886 he contested Dundas for the seat in the Ontario House, but was defeated by the small majority of 25. The successful candidate was unseated at the end of the session,

'MID CANNONS' ROAR AND BURSTING SHELLS THE BRITISH TROOPS SING "TIPPERARY" AND CRACK JOKES

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

New York, Sept. 25.—Rev. James L. Molloy, of Trenton, N.J., who returned from Europe on the Mauretania today served several weeks as chaplain with a British regiment in Belgium and France. The conduct of the British soldiers in trenches was surprising he says. Those men stood shoulder to shoulder behind high mounts of dirt cracking jokes and singing snatches of music hall songs between volleys, stupendous bravery or stupendous absence of nerves.

"I've heard men under the cracking fire of German big guns with comrades dropping all around them unite in roaring "It's a long long way to Tipperary." I've heard a big Irishman call out to a neighbor in the trenches, "Well I winged that Dutchman alright." To see those German lines moving forward was like watching regiments of tin soldiers pushing across a table. You'd see through field glasses a long row of pale blue blocks break from cover and come rushing at you. Then a British gun would speak, a shell would drop right in the middle of that blue block, a great hurling up of smoke and soil and the block would be gone. Nothing left but few little men madly running back through a haze of powder smoke. So stubborn was the spirit of British soldiers in trenches that they rebelled against an order to retreat.

Sir John French even explained to some private soldiers the reason for his order to retreat.

MUST FIGHT TO THE END

Carnegie's Opinion on the Present War

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

New York, Sept. 25.—Andrew Carnegie, who arrived on the Mauretania this morning, after giving his opinion as to the cause of the present war said, "No real friend of lasting peace wants to stop the war now. That would be a short sighted policy and would be but an armed truce."

LADY GIBBON'S PASSES

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Ont., Sept. 25. — Lady Gibbons, wife of Sir George Gibbons, dies this morning after an illness of some length.

ALLIED TROOPS IN GENERAL ACTION OF GREAT VIOLENCE

PARIS OFFICIAL STATEMENT

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Paris, Sept. 25.—The following official communication was given out this afternoon:

"First—On our left wing there has begun a general action of great violence between those detachments of our forces that are operating between the river Somme and the river Oise, and several army corps which the enemy has grouped in the region around Tergnier and St. Quentin. These army corps have come, some from the centre of the enemy's line, others from Lorraine and the Vosges. To the north of the river Aisne, as far as Berry-Au-Bac, there has been no change of importance.

"Second—On our centre we have made progress to the east of Rheims in the direction of Berry-Au-Bac and Moronvilliers. Further to the east the situation shows no change. To the east of Argonne the enemy has not been able to move out of Varennes. On the right bank of the river Meuse the enemy succeeded in getting a footing on the heights of the Meuse in the region of the promontory of Hatton Chatel, and, forced in the direction of St. Michael, he bombarded the forts of Porches and of Camp-des-Romains. To the south of Verdun we remain masters of the heights of the Meuse, and our troops, moving out of Toul, advanced until they reached the region of Beaumont.

"Third—On our right wing, in Lorraine and the Vosges, we have repulsed attacks of minor importance on Nomeny. To the east of Luneville the enemy has made some demonstrations along the lines of the river Vegous and the river Blette."

ONWARD AND ONWARD RUSSIANS ADVANCE

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Sept. 25.—The Petrograd correspondent of the Post says the Russians have captured Przeworsk, eight miles from Jaroslav and Lancut, twelve miles further west.

"Probably by now," the correspondent continues, "they have also taken Rzeszow, another strategic point ten miles to the westward, or 30 from Jaroslav. The Russian pursuit of the Austro-German forces is proceeding."

London, Sept. 25.—A despatch to the standard from Copenhagen states that a fishing fleet has arrived at Falkenberg, Sweden, which has been in close proximity to a fleet of 30 warships. The nationality of the warships has not been divulged. They were steaming down the principal deep water channel on the Swedish side, in a southerly direction, towards the entrance for large vessels to the Baltic from the North Sea.

The news has caused great excitement here. The Sound is extensively mined, and foreign war vessels run a great risk in steaming in them without a pilot.

INDIAN PRINCE GOES DOWN BRITISH TARS ARE LANDED

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Rio Janeiro, Sept. 25.—The German steamer Prussia has arrived at Santos and landed the master and 15 men of the British steamer Indian Prince, which was sunk by the German auxiliary cruiser Kron Prinz Wilhelm.

This is the first definite news of the Prinz Wilhelm since she was reported as having been seen transferring coal to the German cruiser Karlsruhe in the West Indian waters.

GERMAN SEAT IN NEW GUINEA IS TAKEN

Australian Force Occupy Kaiser's Town

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Sept. 25. — The official press bureau this afternoon issued the following statement:—"The Admiralty announces that a telegram has been received from vice-admiral Sir George Patey stating that the town and harbor of Frederick-Wilhelm, the seat of government of Kaiser Wilhelm's land "German Portion of New Guinea" has been occupied by an Australian force without opposition."

PETERBOROUGH, FRIDAY, SEPT. 25, 1914.

SOUTH AMERICA IS A FIELD FOR CANADIAN TRADE.

GERMANY has lost her foothold in the markets of South America, as well as in Canada. A rearrangement of commercial relations must, therefore, ensue, whereby other countries, including Canada, will find an opportunity. The country, moreover, that is the first to fully realize the significance of this opportunity will have a decided advantage over others in their efforts to capture a share of the South American trade lost for a time to Germany and other warring nations of Europe.

That the people of the United States are fully alive to the possibilities of the trade with South America, is evident from the recent establishment of a South American bureau in connection with the United States Department of Commerce. From figures prepared by this bureau it may be seen that the South American countries in 1912 imported merchandise, the value of which totalled $960,504,759. Of this amount the United Kingdom claimed 28.43 per cent.; Germany, 18.62 per cent. ; the United States, 15.96 per cent ; and Canada, .28 per cent. Over two-thirds of the above sum, moreover, is accounted for by the imports into the two countries of Argentina and Brazil.

The articles imported into Argentina from Germany in 1912 amounted to 63,941,503 pesos, a peso having a par value in Canadian currency of 96.5 cents. What Canada stands to gain, in part, then, would be in supplying Argentina with articles that made up these trade figures.

The articles imported into Argentina are very much of the same character as the articles imported into Canada. The Argentine Republic is essentially an agricultural country, the lines of manufacture are few, and the output, as a rule is small as compared with the imports of like articles. Of the Argentine tariff it may be said that it is designed for the most part for the purpose of affording revenue and not from the desire of discouraging importations. The demand is, therefore, largely for finished manufactured goods, and of these Argentina imports a large quantity, practically every variety of article of European or North American manufacture being included therein. Of the articles of which Germany has supplied a considerable quantity in the past, the following may be mentioned : Pig and sheet iron, steel rails, wire, machinery, electrical supplies, automobiles, all kinds of hardware, cutlery, tools, clocks, jewelry, etc., also a large amount of textiles, principally silk goods, cotton, hosiery, cotton cloth and woollen tissues; drugs, dyes and chemicals; paper and wood pulp ; pianos, canned and fancy foodstuffs. These articles can no longer be obtained from Germany. The demand of Argentina's population of 7,000,000 for the supply of these commodities must therefore be satisfied from other sources. Canadian producers should put forth energetic efforts to avail themselves of this opportunity and to attempt to divert to Canada as much of this trade as is possible.

THE PROTESTS.

With protests coming to him from all of the belligerent nations, the one against the methods of othe other, President Wilson would indeed have a difficult task, if he were to attempt even something like a definite appraisement of the claims of any. His non-committal and friendly answers to all of them are all that he can possibly give, says the Erie Dispatch. But he is right to listen to all of them in a friendly spirit and to assure them all of our friendship and neutrality. To judge by some of the protests against listening to some protests, one would suspect that the U. S. had lined up with one side or the other. This is furthest from the truth. In spite of the character of the news reports, the press of the country has obeyed the injunction of the president and preserved neutrality. The exceptions are so few as not to affect the rule. The American people want all sides to be heard. They are willing to listen to all sides. That is why it was not only futile bu also unfair, for some enthusiastic Americans of German extraction to protest against the hearing given to the Belgian commissioners. They claimed that it was giving the Belgians an unfair advantage. On the contrary, it was only giving them a square deal. The Germans have their full say in America. Their side is not neglected. They have formed organizations for the purpose of diffusing favorable opinions about their home country. Whether their partizanship is wise or not, does not matter just now. The main thing is that they are not hindered ; their meetings are not disturbed. Their newspaper articles and circulars are not suppressed. It has been well said that the German press in America has greater freedom to present the German cause than has the native press at home. There is one thing our pro-Germans need never fear. The American people, all cultured people, will never lose sight of the debt which the entire world owes to the great German people. Science, literature, art and industry have been affected by Germany as by no other people. So no matter what opinions we may hold about militarism versus democracy, no matter which way our sympathies may go in this conflict, the land of the poets and philosophers, the scientists and artists, the great protagonists of modern efficient industry, will always receive its meed of respect and friendship from the intelligent and cultured of all the world. Nowhere is there more profound regret that Great Britain is arrayed against Germany than in Great Britain itself.

FUTILITY.

THE FOLLOWING tragic little story is told by Collier's. It is a nature story with a human parallel :

> The little moth was flitting about in a newspaper pressroom late one night. And after the presses had started it was unexpectedly caught by one of the great rollers and crushed between it and the speeding paper. Its existence had been instantly blotted out, all its little functions terminated in the full flush of living. We found the tiny body flattened on the edge of our newspaper as we unfolded it next morning. And just beneath the tracery of mangled wings was a despatch telling of thousands of brave men whose lives had been just as suddenly crushed out in mid career by that inexorable form of murder which mankind calls war.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

THE Montreal Journal of Commerce says the world's gold holdings amount to $8,480,000,000. We are under the impression that this is a mistake and that the world's gold holdings amount to nearly seventeen billion dollars, or twice the amount stated.

THE British cruisers sunk were built some twelve years ago and were fast becoming obsolete. They cost over £700,000, or about $3,500,000 each. That shows how costly modern war is, as well as armed peace.

THE LAST naval engagement in the North Sea, in which British ships got distinctly the worst of the battle, is just one fact to show the seriousness and magnitude of the problem with which the Empire has to deal. While German and naval merchant marine has been pretty well cleared from the seas, they have not been destroyed, and are ever watching for an opportunity to deal a deadly blow. Wars like the present one are not a series of victories. We must be prepared for reverses. This battle is only one of the steadying influences of the war. It also illustrates the importance of building boats of the Dreadnought type with exceptionally strong bottoms as well as tops.

America to Belgium.

(New York World.)

("Horum omnium fortissimi sunt Belgae.")
"Bravest of all—the Belgians," even thus
That old-time soldier, Caesar, wrote of thee ;
And thus a just world speaks of thee to-day.
O little nation, great in fortitude,
Great in all qualities that thrill the soul
And kindle lamps of glory before God.
Thou wouldst not bow the neck to tyranny,
Thou wouldst not kneel before the mailed might
That sought to humble thee; and thy reward—
Of that thy colors speak with eloquence ;
Gold for thy coffers robbed, thy harvest fields
Spoiled of their yellow grain by wanton hordes ;
Black for thy ruins, lifting ghastly hands
Imploring Heaven's vengeance upon crime ;
Crimson, thy blood poured out in hard-fought siege,
Resisting many times thy force of arms.
Crushed 'neath the iron heel of ruthless might,
Undaunted 'mid the flame and reek of strife,
Thou wearest the crown of ruin like a star ;
And in that day when earthly deeds are weighed,
And tears are counted by Omniscience,
Then God Himself shall speak with trumpet voice—
Louder than Kaiser's bugles shall He speak:-
"Thou borest the greater burden of distress ;
Henceforth a crown of glory shalt thou wear!"

Can't Understand Lloyd-George.

(Detroit Free Press.)

Let us notice cursorily Chancellor Lloyd George and his latest utterance. "We must husband our resources," he tells a deputation from the municipalities that seek governmental aid. "Finance is going to play a very important part in the struggle. We do not want a penny spent which is not absolutely necessary to relieve distress." How different is this from the accustomed speech of the foe of the rich! So short a time ago he was all for relieving distress and for nothing else. Why, it isn't six months since he was on the point of resigning from the cabinet because Winston Churchill insisted on a big navy program and wanted money spent for ships that Lloyd-George wanted to spend in social reforms.

"Our resources, not only of men, but of cash," he spoke of later in the talk. Imagine Lloyd-George bracketing men and cash as by any possibility equal! Indeed, the world is topsy-turvy.

Let Us Produce!

(La Patrie.)

If the people of Canada desire, they may next year export one hundred millions' worth of products for human consumption drawn from our fruitful soil. Then all the articles which we have used from Germany should be replaced by similar articles made in Canada. For all true patriots the trade mark, "Made in Canada," should be a sacred emblem, instead of folding our arms and giving way to discouragement, let us work and procure work for those who need it. There should be work for everybody on our farms and in our factories.

The Duty of the Merchants.

(St. John Globe.)

Canada is to be the Empire's granary in this time of trouble, and Canada will get much profitable business, that should keep active all the other industries and enterprises of the country. The merchants at home must not be less courageous, less patriotic than the soldier at the front. While one protects the Empire, the other must carry on the trade that has made the Empire great.

Spoiling.

(Washington Herald.)

To the victors belong the spoils, of course, but that is just what often spoils the victors.

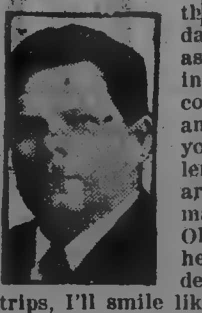
True.

(Washington Post.)

Some of the nations seem to be making war on the truth.

KEEP SMILING

By Walt Mason



Keep smiling, 'tis better than building a fame as kicker or fretter who's sore on the game. There's no sense in winning that sort of renown ; far better go grinning all day through the town; from office to tavern, as gayly you chase, display a glad cavern dividing your face; all day, as you teeter from courthouse to jail, smile sweeter and sweeter, and utter no wail ; and as you're ascending your wearisome stair, your smile should be lending its warmth to the air. Your troubles are frightful? Well, wearing a frown won't make them delightful, or batter them down. Old Trouble keeps piling its thorns on my head, but still I keep smiling, and will till I'm dead ; when I'm in my casket, all finished my trips, I'll smile like a basket of hickory chips. Keep smiling, 'tis wiser, through all the long year, than being a miser with chirrups and cheer. Why is the world dingy and dismal and gray? Because we are stingy with messages gay. We groan and we grumble, we whine and we wheeze, and don't take a tumble to facts such as these. It's every man's duty to chortle and grin, and thus fill with beauty the world we are in.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

ENCOURAGE SUGGESTIONS.

Editor Review,

Sir,—Has not undue emphasis been paid by your correspondents on a suggestion made by Rev. Mr. Rollins as to re-naming a certain street?

With those who have written I would be strongly opposed to anything which would even unintentionally seem to cut us off from associations with the past or with pioneer citizens whose names are deservedly handed down.

But the suggestio nas to name was apparently not seriously made but only a passing (and perhaps a playful) thought pointing out a singular coincidence.

More and not less interest in public affairs is urgently called for and the suggestions of our enterprising citizens whether young or old may well be treated with encouragement and respect.

Mr. Rollins is moreover to be thanked for attention thus being drawn to Captain Rubidge and his most useful connection with the then village of Peterborough. Let us have more suggestions.

Yours, etc.,

J. C. DAVIDSON.

P.S.—To his other public services it may be added that Captain Rubidge was one of the chief founders of St. John's Church.

MILLBROOK NEWS

(Special Correspondence.)

Millbrook, Sept. 25.—Dr. and Mrs. Ellis and Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Given were visitors to Peterboro for the exhibition.

About seventy young people attended a corn roast at Reeve Doak's new farm on last Friday evening.

The affair was in honor of Miss Dorothy Doak's birthday. A real pleasant time was spent. The roasted corn was delicious. Dancing and other program added greatly to the pleasure. The party arrived home about midnight, after wishing Miss Dorothy many more happy birthdays, and extending a hearty vote of thanks to His Worship for such a delightful entertainment.

Col. McNaughton of Cobourg, was in town on Monday and visited the Armories.

Mrs. H. Dunsford was the guest of friends in Peterboro over Sunday and Monday, returning home Tuesday.

Mrs. T. Williamson and son Walter were the guests of her sister at Niagara Falls, last week, returning on Monday.

News has just come to hand of the serious illness of Rev. Wm. Johnston who has been confined to his bed for weeks. While under the care of one of Toronto's leading physicians and a trained nurse, hope is now entertained for his recovery.

We are glad to know that the Rev. gentleman has received a call to a church some thirty-five miles east of Toronto. This is the third invitation to become pastor of vacant charges since leaving Millbrook, though an entire stranger to the people being in their midst only once. When the congregational meeting was held and nominations called for, of the many men that were heard, Mr. Johnston was the only one considered, thus making the call very hearty and enthusiastic. We understand that Mr. Johnston has decided to accept this call, and we feel sure that he and his estimable family will receive a hearty welcome to their new field of labor. Mr. Johnston is an able preacher, Mrs. Johnston is also a great church worker, and the congregation on their new circut may congratulate themselves.

Miss Polly Howden, of Detroit, Mich., visited Millbrook this week, and was the guest of Miss Lily Burton.

Miss L. C. Hawken has successfully passed her physical culture examination at the Summer School at the Toronto University. Congratulations.

Mrs. Elmer of Pan Yan, N.Y., is a guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. McIvor.

Mr. Chas. Ivory, of Omemee, was in town Tuesday, on business.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Fry were visitors to Peterboro for the Exhibition.

Miss Tilly Dolby has returned after a pleasant visit with friends in Peterboro and Toronto.

Miss Pearl Nattrass has returned from Toronto, accompanied by Miss Cameron.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Husk and Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Parker and families were visitors to Peterboro and the Exhibition on Saturday.

SOLDIERS' WILLS

In olden times everybody who was in the happy position of having personality to bequeath was free to make a will verbally or by an unattested writing. This right, restricted by the Statute of Frauds, was abolished in England by the Wills Act of 1837, subject, however, to the reservation that soldiers on actual military service, and marines on sea, were still competent to dispose of their personality as they might have done before.

Hence all the soldiers and sailors now on duty have, so far as the disposition of their worldly goods is concerned, a larger freedom than that possessed by the King's subjects who are staying at home. As a rule, too, wills are valid only if the person making them have reached the age of twenty-one. There is judicial authority for saying that even this restriction does not apply to soldiers and sailors on active service.

The Modern Suitor.

Oh, I shall not search for beauty,
Nor for sympathetic eyes,
Nor for what they call a "cutie,"
Nor for winners—otherwise!

For I'm simple—oh, so simple!—
And it matters not to me
If she have or not a dimple.
Love is blind—I shall not see.

But, I pray, ye gods escort me
(I am losing hope alone)
To a dame who can support me
In a style I've never known!

—Judge.

Claimed Advantage for PETERBORO
Secured by C. B. Routley

Last January we placed large import orders with our European potters for crockery and china ware. We have now during the past month received the goods, at prices lower than any previous buy, and we intend that not one farthing's worth of goods will be raised in price. You will find, as usual, that our prices will stand any competition that you can put up against us. If you want a Dinner Set, Tea Set, Chamber Set, Lamp or China Ware, Wall Paper, etc., our prices must surely appeal to you.

15 only 97-piece Dinner and Tea Set combined, each piece perfect, per set $6.95

10 Dinner Sets, 97 pieces, each piece with gold line enameled decorations, per set $9.85

5 China Sets, 97 pieces, with gold handles. Kermis shaped cups, pink rose decoration, per set $15.95

Now is the time of year that we take for clearing out our Wall Paper. Look at our south window for ridiculous price cutting.

THE MARKETS

Latest Quotations in Grain, Dairy Products, Live Stock, etc.

CHICAGO, Sept. 24.—Assertion that Canada would be likely to undersell the United States from now on in the wheat trade with Europe had a bearish effect today on prices here. Largely in consequence, the market closed heavy at 1c to 1⅜c net decline. Corn finished ⅞c to 1c under last night; oats off ⅝c to ¾c, and provisions varying from a setback of 3-5c to an advance of 2½ [illegible]

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 24.—Following the sharp advance at the close of yesterday's market further advances occurred in the wheat market today. Opening figures were ⅜c to ⅝c higher, and further fractional gains were made from ⅛c to ½c, but these were not maintained. The strength was caused by strong Liverpool cables, which were 1¼d higher. Cash demand was fair for wheat and oats while it was keen for barley.

Inspections totalled 852 cars Wednesday, as against 1137 last year, and in sight were 935 cars. Cash grain:

Wheat—No. 1 northern, $1.10¼; No. 2 do., $1.06¾; No. 3 do., $1.02; No. 4, 94c; No. 5, 88c; No. 6, 83c.

Oats—No. 2 C.W., 48¼c; No. 3, 46⅝c; No. 1 extra feed, 46⅝c; No. 1 feed, 46¼c.

Barley—No. 3, 65c; No. 4, 60c; rejected, 58c; feed, 56c.

Flax—No. 1 N.W.C., $1.23½; No. 2 C. W., $1.21½.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Sept. 24.—The chief reason of inactivity in the local grain market was not that there is no foreign business in sight, but on account of there being no shipping room available on outgoing steamers—the government having every available bit of space commandeered. The demand for all lines of grain is not very brisk, but the business that is being done shows no lowering in prices.

Cheese is but little demanded for export account, and eggs show signs of becoming easier.

Butter was again easy at its recent decline. Hay followed the rest of the market sentiment, and did not show any disposition to advance to higher levels. There was a fair demand in the local provision market, but it was purely for immediate requirements.

DULUTH GRAIN MARKET.

DULUTH, Minn., Sept. 24.—Wheat—No. 1 hard, $1.11; No. 1 northern, $1.10; No. 2 do., $1.07; December, $1.10.

CATTLE MARKETS

Stockers and Feeders.

Choice steers, 800 to 900 lbs.,sold at $7.25 to $7.50; good steers, 600 to 700 lbs., at $6.75 to $7: stockers at $5 to $6.50.

Milkers and Springers.

A moderate supply of milkers and springers sold from $50 to $95 each, the bulk of sales being between $65 to $75.

Veal Calves.

Only 35 calves were reported on sale, and prices were very firm. Choice calves sold at $10 to $11.25; good at $9 to $9.50; medium, $8 to $8.50; common, $6.50 to $7.50; inferior, $5 to $6.50.

Sheep and Lambs.

The run of sheep and lambs was light, and prices were about 10c firmer than Wednesday's values for choice quality lambs. Sheep, ewes, sold at $5.75 to $6.50; heavy ewes and rams, $4 to $5; lambs, $7.25 to $7.75; culls, $6 to $6 50.

Hogs.

Selects, fed and watered, sold at $9.25, and $8.90 f.o.b. cars at country points, and $9.50 weighed off cars.

Sheep—Receipts, 30,000; market easy; natives, $4.80 to $5.70; yearlings, $5.75 to $6.40; lambs, natives, $6.25 to $7.75.

Montenegrins Take Montak.

LONDON, Sept. 25.—In a despatch from Rome the correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph Co. says a message from Cettinje brings the news that Montenegrin forces had captured Montak, a town which controls the only railroad in the southern part of Herzegovina.

As Cattaro, the Austrian seaport in Dalmatia, is blockaded on the seaward side by the Franco-British fleet it is now entirely isolated from the outside world.

"Lest We Forget"

WE need to be reminded quite as much as to be informed. Memory has been jocularly described as "the thing we forget with." Out of sight is apt to be out of mind.

An advertiser who relies on the memory of the public leans on a broken reed. The absence of its advertising from the newspapers has been the beginning of the end for many a firm. "The present suitor hath ever the advantage over the absent lover."

A business that has achieved its magnitude or strength as the result of faithful advertising plays false if it suspends or ceases its advertising, on the grounds of economy. It is poor business vision which fails to see the principal feeder of business, and fatal judgment which cuts it off or interrupts its flow. Economies may be warranted, but they had better be effected in any other department than in the sales department—the department of revenue. Any course which shoves your customer back from you or hides you from your customer is ruinous. The man with the money needs to be constantly sought. Advertising is the great discoverer of new customers, the great retainer of old ones.

If you forget the public, the public will forget you

BRITISH FLEET MAKES TRANSATLANTIC TRIP SAFE FOR TRANSPORTS

Troops on the Move and Numbers at Valcartier Are Steadily Diminishing---Col. Sam Hughes Returns to Ottawa.

VALCARTIER CAMP, Sept. 25.—Canada's contingent is already on the way to the war. Admiral Wemyss has brought over a powerful fleet of British war vessels and collected others at convenient points to make doubly sure that no stray German ships have the slightest chance of doing damage or in any way impeding the passage of the transports. For days past there has been ample evidence here that the troops in camp have been preparing to move expeditiously so soon as the moment arrived. More than a week ago the ships at Quebec were taking on war stores and ever since then there has been a steady flow from the camp Quebecwards, and as the transports are loaded they steam seaward and pick up the British war vessels on the way, so that every little groups of transports is accompanied on this journey by a protecting force fully able to secure it against attack. Moreover, the transports are themselves armed with heavy guns.

Last night and yesterday the work here has been going forward ceaselessly, and as one rode in by car this morning from Quebec it was easy to see that in the camp itself there was a sensible diminution in numbers. Gone are many of the troops, gone are the artillery and much of the equipment, so much so that one could not but remark upon the comparative quiet after days of bustle and abnormal activity, and last night the Minister of Militia found himself free to go to Ottawa by the 8.30 train.

When seen yesterday afternoon by a correspondent, the Minister of Militia was well pleased with the progress made, and especially was he delighted with the thoroughly efficient steps taken by the British Admiralty to secure the safety of the Canadian contingent on its way east.

Troublesome Gender.

The trouble that Latin gender gives to American boys and girls who are struggling with the rudiments of that tongue should inspire in them a sympathetic feeling for a small descendant of the race of Attila, who found the gender of our English nouns and pronouns a stumbling block. A solid little figure trudged up to the librarian in the children's room. "That little boy," he declared, indicating the rest of the room vaguely with his thumb, "he hit me."

The "liberry teacher" followed him back across the room until the accusing thumb halted near a table where sat a guilty looking child about half the size of the plaintiff.

The accuser explained: "That little boy, she hit me. That little boy is a little girl, but he has short hair, and when I point at him she hits me."—

THE SHIRKER

Oh, don't say I have to go forward,
When cannon are thundering round,
And bullets are flashing like hailstones,
And bombshells are tearing the ground.

I've had quite enough of this fighting,
My nerves cannot stand such a strain,
I'm hungry and footsore and weary,
My limbs are all aching with pain.

In peace I'm a very fine soldier,
I keep all my buttons so bright,
I like the reviews and the field days.
I never expected to fight.

I've fought quite a long time already,
Oh, send me to some quiet spot;
I'll do what I can in the rear guard,
If the fighting is not very hot.

I've been in one little engagement,
And stood by my horse half the night,
And seen a man fall close beside me.
How can a man bear such a sight?

Reply.

Go! Poltroon and coward and shirker!
Shun suffering, danger and strife;
'Tis only the generous hearted
Make something worth living of life.

You shrink from your share in life's battle—
Unworthy to call yourself man!
Go! Herd with the maimed and the useless,
And live out your ignoble span.

But leave us the hardships and dangers,
The fierce charge of horses, and then—
The joy and the glory of conquest,
When men come to death-grips with men.

To Send Sailors Home.

LONDON, Sept. 25.—It is announced officially from The Hague that the British survivors of the cruisers Aboukir, Cressy, and Hogue lost in the North Sea, who are at present being held by the Netherlands' Government, will be released and sent home. Their internment is contrary to The Hague convention.

ALLIES FIGHTING FOR RIGHT AND WILL BE VICTORIOUS

Says Rev. Dr. Boyle in Sermon at St. Luke's Harvest Festival

St. Luke's Church was well filled with parishioners and appropriately decorated with the fruits of the field in honor of the harvest festival at which Rev. Dr. T. S. Boyle, of Trinity College, Toronto, was the special preacher last night.

The choir sang very nicely including an anthem at the close of the thanksgiving services; and the appropriate hymns, 346, 348, 351, 344 were sung throughout the service, including the national anthem, which was sung with great fervor.

Rev. F. J. Sawers extended a welcome to Rev. Dr. Boyle and to visitors in the congregation.

Rev. Dr. Boyle said he was glad to have the privilege of preaching to St. Luke's congregation, of which he had heard much about through Rev. Mr. Sawers and Rev. Dr. Symonds, a former rector. Rev. Dr. Boyle chose his text from first book of Kings, 22nd chapter. In this lesson it deals with many of the accomplishments of Ahab, that there comes a time when he conspired against his people, and though his good deeds were known, this conspiracy to thwart the will of his people, more than surmounted his good deeds, and he bore the ill will of many of his people. "We are all too familiar with present day happenings to fail to apply Ahab's doings to the doings of a king in the present war.

Rev. Dr. Boyle went on to speak of the wealth of Canada. When this industrial and natural wealth is exploited, Canada must take her place among the nations of the world. We should be thankful for this wealth, and thank Him Who has so favored us. But while we have these riches we can never be a powerful nation unless we are a God fearing people. A nation may have powerful armies and guns but unless it is fighting in the right it is almost impossible to win. Britain and her colleagues are fighting in the right and she will be victorious in the present struggle.

"On such an occasion as this when we gather to offer thanks for God's blessing in the form of a copious harvest, let me suggest a suitable offering in return.

"First, what is the estimate of our own lives—what are our motives, or the usefulness of our lives? Are we satisfied with it? No. Then let us try to be more useful and lead better lives.

"Second, what do others think of us? Although the opinions of others about us are not always to be taken any too seriously, it is well for us to lift our lives up, have loftier ideas and so merit the good opinion of others.

"Third, what does God think of us? Is He pleased with us? "Do you suppose our praise and thanks on this occasion or any other is acceptable to Him, if it is coming from our lips and not from our heart. We may deceive friends, but who will venture to deceive God? We have offered thanks tonight to God, but let us offer something more. Offer ourselves. We may offer much but our lives and our work for Him are more aceptable.

Ahab's injustice to his people surmounted his good deeds. We must ever remember that injustices are thought of long after our good deeds are forgotten. We must constantly do the right and always think how we can best serve God.

PRISON FARM FOR ONE YEAR

Magistrate not Pleased With Jas. Richer's Taking Way

James Richer of Hamilton has been frequenting these parts lately and was charged with stealing a twenty dollar gold watch from Johnston Proudlove, of Smith, and a bicycle from another man, valued at twenty dollars. He pleaded guilty to both charges and elected to be tried before Magistrate Dumble. He sold the twenty dollar watch for $2.50, and the bicycle for $2.00. He has already served six months in the Central for theft, and considering this and the present charges of which he was guilty, Magistrate Dumble sentenced him to one year on the prison farm in connection with the Central Prison.

Alice Butcher pleaded guilty to a charge of vagrancy and being a frequenter of a disorderly house. Her case was remanded till September 30th for investigation.

John Seny, late of Havelock, was found guilty of being drunk in Peterboro yesterday, although John said he did not actually remember whether he was or not. However Chief Thompson settled the matter by testifying to his condition, and the court assessed him $5.75 or fifteen days. Last reports were that he preferred the fifteen days owing to the tightness in the money market.

William Graham, of Toronto, came to Peterboro in quest of work, and while here he "got drunk." The Magistrate thought it was a poor way to look for work and fined him two dollars or ten days in the employment of the government.

George Johnston came down from Oakwood, and allowed himself to get under the influence of John Barleycorn—two or ten days.

PROPERTY COMMITTEE IN SHORT SESSION

At the meeting of the property committee last evening the question of having Robert Wilson, the present janitor of the city buildings, also look after the office of the utilities commission, came up for consideration. Mr. Wilson now receives $600 per year, and he had expressed himself that the janitor's duties in connection with the new office would call for an extra remuneration of $20 per month. This Ald. Stratton thought a little high, and he moved a motion that he be paid $720. He could get no seconder, and he then raised the figure to $800. The mayor seconded the motion, and it carried. The amount paid by the commission to the city will be made satisfactory to the former.

Putting on New Front.

The chairman was given permission to investigate the cost of having the front of the city buildings repainted, and, if it is not too much, to take the proper steps to have the work done at once.

To muffle the sound of a watch or clock, put it under glass.

Premier of Ontario Passes Away Suddenly at His Home

and in the bye-election which ensued on January 31st, 1888, Whitney was elected to the Legislature for the first time by a majority of 28, three more than his opponent had been accredited with previously. From that time onward he has represented his home constituency in the Legislature, a period of some twenty-six years. In April, 1896, Mr. Whitney, on the retirement of Mr. Marter, was chosen leader of the party, then in opposition, and through the long years of his side's minority in the House, he fought with undiminished vigor and determination. In 1902 he was granted the degree of LL.D. by Toronto University, the degree of D.C.L. by Trinity University of Toronto, and of LL.D. from Queen's University, of Kngston, in 1903.

Volunteered in 1886.

In 1886, at the age of 23, James Whitney volunteered for active service, and for a period of five months he took part in a campaign of resistance to the Fenian invasion. Throughout his subsequent career, he has been a consistent friend of the militia and an active member of the Dundas Reserve, of which division he ultimately became lieutenant-colonel.

Sir James practiced his profession in the little town of Morrisburg, where he for many years maintained a typical office of a lawyer in a small Ontario town. His residence in Morrisburg was a comfortable, but quite unpretentious, brick house, with a fair sized lot on First Street. It stood back from the street, with a picket fence in front.

Premier in 1905.

On the defeat of the Ross Government following the so-called Gamey charges in 1905, the Conservative party came into power in Ontario, and the leader of the opposition since 1896 became Premier with a majority which gave him confidence and power. He assumed the portfolio of Attorney-General as well as the Premiership, though a few months later he relinquished the former office, and took the presidency of the council. In the general election of 1908, his Government had become entrenched in the good opinion of the Province and a Conservative majority of 66 was returned out of a total representation of 106. In 1911 his Government was again sustained by a very large majority.

Following his recovery last spring from a very severe illness, he appealed to the people, the election taking place on June 29th of this year. He addressed a large and very enthusiastic meeting in Massey Hall and his party was again returned with a big majority. In the last session be took his place in the House amid great appaluse and attended to the duties of his office as far as his health would allow.

Failing strength soon forced him to relinquish work, and, some weeks ago sickness again confined him from which he never rallied.

Knighthood Conferred in 1908.

On the occasion of the tercentenary of the founding of Quebec City, which was held in 1908, the present King, then Prince of Wales, conferred upon the Ontario Premier the title of knighthood. In 1911 he represented the Province of Ontario in London on the occasion of the coronation of King George V. In 1913 he received the additional honor of K.C.M.G. at the hands of the Duke of Connaught, Governor-General. Outside of his political career, Sir James was always active in the service of the Church of England, to which he belonged, and was a member of the Diocesan Provincial and General Synod. Previous to his entry into the Legislature he had been a High School trustee and a commissioner for consolidating the statutes, under the Government of Sir Oliver Mowat. He was created a Queen's Counsel in 1890.

Bluff Out-Spokenness.

Sir James as Premier of Ontario developed an affection in the minds of the people of the Province by a bluff out-spokenness and a courageous independence which, however, rough to the individual upon whom developed the task of approaching the Premier, appealed to the imagination of the people at large.

"Honest enough to be bold, and bold enough to be honest" became the Premier's slogan, while his opponents referred to the "steam-roller," "the autocrat," and the "big stick."

Deputations who called upon Sir James were apt to receive very little pretension of friendship or special consideration. Sir James' practice was to hear them, make a few blunt remarks, and practically refuse to do anything in the matter until he was ready. In this way he received friends and foes alike.

Carried a Very Kindly Heart.

In private life it was well known that under his bluff exterior Sir James Whitney carried a very kindly heart, ever ready to sympathize with real human distress, and ever ready to prompt practical helpfulness. For political opponents he had no mercy, but no man was more genial with opponents apart from the strife and clang of the actual party battle. On the stump Sir James was a power with the people, laying down the Conservative principles, re-stating Conservative virtues with intense force of conviction. When aroused, Sir James as a speaker was noted for the strength of his periods, which carried a growng momentum until the final climax.

Lady Whitney, who survives the Premier, was Miss Alice Park, third daughter of William M. Park, of Cornwall. The marriage took place April 30th, 1877. One son and two daughters were the issue.

Sir James was a member of the Toronto, the Albany, and the Royal Canadian Yacht Clubs. He resided in Toronto at 113 St. George Street of recent years.

COMMISSION IS NOT LIABLE

At the meeting of the utilities commission last evening a letter was read from E. H. D. Hall, solicitor, which stated that the commission was not liable for damage to the building occupied by Richard Hall & Son, and owned by the Toronto Savings & Loan Co. The building was damaged by a break in the main about two months ago.

The meeting decided to pay R. N. Scott the sum of $44 as settlement of his claim for damages as a result of his threshing machine being damaged by striking an open trench on the corner of Weller and Boundary Road.

OBITUARY

MRS. N. SHEVLIN.

The death occurred this morning at her home, 231 King street, of Mrs. Nora Shevlin, in her 74th year. Deceased was born in Peterborough at 229 King street, where her son now resides, later moving to her present residence, having lived in Peterborough all her life. She was highly respected by all who knew her, and leaves to mourn her loss one son, John P. Shevlin, and a sister, Miss Margaret O'Connor. Her husband predeceased her by many years. The funeral will be held Monday morning to St. Peter's cathedral at 9 o'clock, and interment at St. Peter's cemetery.

Sixty Registrations

The Industrial Association's Bureau, which was opened to-day in the council chamber, under the personal direction of Mr. Basil D. Hall, president of the local branch, had over 60 names of unemployed on their lists at 2 o'clock this afternoon. A meeting will in all probability be called early next week to elect the other officers.

SICK DOCTOR

Proper Food Put Him Right.

The food experience of a physician in his own case when worn and weak from sickness and when needing nourishment the worst way, is valuable:

"An attack of grip, so severe it came near making an end of me, left my stomach in such condition I could not retain any ordinary food. I knew of course that I must have food nourishment or I could never recover.

"I began to take four teaspoonfuls of Grape-Nuts and cream three times a day and for 2 weeks this was almost my only food. It tasted so delicious that I enjoyed it immensely and my stomach handled it perfectly from the first mouthful. It was so nourishing I was quickly built back to normal health and strength.

"Grape-Nuts is of great value as food to sustain life during serious attacks in which the stomach is so deranged it cannot digest and assimilate other foods.

Y.M.C.A. WORK APPRECIATED

Is Praised and Endorsed by Camp Commandant and Officers

COL. CLEGG WRITES

A letter received by C. N. Meserve, general secretary of the local Y.M.C.A. from Colonel E. B. Clegg, shows how the association work is appreciated by the officers and men. Colonel Clegg also enclosed a clipping from the Montreal Gazette.

The local association will devote the receipts from the city championships sports, Thanksgiving day, to this work among our own soldiers.

The local Y.M.C.A. has on file many letters of appreciation from other Peterboro soldiers.

Valcartier Camp.

C. N. Meserve, Esq.,
Sec. Y.M.C.A.,
Peterboro, Ont.

Dear Sir,—In reply to your letter of the 9th inst., I beg to confirm my telegram of this date as follows: The Y.M.C.A. is doing a splendid work at Valcartier, a work that is praised and endorsed by the camp commandant and all officers.

I had a conversation with the commandant this evening in regard to the work being done by the Y.M.C.A. and he is warm in its praise, and is prepared to make an official statement to your headquarters, should it be desired.

I have also spoken to a number of the senior officers and they are all of the same opinion.

The detail of the work was taken up a few days ago by a press correspondent and I enclose you herewith a cutting of his report.

Wishing you every success in your efforts,

Beleve me,
Sincerely yours,
E. B. CLEGG.

(From the Montreal Gazette.)

A magnificent work is being done here by the Y. M. C. A., whose activities have won for them governmental recognition. The institution has been allotted to a larger space than any civil organization on the field, and has no fewer than 28 assistants, under the direction of T. F. Best, of Hamilton, and H. A. Pearson, of Toronto. Its latest effort was brought to fruition to-night with the opening of a cinematograph exhibition in a tent capable of accommodating 500 persons. The films are loaned free of charge by the General Film Exchange of Montreal, and no charge is made for admittance. The Y. M. C. A. headquarters at Toronto are providing no end of conveniences for the troops, and it is not too much to say that the institution is practically indispensable. Tents are provided in which the soldiers may write letters, and all requisites are provided free of charge. Thirty thousand sheets of notepaper and 25,000 envelopes are furnished gratis every day. In the large refreshment canteen adjoining, the association sells at a shade above cost price tons of fruit and soft drinks, thus placing within reach of the slenderst purse a food supply which has been no small factor in pulling down the high prices which everywhere ruled in the first days of the camp. Soft drinks then brought 10c. a botle, but now the price has been halved. Other goods, which cost seven cents, were retailing at forty, but these also have come down to a reasonable level. The institution is now selling 1,200 pies a day, 500 dozen of soft drinks, 175 gallons of ice cream, 50 crates of bananas and 50 crates of oranges, to say nothing of other goods. No soldiers, however destitute of cash, need leave the Y. M. C. A. hungry, for there are barrels of apples from which all are permitted to help themselves without money and without price.

Keeps in Touch With Youths.

Someone goes to the hospital every day with fruit and other things for the patients, while the time of two others is wholly taken up in the search for young soldiers strewn somewhere up and down camp whose parents and relations desire the association to keep in touch with them. Hundreds of letters from anxious friends in Ontario and Quebec are received, and all show unmistakable evidences of the deep gratitude for the kind acts of the officials.

The physical work of the camp is in charge of Toronto Central, the directors being Fred. J. Smith and Thomas Armour. Fifteen games are running nightly, with nearly 600 men participating. Large numbers spend the evenings over the camp fires singing all the well-known hymns. Services are held at ten different points nightly, the speakers coming from various parts of Ontario.

On Sunday the Rev. W. A. Cameron, of Toronto, will be there, and such men as the Rev. Andrew Gentry and Rev. I. W. Dean are taking part in the work of the camp.

Socialist Paper Suppressed.

LONDON, Sept. 25. — A despatch to Reuter's from Amsterdam says:

"A telegram received here says the German Socialist paper, Volksbatt, published at Bochum, Westphalia, has been suppressed by the German military authorities and its editor arrested for criticizing the military movements."

GRANTED DIVORCE.

Brockville, Ont., September 25.—Henry D. Beach, of this town obtained a divorce from his wife, Stella Beach, to whom he was married in Ogdensburg, N.Y., on September 15, 1909. The decree was granted upon statutory grounds at a sitting of a special court held in Ogdensburg.

ALLIES DRIVE ENEMY BACK AND RECOVER PERRONE

Reports From Paris Say That the Success of the Left Wing of the Allies Placed Gen. Von Kluk in a Dangerous Position and He is Nearly Enveloped—New Invasion of France at Nancy Fails.

AT THE BATTLEFRONT, Sept. . —(Via Paris.)—The German offensive was extremely vigorous yesterday at the western end of the long line stretching along the Rivers Oise, Aisne and Woevre. The allied troops, whose gaps had been filled with freshly arrived reinforcements, not only repeatedly thrust back the masses of Germans thrown against them, but eventually carried out a successful counter-attack, which resulted in the gaining of considerable ground and the definite capture of Peronne, about eighteen miles northwest of St. Quentin and 94 miles northeast of Paris, on the River Somme, about which town the fiercest engagement occurred.

The fortifications of Peronne were raised in 1906-7. The fortress was captured in 1815 by the Duke of Wellington, and in 1870 it capitulated to the Germans after a week's bombardment.

Von Kluk Nearly Enveloped.

PARIS, Sept. 25.—With the capture of Peronne, about eighteen miles northwest of St. Quentin, French troops are now to the south, to the west, to the north and to the northwest of the German right wing army, commanded by Gen. Alexander Von Kluk. With only a few more miles of progress to the south of Peronne the French will have completely surrounded the western end of the German line, and will be able to cut this force off from its basis of supplies over the railroads into Belgium. Efforts of the Germans to begin a new invasion of France near Nancy, through the Vosges Mountains, have resulted in defeat.

The position of the allied army on the west, given above, has not been indicated in previous despatches, but, if true, would show that the enveloping movement has been practically completed. From earlier despatches it was indicated that the German line extended considerably north of St. Quentin.

The brief official communication issued last night announces that on the left wing the battle continues to develop; that a lull has occurred in the fighting in the centre, and that on the right wing the German attacks apparently have been checked.

Official Statement.

PARIS, Sept. 25. — The following official announcement was made in Paris yesterday afternoon;

"First—On our left wing, between the River Somme and the River Oise, our troops have advanced in the direction of Roye. A detachment occupied Peronne, and held this position in spite of a spirited attack on the part of the enemy continues to maintain important bodies of troops, well entrenched. We have made a slight advance to the northwest of Berry-au-Bac.

"Second—On the centre, between Rheims and the Argonne district, the situation shows no change. To the east of the Argonne and on the heights of the Meuse, the enemy has continued his attacks, delivering them with especial violence. The fighting continues, accompanied by alternate retirements at certain points and advances at others.

"On our right wing there has been no change of importance.

"In the region of Nancy and in the Vosges, certain detachments of the enemy have again attempted to enter upon French soil, driving back light covering bodies of our troops, but their offensive was soon stopped.

"In Galicia the Russians, having taken possession of Jaroslau, are completely investing Przemysl and continuing their offensive movement on Cracow."

Brussels Is Strengthened.

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 25.—Reports from Brussels confirm earlier rumors that the Germans are throwing up fortifications in and around the city. Earthworks protect a large number of guns, stationed at strategic points.

A Belgian armored train, supported by a force of troops, has inflicted defeat on a German detachment near Ghent.

TO DRIVE THEM OUT

French Will Make Austrian Fleet Take to Sea

BARI, Italy, Sept. 25. — Vessels which have arrived from the Dalmatian coast report that the bombardment of Cattaro by the French ships and by the guns on Mount Lovchen has begun.

The major portion of the Austrian fleet is in Cattaro harbor, and the object of the Allied fleets, French and British, is to draw the Austrian warships out of the harbor. This has not been possible by bombardment from the sea alone, hence the announcement that bombardment has begun on the land side is important. A Montenegrin force is assisted by French gunners on the land side.

Trawler Sunk by Mine.

LONDON, Sept. 25. — Another Grimsby trawler was blown up by a mine Wednesday in the North Sea. The vessel remained afloat ten minutes, which enabled all the members of the crew to escape except one deckhand, who was killed by falling debris.

BERLIN WAR NEWS

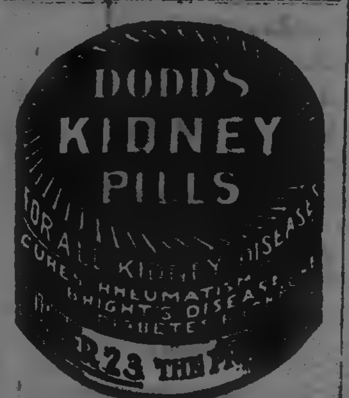
Bulletins at Capital Claim Victories

BERLIN, Sept. 25. — (By Wireless.)—German successes on the centre of the battle line in France are claimed by the official war bulletins, which declare that the heavy artillery of the Germans is successfully bombarding Troyon in the vicinity of Verdun and Les Paroches, Camp Des Romains and Luneville.

The submarine U-9, in charge of Lieut.-Commander Weddigen escaped unharmed after sinking the British cruisers Aboukir, Cressy and Hogue. Every member of the crew was given the Iron Cross for their deed.

An official statement by the War Office declares that the British cruiser Pathfinder was sunk, not by a mine, but by the German submarine U-21, which also escaped unhurt.

Eye-witnesses of the bombardment of Rheims state that the cathedral was only slightly damaged by the German shells.



WILL GUARD AGAINST SPIES

Censorship of Phones and Telegraphs

OTTAWA, Sept. 25.—The order-in-council passed yesterday giving the Government power to censor all telegraph and telephone messages transmitted to points outside the country provides that the Government can take possession of any telegraph or telephone office. When expedient, the Government, instead of or in addition to taking possession of an office, can place a censor in control, to whom all messages going out of Canada must pass through certain named offices only, and the employe in charge may be required to take an oath not to transmit messages revealing military plans or activities.

Any company, official, or director, knowingly allowing the violation of this order will be liable to a fine not exceeding $5,000 or five years' imprisonment. It is understood that the order is chiefly precautionary, but that a close watch will be kept on messages going to the United States from one or two points.

British Troops Landed.

TOKIO, Sept. 25.—The War Office makes the official announcement that British troops, under Brigadier-General Nathaniel W. Barnardiston, commander of the North China forces, landed on Sept. 23 in the neighborhood of Laoshan Bay to participate in the movements against the German at Tsingtau.

MONTROSE ASHORE.

Captain Kendall Comes To Grief On Coast of France.

NANTES, France, Sept. 25. — The British steamer Montrose, from Quebec, is ashore in the River Loire, with her stoke hold full of water.

The Montrose reported ashore in the Loire yesterday is the steamer that carried Dr. Harvey H. Crippen, the London wife murderer, and Ethel Leneve on their flight to America in July, 1910. H. G. Kendall was in command of the Empress of Ireland when she was run down and sunk in the lower St. Lawrence last May with a loss of more than one thousand lives. After being cleared by a Government enquiry of responsibility for this disaster, Capt. Kendall was put on the Montrose.

The Montrose, it is supposed, was in French waters as a military transport.

The Monrose has been used by the Canadian Government to carry hay and oats to France. She had delivered her cargo, and presumably was returning when the accident happened.

Austrians Have Cholera.

LONDON, Sept 25. — Official confirmation has reached London of the appearance of cholera in the Austrian army. According to this intelligence it is admitted that there are nine cases of cholera among Austrian wounded sent back from the front.

Plenty of Jaw.

Two cockney "lidies" were discussing each other publicly. One said something about the other's "jaw," or "jore." "Garn," answered her opponent, "you've got enough jaw for two sets of teeth, you 'ave."—London Telegraph.

ENEMY ARE MIXED LOT

All Sections Muddled Together Says Gen. French

LONDON, Sept. 25.—The official press bureau last night issued a report from Field Marshal Sir John French's headquarters, supplementing the despatch of Sept. 22 on the British operations in France. Sir John says in part.

"The enemy is still maintaining himself along the whole front and in order to do so is throwing into the fight detachments composed of units from very different formations, the active army, reserve and landwehr, as is shown by the uniforms of the prisoners recently captured.

"Our progress, although slow on account of the strength of the defensive positions against which we are pressing, has in certain directions been continuous, but the present battle may well last for some days before a decision is reached, since it now approximates somewhat to siege warfare.

"The Germans are making use of searchlights. This fact, coupled with their great strength in heavy artillery, lerds to the supposition that they are employing material which may have been collected for the siege of Paris."

He then recounts the events of the past few days and says the Germans have adoptde the illegal ruse of driving French prisoners before them when they attack. They are also misusing the white flag and the Red Cross arm brassards.

"That irregular use of the protection afforded by the Geneva convention is not uncommon is confirmed by the fact that on one occasion men in the uniform of combatant units have been captured wearing a Red Cross brassard, hastily slipped over the arm. The excuse given has been that they had been detailed after the fight to look after the wounded.

ROUMANIA WILL JOIN

Is About to Mobilize Against Austria Say Statements

BUCHAREST, Sept. 25.—Semi-official statements believed to be authentic, convey the information that Roumania will at once mobilize her forces, and, it is declared, join the allies. The program is said to provide for immediate occupation of Transylvania.

The new Roumanian Cabinet is flatly in favor of war, but King Karl, who is a Hohenzollern by birth, the son of the late Prince Karl, is bitterly opposed to war against Germany. Rumors of his abdication in the event of hostilities are persistent. The Roumanian people are chafing under restraint, demanding that they be led against the Germans and Austrians.

Italian sentiment continues strongly in favor of war and eventualities are expected at any time. If Italy casts her lot with the allies the Balkan states are almost certain to act with her.

Tried To Expel Bourassa.

MONTREAL, Sept. 25. — An attempt was made yesterday afternoon to expel Henri Bourassa, the Nationalist leader, from the Canadian Club at a banquet held in the Windsor Hotel, at which the Belgian delegation to President Wilson were present. A resolution calling for Mr. Bourassa's expulsion was tendered, but the chairman, Dean Adams of McGill University, would not accept it, as it was out of order.

G. H. Perley is president.

AUSTRIAN ARMY AT THE MERCY OF THE RUSSIANS

They Now Command the Enemy's Flank and Can Take Them Piece by Piece—Austrian Campaign Has Failed.

PETROGRAD, Sept. 25.—An official communication issued by the general staff yesterday says:

"On Sept. 21 the Russian troops took by storm the fortifications of Jaroslau, on the right bank of the River San. They took twenty cannn, even though the enemy offered heavy resistance, and blew up the bridge over the San. Two days previous the Russians had occupied Staromiasto, Przeworsk and Lancut, to the north and west of Jaroslau.

"The Russian cavalry is pursuing the retreating Austrian rear guard and inflicting heavy losses, although the Austrians destroyed many bridges.

"Every day the number of prisoners and seized cannon increases. The demoralization of the enemy is shewn by the pillaging and panicky retreat. Prisoners unanimously assert that a majority of their officers are killed or missing, and that the soldiers feel the loss keenly.

"The newly-formed Russian regiments have covered themselves with glory, fighting side by side with the veterans."

Col. Shumski, the famous Russian military critic, ascribes high strategic importance to the capture of Jaroslau, since it gives the Russians a base for action on the right flank of the Austrian armies along the line from Cracow to the San river.

"Przemysl," he says, "will be speedily invested in a semi-circle by Russian troops which have come up from the east, and are coming up from the north and the west. The appearance of Russian troops in the rear of Przemysl from the south will compel the retirement to Jaslo and Cracow by a flank march of the Austrian army gathered around Przemysl. The Austrians during the next few days must form along the line, 132 miles in length, from Cracow to Przemysl.

Russian forces are now approaching the right flank of this long line at Przemysl from three directions: north, east and south. They will shatter this flank and then can proceed to break up the whole line piece by piece. The situation of the Austrian armies occupying the line from Cracow to Przemysl is, therefore, full of peril, and it is impossible to doubt that they will be obliged to seek another line of defence. I consider that the fortifications of Jaroslau were much more powerful than those of Liege or Namur."

A despatch by the Rome correspondent of the Central News Agency says that the Russian advance guards already have arrived before the Austrian fortress of Cracow.

With Cossacks already in touch with the garrison at Cracow, and the province of Galicia overrun by the armies of the Czar, the first phase of the Russian plan of campaign may be said to be nearing completion. Austria-Hungary has failed in her offensive movement against Russian Poland, and on her own soil has sacrificed the flower of her army in a vain attempt to withstand the Russian legions that poured across her northeastern frontier, inflicting staggering losses in their irresistible advance through Lemberg and Jaroslau.

Russians In Soldau.

LONDON, Sept. 25. — The Paris Matin prints a despatch from Petrograd, stating that the Germans, who drove Gen. Rennenkampff back into Russia, are reported to have suffered a great defeat at Subir. The Russians have reoccupied Soldau, in East Prussia, on the Polish frontier. It is stated that the Germans are evacuating East Prussia to reinforce the line from Thorn, in West Prussia, on the border of Poland, to Kalisz, a town in Russian Poland.

An official German despatch receievd last evening by the Marconi Wireless Telegraph Co. from Berlin says:

"It is officially reported from Vienna that the Austrian forces now have been concentrated in their new position for several days, but have waited in vain for any serious Russian attack."

MEXICO IS SEETHING

Villa Prepares to Drive Out Carranza

CHIHUAHUA, Mexico, Sept. 25.—Gen. Francisco Villa ordered yesterday the mobilization of 25,000 troops of the Constitutionalist army of the north at Torreon, where he expects to withstand an attack by 10,000 Carranzista troops, said to be moving up from southern Mexico by way of Aguas Calientes.

Gen. Felipe Angeles, Villa's chief lieutenant and commander of the rebel artillery, has been placed in charge of the Torreon forces and will command them in the first battle of the new revolution now impending.

Negotiations for an immense loan from American capitalists are said to be in progress, and if the transaction is successful Villa will have a large fund. He has been recruiting heavily of late and has been replenishing his ammunition supply.

Preparing For Battle.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—Advices to the War Department yesterday said Carranza was concentrating his forces at Zacatecas and Villa's army was gathering at Torreon. Railroad communication between these points has been severed.

Conference Deferred.

OTTAWA, Sept. 25. — The deputation from Montreal which was to have come here to-day to confer with the Government about the raising of a large body of French-Canadians for overseas service has been asked to postpone their visit for a couple of days, owing to a slight indisposition of the Prime Minister.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier has written to Sir Robert Borden, offering his hearty co-operation in connection with this movement.

SLAIN BY TREACHERY.

German Steamer Killed Nine of Carmania's Crew After Surrendering.

MONTEVIDEO, Sept. 25.—Details of the sinking of the German steamer Cap Trafalgar by the British auxiliary cruiser Carmania several days ago were related by the sailors of the British vessel, which arrived here yesterday.

The battle took place at a point 300 miles off Rio Janeiro, Brazil, and lasted two hours. The Cap Trafalgar lowered her flag as if to surrender, whereupon a yawl filled with sailors put out from the Carmania to take possession of the German vessel.

The Cap Trafalgar, however, suddenly opened fire upon the yawl, which sank, the sailors in the boat perishing.

The Carmania, whose officers were angered by the act of the Cap Trafalgar, opened fire and sank the German vessel. The British boat then continued on her voyage.

In announcing the sinking of the Cap Trafalgar, the British Official Press Bureau on Sept. 20 added that the Carmania lost nine men killed and that twenty-six were wounded.

FAINT CONSOLATION.

Germany Promises To Build Better Work Than Rheims, When —

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 25.—A copy of The Frankfurter Zeitung, published at Frankfort-on-Main, Germany, which has been received here, contains the following;—

"War which destroys also opens a way to new creators. At all times mankind has regained courage to create new works stronger and more beautiful than those which had been destroyed.

"If the German armies in their victorious advance have had to hunt the enemy not only from the fortresses, but also from the ancient and sacred seats of civilization, we have at least one consolation, that a victory bought so dearly will eventually produce greater and more beautiful works than mediaeval churches towering to the sky."

NEW OTTAWA CLUB WILL PLAY IN RUGBY UNION

Frank Heffernan Has Been in the Capital all Week and Arrangements Are Practically Completed for Ottawa to be Represented in Senior Series of the Ontario Association

Frank Heffernan, the local boy who has inscribed his name on the hockey honor roll, has gone into another line of business. He is organizing Rugby teams. The following is from the Ottawa Citizen:

FRANK HEFFERNAN.

Former Local Boy, Who Has Been in Ottawa Organizing an O. R. F. U. Team. "Heff" will wear a T. R. and A. A. Uniform This Season.

Another sensation was caused in football circles last night by the announcement that Ottawa, despite rumors to the contrary, would have a senior team in the Ontario Rugby Football union this fall. Though the rumor has been revived and denied several times, there appears to be something substantial behind it this time. Ottawa will be represented at Friday's meeting of the O. R. F. U. in Toronto, and unless the unexpected happens meantime, the newcomers will take membership in the union, with which the Rough Riders were associated in their palmiest days.

It appears that Frank Heffernan, the former university star, came to Ottawa on Monday and got in touch with some of the local football men, with a view to having them place a team in the O. R. F. U. He has been in close conference with Jack Williams, Jim Kennedy, "Silver" Quilty and others, and will take a delegate to Toronto to-night. The executive officers will likely be announced this afternoon. It is said that Mr. Eddie McNeill, who is now on the Ottawa executive; Mr. Fred Carling, Mr. Fred Chittick, Dr. D. M. Baird, and Rev. Father Stanton are interested in the new club. Jack Williams, when approached last night and requested for information, corroborated the announcement that Heffernan was here and that they had decided to enter the O.R. F. U. The former captain of the Ottawa Big Four club announced that a meeting would be held today. It is presumed that at this session things will be definitely settled. Williams likewise preferred not make any promises concerning the team. He admitted, however, that he was sure of a first-class fourteen. According to rumors, the new club, if it materializes, will have Don Brophy, Jim Kennedy, Jim Vaughan, Silver Quilty, Ed. Nagle, Gordon Johnstone, Bert Gilligan, Art Murphy, Charlie Disney, Mike Killian, Billy Megloughlin and possibly Dave McCann.

BIG CHANGE INEVITABLE ON THE 1915 GIANT LINE-UP

Grantland Rice Says More Than a Few of the Regular New Yorkers Will be Replaced by Recruits

"For a writer gifted with the sob faculty or the human interest touch, there is a wonderful story at hand in the present Giant situation," says Grantland Rice. "Out on the field these September days the old brigade, heroes of three pennant years, are still fighting doggedly on—reeling and ducking, but sticking to the guns.

And, while this fight is going on, arrayed along the bench are ten or fifteen recruits, with almost as many reserves, knowing that in only another year many of them will be out there in place of the regulars now at work.

The Giants have slipped so badly this season that it is almost certain McGraw will work in a big shift next April. The shift will be made from the best of his youngsters now drawn in from the bush and now being polished on the bench.

The regulars know all this, and many of them know they are fighting for the last big league flag. We often wonder what the feelings of one of these Giant veterans are when he whiffs in a pinch and turns from the plate to encounter the gaze of about fifteen youngsters who are being groomed for his job.

There's quite a bit of the old hip-hoo-ray and big headlines about baseball renown, but the game isn't all roses and laurel, as many think it is.

There isn't a member of the Giant club who, if you met him off the field in civilian's garb, wouldn't be thought of as still a young man and well in his early prime. Yet on the field the machine looks old and almost worn out. Some of those now present will be missing next year, and missing because they are old—old at thirty-two and thirty-three years—veterans upon the last edge of their careers at an age when most men are barely starting in other lines.

There are men of fifty who complain that they are being crowded out by younger entrants—men of fifty in other lines. But in what other line is a man of thirty-two or thirty-three crowded out by youth?"

Not in His Line.

"A tramp at the back door who has already eaten a piece of that pie I made yesterday wants to know if you can do anything for him."

"Tell him, my dear, that I am a commission merchant, not a doctor."—Houston Post.

COMMENT

As You Like It

President Fitzgerald, of the Canadian league, is out with a denial to the rumor that the Toronto club will not be presented in the Canadian league next season. "Fitz" says the Beavers will be back and the only team to drop out will be Erie. Owner George O'Neill will merely take the Erie franchise and place it in some Canadian city, where Canadian league baseball is more likely to get a better reception that it got in the Pennsylvania city. Niagar Falls has been mentioned in this connection, but it is not likely anything definite will be done until the league holds its annual meeting in December. The Canadian averages will be issued next week by President Fitzgerald.

In past seasons the result of the major league and minor league drafts have been announced before the middle of October, but this year it is not likely the Canadian league clubs will know what players have been taken out of the league until well into the winter. The drafting is all being done secretly this season, and the clubs are getting the signature of the players on a 1915 contract before making any announcement. This is done, of course, to prevent the Federal league magnates getting a line on the players who are being sought by the big league. The system may work out all right, but it looks like a trouble-maker. It is putting organized baseball to a great deal more expense in drafting players this year than it ever did in the past.

The McGill aspirants to the Rugby team had best keep clear of Coach Shaughnessy when the big, crooked limbed gent hears that one of the London directors is trying to freeze Ottawa out of the Canadian league. At that it's a safe bet that the Senators won't be dropped because a prejudiced Cockney magnate wishes it. The Canadian league owes a lot to Frank Shaughnessy. He's the outstanding figure in the league and a man who is gaining a remarkable reputation as a winner in almost every line of sport. Might as well put the whole blooming league on the shelf as Ottawa and Frank Shaughnessy.

Rube Marquard lost his twelfth straight on Wednesday. Pretty soon McGraw will hear the fans greeting his big portsider with that "Ten thousand dollar lemon" cry. It's evident that Wilbert Robinson knew how to handle pitchers.

Y.M.C.A. NOTES

This week has seen the start of the boys' work in earnest, and by the way that the boys are coming into the gymnasium classes and using the building in general means that we are to have a real live time this fall and winter.

We want every boy to attend the gymnasium classes which have just started. A fine programme has been arranged for the boys in the physical department, and Mr. Carson would like every boy who intends to join the "gym." classes to come in right away and get an early start so as he will be chosen on the different teams, which will be organized right away.

Our game room equipment has been put into first class condition. Tournaments in the different games will commence early in October. A good programme of illustrated lectures, and vocational talks will commence in October and continue throughout the fall and winter. One of the most prominent features of the boys' department is the Bible study groups, the first group will meet Saturday morning, October 3rd at 9 o'clock. The life of Christ will be the course this fall.

Boys' cabinet will meet tonight at 7.15 sharp.

REGULATIONS FOR RIFLE CLUBS

Set of Rules and Regulations Have Been Received

For the information of those who intend to join the rifle club about to be formed it may be stated that the Militia Act lays down that there shall be two classes of rifle associations. "A." Militia, "B." Militia. With regard to Civilian Rifle Clubs the Governor General in Council may make regulations for them with regard to the constitution, object, duties, business, and the furnishing of rifles and ammunition for the training and practise of persons not members of the Militia, that is to say, that these civilian rifle clubs are under the jurisdiction of the Militia Department and in case of emergency the members instantly become members of the militia and under the district officer commanding.

Rifle clubs are to be established where it is considered in the interest of the force by the Minister of Militia.

The names of those appointed to administer the affairs of the rifle clubs must be submitted to the Minister.

Before any rifle association can be formed not less than 30 men over 18 and under 60 years of age, residents of the locality, must be enrolled and take an oath according to forms supplied.

The club must never have less that 30 members or it will be disbanded.

The approval of the Minister is gazetted in the usual formal manner.

The club affairs are subject to inspection.

A captain shall be appointed to every civilian association who shall with the committee manage its affairs.

A complete set of rules and regulations has been received by the federal member and will be handed to the club on Monday evening.

Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN M. SMITH

THE EIGHTH WONDER.

Solomon in all his glory
  Was not—maybe he was glad—
Decked out like the spring creations
  That are now the latest fad.
He had reason to be thankful
  For a favor such as that—
That he didn't round the diggings
  Have to wear a new spring hat.

Think of Solomon, whose wisdom
  Has been handed down to fame,
Sitting on his throne majestic
  With his head in such a frame!
And if any of his ladies
  Had come sailing into court
Thusly rigged I fear next morning
  Would have found him one wife short.

Say, was ever in your knowledge
  Doings in the name of art
Like the newest thing in headgear
  That is designated "smart,"
Such a riot of disorder
  Thrown together without plan
As the bunches being paid for Under protest by the man?

'Tis as though some straw and ribbons
  In an earthquake had been caught
And the mighty forces working
  Had the jumbled headpiece wrought
And had topped it off with feathers,
  Fruits and blossoms or a bird,
Striving with a zeal misguided
  For the height of the absurd.

Got the Answer.

"Why do I pay taxes?" vociferated the little man who was making a big kick because he imagined he wasn't getting all of the police protection, street lamps and general attention he thought he was entitled to.

"Because you can't dodge them," replied the man who couldn't resist the opportunity that came to hand to tell the truth.

Origin of the Word Academy.

Academus was a wealthy Greek of Athens who lived several hundred years before the birth of Christ. Among his possessions was a beautiful grove, where young men used to congregate and listen to the teachings of wise men, such as Plato and Socrates. This developed into the school of modern times, and these modern schools take their name "academy" from the old Greek Academus. The real meaning of the word academy is a school for boys.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Mr. B. Runnets, Campbellford, is in the city on business.

Mr. H. C. Stiver, Toronto, is in the city for a few days.

Mr. J. O. Nolman, St. Catharines, is visiting friends in the city.

Mr. A. Brown, Preston, and J. McDonald, Toronto, are guests at the Snowden House.

Supt. H. F. Coyle of Belleville, of the G.T.R. passed through here this morning.

Mr. T. M. Sibbald, and T. Bennett, Toronto, are registered at the White House.

Mr. George J. Sherry of Peterborough announces the engagement of his daughter, Eleanor Gwendolyn, to Mr. J. Parcy Bond, also of Peterborough. Marriage to take place quietly October first.

Mr. W. A. Kidd, of Olmabee, grows raspberries early and late. Rev. F. A. Conners, as four of his congregation can vouch for this statement, as they visited Mr. and Mrs. Kidd yesterday and at the evening meal fresh raspberries, picked that afternoon, were served with cream. The raspberry bushes are in blossom.

The president and officers of the Kitchener Red Cross club wish to thank the following for the donations made to them during their sale at the Exhibition: J. J. Turner, G. A. Gillespie, C. B. Routley, J. John, Trent canal staff, Coleman Bros., P. Grady, A. Brown, P. Connal, Mrs. Fligg, Mr. Sanderson, market clerk.

The club had about $75 after expenses were paid, from the sale at the Exhibition, and on Tuesday a box containing one hundred pairs of socks, a half dozen sweater coats and eight pair knitted wristlets was sent to Lieut. Harold Mathews for the soldiers. All members may receive wool for knitting at Mrs. Knox's, Gilmour street.

FINE PROGRAM FOR CONCERT

Sixteen Numbers on Program to be Given at the Armouries

What promises to be one of the finest band concerts given in this city, will be presented at the armouries tonight, by the 57th Band, Temple Band, Bugle Band and local singers. There are sixteen numbers on the program.

The concert is being held under the auspices of the Women's Committee of the War Fund and it is hoped the public will give a hearty patronage.

The three bands will parade from the market square to the armouris.

The program is as follows:—

RECITAL BY THE PUPILS OF ST. MARY'S CONVENT

Prizes Also Awarded for Proficiency in Studies

The efficiency of the music teachers in connection with St. Mary's Convent was further evidenced last evening at St. Alphonsus Lyceum when the annual musicale recital was given by the pupils of that institution. An audience that taxed the spacious auditorium to its greatest capacity fully appreciated the various numbers.

His Lordship Bishop O'Brien, D.D., Very Rev. Dean McColl, Rev. J. J. O'Brien, and Rev. C. J. Phelan who were present all spoke a few words commending the teachers of St. Mary's and the pupils for their excellent work. During the evening Bishop O'Brien presented the prizes won both in the educational and musical departments.

The musical program rendered was as follows:—

Vocal — "Song of Welcome" — Lejeal.

Overture—"Semiramide" — Rossini—M. McDonald, L. Hill.

Violin — (a) "Kinawiak"—Wieniawski; (b) "Seven O'clock"—Hartmann, M. Telgman.

Action Song—"Where the Birds' Nest Swings"—Tourjee—Little ones.

Inst. Duet—Le Carillion—Ringuet—A. Grant, M. Weatherhead.

Violin—(a) — "Cavatina Op. 85, No. 3"—Raff; (b) "Ein Lied des Madchen" Ovide Musin — M. Telgman.

Inst. Duo—"Serenade Op. 489"—Jos. Low—Piano I. B. Giroux, A.T.C.M.; Piano H. H. Pierce.

Part Song—"'Tis Our Festal Day"—Forman.

Accompanists: M. Lonergan, A.T.C.M., K. O'Brien.

The following prizes were distributed:

Certificate and prize awarded to Irene Grant, for fist class honors in primary piano.

Certificate awarded to Cecelia Mollot for first class honors in primary piano.

Certificate awarded to Loretta Phelan for honors in primary piano.

Certificate awarded to Florence Murray for honors in primary piano.

MR. E. A. PECK PAYS WARM TRIBUTE TO THE LATE PREMIER

When informed of the passing of Sir James Whitney, at noon to-day, Mr. E. A. Peck, M.L.A., said that the news of Sir James Whitney's death comes as a great surprise and shock to the people of this province. His almost marvellous recovery from his illness of last winter, and his appearance at public functions since, led his followers to hope he might be spared for many years to guide the affairs of Ontario. Great has been the progress of the province since he became premier nine and a half years ago. Wise and honest administration and useful legislation have been identified with his political life, and his death may, and indeed has been hastened by his devotion to his work. He was a great leader. He was ready at all times to listen to suggestions and to discuss proposed measures with any of his followers, and they entertained towards him not only respect but deep affection and very many hearts will feel deep grief over the news which has just reached us.

CONVENTION AT BETHANY

Ladies Deal in Able Manner With Different Subjects

The annual district convention of the Peterborough W. M. S. of the Methodist Church was held in Bethany on Wednesday, Sept. 23, Mrs. J. K. Moore presiding. Very encouraging reports were read from the different societies and the following ladies dealt very ably with the subjects allotted them:—

Mrs. J. G. Lewis, Christian Stewardship; Mrs. John Carlisle, What Our Societies Owe to the World; Mrs. Wilson Taylor, Temperance in connection with the Missionary Society; Mrs. S. R. Armstrong, The Study Class; and Mrs. James Kendrey, What is An Auxiliary of the Women's Missionary Society of the Methodist Church of Canada. Mrs. Campbell led the consecration service. Mrs. J. E. Middleton and the Misses Marjory Fallis and Netta Wake sang and the Rev. Mr. Neville closed the meeting with an address to the societies.

A resolution was passed thanking Col. Hughes for the splendid work he has accomplished for the temperance cause at Valcartier. The ladies of the Bethany Society very kindly served dinner and tea.

POOR SEASON FOR SHOW BUSINESS

J. J. Turner, Sr., has received the following letter from A. J. Small, Toronto:

Grand Opera House,
Toronto, Ont., Sept. 23, 1914.

J. J. Turner, Sr.,
Grand Opera House,
Peterborough, Ont.

Dear Mr. Turner:—I have just received word that a great many of the attractions are closing, as there is no business anywhere. The theatrical business at present is something wild and terrible everywhere, and conditions in most parts of the United States are just as bad as in Canada.

This terrible war seems to have a bad effect on business, and more particularly on the theatrical business, and in consequence I expect most of the shows that I have booked over my circuit will be cancelled.

Yours very truly,
A. J. SMALL.

FUNERAL WILL BE HELD ON MONDAY

Owing to the fact that two sons of the late R. H. Wood were in Vancouver when the deceased passed away the funeral has been postponed from Saturday till Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock to permit of the sons being present. Friends wishing to view the remains may do so in the Guild Room of St. Paul's Church on Monday afternoon between one and two o'clock.

INDOOR BASEBALL

A very exciting game of indoor baseball took place last evening between No. 6 company and No. 4. After a swatfest No. 6 company emerged victorious, the score being 24 to 10. The brand of ball given was very good and a large number of spectators thoroughly enjoyed it. The play was closer than what the score would indicate. As the program of the indoor baseball advances, the interest among the men grows keener.

HERE AND THERE

Yes, this is Canada's opportunity.

* * *

A train wreck, in which one or two dozen people are killed, does not apall us in these warlike times.

* * *

Business is still living in spite of the predictions of some business men before the war.

* * *

If ever there were wildcat mines, it's those ones the Germans are scattering about the North Sea.

* * *

Villa and Carranza are at dagger points again. Nothing to it, they take a second place in the war interest.

* * *

No need of putting the dentists out on drill for some time. They are quite efficient, as anyone will testify who has been having one of his molars treated.

It's about time to think of getting our winter raiment. It is well that the war is not taking place in certain parts of America this winter — the gunpowder would surely freeze up.

Colliding With a Planet.

Our small earth is not absolutely safe from collision with bodies in space, but is safe from collision with any planet in the solar system and with the sun. To be bit by a planet either the earth or the planet must leave its orbit. This is impossible, and it is also impossible that the earth can leave its orbit and fall to the sun. The earth is being hit by millions of meteors daily, from the size of pin heads up to the largest, several hundred tons in weight.

The Bugle Band will parade and take part in the massed band concert to be held at the armouries to-night.—Sergt. W. L. Sharpe.

MARRIED MEN FIRST.

City Engineer Parsons has placed 75 more men to work during the past few days. At present he has 105 on the waiting list, nearly all of whom are single men or men with a wife and no family.

NOTICE.

Will all the ladies of the Charlotte St. Methodist Church, having donations of clothing, etc., for the jumble sale to be held next Thursday, Friday and Saturday, kindly phone Miss Ruby Clegg, phone 1380. (Every little helps.)

St. Andrew's Church.

Rev. James Murray, D.D., of Erskine Church, Toronto, will be present at the preparatory service in St. Andrew's Church tonight at 8 o'clock and speak. There should be a large attendance of members and friends.

IS PROGRESSING.

Arthur Goodman, who was seriously injured yesterday when a large plate glass case fell on him at the C.P.R. freight sheds, is reported to be progressing favorably at Nicholls Hospital.

SENT BACK TO JAIL.

Charles Rose and William Barr, appeared for sentence before Judge Huycke this morning but were remanded for another week. The cause of delay is to give Acting Crown Attorney Wearing an opportunity to secure further information.

MUST REMAIN IN JAIL.

The prisoner, Redmond, of Bobcaygeon, who was implicated in the C.P.R. liquor smuggling between Toronto and the above village, came up for trial before County Magistrate F. D. Moore, K.C., at the session of the police court. His worship granted the prisoner suspended sentence with certain conditions attached.

Redmond was taken back to jail by Constable George Foster, where he will be held indefinitely, pending the trial of others, who are likewise supposed to be deep into the illegal transportation of the wet goods.—Lindsay Warder.

W. O. W. NOTICE.

The members of Sherwood Forest Camp are requested to attend the regular meeting on Monday evening, Sept. 28. Business of importance to transact.

Patriotic Songs

Some very fine Patriotic Songs are now in the market and among those seen on the counters of the J. M. Greene Music Co., Charlotte St., is that rousing number, "Be British," by F. Shuttleworth, and which was sung here last season by Frank Oldfield, the Toronto baritone, and was loudly encored. The latest march number is, "For King and Country" by Robt. Harkness, the great song writer, and has been published since the outbreak of the war. Ths is being sung everywhere by Harold Jarvis. Don't be last in singing it. Get it now. Then there is the great "Tipperary" song, that everybody's whistling. These are only a few. Come and see our collection.

GERMAN ARMY CORPS IS BADLY CUT UP

PRZEMYSL THROWN ON OWN RESOURCES

Russians Take Khyraw and Austrian Fortress is Now Completely Isolated As Regards Railway Communication

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Sept. 26.—The fall of the town of Khyrow, says the Petrograd correspondent of the Evening News, completely isolates the Austrian fortified position of Przemysl, as regards railroad communication.

Khyrow is 20 miles south of Przemysl and close to a junction of several railroad lines.

GERMANS USE LARGE RED CROSS FLAGS.

Geneva, Sept. 26.—A telegram from Basel states that the recent aerial raid on Dusseldorf depot for Zeppelins resulted in the damage to one Zeppelin. No deaths are reported. As the immediate result of this aerial raid, all cathedral towns along the Rhine, especially at Cologne and Strassburg, are now flying large white flags, while the dimensions of red cross flags on hospitals have been increased.

NURSES KILLED WHILE ON HOSPITAL DUTY.

Paris, Sept. 26.—The French Society for the Assistance of Wounded announces the killing of five nurses and the wounding of two others while on hospital duty, during the shelling of Rheims. The five thus killed were members of a religious order; others were young graduate nurses.

Every day announcements are made by one or another of Red Cross societies, of women falling while caring for wounded within the battle zone.

ANOTHER GERMAN POSSESSION TAKEN.

Bordeaux, Sept. 26.—The ministry of marine announces today that the French gunboat Surprise on Sept. 21 took possession of Coco Beach, in Kamarun, a German colony in Western Equatorial Africa.

BELGIAN "LAND CRUISER" PLAYS HAVOC WITH ENEMY

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Sept. 26.—The correspondent of the Chronicle at Ghent says a Belgian armored auto, carrying a maxim, has again accomplished a notable exploit. He says: "To the north of Alost the armored car came suddenly around a corner and ran into a party of German cavalry and cyclists. The former had dismounted, and the gun annihilated most of them before they could remount.

"Then the car started in pursuit of the cyclists, killing six. As they fled along the road, dodging shots and taking shelter behind trees when possible, four others were wounded and several captured.

"The commander of the car, Lieut. Delhaix, returned to headquarters with helmets, overcoats, saddles and cycles. He carried a crew of only four picked men. Germans refer to the car as a land cruiser."

CUT SALARIES OF CITY OFFICIALS

Ratepayer Thinks They Should Fall in Line

Editor Review:

Dear Sir,—Now, as curtailment and lowering of salaries and wages are in vogue and found necessary in these strenuous times, and have been accepted by all the industrial classes of our city, it would seem only fair that our city salaried officials should fall in line also. The increases that have of late years been granted should be taken off and retrenchment made all along the line. Then, again, I read where a caretaker wants an increase because he has a little more to do, which, if granted, will net him more than the average high classed mechanics gets in a year, and no family to keep. The city council should advertise the position vacant for applicants, and give a chance to many others just as worthy and capable, who have large families to support, and who would take the job at half the money. There should be at least a 20 per cent. reduction all down the line, and the alderman who has the courage to move in that direction will be doing his duty to the ratepayers of the city.

Yours truly,
RATEPAYER.

Peterborough, Sept. 25, 1914.

HYDRO ELECTRIC IN PETERBORO

Now that the city has gone into the light and power business the ratepayers should bear in mind that the Utilities Commission is in charge and that our evening contemporary is not running the offices as it would appear from glowing articles on dates, etc.

There is much work to be done and it will be some time before the new rater will became effective. The ratepayers, however, can rest assured that the Utilities Commission will do everything in its power to promote the best interests of the ratepayers.

Regarding the installation of meters, it might be explained that this is made complsory by the Hydro-Electric Commission, which body feels that the interests of all are assured by this action.

CRETIC'S SAILING DELAYED BY FIRE

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

New York, Sept. 26.—The White Star Liner Cretic, due to sail this morning for Liverpool was found on fire an hour before her sailing time.

Shortly after eleven o'clock the fire was believed to be under control. A cotton cargo was seriously damaged and sailing was delayed.

DECREASE IN UNEMPLOYMENT

Germany's Loss is Gain for United Kingdom

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Washington, Sept. 26.—The following cablegram was received by the British Embassy today from the London foreign office:

"In view of admissions in the German press as to unemployment, caused by stoppage of German exports and imports owing to the command of sea exercised by the British fleet, it is of interest to state that unemployment statistics for the United Kingdom, for the last three weeks shows a steady decrease of unemployment.

A MOTOR BATTERY ENTRAINS

Business Like Corps Leaves Ottawa for Valcartier

OTTAWA, Sept. 26.—The automobile battery entrained for Quebec yesterday afternoon after motoring in from Rockliffe and parading through the centre of the city, where they were viewed by large crowds of people and given an enthusiastic farewell. The battery passed swiftly through the streets, and the impression made was one of deadly efficiency rather than of showy display. The 123 men, under Major Brutinet, all seem to be well selected, and the armored trucks, with the machine guns mounted on them, the ammunition wagons, the truck carrying the steel gasoline barrels, and the ambulance car had a distinctly warlike appearance.

The equipment for the battery was provided by Hon. Clifford Sifton, Sir Henry Egan, Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, J. R. Booth, T. A. Hearn, W. Y. Soper and others.

A PASTORAL LETTER

The result of a special session of the Ministerial Association held this week will be made known to-morrow morning in every Protestant church in Peterborough. It will be presented in the form of a pastoral letter, which has been accepted unanimously by the ministry of our city, and which deals with the war situation. It will be read only at the morning service, and since all are interested in the stand taken by their religious leaders, it is safe to say that the churches will be well filled.

FIERCE BATTLE CONTINUES BETWEEN SOMME AND OISE

Allied Forces Make Some Advances and Adminster Heavy Losses to German Army Corps.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Paris, Sept. 26.—The following is the text of the official communication issued this afternoon:

"First—On our left wing between the Somme and the Oise, the battle continues very violently. Between the river Oise and Soissons, our troops have advanced slightly. The enemy has not attempted an attack. Between Soissons and Rheims there has been no important change in the situation.

"Second—On our centre, between Rheims and Verdun, the situation also is unchanged. In the Woevre region the enemy have been able to cross the river Meuse in the vicinity of St. Mihiel, but the offensive taken by our troops already has to a large extent thrown them back upon the river. To the south of the Woevre region our attacks have not ceased to progress. The fourteenth Germany army corps has fallen back, after having suffered great losses.

"Third—On our right wing the efforts of the Germans seem to have been reduced. Some detachments which had re-massed upon certain points have been repulsed by the entrance into action of our reserves."

BRAVE SCOT HELD BRIDGE PREVENTING GERMAN ADVANCE

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Sept. 26.—The Daily Mail's Paris correspondent writes that during the fighting at Soissons last week, one hundred and fifty Highlanders were holding a bridge across the River Aisne. They were attacked and overwhelmed by a superior German force and the entire crew of their maxim guns were killed. One Highlander left his cover, lifted a maxim on to his back and under a storm of bullets raced across the bridge to the far side. There he put the gun down and the maxim being still charged, he opened a hail of bullets upon the advancing Germans who wavered and then broke and fled to cover leaving scores of dead behind.

The Highlander himself was killed but he had checked a German advance and on British reinforcements arriving, the Germans abandoned the attempt to capture the bridge. Afterwards it was found, the Highlander's body had thirty wounds.

FRANK AND FEARLESS WAS SIR JAMES' LIFE

He Carried to the Grave the Affection, Admiration and Deep Respect of All — Possessed Honesty of Purpose and Courage

"Sir James Whitney died as he would have wished to die, as other great leaders such as Sir John A. Macdonald and Sir John Thompson died, that is, in the administration of public affairs, and he carried to his grave not only the affection of very many, but the admiration and deep respect of all in the province." These words were this morning uttered by E. A. Peck, ex-M.L.A., when addressing members of the Peterborough Bar association.

The occasion was just previous to the opening of division court at 11 o'clock. Many members of the local association were present, and His Honor Judge Huycke in a few remarks stated that it was but proper and fitting that some reference should be made to the work and life of the late lamented premier. His honor said it was not an easy matter to properly pay tribute to a man such as Sir James Whitney. The province as a whole knew him intimately through his character; his bluff outspokenness made him valuable, and not only that, but he was esteemed and respected for it. A silent reminder of the great love the people of Ontario held for him is the fact that the flags in every village, town and city of the province are flying to-day at half mast.

A Life of Service.

In view of the fact that he was an old member of the bar and had the honor of serving in the house, at the head of which sat the late premier, Mr. E. A. Peck added a few words to the remarks made by Judge Huycke. Mr. Peck expresed his surprise on hearing the sudden news that the premier had passed away, for after his recovery from an illness which kept him at death's door for days, a short time ago, everyone had hoped that he would be spared to further administer the affairs of the province. He spoke of the great service rendered the province by the useful legislation which Sir James and his colleagues had introduced and passed, and the fact that he was held in admiration by all parties for his wisdom and prudence. That was not all that contributed to his greatness. He had been one of our great men, because he possessed the qualities which everyon to be truly great must have, namely, honesty of purpose and courage. No charge of graft or political intrigue could be made against Sir James. He had the true courage; having come to a conclusion, he expressed himself frankly and very forcibly, without considering whether his views would or would not be popular. He had the deep affection of all his followers in the house, and they always accepted his views without question. They realized the excellence of his judgment.

W. H. Moore, K.C., and R. R. Hall also spoke a few words. Among members of the bar present were: Messrs. Jos. Wearing, E. L. Goodwill, E. H. D. Hall, E. A. Peck, H. Morwich, A. E. Dixon, S. T. Medd, W. Huycke, R. R. Hall, G. N. Gordon and W. H. Moore, K.C. Other gentlemen present were Mr. R. J. Soden, Police Chief Thompson, High County Constable Cochrane and Col. Miller.

OFFICERS APPOINTED

Names of Permanent Brigade Commanders Are Announced

VALCARTIER, Que., Sept. 26.—The permanent officers commanding the brigades composing the first contingent have been appointed. The infantry brigades will be commanded by Lt.-Col. R. E. W. Turner, D.S.O., V.C., commander of the 13th Scottish Light Dragoons of Sherbrooke, P.Q., Lt.-Col. S. M. Mercer, commander of the 2nd Regt. Queen's Own Rifles, Toronto; Lt.-Col. A. W. Curry, commander of the 50th Regt. Victoria, B.C.; Lt.-Col. J. E. Cohoe, commander of the 5th Infantry Brigade, Niagara Falls. The artillery brigade will be commanded by Lt.-Col. S. E. Burstall, commander of the Royal Canadian Artillery. Lt.-Col. A. C. Macdonell, London, will command the Strathcona Horse, and Lt.-Col. C. M. Nelles will command the Royal Canadian Dragoons. Col. Nelles is an officer of the R. C. Dragoons at Toronto, and has also been inspector of cavalry.

MAJOR-GENERAL ALLENBY,
Commander of the cavalry branch of General French's force. He has an international reputation as a bold and skilful cavalry leader.

LLOYD GEORGE SAYS WAR WAS UNEXPECTED

Now England Will See it Through to the End

London, Sept. 26.—Speaking at a meeting of his neighbors, held at Criccieth, Wales, Chancellor of the Exchequer, Lloyd George, made the declaration that the war was quite unexpected.

He never dreamt it would occur, he said, until a few days before hostilities commenced. He never thought any country could be so devilish as to pretend against friendship, and at the same time make elaborate arrangements to attack. Indeed, he thought war was so far away that he had made arrangements to spend August and September in Criccieth.

It took fifteen years to break Napoleon, the Chancellor continued. He said he did not think it would take anythink like as long to vanquish Emperor William, but long or short, England was going to see it through.

Kitchener to Choose Commander for Canadians

Ottawa, Sept. 26.—The commander of the first Canadian contingent for the front will, it is learned, be chosen by Lord Kitchener. It is understood that Kitchener has been asked to select an officer, and that the Canadian authorities will accept his decision. Besides the chief commanding officer, who will be in rank at least a brigadier-general, there must also be named a second in command. As far as is known no name has as yet been mentioned by the British War Office, and the position of commander of the contingent is still in doubt.

The probabilities are that the cavalry and artillery of the contingent will see service before the infantry. The latter, it is understood, will require some three months' hard training in England before ready for active service, while the infantry, on the other hand, are in a comparatively high state of efficiency already, and the cavalry comprises for the most part regulars.

It is understood the intention is to have six aviators accompany the first Canadian contingent in compliance with the request of the War Office. It is doubtful, however, if they can be procured in Canada.

Every officer at Valcarter has been made a justice of the peace, with power to swear in soldiers. This has been done by arrangement between the Federal and Provincial Governments.

PREMIER WHITNEY PASSES THE DARK VALLEY.

EARLY LAST SPRING, when Premier the late Sir James P. Whitney was so ill, the public expected to hear news of his death hourly, so pessimistic were the despatches. Anxious days passed, yet the people of this province lived to witness him carry his party through another election. Strang, and moving to a degree, was that great mass meeting in Massey Hall, Toronto,, when the Premier of Ontario delivered a stirring speech, in which he vigorously outlined the policy and record of his party during nine years of honest government. His presence was sorely needed at that time, both to his party and the people of the province, and the splendid support given his cause was a vindication of his policy, as well as a public recognition of the personal worth of Sir James Whitney.

The problems that were avoided by his restoration to health, we do not intend to discuss. The people were thankful that the public men of this province were spared the trouble of solving them, and expressed unusual confidence in the bluff old man who had fought and won, just before the election, the hardest battle of his life.

His manner was distinctly that of a leader. He had a forceful character that asserted itself, that stamped the policy of his government with vigor, fairness and frankness. The people knew what to expect from Sir James Whitney, for he was never a man of loose words or broken promises. What he said he would do, he did, and he was careful not to promise anything merely to avoid meeting a difficulty. That he made mistakes is true, but that he tried to do his work well and solve the problems that faced him as well as he could, is equally true. He was a successful man, who attained prominence by hard, efficient work. He lived his life as well and as much as he could, a fact that sums up all his worth as a man and as a leader of the people. Canada, and Ontario in particular, is better for his having lived.

AN INVESTIGATION BADLY NEEDED.

A DEPLORABLE CASE was disposed of in the Toronto Police Court the other day. A man charged nominally with vagrancy, but suffering from the drug habit, was remanded for a week. Pale, and quivering from hand to foot, the hapless victim of morphine clung to the dock and pleaded for a doctor to give him heroin. "I use heroin; it's a drug. I use 165 tablets a day. I am going crazy; you can't keep me in!" The policeman said he had been begging for money—to buy heroin. He contracted the drug habit in the hospital. So many other poor wretches are in the same manner victimized by hospitals, by the unscrupulous administration of powerful habit-forming drugs, that shatter the constitution and drive their victims into the paths of crime, or send them prematurely tottering to their graves. Heroin is a derivative of morphine, and is used chiefly as an anti-spasmodic in coughs.

The above case illustrates a serious charge against hospitals and medical men. Quite frequently cases like the above arise in our courts and show that there is ample need for a rigid investigation. It seems to us that medical men are given too much freedom in establishing hospitals, and that the public are not protected sufficiently from the malpractice of incompetent and reckless doctors. The stories that come from some hospitals would shock the people did they get into print. The person who deliberately becomes addicted to drugs is a creature of low mentality that the world can well do without. It is not for them that misgivings arise in the public mind, but when a man, as in this particular case, has been made, through ignorance, the victim of medical malpractice, the problem is serious and demands attention..

Commenting on the case in question, the Toronto Globe says:

> "The man who finds, after following a course of medicine prescribed by a physician, that he has been made the slave of an incurable drug habit, is the victim of a diabolical crime. If the point of danger in any habit-forming drug is not known, extreme caution is incumbent in its use. There is a lamentable abundance of material for investigation, and the case of every victim should be made the subject of inquiry, to the end that the evils of drug administration be minimized. Much human suffering has been averted by anaesthetics, and the medical profession may be able to put the world under a deeper obligation by establishing safeguards against the abuse of what has proved a blessing.

WE would like to know if the Toronto Humane Society has considered the question of providing feather beds for Valcartier Camp.

ABOUT 865 tons of gold are estimated to be in actual circulation as money in England, that being approximately the weight of £110,000,000 sterling.

THIS IS NO PINK TEA WAR.

THERE ARE some papers, among them the Globe, that are so unpatriotic as to publish mere allegations of an unworthy character against Col. the Hon. Sam Hughes. That they do this for purely partizan reasons, there can be no doubt. The other day the Globe ran half a column of slush purporting to be from R. Craven, secretary of the Toronto Humane Society, and detailing cruelty to horses at Valcartier Camp. It seems that Mr. Craven is a well-intentioned man, who has thrust his nose in a place where he had no business, and acted with bad grace. There are a number of people who think the war is a kind of pink tea for the men who "go camping" and fire off guns at bull's eyes. These men would do well to stay at home. War is no respecter of persons, much less of horses, and even respects law merely so far as such is in its interest. Men are treated cruelly, so are horses. That is part of the game. Mr. Craven says some of the horses were without food for three days. He might have read in the despatches of men fighting twenty-two hours without food or rest. Of course this is a cruel condition, but war is no bed of roses. Mr. Craven wants humane society men to go with the contingent, and they would be a fine encumbrance. Forsooth, they might protest just before a battle that the horses were tired and the battle must stop until they have had their gallon of oats. You see, they think this is a nice, gentlemanly war, fought strictly according to rules which, if violated, will "count" one side out.

Col. Hughes disposed of Mr. Craven rather summarily and was justified in doing so. No man in his position has time to waste on such useless and baseless allegations. Col. Hughes denied that horses had been treated as alleged. That ought to be sufficient. Further, it is to the interest of any commander to keep his army and horses as fit and well cared for as possible, but if circumstances necessitate over-exertion, even to the point of cruelty and death, war inexorably demands that circumstances be obeyed. Mr. Craven has been "stuffed" and should say nothing until he knows something about war.

THE GLOBE'S PEACE AND WAR POLICY.

The TORONTO GLOBE is having a hard time maintaining its Peace and War Policy. It wages war against the Kaiser and the Tories in the interests of peace. It preaches peace, beautiful peace, and says if we can't have peace we will fight for it. It doesn't realize the blatant inconsistency of its policy, but its clerical editor had on a day a peace policy that proved how unnecessary, futile, wasteful, cruel and wicked war was. When war was declared, the Globe had to fight the Kaiser, but couldn't let go its peace policy, so it is valiantly wielding with its strong right hand the claymore of its sires, and frantically waving with its left the olive branch of peace. We presume the latter is an invitation for the Kaiser to surrender, to whom quarter will be given. May he (the Kaiser) do so.

The Toronto Telegram is much disgusted with the Janus position of the Globe, and says:

> "In the name of decency the Globe should get on one side of the fence and stay there, at least until the war is over. One day the Globe bursts forth in a mad ebullition against the tyrants of Europe, and the next day spills a column of slop over the dear German people."

EDITORIAL NOTES.

A GREAT MANY Canadian producers have been advocating that we ought to use Made-in-Canada goods. Paper houses are among these, yet notice has been sent out that prices for commercial or job-printing papers have been advanced from ten to fifty per cent. That is killing the goose that lays the golden egg, for it is taking an unfair advantage of the state of war in which this country is. As to papers imported from Europe, especially Germany and Austria, there is good excuse for raising their price, but for doing that on papers that are hardly affected by the war, such as American and Canadian papers, is taking an unjustifiable advantage of the printing trade. It causes a condition that does not assist at all in the effort to use Made-in-Canada goods.

Another Star Fake.

(Ottawa Press Press.)

The other day the Free Press called attention to a fake story in the Montreal Star to the effect that a French general had been shot as a traitor for refusing to lead 60,000 troops to the relief of Namur. We denounced it as an altogether unwarranted and untrue slur on the French nation.

Yesterday the Montreal Star printed what, on the face of it, looks like another objectionable canard. It credits to the "International News," which is the Hearst service, manufactured for the New York American and other yellow United States papers in that class, a despatch from London stating that the commander of the British Mediterranean squadron "has been relieved from duty and summoned home to explain the escape of the German cruisers Goeben and Breslau." Knowing the source, it is pretty safe to characterize this story as a fake.

Humor of the Country.

(British Farm and Home.)

"What time is it, my lad?" asked a traveller of a small Irish boy who was driving a couple of cows home from the fields. "About twelve o'clock, sir," replied the boy. "I thought it would be more than that," said the man. "It's never more here," returned the lad in surprise. "It just begins at one again."

Should Not Require Explanation.

(Brockville Times.)

Some of the Liberal newspapers are trying to excuse, explain or defend Henri Bourassa's contemptible attitude toward Great Britain. Bourassa's attitude should be so plainly in support of Britain that it should not require any explanation or defence.

Her Fear.

(Sketch.)

"Why did Maude choose a single life?"

"She was afraid of getting a husband who would lead a double one."

PAINTED FACES

By Walt Mason

Kind Nature gave my Cousin Mary a face that's a delight, with lips as red as any cherry, and brow of snowy white. Her cheeks resemble cream and roses—or so one poet wrote, when Mary's face and queenly poses had robbed him of his goat. She should be proud of her complexion, so radiant and rich, and yet she keeps a big collection of powders, paints and sich. And when she's fixed up for a killing, some Lochinvar to chase, blind men might see that she's been spilling such stuff upon her face. "Ah, Cousin Mary, you are silly," quite frequently I scold; "why should you try to paint the lily, or gild the perfect gold? Just leave your face as Nature made it, and you'll be slick as cream, but all this dope you use will fade it, and make you look a scream. When you have reached the age of thirty, or maybe, thirty-three, your face will wrinkled be and dirty, a frightful thing to see." But what's the use? Ten million maidens are painting every day; they laugh to scorn our mild upbraidin's, and go their foolish way.

DEADLY FIRE OF BRITISH RIFLES

Germans at First Aggressive Waver and Fall Back

An account of a fight between British and Germans at the batle of Mons is given by an English sergeant in a letter to his brother: "Well, we know now what it is like to be in a battle. It came to us unexpectedly, at a time when we had given up hope of seeing any Germans. The first inkling we had of it was just after reveille, when our cavalry pickets fell back and reported the presence of the enemy in strength on our front and left. In a few minutes we were all at our posts, without the slightest confusion, and as we lay down in the trenches our artillery opened on the beggars in fine style. It was a fine sight to see the shells speeding through the air on their way to pay our respects to Kaiser Bill and his men. Soon they returned the compliment, but they were a long time about finding anything approaching the range.

Infantry in Close Formation.

After about half an hour of this work their infantry came into view along our front. They were in solid square blocks, standing out sharply against the skyline, and you couldn't help hitting them. It was like putting your head against a stone wall. We lay in our trenches with not a sound or sign to tell them of what was before them. They crept nearer and nearer, and then our officers gave the word. A sheet of flame flickered along the line of trenches, and a stream of bullets tore through the advancing mass of Germans. They seemed to stagger like a drunken man suddenly hit between the eyes, after which they made a run for us, shouting some outlandish cry that we couldn't make out. Half way across the open another volley tore through their ranks, and by this time our artillery began dropping shells around them. Then an officer gave an order, and they broke into open formation, rushing like mad toward the trenches on our left.

Lesson from the Boers.

"Some of our men continued the volley firing, but a few of the crack shots were told off to indulge in independent firing for the benefit of the Germans. That is a trick taught us by Brother Boer, and our Germans did not like it at all. They fell back in confusion, and then lay down wherever cover was available. We gave them no rest, and soon they were on the move, again in flight. Then came more furious shelling of our trenches, and after that another mad rush across the open on our front. This time they were strongly supported by cavalry, who suffered terribly, but came right up to our lines. We received them in the good old way, the front ranks with the bayonet and the rear ranks keeping up an incessant fire on them. After a hard tussle they retired hastily, and just as they thought themselves safe our mounted men swooped down on them, cutting them right and left. This sort of thing went on through the whole day without bringing the Germans any nearer to shifting us. After the last attack we lay down in our clothes to sleep as best we could, but long before sunrise we were called out to be told that we had got to abandon our position. Nobody knew why we had to go, but like good soldiers we obeyed without a murmur. The enemy's cavalry, evidently misunderstanding our action, came down on us again in force, but our men behaved very well indeed, and they gave it up as a bad job. Their loses must have been terrible. Little mounds of dead were to be seen all along the line of their advance to the attack, and in the retreat we picked off their cavalry by the score."

German Siege Guns Taken.

LONDON, Sept. 26. — The Paris correspondent of The Daily Mail says that in the hurried retreat from Paris the Germans lost several of their big siege guns, with which they had intended to reduce the Paris forts. Owing to the rains they were left stuck fast in the mud. French sappers have since been engaged in digging them out. They will be brought back to the French base.

JELLIES --- HOW TO MAKE THEM

There is only one way to make good jelly, and that is to use good materials and treat them properly. "Good" materials means fruit that is underripe; treating them properly concerns the whole process of jelly making which is not difficult but is "just so." To begin with, make jelly on a bright day. Neither jelly nor jam can be made successfully on damp days. There is no use growling and trying—you'll lose your temper and very likely your fruit and sugar.

Preparing the Materials.

Select a fruit a little green. If what you have is ripe or over ripe add a little of the green fruit to it. For instance, crab apples so ripe as to be mealy should have some other acid apple added. Three or four good sized apples are sufficient to add to three or four quarts of crabs. Green grapes are good also—if apples cannot be had. In case neither of these is obtainable use the juice of several lemons.

The next step is to wash the fruit and remove from the stems except for currants or wild grapes. Cut out all imperfect parts of large fruits. Cut apples into quarters or eighths and remove the core. Pare quinces and also remove the core. Also secure two china or granite cups with handles and see that the cups are exactly of a size. Wash all jelly glasses, fit with covers and stand the glasses in cold water. When jelly making begins, bring this water to the boiling point and then put to the back of the range; remove glasses only as needed.

Stand the glasses in a pan filled with water of the same temperature or set on a folded cloth wrung out of hot water. Be certain that the glasses do not stand in a draught and provide a silver teaspoon which is to be placed in a glass while filling with jelly. The spoon absorbs an immense amount of heat and prevents glasses from cracking. Two spoons will be enough, for by the time the second glass is filled the spoon in the first glass can be used again. When slightly "set" hot paraffin can be poured over the top of the jelly and made to come up around the edge. This is not necessary if there are metal tops. If there is any danger of mice it is best to use metal tops. Paraffin tops should be covered with paper tied down closely, but this may be done several days after the jelly is made. Store all jelly in a cool and preferably dark place. Paper wrapped about the glasses will provide darkness if there is not a good store-room.

Dividing Material.

Where one has "oceans" of fruit it is not necessary to be very saving, but where everything is bought at high prices it is possible to make some sorts of fruit go a long way. For instance, in using grapes it is possible to make two jellies decidedly different in color and taste. Separate pulp and skins by squeezing each grape. The skin makes a dark jelly and the pulp can scarcely be told from crab apple jelly in neither color or taste. In "doing up" quinces one can also make excellent marmalade as well as jelly from the one amount of fruit.

Each sort of fruit requires its own specific amount of water. That will be given under each recipe. Place the fruit and water on and cook gently until the fruit has fallen to pieces. Remember that rapid cooking is just that much fruit juice wasted. The evaporation is pure waste. Have a clean flannel bag. Dip it in cold water, wring dry and hang up by a stone rope to some hook or nail that is some distance from the floor. Place a deep vessel immediately under the bag. Now unhook the bag and place it in the vessel so that the top is opened out nicely. Pour the cooked fruit in, slip the rope around the bag and hang it up to drip.

May Stand Some Time.

Usually women try to complete the jelly making in one day. This is not necessary. The juice may drip all night. The large part can be put in a cool place and covered. It can be used the next day or kept very cold and made up some time afterwards. The long dripping insures a clear jelly because no pulp is squeezed into it. When pulp is squeezed through the chances for jellying are lessened and the jelly cannot be clear. Besides, the most that is squeezed through is thrown away in the constant swimming made necessary which also wastes good juice. Something quite worth knowing is that the dripped juice can be brought just to the boiling point and sealed in air-tight glass jars and kept indefinitely in a cold place. It can be made up whenever convenient—even in winter time. If one is short of sugar or jelly glasses this is a great help.

On the other hand, as soon as two cups of juice have dripped through it can be made up at once. Measure exactly two cups of juice and in the other cup exactly two cups of sugar. Put into a granite or porcelain kettle, stir until the sugar is dissolved. Place over a moderate fire, stir till it boils. Watch closely, for it will boil over very easily. Cook slowly rather than rapidly. Quick cooking darkens the jelly. Under ordinary conditions ten minutes of cooking—actual bubbling—is enough. Keep that in mind and watch closely.

May Pass the Point.

When once the jellying point is reached and passed it never returns. Therefore know the test and apply it. A silver spoon dipped into the liquid and drained will show not a smooth surface surface coated with jelly but it will separate into strips; the jelly will drop from the tip of the spoon. Dip the spoon into the liquid, point down; lift and watch the dropping, and at the same time the coating of the spoon. If not quite certain, pull the kettle from the fire and drop a very little on a cold plate. If it spreads and runs like water it needs more cooking; if it spreads only slightly and seems like jelly even when hot it is probably done.

As soon as the right stage is reached pull the kettle to one side. As soon as the liquid is quiet push the scum together with the tip of a spoon and life carefully. Take a clean tea strainer and hold over each glass as it is filled. In this way little scum will get into the jelly. As soon as possible, if any does get in, remove carefully but do not attempt to remove it if it has become broken and mixed with the jelly. There is no way of removing it. The moral is, do not stir the scum. If the jelly is properly made it will be clear as crystal and so delicate in texture that it quivers and shakes almost to the breaking point when turned out. Jelly making is a delightful pastime and not hard work at all, but it must be done just right.

MIDSEASON HAT.

Elegant Fall Model in Black and White Velvet.

The hat for midseason is smaller than ever. Here in velvet is expressed the size that has at present taken Paris by storm. The black and white combination is ultra French, while the white satin bow that shoots out above the lifted brim gives the finishing touch of smartness.

FALL HAT OF VELVET.

Sensible Motor Hood.

An auto hood is a convenience to the woman who motors much. A comfortable and becoming sort is made with a straw brim, flexible, but wide enough to give protection to the eyes, and a full silk crown that does not disarrange the hair. There are wide chiffon tie strings that keep the hood snugly in place.

TELESCRIBE IS EDISON'S LATEST

Records Both Ends of 'Phone Conversation

Ediston's latest invention, the telescribe, which records both sides of a telephone conversation, was exhibited in New York this week.

The machine is simple. The desk telephone is equipped with two transmitters and two receivers. The talker uses one set and the other set is hitched to a phonograph record, which takes down every sound on the wire. The phonograph is started recording and stopped at will by pressing buttons.

But although the machine is simple and easily understandable, like other Edison inventions, it represents years of experiment. It was pointed out that though Mr. Edison said of the phonograph in 1878 "the phonograph will perfect the telephone" neither he nor any one else perfected a mechanism to record telephonic conversations in the thirty-six years' following his prophecy until the appearance of the telescribe.

An important difficulty was the weakness of the voice at the further end of the telephone wire. This was overcome by putting one receiver against an acousticon, which sufficiently magnified the sound to permit the phonograph to take it down clearly.

It was said that 60 per cent. of all communication in this country today is over the telephone. The chief value of the telescribe is expected to be in fixing exactly what was agreed to be by phone in business transactions. One telescribe will serve for all the business of a firm. It can be affixed to the switchboard and used in recording any conversation wished. The price of the instrument has not yet been settled.

LOCAL MARKET

The market this morning was largely attended and considering the amount of fowl, eggs, butter, etc., that was offered for sale, the prices were high. WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 25.—The wheat market was dull and trading light, with prices tending lower. Wheat held fairly steady thruout the early trading, with oats and flax firm.

Inspections Thursday numbered 1153 cars, as against 2609 last year, and in sight were 1070. The weather has been ideal for the movement of grain.

Cash: Wheat—No. 1 northern, $1.09⅝; No. 2 do., $1.06⅝; No. 3 do., $1.01⅛; No. 4, 98⅛c; No. 5, 88⅝c; No. 6, 83⅝c; feed, 79⅝c.

Oats—No. 2 C.W., 49⅝c; No. 3 C.W., 47⅝c; extra No. 1 feed, 47⅝c; No. 1 feed, 47½c.

Barley—No. 3, 66c; No. 4, 61c; rejected, 59c; feed, 57c.

Flax—No. 1 N.W.C., $1.22⅝; No. 2 C.W., $1.20½.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Sept. 25.—The cables received for quotations on local grain stores were very much lower than the views of exporters here today. If room for shipping cargoes was available it would have gone empty today, as in a few cases the quotations received were below actual cost to shippers. The same can be said for flour, but in its case there was a small local demand, which did not occur for all lines of grain.

The cheese situation showed some improvement. New business was reported for English account, but there were no price changes on this account.

The butter market rules with a firm undertone at the recent decline. Buyers for local consumption appear to be taking only enough for immediate uses, which would indicate that they are bearish on prices. No attempt is being made to store supplies by small buyers.

Eggs were in good demand and their prices were firm.

The provision market was stationary.

MINNEAPOLIS GRAIN MARKET.

MINNEAPOLIS, Sept. 25.—Wheat—No. 1 hard, $1.11⅝; No. 2 northern, $1.04⅝ to $1.07⅝; December $1.09⅝.

Corn—No. 3 yellow, 74c to 75c.

Oats—No. 3 white, 45½c to 45¾c.

Flour and bran unchanged.

DULUTH GRAIN MARKET.

DULUTH, Minn., Sept. 25.—Wheat—No. 1 hard, $1.10⅝; No. 1 northern, $1.09⅝; No. 2 do., $1.06 ; December, $1.09⅝.

CHEESE MARKETS.

BROCKVILLE, Sept. 25.—At the cheese board 2210 colored and 1085 white were offered; the highest bid, 14½c, was refused.

VANKLEEK HILL, Sept. 25.—There were 1921 boxes white and 325 boxes colored cheese boarded on Vankleek Hill Cheese Board. The price offered was 14½c. Some was held on the board, and the balance on the street, at above price. Seven buyers were present.

MONTREAL, Sept. 25.—Quotations: Cheese—Finest westerns, 14¾c to 15c. Butter—Choicest creamery, 28c to 28¼c; seconds, 27½c to 27⅞c. Eggs—Fresh, 31c; selected, 28c; No. 1 stock, 25c; No. 2 stock, 21c to 22c. Potatoes—Per bag, car lots, 70c to 72½c. Hay—No. 2, car lots, $18 to $19.

CATTLE MARKETS

GREATER AND LESSER.

The star must have the limelight
  In showing forth her part
To keep her in good nature
  And stimulate her art.
The lesser luminaries
  Must do with none at all.
They can't have finer feelings.
  Their wages are too small.

The star must have her dresses
  From Paris tailor made
That she her charms in settings
  That fit them may parade.
The modest little maiden
  With just a minor part
May fashion her own garments.
  Who cares if they are smart?

And yet the little sister
  Who only reads a line
And who supports so meekly
  The one who is divine
May have as great a liking
  For fancy togs and glare
And all the gaudy fixings
  The actor ladies wear.

The great and mighty actress,
  The pet of circumstance,
She isn't any better.
  She only has a chance.
And yet she takes the limelight
  As though it was her due.
And others take the leavings.
  She sees that they are few.

Gossip of Worlds.

Astronomers are talking of calling up Mars and holding a conversation by means of a huge mirror. Presumably when Mars sees itself in the looking glass it will want to know if its helmit is on straight.

This strikes us as about the most simple minded proposition lately advanced by serious men. Suppose we did send flashes back and forth. How could we ever agree on what they meant sufficiently to transmit the baseball score or to tell all about the exploits of Roosevelt?

How long would it take two men in cells side by side with no other means of communication and who did not use the same language to establish intelligent communication by tapping?

New Handkerchief Sets.

Some shops are selling colored handkerchiefs in sets. The idea, it seems comes from Paris. There are seven handkerchiefs in a set. Sunday's handkerchief is white, Monday's shows blue embroidery, Saturday's gold, Tuesday's rose and Friday's lavender.

Pocketed Skirts.

The smart walking skirt must be short and contain pockets, although whether or not we are to bulge them with handkerchiefs, etc., is a question which the well groomed woman would possibly answer in the negative.

CAUSES OF GREAT WAR

On Several Occasions Many Lives Sacrificed to Avenge Murder

Upon two occasions at least has the murder of a British subject been summarily avenged by armed force. The first was in 1856, when the murder by Chinese officials of the captain of the British ship Arrow was followed almost immediately by a declaration of war, in the course of which the Chinese fleet was practically annihilated and Canton was bombarded and partially destroyed. Six years later Britain was at war with Japan over a somewhat similar incident, a Mr. Richardson, an English merchant living in Yokohama having been brutally done to death in the street near his own house by armed retainers of the Prince of Satsuma, a Japanese nobleman.

It cannot be denied that, more than any other single incident, the murder in February, 1899, of the British subject, Mr. Edgar, in Johannesburg by a Boer policeman, and the subsequent acquittal of his murderer, led up to the war which later on in the same year drenched all South Africa in blood.

War caused loss of this year's cotton crop in Mexico.

THE VACANT CRADLE

In memory of Mildred Jennetta, aged two years and three months, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John E. Dainard, of Hastings, who died September 3, 1914.

Our darling little Mildred,
The ideal of our home,
Has left her humble crade
To rejoice on the Lord's great throne.

The tiny voice is silent
That we so loved to hear,
The little chair is vacant
That she once loved so dear.

The little form so stark
And cold in that white crib,
But her soul from this dark world
Is gone, and out of sin.

The patient little darling
Bore all her pains so brave,
And now she is so peaceful
In the cold and silent grave.

The little arms no longer will
Embrace the loved ones here,
But cling to God above until
He calls her parents dear.

The little head that weary was,
Is resting on His breast,
Who always has His own good cause
To call us to peace and rest.

A FRIEND.

ERROR OF JUDGMENT MADE BY THE HOGUE AND CRESSY

Admiralty Statement Says Such Affairs as the Destruction of the Aboukir Must be Governed by Rules of Naval Action and Maimed Ship Must be Left to Her Own Resources.

LONDON, Sept. 26. — The facts concerning the sinking of the British cruisers Aboukir, Hogue and Cressy by a German submarine or submarines in the North Sea, with a loss of nearly 60 officers and 1,400 men, are contained in an Admiralty statement issued last night.

The reports show that the greatest discipline was maintained, and that acts of heroism were performed, but the Admiralty has established the rules that such affairs must be governed by the same laws as prevail in naval action, and that disabled ships must be left to their own resources rather than that other ships should be jeopardized by rescue work.

"The natural promptings of humanity have in this case led to heavy losses which would have been avoided by strict adherence to military considerations," says the statement. "Modern naval war is presenting us with so many new and strange situations that an error of judgment of this character is pardonable. But it has been necessary to point out for the further guidance of his Majesty's ships that conditions which prevail when a vessel of a squadron is injured in a mine field, or is exposed to submarine attack, are analogous to those which occur in action, and that the rule of leaving disabled ships to their own resources is applicable, so far, at any rate, as their own vessels are concerned. No act of mercy, either to friend or foe, should lead to neglect of the proper precautions and dispositions of war, and no measures should be taken to save life which prejudice the military situation. Small craft of all kinds should, however, be directed by wireless to close on the damaged ship at all speed."

"The duty on which these vessels were engaged was an essential part of the arrangement by which the control of the seas and the safety of the country are maintained, and, the lives lost are as usefully, as necessarily and as gloriously devoted to the requirements of his Majesty's service as if the loss had been incurred in a general action.

"In view of the certainty of a proportion of misfortunes of this character occurring from time to time it is important that this point of view should be thoroughly appreciated. The loss of these cruisers, apart from the loss of life, is of small naval significance. Although they were large and powerful ships, they belonged to a class of cruisers whose speed has been surpassed by many of the enemy's battleships.

"Before the war it had been decided that no more money should be spent in repairing any of this class and that they should make their way to the sale list as soon as defects became manifest."

The Wise Old Miller

knows there are as many grades and kinds of Corn Flakes as there are grades and kinds of flour.

To tell the best—the kind that affords the biggest money's worth and most satisfaction to the consumer—is easy for the old miller or food expert.

But the purchaser who doesn't know, must be protected. That is why the producers of the very finest Corn Flakes didn't call them "Jone's Corn Flakes" or "Smith's Corn Flakes."

These SUPERIOR CORN FLAKES were given a name that is distinctive—

Post Toasties

The average housekeeper has, likely enough, tried some of the various "Corn Flakes" on the market. To realize the perfection of taste in toasted Indian corn—cooked, rolled, and seasoned with sugar and salt just as it ought to be—one should order POST TOASTIES.

These famous Corn Flakes have been the favorite for years among chefs and food connoisseurs. They come ready to eat in sealed packages with an Inside Container that keeps this delicious food crisp, fresh and clean for the table. And the price is no higher than the cost of ordinary kinds.

Some Famous Sieges

Two Cases Where the Struggles Lasted Over Four Years

The defence of Liege by 20,000 Belgians against three German army corps numbering 125,000 will go down to history as one of the most brilliant feats of arms in the annals of war.

The Franco-Prussian War of 1870-71 was remarkable for its sieges. Bazaine held out at Metz against the Germans for nearly two months, and finally surrendered with 6,000 officers and 173,000 men. For this he had to submit to court-martial, and was sentenced to twenty years' imprisonment. Afterwards came the siege of Paris, which lasted six months. Thousands of shells were rained on the city every day by the Germans, and no fewer than 40,000 of the inhabitants succumbed to disease and hunger.

That lengthy sieges are quite possible even in these days of huge guns is illustrated by Chukri Pasha's gallant defence of Adrianople in 1913 for 155 days. Then there was the comparatively recent great siege of Port Arthur in the Russo-Japanese War in 1904-5, which finally capitulated after being blockaded by Admiral Togo for 210 days.

In Ottoman and Russian military history there has never been a siege like that of Plevna in 1877, when Osman Pasha defied the Russians for 144 days, and finally surrendered with 30,000 men and 100 guns, owing to provisions and ammunition running short. In the same year Kars, long the bulwark of the Ottoman Empire in Asia, was stormed by the Russians after a siege of five months.

Even these sieges, however, are somewhat insignificant when compared with some others. The longest siege occurred in the American Civil War, when the Confederates defended the town of Richmond for 1,485 days, or just over four years. Sebastopol, in the Crimean War, held out for eleven months, while General Gordon defended Khartoum against the Soudanese for 300 days. The sieges of Ladysmith, Kimberley, and Mafeking, in the South African War, lasted 120, 123, and 261 days respectively.

There is probably, however, no siege which Britishers like to read about so much as that carried out by France and Spain in their endeavors to carry the Rock of Gibraltar, 1779-83. Altogether the siege lasted nearly four years, and, as the world knows, resulted in a complete triumph of British arms, in spite of the fact that the enemy numbered 30,000 to 40,000 men, while the defenders could only muster 7,000.

Height and Weight at Birth.

Boys average a little heavier than girls, being seven and one-half pounds and girls seven and one-sixth pounds.

In height or length the average for boys is 20.6 inches and girls 20.5 inches. During the first year of life a child grows more rapidly than at any other period, averaging a trifle over eight inches.

START REPAIRS TO INCINERATOR

Builders Suggest Dividing Plant Into Two Units

A letter was read from the Read Incinerator Co. at the Property Committee meeting in which the company informed the committee that they would begin next Monday on repairs to the incinerator. The letter also urged the erecting of a wall dividing the furnace into two units. The city at present could get along by burning only one or them. The matter was left over till a report could be secured from the City Engineer as to the cost.

The question of William Hare's bill for $100 for delivering the ashes of the incinerator at a point further distant from the Goose Pond came up for discussion. It appears that Ald. Johnston told Hare to cease placing the ashes at the Goose Pond but the North Ward representative had no authority to do so hence the meeting decided to take no action.

A communication was received from the City Trust in regard to erecting stores in the Market Arcade. The general feeling of the committee was that owing to the scarcity of money it was best to allow the matter to stand over for the time being.

With the word market being introduced Ald. Stratton brought to light the fact that the Property Committee neglected making any arrangements with the City Engineer for the paving of Charlotte Street from Water to George and Water Street from Charlotte to Simcoe. The sidewalks have been widened and from now on it will be impossible to permit the sellers to back their waggons to the outside of the curb as the heavy traffic from the C. P. R. freight sheds would make it dangerous on the narrow streets.

The Mayor is looking into the advisability of running a pavement up the centre of the square and having the wagons back to both sides.

Building By-law.

Ald. Stratton desired to be enlightened as to what the chairman had done in regards to a building by-law. He was informed that the matter will be taken up immediately. The delay was caused by the City Engineer being rather busy of late.

TWO YEARS OF TORTURE FROM STOMACH TROUBLE

Cured by the Use of Dr. Williams Pink Pills for Pale People

There are two ways usually adopted in trying to cure indigestion or stomach trouble—one the wrong way, by using purgatives and the other drugs, which only act locally and which in the long run cause more distress by weakening the whole system. The other way and the right way is the Dr. Williams' manner of treatment—that is to nourish and build up the stomach by supplying plenty of new, rich, red blood. Give the stomach this much needed supply of new blood, and distress will disappear and stay banished forever. The new blod strengthens the nerves of the stomach and gives it the necessary power to digest food. Thousands bear witness to the value of the Dr. Williams treatment through the blood. Among them is the Rev. P. D. Nowlan, of Summerville, N. S., who says: "I certainly have great reason to recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, as they were the means of saving my life. Till I reached the age of thirty I never knew what pain or sickness meant, but after that my stomach failed me and food of any kind caused untold distress. I became constipated and was forced to use injections daily. This went on for two years; I grew weaker and weaker; my weight fell off from 1[illegible]5 to 125 pounds; I had a hacking cough and appeared to be going into a decline. All this time I was being treated by the best of doctors, but without the least benefit. Night after night I could get no sleep, the pain and agony was so severe. On consultation the doctors decided I was suffering from cancer of the stomach, and advised an operation, as a means of saving my life. This I refused to undergo and began to look forward to an early death. Just then a friend advised me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I had no faith in any medicine, and at first refused, but my friend was so persistent that finally I gave in and purchased half a dozen boxes. By the time these were gone, I felt much stronger, and the distress was not so severe. I continued their use, and each succeeding box wrought a marked improvement in my condition, till by the time I had taken a dozen boxes every pain and ache had left me; my strength increased; my weight was back where it was before I was ill; I had a good appetite and was completely cured. In the years that have elapsed since I used the Pills, not a twinge of the trouble has returned. To me Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are the greatest medicine on earth, and I never lose an opportunity in recommending them to other sufferers, for I feel that were it not for their use I would have been in my grave long ago."

What Dr. Williams' Pink Pills did for the Rev. Mr. Nowlan, they have done for thousands of others and will do for you, if ailing. They not only cure cases of stomach trouble, but rheumatism, partial paralysis, heart palpitation, St. Vitus dance and all other troubles that have their origin in a bad condition of the blood and nerves. The Pills are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

BIG, HEARTY BABY BOY

Mrs. Beck's Fondest Hopes Realized—Health, Happiness and Baby.

Upper Lahave, N. S., Can.,—"I wish to thank you for the benefit I received by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for female troubles from which I was a great sufferer, so that I was completely run down in health. Other medicine did not help me, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound made me well and strong. I now have a big, hearty baby boy, and praise your medicine for the wonderful lot of good it has done me." — Mrs. ISRAEL BECK, JR., Upper Lahave, Lunenburg Co., N. S., Canada.

The darkest days of husband and wife are when they come to look forward to a childless and lonely old age.

Many a wife has found herself incapable of motherhood owing to some derangement of the feminine system, often curable by the proper remedies.

In many homes once childless there are now children because of the fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound makes women normal.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

The London board of control has decided to ask the Dominion government to pay $50,000 of the federal share toward the Federal Square scheme. Until this money is forthcoming, the city hall project is held up.

The CRESSMAN Company Limited

"SIXTY YEARS A QUEEN"

The latest and greatest achievement of the moving picture world, and one which will be of great interest to every Canadian, has just been launched in England entitled "Sixty years a Queen." It is a complete review of the important events that occurred during the life of our late beloved Queen Victoria. The Barker Motion Co., the makers of this great film have afforded to the British people welcome proof that the British film manufacturers nowadays has not the slightest reason to fear the competition of his foreign rivals.

Some estimate may be made of the great undertaking when we are told that there are 8,200 costumes in this picture, 37 distinct gowns for the Queen, passing during the 60 year period from the antique to the modern style, that it took 2 years to complete, and cost between ten and twenty thousand pounds to produce.

It will readily be appreciated that this is a very difficult picture to produce. The producer was tied down to hidebound facts. He was not alowed to give his imagination play. He obtained his facts by reading the London Times and the Daily Telegraph of those particular dates; also from the Illustrated London News, and the Graphic of those dates. But the greatest assistance of all was received from Her Majesty's own diary, which she most assiduously kept all her life. Every day's incident of the Queen's life has been described in her own words. All the engravings and paintings in possession of the Royal family were placed at the producer's disposal by the Royal family.

The Victoria Era—the period between 1837 and 1900—was one of the most eventful in the history of all nations, for everywhere there seemed to be a sudden awakening, and all mankind was vieing with one another to invent something, or to advance the world's civilization; and the producer of this picture, while trying to show some of the progress that was made throughout the world during this epoch, had a very difficult task in selecting not what to put into the picture, but rather what to keep out. Had the producer attempted to depict all of the progress in the world at that time, we should need a solid week's attendance at the theatre.

The Feature Film Company of Canada announce that they have purchased the rights to show this wonderful film throughout Canada. It is understood that they have paid the biggest price ever paid for a picture in Canada.

For 3 days beginning Thursday, Oct. 1, this wonderful production will be shown at the Grand Opera House at popular prices with matinee daily at 2.30.

COL CLEGG HERE ON SHORT VISIT

Col. E. B. Clegg, who left here with the 57th Regiment for Valcartier, arrived in the city this morning on a short visit. When seen this morning by the Review, he said that he did not care to say anything for publication. He stated that at the camp everything is progressing very favorably and that the 57th boys have made a very creditable showing.

Col. Clegg returns to camp tomorrow.

MUSICIANS DID THEMSELVES PROUD

Patriotic Concert Delighted Large Crowd

The patriotic band concert at the armouries last evening was a rare musical treat. The sixteen numbers that were given were thoroughly enjoyed by a large and appreciative audience. The applause was hearty and in several numbers both the bands and singers had to respond to an encore. Mr. A. Huycke was heard to good advantage in the singing of "The Recessional," while Bandsman Minicola made a hit with "It's a Long, Long Way to Tipperary," in which nearly everyone joined in the chorus. Both bands excelled themselves in the quality of the music. The ladies are to be congratulated on the concert, for it is a concert long to be remembered. It is hoped that they will have another in the near future. The accompanist at the piano was Miss Gwen Smith.

GOOD FOR THE COPS

Officers of the Law Contribute $10 Monthly to Fund

The Peterborough police force will contribute the sum of ten dollars a month to the Patriotic Fund during the continuance of the war, and have already contributed ten dollars towards the fund on their first month.

KAISER WILL DIE SEPTEMBER 29

According to Mme. De Thebes French Prophetess

In view of Mme. de Thebes predictions coming true in the past the following extract from the predictions of Mme. de Thebes is well worthy of notice.

"The Kaiser will die on September 29. Revolution will break out in Berlin on October 4. The French will enter Berlin on October 29. The same war will have ended by November 1, having lasted three months and five days."

This great French phopetess has foretold many important state events, chief among them being the present war. The world will await with interest the coming of the 29th of September. She may be wrong, still, again, she may be right.

FUNERAL OF LATE PREMIER, TUESDAY

Mr. J. H. Burnham received a telephone message from the minister of education to-day, informing him that the funeral of Sir James Whitney would be held at Morisburg on Tuesday. A special train will convey the members of both houses to Morrisburg.

BOAT ONE MILE LONG

It Was Built at Mud Lake, Nearly 100 Years Ago

BUILDERS SON WRITES

Is there a resident of Peterboro, city or county, who remembers the steamer Cobourg? Not likely, because this boat was built about one hundred years ago. Some of the older residents, may have heard the story of the steamer was that one mile from stem to stern and it is possible that they may be acquainted with certain facts, which Jacob V. Collamore, of West Unity, Ohio, would like very much to know. Mr. Collamore's father built the steamer Cobourg on the shore of Mud Lake.

When his father married a second time, young Jacob left his home and since that day, he has not heard of his stepmother, or her son and daughter. Now he is seeking information and has sent the following letter to Postmaster Edgar:

West Unty, Ohio,
September 21st, 1914.

Postmaster,
Peterboro, Canada.

Nearly one hundred years have passed since my father built the Cobourg, the first steamer on Canadian waters, on the shore of Mud Lake opposite the Indian Village, on the Pearson farm of two hundred acres.

My father before this, lived in Rochester, New York, where I was born and where my mother died. Then my father moved to Canada and married the widow Pearson, on whose farm, the first steamer was built. This widow Pearson had two children, the older being a boy named Silas and the other, a girl named Harriet, who would now be about my age of 82 years.

My father was drowned in the Otonabee River, eight miles above Peterboro and his body was found two weeks later in the river near Peterboro, where he was buried.

I was young and soon left my step mother and since that time, I have never heard of them.

The object of writing this letter is to find out something about the Pearsons. Our neighbors in those days were the Nicholls, Mucelmiles, Galivans, Dunbars and Pearsons there being several families of each.

This steamer was cut in two parts and one half was drawn to Peterboro on a big sled during the winter when there was plenty of snow. Before the second half could be hauled the snow disappeared and that ended the steamer Cobourg, one half in Peterboro and the other at Mud Lake. From this came the story of a boat that was one mile from stem to stern.

Yours truly,
JACOB V. COLLAMORE,
West Unity, Ohio, U.S.

THROUGH FRENCH EYES

In the Gaulois M. Arthur Meyer calls on his memories of 1870, and draws a striking contrast between Paris then and Paris to-day. "I saw the boulevards in 1870. To-day the whole world of the boulevards passes under my windows, and the difference is remarkable. Is it because in 1870 we were still unconquered that the idea of defeat never entered our brains. The majority of Frenchmen then regarded war as a military promonade. Those who in the streets in the cafes, even in the opera, shouted 'à Berlin!' were certainly sincere, and yet did not something artificial exalted, and feverish make its way through the songs, the shouts in the street, and the excitement of the street? . . . To-day we look round and we see a people that is resolved, dignified, and overflowing with that health which encourages and reassures."

HOW SCHEME WAS WORKED

Express Messenger Says He Had an Arrangement With Croft

SINCE SUMMER OF 1913

To Carry Liquor on Train and not Make Entries

(Lindsay Post.)

The case against A. R. Croft, of Bobcaygeon, charged with defrauding the Dominion Express Co., came before County Magistrate Moore this morning at ten o'clock. Mr. Fulton, of McLaughlin, Peel & Fulton, appeared for the defendant, Mr. L. V. O'Connor for the Express Co., and Mr. G. H. Hopkins, K.C., for the Crown. Inspector Martin of the Dominion Express Co., also appeared in the interests of the Dominion Express Co., and Detective Fletcher as detective for the company. Jos. Redmond, express messenger, was a witness for the Crown.

The prosecution endeavored to lay additional information at once, but Mr. Fulton, for the defence, objected unless particulars were first given him.

Mr. O'Connor, for the prosecution, agreed to furnish the required information before trial.

Magistrate Moore then read the charge, that A. R. Croft, of Bobcaygeon at different times during the years 1913 and 1914, did by fraudulent means conspire with one Jos. W. Redmond to defraud the Dominion Express Co. of its rates and charges to the loss and damage of the said company.

Mr. Croft elected to be tried by a court having criminal jurisdiction. The case then adjourned till eleven o'clock, in order that Detective Fletcher and Jos. Redmond could attend.

When the court assembled at 11 o'clock, Jos. W. Redmond, Bobcaygeon, the first witness, on being sworn, stated he had been employed for the past three years as express messenger on the K. & P. and later on the C.P.R. between Burketon and Bobcaygeon. He is a young married man. He was supplied with books to make entries of goods received for transmission by express, and also a register book indicating the moneys received for the transmission of these goods. I have another book called a trip book, for billing goods out of flag stations. My duty is to deliver the goods to the station agents or messengers of other trains. My duties do not include the delivery of goods to the parties to whom they are consigned. That is supposed to be done by the Express Company's agent. The accused, A. R. Croft, is a grocery and food merchant in Bobcaygeon. Mr. Croft and I had a private arrangement between ourselves in regard to carrying goods from Lindsay to Bobcaygeon. It was made in 1913 about the first of the tourist season. The arrangement was to carry liquor on the train by blindfolding the Express Co. so as not to bring this goods before the public, that is by not billing the goods. I made no entries in the company's books. I was to get a carter in Lindsay to get the goods for me, and bring them to the station here. I was then to carry it from here to Bobcaygeon. And then by my arrangement of 1913 I was to carry it to his store. For doing such work I was paid $1 or one bottle of booze or whiskey on each occasion. I kept the dollar or the whiskey, as the case might be. I got $7.50 to buy each case. I buy my groceries from Mr. Croft. My arrangement was to bring goods from Shannon's liquor store in Lindsay. I brought them down in cases and in my own telescopes and grips.

I gave the money I got from Frost to a Lindsay carter to get some whiskey and bring it to the train. This was done by the carter here. It was a case of Gooderham & Worts whiskey. I took charge of the case of twelve bottles, and in Bobcaygeon carried it over to Mr. Croft's store. I made no record in the Express Company's books. The express charge is forty cents, but in this instance they got nothing from me or anybody else. During the tourist season of 1913 I averaged one or two cases a month, and in the fall and winter my deliveries of whiskey practically ceased. Last fall about November 16th Mr. Croft asked me if there was any chance of me getting any potatoes at some places along the Bobcaygeon and Burketon line. He paid me $7.50. I bought the potatoes and brought them to Bobcaygeon. I don't remember that I got anything out of it. I made no record in the company's books. In 1914 I made more frequent trips for liquor. I averaged four trips a month. September 10th at noon Mr. Croft gave me $8.50 in his store to get a case of Gooderham & Worts, to bring down that night. I gave a Lindsay carter $8.50 and twenty-five cents, his cartage. The $8.50 was for the case of sealed whiskey. They were put on the express truck with the other express, and was later handed to me in the express car. I took charge of it, but made no entry. On this occasion I missed the rig that was to take them to Croft's and had to take the case home to my place. I told him later that it was at my place. He said he would be up after it, but did not. He told me to take out a bottle for my own use. The express company got no money. There were no addresses or labels on the cases and no returns were made to the company.

To remove chocolate stains from white dresses or table linen, sprinkle the stain thickly with borax, place a saucer beneath it and pour on just enough water to moisten. Leave for several hours and then wash.

FORMER PASTOR AT ST. JAMES

Rev. J. G. Brown of Vancouver to Speak Sunday Evening

On Sunday evening the congregation of St. James' Methodist church will have the pleasure of listening to an address by Rev. J. G. Brown, a former pastor, who comes from Vancouver, where he is in charge of Central Methodist church.

Rev. Mr. Brown's work at St. James' church is not forgotten by the congregation, and they will look forward to a very interesting service Sunday evening.

The church will be decorated with fruits and flowers.

New Pavilion at Bensfort Wharf

The new pavilion on the Bensfort wharf is now being built. It will look very nice and will be a matter of great convenience to the people of South Monaghan. Mr. Burnham would have liked to have had it put on the south side of the bridge, but the engineer of the department had directed it to be put where it is, and Mr. Burnham thought it better to go on with it, rather than run the risk of having the matter put over until spring. However, when it is built, it can be moved if necessary.

Mr. Wood's Death A Loss to Law Association

The Peterborough Law Association, in great sorrow, record on their minutes the lamented death of Robert Erwin Wood, Esquire, Barrister, who died on the 23rd of September, instant, passed away to his eternal rest.

Mr. Wood was a native of the county, being born in South Monaghan in 1846. He studied at Victoria College, then at Cobourg, and took there his degree of B. A.

He studied law in Peterborough and practised his professon there till his death. In 1888 he was appointed County Crown Attorney and Clerk of the Peace and held these offices till his death.

Mr. Wood in his law practice was honorable and successful, as Crown Attorney he performed his responsible duties with zeal, but with such a spirit of fairness as left no rankling and yet executed his high duties to the satisfaction of the Crown.

Unostentatious and modest in life, he made and kept the friendship of his fellow citizens, and particularly of his fellow practitioners. We sorrow in his death and would offer to his memory our humble tribute to his worth. Nothing is left in his memory to regret and all of us unite in our testimony to his sterling worth as a man, a citizen and an honored member of an honorable profession.

With the wife and family of our deceased brother we unite in heartfelt sympathy and offer to them our sincere condolence.

The Secretary is requested to forward to Mrs. Wood and the family a copy of this resolution and to inscribe it on the minutes of our Law Association.

Claimed Advantage for PETERBORO Secured by C. B. Routley

Last January we placed large import orders with our European potters for crockery and china ware. We have now during the past month received the goods, at prices lower than any previous buy, and we intend that not one farthing's worth of goods will be raised in price. You will find, as usual, that our prices will stand any competition that you can put up against us. If you want a Dinner Set, Tea Set, Chamber Set, Lamp or China Ware, Wall Paper, etc., our prices must surely appeal to you.

15 only 97-piece Dinner and Tea Set combined, each piece perfect, per set $6.95

10 Dinner Sets, 97 pieces, each piece with gold line enameled decorations, per set $9.85

5 China Sets, 97 pieces, with gold handles. Kermis shaped cups, pink rose decoration, per set $15.95

Now is the time of year that we take for clearing out our Wall Paper. Look at our south window for ridiculous price cutting.

GERMANS IN CONTROL AT CRACOW

Have Taken Charge of Austrian Stronghold

LONDON, Sept. 26.—"That Cracow has been occupied by German troops, that the town has been put under a German military commandant, and that the Austrian civil administration has been displaced, is the gist of the latest advices received here," says the Petrograd correspondent of The Morning Post.

"All the original administration of the town and all civil officials of the Austrian Government have left, and the residents are fleeing in a panic."

The general staff has issued the following statement:

"On Sept. 23 the Russians checked the tentative move of the German vanguard to advance on the government of Suwalki (a government of Russian Poland bordering on Prussia). Within the circle between Scheschubchin and Vincent several engagements with the front of the enemy have resulted favorably for the Russians.

"In West Galicia there is no fighting.

"The Austrian army, driven from Khyrow, continues a general retreat."

An official statement received from Nish by Reuter's Telegram Co. says:

"A severe battle continued September 23 on the front between Zvornik and Lotanitza, and on the front from Minibja to Sabatz. Elsewhere the situation is unchanged.

"The Austrian commander sent emissaries to Belgrade demanding the surrender of the town. Our reply to this insolent demnad was to order the artillery to fire on the Austrian monitors."

Belgian Was Victor In Air.

LONDON, Sept. 26. — A duel in the air over Brussels between a Belgian biplane which was making a reconnaissance, and a German machine, which was in pursuit of the biplane, is described briefly by a correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph Co., who witnessed the contest.

The two machines ascended to a great altitude, and after a swift flight the aviators exchanged shots at short range. Suddenly the German turned turtle and fell, and the Belgian biplane returned towards Antwerp.

A HEALTH MESSAGE TO THE WORLD

The Discovery of "Fruit-a-tives" Has Brought Health and Happiness to Thousands of People all over the Dominion.

FRUIT JUICE CURES MANY SERIOUS DISEASES

"Fruit-a-tives" Is the Only Medicine Made from Fruit Juices. It is Pleasant to Take and Acts Gently on the Whole System.

FRUIT Juice consists of 91% water and 9% solid material. This solid material consists of about 8 parts sugary substance and one part of an intensely bitter substance, which is the medicinal or curative principle of fruit. In order to get the full benefit of fruit in the ordinary way, one would have to eat huge quantities of fresh fruit. By the discovered process of making "Fruit-a-tives", the bitter material in fruit juice is made to grow or increase and thus a stronger fruit juice is created. Then, this stronger fruit extract is mixed with valuable tonics and antiseptics and made into tablets. Thus, we have concentrated and intensified fruit juices, and the practical use of Fruit as a medicine is brought within reach of all.

Like fruit juice, "Fruit-a-tives" acts on the great blood purifying organs of the body—the liver, bowels, kidneys and skin—and stimulates all these parts to renewed activity. "Fruit-a-tives" is the most powerful liver stimulant in the world, and by it the kidneys and skin are stimulated to do more work. The splendid nerve tonics and antiseptics incorporated in "Fruit-a-tives" make this medicine the finest of nerve restorers, while germs in the stomach and bowels are destroyed.

"Fruit-a-tives" will cure Indigestion or Weak Digestion, Dyspepsia, Kidney Disease, Constipation, Billousness and Liver Trouble, Backache, Rheumatism and Rheumatic Pains, Sciatica, Lumbago, Neuralgia, Headaches and all indications of Impure Blood.

Remember, that "Fruit-a-tives" is the only medicine in the world that is made of fruit. There is nothing else as good, because there is no other preparation anything like "Fruit-a-tives". If you cannot get "Fruit-a-tives" right in your neighborhood, we will send you a supply postpaid, on receipt of price — 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

NEW BOMB TERRIBLE.

Turpinite Releases Substance Which Causes Painless Death.

LONDON, Sept. 26. — Remarkable tales of novel engines of war are appearing in all parts of Europe, but nothing has yet equalled the reports circulated concerning new guns used by the French in firing turpinite, a substance said to produce instantaneous and painless death for every living thing within its reach.

Although it is so deadly in its work turpinite cannot be objected to on the ground that it violates humane principles of war. In fact, it is so humane that it must not be confused with lyddite and other explosives which have deadly fumes.

British correspondents have reported that entire lines of German soldiers stood dead in their trenches as a result of the fumes from the mysterious turpinite discharged by the French in engagements along the Marne.

Wounded Austrians at Trieste.

VENICE, Sept. 26.—According to advices reaching here yesterday from Trieste seven thousand wounded have been brought into that Austrian city in the past three days.

Many public buildings, including theatres, are being converted into hospitals for them. A majority of the wounded come from Galicia, and they relate of fearful tales of hardships. For days at a time they were in wet clothing, and with the exception of plums, they had nothing to eat.

Bomb Nearly Hits Ship.

LONDON, Sept. 26.—The Belgian mail steamer Leopold II., which arrived at Folkestone yesterday from Ostend, according to the Central News, reports that she narrowly escaped damage by a bomb dropped from the Zeppelin airship which on Thursday flew over Ostend. Fragments of a bomb fell on the steamer's deck.

PROTECTING RETREAT LINE.

Germans Have Heavy Forces Stationed In Belgium.

LONDON, Sept. 26. — The Ostend correspondent of Reuter's Telegram Co. sent the following despatch:

"Forty thousand Germans have been encamped in the environs of Waterloo since Sunday, headquarters being established at Ruysbroeck. All passports to Mons are being refused by the German authorities at Brussels, the object apparently being to prevent travelers seeing the great amount of army transport which has already returned there from France.

"The Germans have installed heavy siege guns at Grimberkhen and Mayse. To prevent the inhabitants of these places from reporting the fact, the men have all been shut up in a church and the women have been sent to Brussels.

"As a consequence of the exhaustion of supplies in some classes of provisions, the German governor of Brussels has consented to Burgomaster Max going to Antwerp with the object of securing the consent of the Belgian Government for the despatch of grain and cattle to reprovision the city."

LIKES WORK AND WAR

They call him "Silent French"—the little round man with the good natured face and the blue-gray eyes who, as Field Marshal of the British Army on the continent, commands the British troops.

"Old French don't bark much, but don't he bloomin' well bite!" the English Tommies say of him.

He is 62 years old, an Irishman though born at Ripple, in Kent, England. Twice decorated by his own government he enjoys the unique distinction of holding orders of merit not only from both England's allies but from Austria and Germany as well. Mild and silent this little man who inflicted such heavy punishment on the Kaiser's legions, declares that he likes best of all Work and War. After that his favorite occupations are cards, horses, music and Dickens.

SIR JOHN FRENCH

General French takes everything quietly. In South Africa, while dining with General Ian Hamilton, a man rushed in to say that shells were falling thick and fast.

"In that case," observed the commander of the British, "I think I'll have another chop!"

In time of war he sleeps hardly at all. He says himself that he takes a nap only for fear of being considered eccentric and he thinks a daily allowance of four hours of sleep a luxurious self-indulgence.

In 1880 he married Eleanor Selby Lowndes. Lady French came of a military family. Her brother served in the South African war and her mother was a daughter of Lieutenant General Lechmere Worrall. She is a blonde, tall and extremely slender and most devoted friend and pal of the little field marshal, whose own men have described him as "a mixture of oil and iron."

MIGHTY TYRUS IS AGAIN AT THE TOP OF THE LIST

Famous Georgian is Finishing up Eighth Season as Leader of the American League Sluggers

In the bright lexicons of Tyrus Raymond Cobb, of Georgia, there is no such word as fail: That much has been settled once and for all by the work of the Detroit star in the season now rapidly drawing to a close.

Much has been written of the picturesque battle that Joe Jackson has waged with the only Ty for batting supremacy of the American league. Season after season the shoeless southerner has risen to batting heights that normally would assure him of the leadership of any organization, only to find out there beyond him, with even a greater average, stood the irrepressible Georgia peach.

At last, however, it seemed as if Joe's efforts were to be crowned with success. Early in the present season Cobb got off to a poor start. So did Jackson, for that matter, but what gave the Clevelander an advantage over his rival was that in midseason Cobb got in that famous argument with a butcher, broke his hand on the meat-slinger's head and was out of the game for a long period. During his absence Jackson went out in the lead by over twenty good batting points and seemed to have the best opportunity of his career thus far to lead the Detroiter to the wire.

Taking, as a starting point, the averages of about a month ago, when Tyrus Raymond swung into his stride after his long absence from the conflict, let us trace the progress of the stern chase of the Georgian that has landed him at the top of the batting list again today with an average of .375.

On August 23 Joe Jackson led the league's swatsmiths with a mark of .359. Second to the Clevelander was Eddie Collins, of the Athletics, with .349, while Cobb trailed third with a .339 average.

August 30 found the order unchanged, though Dick Hoblitzel and Mike Mitchell, staging comebacks, led all the trio, having played in but a few games. The averages of the real leaders were as follows: Jackson, .362; Collins, .354; Cobb, .341. Jackson, as is seen by the figures at this date, had increased his lead to twenty-one points over the Georgian with just a little over a month to go.

September 6 found the three more closely bunched, with Jackson still leading. The marks of the trio were: Jackson, .362; Collins, .357; and Cobb, .351.

Then came a shift in the order, due to a slump on the part of Jackson rather than any particular spurt of the other two. It sent Eddie Collins out in the lead with .355, Jackson dropping to second place, two points behind, and Cobb holding third, with his mark unchanged from the week previous, at .351. These were the averages of September 13.

Third on the 13th day of September, with only about four weeks to go, Cobb made the most spectacular rush to the front he has ever staged. In a week's time he shot from .351 to .375, and the leadership in the batting race, Collins trailing him with .351, and Jackson holding third with .347.

The swatsmith incarnate—that is Tyrus Raymond Cobb, of Georgia! Over the stretch of years Wagner and Lajoie may have established marks for sustained high-gade swatting that he will never attain. Time alone can answer that question. On the other hand, his feat of leading the league seven times in succession, six times with a mark beyond .375, and with an eighth session of supremacy practically assured, will stand as a mark for batsmiths to shoot at through many a festive year.

MANHATTAN'S DIRGE.

(The autumn song on New York's Rooter's Row.)

Of all sad words from tongue or pen,
The saddest are, "Braves win again";
Sadder than any throbbing note
That old Doc Chopin ever wrote;
Aye, sadder in its somber skit,
Than Life's worst message, "Please remit."

"Braves win again" — tell me no more
The ultimate, the final score;
Waste no vain words in praise or blame
Explaining how they copped the game,
Who sewed it up, who had the stuff;
"Braves win" — that's bally well enough.

"Braves win again" — O bitter phrase,
O blighting echo of the days;
Sadder than any German flop
Or "Could you slip me five, old top?"
Aye, in each dreary Harlem flat,
Sadder than "Baker at the bat."

O death where is thy sting like this?
O grave where is thy serpent's kiss?
O Baker, Bender, Coombs and Plank
You look like money in the bank
Compared to the last scratch of pen—
"BRAVES WIN AGAIN."

—Grantland Rice.

OPENING DATE WORLD'S SERIES

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Chicago, Sept. 26.—Play in the series for the world's baseball championship will begin on October ninth at two o'clock.

COMMENT

As You Like It

Louie Cook, who guided Ottawa in 1912 in the Canuck League has dropped out of the game.

With the big league races rapidly nearing the wire we'll soon notice unfamiliar names on the lineups. Recruits will be given a tryout.

Red Rowe is billed to manage the Durham, N.C., team next season. Red will be right in his element in Bullville.

Congratulations are in order for Otto (Babe) Burkart the popular Argo player who was married yesterday to Miss Edith Somerville of Newmarket.

Ed. Renfer had only a fair season with Ashville. His club finished fifth, and Ren., who developed fever at the start of the season, never got right, being used most of the time as relief or second string pitcher.

When the Braves and Athletics clash fans will have the much desired opportunity of judging whether Eddie Collins or Johnny Evers covers the keystone sack the better. At the rate Maranville has been playing the last two months the Boston infielders will give the main two of the famous $100,000 machine a run for the honors.

Here's the Ottawa Free Press on a London director wanting to throw the Senators out:—

"London wants to drop Ottawa and make up a circuit composed of tank towns up west. A drop from Class B to D, with a lowering of playing standard in proportion would make baseball in Sam Stevely's town as popular as a red coat in Berlin."

Ottawa Free Press:—

Artie Schwind, who shortstopped here in 1912, after a good season in the Texas League may sit on the bench of the Boston Braves during the world's series. Schwind still belongs to Stallings, and while there is no chance of him finding an opening on that Boston infield unless Moranville or Evers drops dead, Stallings likes the youngster and may bring him east just for encouragement.

John McGraw claims that it wasn't the Braves that beat him, it was the combined forces of the other teams in the National League. Here's Johnny's exact words, "I feel like the Kaiser. We may not win but my point is that every club in the league is sending its men to night school to figure out ways to pull us off the top perch. Guess we have led the league so long that fans everywhere are pulling for the under dog to win out."

That loud rumbling echo you might happen to hear of late was merely the Braves cracking—cracking extra base hits at some tight part of the game. Mr. Longfellow expressed it more eloquently in his famous baseball ballad, "The Wreck of the Hesperus."

"O, father, I hear the sound of guns
O, pray, what may it be?"
"It's Boston slamming the festive pill,"
The father answered he.

"O, father, I hear the shout of woe
As if some one was dead."
"That wail came from the Polo Grounds."
The father also said.

For the first time in his long career on the diamond Honus Wagner, that wonderful German Uhlan, will be eliminated from the charmed circle of .300 hitters. Wagner is meeting the Spalding at a .260 clip and it is practically impossible for the Pittsburg veteran to reach the coveted mark between now and the time the curtain will be rung down on the season. This goes to show that the grand old father of baseball is passing; his baseball days are numbered and he must make way for younger men to take his place. They may never equal his records as a player but they will prove much stronger in the position than he is today.

City of Lissa Taken.

ROME, Sept. 26.—The city of Lissa, on the island of the same name, near the coast of Dalmatia, has been occupied by the Anglo-French maritime forces, following a bombardment of the port. The Austrian garrison surrendered, and has been incarcerated in the local fortress.

WAS GENERAL EXECUTED?

New York Sun Gives Sensational Explanation For Queer Incident.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—The Evening Sun has received from Europe a most sensational statement in reference to an incident in the allies' campaign against the Germans which explains an incident in Gen. French's report hitherto obscure and puzzling. The information is as follows:—

"If you remember Gen. French's first long report, you may recall that he spoke of being at one time left entirely without the support that was due for the retirement of his force, Gen. Smith-Dorrien being left heavily engaged, absolutely on l'air.

"A French general was shot for this, and Kitchener and Joffre agreed on it. The Frenchman had refused to open written orders sent by a junior promoted over his head, or something of the kind.

"This is not one of the yarns that fly round at such times as this."

Buried Treasures In Morocco.

In Morocco it is customary for a man to bury most of his riches in a place known only to himself. This custom is practiced by all Moors, for they cannot trust their own family, who would murder them directly if it were known where the money was. At the death of the head of a family in Morocco digging operations commence at once, but seldom is the money discovered. There must be many fortunes buried away in odd corners of the country. An instance came under the writer's notice at one of the coast towns. During the demolition of a house a considerable sum of money was found built into the wall.—London Graphic.

ATTACK OF FRENCH TROOPS THREATENS GERMAN RETREAT

Report of Day's Fighting Along Hundred and Twenty Mile Battle Line Shows Little Change in Position—Allies Have Resisted Every Attack and Have Gained Ground—Spy Aided German Guns.

AT THE BATTLEFRONT, Sept. 26.—(Via Paris.)—French and British troops, intermingled with Turcos and Moors, not only held their own, but caused the strongly reinforced German western wing to reel backwards near St. Quentin Thursday and yesterday and imperilled the German line of communications towards the frontier of Belgium.

The German centre had been weakened by the rush of troops from that position to meet the threatening movement of the allies, and two strong forces were engaged at close quarters yesterday between St. Quentin and Tergnier.

The military authorities naturally refuse to permit the disclosure of the exact position of the fighting, but it is generally known that the battle now progressing is of prime importance.

Meanwhile at other parts of the battle line, which is about 120 miles long, fighting continued yesterday in dogged fashion. The allied troops followed the example set by the Germans and dug themselves deeply in.

The artillery of both armies kept up an incessant fire with French and German aviators reconnoitring.

The official communication issued at 11 o'clock last night, regarding the progress of the battle in northern France, says that yesterday morning French troops in the region of Noyon were compelled to give ground before superior forces, but, having been reinforced, again assumed the offensive, the engagement being one of particular violence.

The text of the statement follows:

"First—On our left wing, in the region to the northwest of Noyon, our advanced troops having come in contact with superior forces of the enemy, were compelled yesterday morning to give a little ground. Being reinforced, however, by fresh troops, these troops have vigorously resumed the offensive. The struggle in this region has taken on a character of extreme violence.

"Second—In the centre there is nothing new to report.

"Third—On our right wing the enemy has begun to give way before the attacks of our troops coming from the direction of Nancy and Toul.

"In the southern region of Woevre the enemy is retiring towards Rupt de Mad (in Meurthe-et-Moselle). The action continues.

"On the heights of the Meuse the German forces have succeeded in penetrating nearly as far as St. Mihiel (on the right bank of the Meuse, 20 miles south southeast of Verdun), but have not been able to cross the river."

The commanders of the allied forces have found reason for the wonderful precision of the German fire in a spy discovered in their lines who signalled directions. He was caught and immediately shot.

All the troops appear to have become thoroughly hardened and accustomed to conditions. The commissariat and the ammunition supply departments are working perfectly. While the soldiers are occupying the advanced firing lines they are scarcely ever without one hot meal a day which is brought to them in camp kettles from the field kitchens.

The British artillery officers praise highly the gunnery of their opponents. They declare that the German shells almost always burst at accurate range, but often too high to do damage. The soldiers take occasional spells of repose when in deep trenches, smoking pipes and cigarettes, for a ration of tobacco is served regularly. Meanwhile shells tear overhead with a sound like the ripping of parchment.

British officers relate an incident which, they say, occurred during twilight Thursday evening. A large force of German infantry, when surrounded by a British battalion, held up their hands in token of surrender. The British approached to take them prisoners, when, it is said, the Germans reopened fire. The British officers ordered their men to lie down, which they did. Then three British machine guns were brought into action and killed every German in that portion of the field.

A message from Basle states that despatch from various German railway centres announce a sudden general movement of concentration toward the Luxemburg frontier of countless empty transport trains.

It is believed that the instant the retreating German army reaches the border Germany intends transporting all the first line of troops to Russia without giving the allies final battle.

Only a sufficient number of men of the second line will be left to defend the country against invasion by the French and British.

But a girl doesn't mind chapped lips—if the right chap is responsible.

FINE BODY OF TROOPS FROM ANCIENT CAPITAL

The 8th Royal Rifles of Quebec at Valcartier Camp, Major A. E. Swift and Captain A. W. Hay in the foreground and a portion of the great tented city stretching out to the rear.

Peterborough, Ont., Sept. 21, 1914.

W. H. Hill, Esq.,
Local Manager of the Dominion Guarantee & Accident Co., Peterborough, Ont.

Dear Sir:

Will you kindly convey to the Dominion Guarantee & Accident Company, my sincere thanks for the prompt and fair manner in which they settled my claim for indemnity as a result of my recent accident.

I desire specially to mention Mr. H. H. Bounter, the Claims Agent, whom I consider to be a gentleman admirably fitted for the position he holds. For, while he seems to never forget the interests of his company, his sympathy for the injured, and his manifest spirit of fair dealing, win for him both gratitude and confidence.

I wish also, through you, to express my thanks to your Local Solicitor, Mr. George Elliott, through whom I effected insurance in your company, who has proved himself to be an efficient Agent, and who has looked after the renewals, and other matters connected with my policy, faithfully and well.

With such officers on its staff as Bounter and Elliott, the Dominion Guarantee & Accident Company is sure to secure a large patronage from the insuring public.

I am, Sir,
Yours very truly,
G. H. HOWSON.

W. H. HILL,
Manager Central Ontario.

Rev. J. G. Brown, of Vancouver, arrived in the city last night, and went to Lakefield this morning to visit his parents. Mr. Brown will speak at the evening service at St. James' Methodist Church, Sunday evening, and on Monday will proceed to Ottawa to attend the conference now in session.

The patriotic concert given by the united bands of the Salvation Army and the 57th Regiment on Friday furnished a great treat to all those present. There should be no reason for any citizen in Peterborough to complain in the future that he is not familiar with "Tipperary," after Mr. Minnicola's effective rendering. Among those in the officers' gallery were Col. and Mrs. Young, Major and Mrs. Walker, Mrs. Gliddon, Mrs. Travers, Mrs. Wilson, Mr. and Miss Archer, Mrs. and Miss Denison, Mr. and Mrs. Tomlin, Mr. and Mrs. Hay and Miss Hay, Mr. and Miss Dobie, Mrs. Sutton, Capt. Carruthers, Lieut. Lech, Mrs. Harstone, Mrs. W. H. Hill, Miss Hill, Miss Hayes, Miss Stevenson.

The performance of Miss Robson as Martha By-the-day was a most enjoyable one and well worthy of a much large audience. We have to thank Miss Robson for her style of plays, which excel in clean, wholesome fun, and which leave the hearer feeling that it is worth while, in the words of her epilogue, to "play the game."

The epilogue, which is not frequently used on the stage at the present time, called attention most strongly to the undignified manner in which the average audience takes its departure.

Surely in the time of war, when the whole Empire is, as it were, on "active service," we might spare a few minutes to do reverence to the National Anthem, which should be the Empire's prayer for her sovereign.

Would we remember that our soldiers at the front and at home stand at salute when the anthem is played or sung, surely we, though not privileged to stand at salute, may stand with decent respectful attention, even though it may mean the loss of three minutes which could not possibly be better employed.

Among those in the audience were Mrs. Matthews and Mr. Gordon Matthews, Mr. T. E. Bradburn and Miss Brown, Mrs. Hewson and Miss Lundy, Mrs. Campbell, Miss McBride, Miss McCrea, Miss Weir, Mrs. Goodwill, Mrs. Tamblyn, Mrs. Treblicock, Miss Halliday, Mrs. J. J. Turner, Jr., and Miss English, the Misses Gillespie, Mrs. W. Coulthard, Miss Collins, the Misses Hall, Miss Clementi, Miss Ferguson, Miss Beamish, Miss Sanderson and Miss Hanmer.

W. C. T. U. MEETING.

The September meeting of the W. C. T. U. was held yesterday afternoon in their room at the Y.W.C.A., with the president, Mrs. Whalley, in the chair. There was a very good attendance.

The annual report showed a membership of one honorary member and forty-four annual members. Ten regular and two special meetings have been held during the year. Ten dollars was collected for missionary purposes. Beautiful bouquets of flowers had been sent to the hospital and to sick members. Comfort bags had also been made and filled with useful articles and sent to the lumber camps. Altogether the report was very encouraging.

Four delegates, Mrs. Whalley, Mrs. Taylor, Mrs. Thornton and Mrs. Fife, were appointed to the provincial convention to be held in Toronto on October 6.

The officers elected for the ensuing year were:

President—Mrs. T. W. Whalley.
Vice-president—Mrs. H. Shield.
Recording secretary—Mrs. H. A. Fife.
Corresponding secretary—Mrs. A. A. Goodfellow.
Treasurer—Mrs. A. E. Micks.
Vice-presidents appointed from each denomination:
St. Luke's—Mrs. S. Gaskins.
Murray Street—Mrs. Ellis.
George Street—Mrs. (Rev.) Peever.
St. Paul's—Mrs. Dodds.
Mark Street—Mrs. Matchett.
Charlotte Street—Mrs. (Dr.) Morrison.
St. Andrew's—Mrs. Mathieson.
Salvation Army—Mrs. McElhenny.
Superintendents of departments:
Lumbermen's work—Mrs. J. S. Knapman.
Missionary—Miss Wills.
Flower mission—Mrs. Thornton.
Evangelistic—Mrs. Mathieson.
Systematic giving—Mrs. Campbell.

Two new members were welcomed.

Normal Literary Society Officers

After the school session yesterday afternoon the Normal students elected officers for the literary society as follows:

Honorary president—Mr. Walker.
President—Mr. Rorke.
First vice-president—Miss Miller.
Second vice-president — Miss Poast.
Secretary—Mr. Hough.
Treasurer—Mr. Cullis.

REFLECTIONS ON TOMORROW OF EUROPE

Mr. Harold Begbie, the well known author, writing in the Daily Chronicle, London, the day following the declaration of war by England upon Germany asks in the name of reason, "before we put on penny caps, and march through the streets and waving penny flags and breathing beer, let us consider what this war means, and reflect upon the tomorrow of Europe." He continues:

This war means the sudden stopping of a clock by which we moderns have regulated not only our journeys, but the habits of our minds. The Big Stick of Brutal Force has been suddenly thrust into the exquisite mechanism of civilization. The wheels cease turning, the hands are arrested, and the peaceful, friendly, and most familiar tic-tac of our human existence dies into a silence not yet broken by the clamour of guns, the groans of the dying, and the noise of falling thrones. Already, now at this moment, civilization stops—stops dead. We in England who have done nothing, and even now may do nothing in the war, are hurled suddenly back into barbarism. We aim; but it is against hunger. We mobilize; but it is against murder. Religion, philosophy, literature, painting, and, chief of all perhaps, science with its torch at the head of our human hosts, are suddenly flung backward; they become of no moment. Who wants to know about immanence? Who cares to hear what Bergson and Eucken think? Who bothers about books and pictures? Who is ready to endow or listen to the chemist and the biologist? We are back in the age of sticks and stones, but perishing science — "So the struck eagle . . "—has armed us with other weapons; the slaughter will be more hideous, the ruin will be more calamitious, and for nobody will there will a crown of glory.

All that has made this strange experience of conscious human life interesting, ennobling, and hopeful, has rested upon Commerce; and Commerce has been what it has been because of two things, Credit and Good Manners? Where is Credit now? What bank in London, what British merchant, ever dreamed a week ago to hear of such a thing as a moratorium? And where are Good Manners gone? Look for them in Asia, but not in Europe. At every Christion frontier you can pick up a broken treaty and a dishonored bond.

Mr. Norman Angell told me this morning that out of this war — "everybody fighting, and nobody wanting to fight"—two changes of transcedent importance will emerge. We shall have a Cossack Europe, and New York will henceforth be the centre of Credit. Russia must win. She calls a million 16th century peasants from the fields, and Germany mows them down. Another million take their place. Death again. Another million. And yet another million of these 16th century peasants. And when it is all over, those who are left will go back to their fields.

But Germany, France, England, particularly England and Germany, where will they turn when the million dead are shovelled under bloody soil? The bricks and mortar of Industry may be still standing; but where will Credit be found? And what will the millions of starving factory hands be doing? How shall we get upon our feet? Where is the clockmaker who will mend the smashed wheels and set the pendulum swinging once again? Happy the Russian peasant who will go back to his 16th century and his field, telling the time by the sun's shadow. Industry in Europe, with other things of older date, will lie in ruins.

In three months from now the democracies of Europe will be crying out for a return to normal conditions. The War Fever will have spent itself. The War Lords will be confronted by their outraged and maddened victims. What will they answer? Men will want work, they will want wages, they will want food. Europe will ask for these things, and the War Lords will be driven to answer. Which of them, with all his wisdom and strength, will be able to restore three centuries of human progress? Normal conditions! These normal conditions are the fruit of 300 years of evolution, 300 years of moral and intelectual evolution—a labor not of yesterday, nor of pygmies. Destroy normal conditions and you destroy today, yesterday, and all the yesterdays of European civilization. Expect, then, a bewildering Tomorrow.

Armaments have broken the back of the laborer; and with the fall of the laborer all things fall, all things come to earth. Because of the War Lords, and only because of the War Lords, the man of science is paralysed, and civilization stops. Humanity has been fooled. Too late it discovers it.

Remember this, too. Among the young conscript soldiers of Europe who will die in thousands, and perhaps millions, are the very flower of civilization; we shall destroy brains which might have discovered for us in ten or twenty years easements for the worst of human pains and solutions for the worst of social dangers. We shall blot these souls out of our common existence. We shall destroy utterly those splendid burning spirits reaching out to enlighten our darkness. Our fathers destroyed these strange and valuable creatures whom they called "witches." We are destroying the brightest of our angels.

At least, then, let us not get drunk. At least, then, let us not sing boastful songs. Honor may call us to fight, self-preservation may force us into the slaughterhouse; but let us wear on our sleeves the crepe of mourning for a civilization that had the promise of joy, and strike our enemy without a hiccough or curse. Never shall we know again what is now perishing. And we shall want all our strength for Tomorrow.

Money in Catch Basin.

A lady had the misfortune to drop her purse containing a large sum of money down the catch basin at the north west corner of Hunter and George Streets. The purse was later recovered, but the money was not recovered till a couple of city laborers secured the cash by emptying the bottom of the catch basin. The clasp on the purse had been faulty and the money fell out.

Beating the Bakers.

"Oh, I am almost tired to death," said the woman who spends half her time addressing club meetings. "Our political economy club has been in session all day passing resolutions and drawing up petitions demanding a law regulating the price of bread. Only think! Three dollars' worth of flour costs, when baked into bread, $13. It's outrageous. We'll soon all be bankrupt. The bakers must be made to feel the power of the law. You should have been at the meeting."

"I couldn't come, I was too busy," said the calm faced woman.

"Busy on a club day? What at?"

"Baking bread," said the calm-faced woman.

FRANK AND FEARLESS WAS SIR JAMES' LIFE

Other testimony to the worth of Sir James was expressed to-day by Mr. R. J. Soden, who said:

"Death, in removing Sir James P. Whitney, has taken the man most trusted and loved in all Ontario for the last ten years—the grand old man to whom, in time of provincial emergency or distress, the people of the province turned as to a sure and safe pilot.

"His foresight, rugged, intense honesty and absolute fearlessness in the execution of duty as he saw it commanded the respect of everyone in Ontario, political opponents as well as friends.

"To meet him was to respect him. To meet him often was to love him. His legacy to his country is a model administration, to equal or imitate which leaders of both political parties will strive for long generations to come. To his party he has left the right to point with pride to the cleanest and most progressive pages of Ontario's history since Canada became a British possession. To every citizen of the Dominion he has given an example of devoted, loyal imperialism.

"We shall miss his counsel often; yet, though gone, he still speaks, and his life will long continue to guide and enoble the party he so long led."

Whole Dominion Mourns.

Mayor Buller expressed his deep regret at the death of Sir James P. Whitney. "It is not only the people of Ontario," remarked his worship, "who are bereaved, but the people of the whole Dominion of Canada. His life work speaks for itself; it was commensurate with his ability as a statesman and his qualities as a gentleman."

He Saved Ontario.

Mr. Wm. Langford, Sr., said: "He was a man that came into prominence at the right time, and he won the confidence and support of the people. He saved Ontario when about on the brink of political bankruptcy. It is well that he was spared so long. We all unite in our sorrow, and I feel that he will be replaced by another strong statesman to guide a well organized and capable government."

An Honest Man.

Concerning the late premier of Ontario, Sir James P. Whitney, Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.A., M.P., says:

"Sir James Whitney was the highest type of the human race—an honest man. It is very difficult for people to be honest in practice. It requires frequently a savage disposition to repulse the assaults of the enemy. Sir James had some of that, but he was a great man, and the people sincerely mourn his death."

A Man of Sterling Worth.

Mr. James Kendry's views of the life of Sir James P. Whitney, as given to the Review, are as follows:

"My acquaintance with the late Sir James Pliny Whitney began many years ago and grew into a firm friendship; my admiration for the man strengthened in proportion to my friendship for him. He was a man of sterling worth, true to his convictions, never failed to state them, nor to stand up for what he conceived to be the right thing. If he made one a promise, you could be sure of its fulfilment, but he did not make promises lightly. Ontario and the Conservative party have alike suffered a great loss in his death. His place cannot be easily filled; such men are scarce."

Premier Borden.

Speaking to the Mail and Empire correspondent in Ottawa, Premier Borden said:

"The sad and unexpected tidings of Sir James Whitney's death have been received with the deepest regreat. For many years he has been one of my most intimate friends, and I feel the personal loss very keenly.

"The fine capacity, great force of character, unquestioned integrity and the wholehearted devotion to duty which placed him many years ago in the leadership of his party, have enabled him to give his province a wise, just and progressive administration of public affairs.

"He leaves behind him a great record of public usefulness to his province, and, indeed, to the whole Dominion. Upon the public life of that province he has exercised for many years a profound influence, which will not soon pass away. No one has ever commanded and retained more fully than Sir James Whitney the confidence and respect of the people of Ontario. No man in the public life of Canada has dedicated more earnestly and unreservedly to the service of his country his whole energy and his best ability."

GERMANS FIGHT WITH VIOLENCE OF DESPERATION AND ALLIES WITH ENERGY OF THOSE UPON WHOSE SIGHT THE DAWN OF SUCCESS IS BEGINNING TO BREAK

FURTHER VIOLENT ATTACKS BY ENEMY UNSUCCESSFUL

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Paris, Sept. 28.—The official communication given out this afternoon says:

"There is nothing new to report in the general situation. Relative calm prevails along one portion of the front; nevertheless, at certain points, notably between the river Aisne and the Argonne district, the enemy has delivered further violent attacks, which, however, have been repulsed."

London, Sept. 28.—The Central News has received the following despatch from its Paris correspondent; "Both the allies and the enemy, far from being exhausted after more than a fortnight's continuous fighting, appear to be throwing increasing vigor into their operations. Exceptionally fierce engagements are now being fought, particularly on the allies' left. It is impossible, owing to rigorous press censorship, to divulge all information whereon the opinions of your correspondent are based; nevertheless, one cannot help expressing the view that the Germans are fighting with the violence of desperation, and the allies with the energy of those upon whose sight the dawn of success is beginning to break.

"The movement of German troops on the left of their centre to support the menaced right wing, reveals in itself a policy of desperation, an attempt to achieve victory at staggering cost. This movement, however, appears to be completely failing. Our men, despite the enemy's reinforcements, are still gaining ground, and if the essentials of good spirits and excellent organization count, they will continue thus to gain."

Paris, Sept. 28.—The prolonged tension on the two long lines of fire and death fronting each other on the Aisne, must have become insupportable to the Germans, since reports indicate that they have changed their tactics and attacked with the bayonet. Since the attacks have been repulsed over the whole line, the military experts here cannot see now what resources the German generals can call on to retrieve their fortunes.

The Matin expresses the opinion that new troops which the allies found fronting them on the left, were not from the German left wing, but are part of the forces detached from Charleroi and sent to East Prussia, but now brought back in haste. The general opinion is that the battle has reached a most critical as well as a most violent phase, and that the issue cannot be delayed much longer. The losses of the last few days on both sides are said to exceed all other engagements of the war.

Bordeaux, Sept. 28.—According to despatches received in Bordeaux from the front, a Prussian Guard has been cut to pieces during the fighting of the last three days. The strength of some of the companies has been reduced from 250 to 100 men. Virtually all the original officers of the Guard have been killed or wounded, and two battalions have been annihilated.

London, Sept. 28.—It is officially announced in London this afternoon that Duala, the official seat of government of the German colony of Kamerun, in German Equatorial Africa, has surrendered to a British force.

THE PASTORAL LETTER

The following is the letter prepared by the Ministerial Association and read on Sunday at all the Protestant Churches of the city:

The members of the Ministerial Association of Peterborough, assembled at this their first meeting of the season, feel it our public responsibility to give expression to our deep and unanimous convictions as to the present war, the conditions thus brought about, and the duties thereby imposed upon the community to which we belong.

1. We place ourselves on record as being strongly opposed to war and express our utter abhorrence of it. With confidence we look forward to the coming day when the prophecy of the Kingdom will be fulfilled, that the nations of the world "shall beat their swords into plough-shares and their spears into pruning hooks, neither shall they learn war any more."

2. Since, however, Great Britain, after making her strongest efforts for peace was (in our belief) most unwillingly forced into warfare for the observance of treaty obligations, for the protection of the weak and for the cause of liberty as opposed to military tyranny, we rejoice that Canada, as a constituent part of the Empire and under its protection, is rendering her best assistance to the Mother Country in this great struggle and we believe that this should be continued until a conclusive issue is reached.

3. To this end we express our appreciation of the enterprising self-sacrifice of those who are on their way to represent us at the front. We urge our young men to enlist at once in local regiments and older men to join rifle clubs so that they may be ready at any time to obey their country's call. We hold ourselves ready to personally co-operate in such a movement.

4. We most heartily endorse the Patriotic Fund for the giving of help to the wives and dependents of our soldiers and for the aleviation of distress directly caused by the war. This fund, in our judgment, requires and is deserving of large and generous contributions. As to distribution, in the interests of the community the greatest care should be exercised to guard against pauperization and to foster and preserve that healthy and independent self-respect which should ever characterize all British Canadians.

5. That we express our appreciation of the action of the City Council in arranging for the issue of short term debentures in order to provide work for the unemployed, and we express the hope that these debentures will be taken by all who are in a position to do so.

6. As a subsidiary means we urge that Congregational Relief Funds receive also a generous support. We point out that these are the only means by which many of the keenest sufferers can receive help in the privacy and close fellowship of Christian Brotherhood.

7. We further point our citizens to the desirability of taking every means during the present crisis to stimulate loyalty, patriotism, and public self-sacrifice. The National Anthem should be used at Church services, in our schools and at all public meetings, with customary honours, together with patriotic hymns and songs. There should be a wider use of the National Flag and other expressions of patriotism.

8. We desire that the attention of our people should be steadily directed to the attainment of a well-founded and enduring peace as being the greatest result to be gained through this war. For the hastening of such a peace the prayers of all should constantly ascend both in public and private.

9. Towards the accomplishment of this great end we urge that public feeling be stirred up to demand, as an outcome of the war, the abolition as far as at all possible of armaments, with the retention of only the forces necessary for the maintenance of law and order.

10. Advantage should be taken of the present exhibition of the horrors of modern warfare to press forward the system of International Arbitration made effective by the establishment of an International force to enforce the decrees of the Arbitration Court, artillery being manufactured only to the order of such Court, or by other scheme considered more practicable.

11. Lastly, we trust that in general conduct our people may give constant evidence of the spirit of an intensely practical Christianity. Let us free our minds from all personal animosity towards our enemies who should be included in our prayers. We are convinced that there is no ground for panic or pessimism. Let us be calm, collected and courageous, and in the power of a robust faith go forward with courage, good cheer and hope.

"GOD SAVE THE KING."

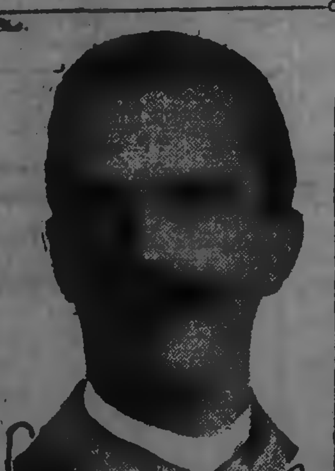
PARIS IS AGAIN BOMBED



WHAT WILL ITALY DO?

King Victor Emmanuel of Italy, whose government, it is asserted in some quarters, will declare war within a fortnight upon Italy's former partners in the Triple Alliance.

German Aviator Drops Four Missils, Killing One Man

PARIS, Sept. 28. — Four bombs were dropped on the city from a German aeroplane yesterday. One missile, exploding in Avenue du Trocadero, at the corner of Rue Freycinet, blew the head from the shoulders of a man who was standing on the corner with his daughter, and crippled the child. The other bombs did little damage.

Crowds, taking advantage of a beautiful autumn day, were promenading on the banks of the Seine when the aerial warrior appeared almost directly over the Eiffel Tower. It is believed that the first bomb dropped was intended for the wireless station on the tower, or possibly for the nearby buildings containing army stores. It landed in Avenue du Trocadero, not far from the tower, with a crash, and the explosion was heard for many blocks. The houses in the vicinity were badly damaged, many of the walls cracking, while windows were shattered.

In the midst of the excitement the aeroplane dropped three more bombs. One landed among a herd of cows pastured on the Auteuil race course. One cow was killed, and others toppled over stunned. A third bomb fell in Rue Vineuse, and a fourth in Rue de la Pompe.

Boer General To Help French.

BORDEAUX, Sept. 28.—The Boer general, Francois Joubeost-Pienaar, has arrived at Bordeaux to offer his sword to the allied armies.

"I fought against Gen. French in South Africa, now I am going to fight with him," said the general to the correspondent. "I commanded a Boer army opposed to him at Elandslaagte where I received my baptism of fire in civilised warfare."

FIRE IN ESSEX

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Essex, Sept. 28. — At 3.15 this morning, fire broke out in McConnell's general store completely destroying both contents and building, also W. H. Richardson's hardware and furniture business, adjoining.

HON. J. S. HENDRIE BECOMES LIEUT.-GOVERNOR OF ONTARIO

JAPANESE WIN AGAINST ENEMY AT TSING TAU

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Peking, Sept. 29.—The Japanese legation announces that Japanese troops after fighting Saturday and Sunday, occupied a position between seven and eight miles from Tsing Tau, the Germans retiring from outpost positions. Reports from German sources confirm this statement.

ATTEMPT TO MINE HARBOR

German Vessel Was Disguised as Dutch Merchantman

PLAN WAS FOILED

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

New York, Sept. 26.—An unsuccessful attempt to mine the harbor at Guernsey, England, said to have been made by a disguised German cruiser, which had on board 1,000 German marines and enough explosive to blow up a dozen warships, was reported today by Miss Margaret Daniels, missionary of the Baptist Foreign Missionary Society, upon her arrival aboard the French liner Espagne, from Havre.

The vessel was disguised as a Dutch merchantman. The Dutch flag flying at the topmast, aroused the suspicion of British authorities who had made arrangements with the Dutch that all their vessels entering English ports should fly the Dutch flag at half-mast. The ship was accordingly surrounded by torpedo boats and a search revealed 1,000 German marines hidden below decks. The marines were arrested and sent to a detention camp.

FIFTY MEN CHECK 5000 GERMANS

ON THE BATTLEFRONT, Sept. 28.—(Via Paris.) — A French lieutenant, M. Verlin, is the hero of the day as the result of an affair in which he was the main figure Saturday. The lieutenant and fifty men of his company were reconnoitring ten miles in advance of the main body on the River Oise when they encountered 5,000 Germans. The Frenchmen took refuge in nearby woods, and from this shelter fired volleys until only thirteen of their detachment remained alive, and of these four were wounded. The party then crept away. The Germans hesitated to attack the woods for fear of a trap.

Appointment of Hamilton Man to Post is Confirmed by the Duke of Connaught and He is to be Sworn in To-day---Another Vacancy in Cabinet Must be Filled.

TORONTO, Sept. 28. — Lieut.-Col. the Hon. John S. Hendrie, of Hamilton, is the new Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, to fill the vacancy caused by the retirement of Sir John Morrison Gibson, whose term of office has expired. Col. Hendrie's appointment was approved by the Governor-General at Valcartier on Saturday morning.

Rodolphe Boudreau, clerk of the Privy Council of Canada, arrived in Toronto yesterday in preparation for the swearing in of Col. Hendrie as Lieutenant-Governor.

It is understood that the announcement of the new appointment came with considerable surprise to the members of the Ontario Cabinet. For some time it had been recognized that he was in line for the honor, but the appointment was not expected so early in view of the death of Sir James Whitney.

LT.-COL J. S. HENDRIE.

Hon. Dr. Pyne stated last evening that for the present, at least, Government affairs would be carried on as usual. He could not say whether a caucus of the legislative members was likely or not.

Col. Hendrie's elevation to the post of Lieutenant-Governor causes another vacancy in the Ontario Cabinet, and discussion is active regarding his probable successor.

Lt.-Col. Hon. John Strathearn Hendrie, C.V.O., was born at Hamilton, Aug. 15, 1857. He was educated in the Hamilton Public Schools and at Upper Canada College.

He was first returned to the Provincial Legislature at the general elections in 1902. He was re-elected in 1905, 1908, 1911 and 1914.

For two years (1901-2) Col. Hendrie was mayor of Hamilton. In February, 1905, he was appointed Minister without portfolio in the Whitney Administration.

He was created Commander of the Royal Victorian Order in September, 1907. He is a member of the National Battlefields Commission, Chairman of the Railway Committee of the Legislative Assembly; and member of the Ontario Hydro-Electric Commission.

TWO GERMAN GUNBOATS SUNK

BORDEAUX, Sept. 28. — Victor Augagneur, Minister of Marine, announces that the French unarmored gunboat Surprise had sunk two small German warships and taken possession of Coco Beach, Kamerun, Africa, after a sharp conflict. He describes the feat as a very brilliant one, the Surprise having overcome the Rhios and Italo, patrol gunboats and a considerable German garrison. The conflict occurred Sept. 21.

German Casualties Total 115,000

BERLIN, Sept. 28. — (Via London.)—The total German casualties in dead, wounded and missing, as officially reported to date, are 104,589. The casualty list announced yesterday adds a total of 10.527 casualties to those previously announced, or a total of 115,116.

Survivors Sail For England.

FLUSHING, the Netherlands, Sept. 28.—(Via London.) — Two hundred and sixty-seven survivors of the British cruisers Aboukir, Hogue and Cressy, sailed for England Saturday night.

A German prisoner who escaped a month ago, when recaptured by a sergeant, declared that for twenty days he had living in the open air, subsisting on raisins and raw snails.

Germans in Retreat Before Russians

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Sept. 28.—"Pursuing their successes, the Russians have pushed over the Carpathian range and captured Uzsok, Hungary, near the source of the river Ungh, with numbers of guns, artillery stores and prisoners," says the Petrograd correspendent of the Morning Post. Thence the Russians have descended into the plains of Hungary.

London, Sept. 28.—Telegraphing from Petrograd, the correspondent of the Chronicle says: "It appeared last week as if the battle in the west of Russia, for which vast German preparations had been made, had at last begun. Now it has already ended and the Germans are in retreat. They came across the border on the 23rd of September at four points. The Germans' strength is not stated. Their losses were heavy, mainly from artillery fire, which broke their attempt to move upon Drushkenik."

Petrograd, Sept. 28.—The following official communication has been received from the staff of the Grand Duke Nicholas: "An engagement near Sopotskin, on the Niemen river, in Russian Poland, and Druseniki, came to an end with the retreat of the Germans. The enemy has approached Ossowetz from the north and has begun a bombardment of the fortress.

"In Galicia we have occupied Dembica, on the railroad 65 miles east of Cracow. A numerous column of the enemy is retreating from Przemysl, in the direction of Sanok, 38 miles southwest of Jaroslau. In their flight they abandoned artillery and automobile transports. At Coloujok we defeated a detachment of the enemy and captured his artillery and many prisoners. Continuing the pursuit, we entered Hungary."

PETERBOROUGH, MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 28, 1914

A WARNING TO AUTOISTS.

AT COOKSVILLE, on Sept. 25th, 1913, three men were killed in an auto accident. At the fall assizes the other day, the driver of the car, Rex Reynolds, was sentenced to a period of imprisonment of not less than one month and not more than six months, at the court's discretion. The case is recalled merely to emphasize the importance of care in driving automobiles, and also that the penalties are not severe enough for reckless driving, even when nothing serious happens. The other day in Peterborough a man tried to climb a telegraph pole in an automobile, and most of the damage was sustained by the car. The case was settled as expeditiously and as quietly as possible, but it is just such antics that cause the death of people and a great deal of hardship and suffering.

We cannot see how a fifty dollar fine will cure a man of reckless driving or prevent an intoxicated person from steering a car over people and trolley cars. A man running amuck with an automobile is just as bad as a man flourishing a loaded thirty-two automatic in each hand, and probably much more dangerous.

AN ECONOMIC LESSON FROM THE WAR.

A SERIES of letters from leading business men throughout Canada concerning efforts to capture German and Austrian trade are being published by the Montreal Journal of Commerce. This method is a very good way to obtain data on the subject and should receive extensive notice, so that all who can may profit. Here is an extract from a letter by D. W. Bole, of the National Drug and Chemical Company, which shows how Germany has secured control of the chemical industry:

> "Germany has been the centre of chemical industry for many years. This is due partly to the fact that German temperament lends itself to patient, painstaking inquiry, but more to the fact that the German government has encouraged technical education to an unusual extent by large grants to universities, and by allowing the unrestricted use of non-potable alcohol in chemical research work and in the manufacture of so many chemical products and dye stuffs, both of which are used so extensively in the arts and manufactures the world over."

A well-known fact concerning Germany is the emphasis which the German people have placed on technical education. The success of the Germans has been due to slow, plodding, painstaking effort. They have followed the slow but sure way, and the splendid results obtained, making Germany so great a nation commercially, in a remarkably short time, are ample evidence of the worth of their methods. As we have said before, Canada cannot capture in a day what Germany required twenty-five or fifty years to create, but Canada can take such measures immediately as will place her people in a position to develop her own markets, especially in lines formerly dominated by German and Austrian goods. Canadians have got to know how to do things before they can do them.

A QUESTION OF AUTHORSHIP.

SHORTLY AFTER war broke out with Germany and Austria, the newspapers of Canada published a poem entitled 'Hoch, Der Kaiser." Some person with a faculty for asking disturbing questions, wanted to know the author, and it developed that several persons had claims to this famous poem. The poem has been printed with the name "Robert Blake" appended, but he was not the author of it. It was written in October, 1897, by A. M. R. Gordon, then of the Montreal Herald, and was printed in that paper. We notice that the British Weekly and the Glasgow Weekly Herald of recent dates credit the poem to Alexander Macgregor Rose, a native of Tomintoul, Banffshire, who studied for the ministry of the Free Church at Aberdeen University, and was in due time ordained to the ministry of the church at Evie and Rendall, in the Orkney Islands. Meeting with financial reverses, he emigrated to Canada and engaged in journalistic work at Edmonton, Winnipeg, Toronto and Montreal, where he died in 1898. In this country he added the name "Gordon" (probably his mother's name) to his own surname, and was known as A. M. R. Gordon. He was deeply versed in the history of Germany and of Europe generally, and kept in close touch with the political issues in France and Germany.

The poem, which a member of the British Cabinet 'recites at present with immense effect," has also been credited to the late Rear-Admiral Coghlan, of the United States Navy, who recited the verses at a private dinner of the Union League Club in New York. When the news leaked out, Capt. Coghland (as he then was) met with severe denunciation from the German-American element, who called upon the President to reprimand him. It was said that the Kaiser was deeply offended, but it afterwards appeared that he laughed over the incident and made no representation regarding it to Washington. Joseph Bullock Coghlan, who was born in Kentucky in 1844, saw service in the Civil War, and took part in the Battle of Manila Bay, May 1, 1898. He became a rear-admiral in 1902 and died in 1908.

Mr. W. Drysdale, of the Customs Department, Montreal, has written a letter to the Montreal Journal of Commerce concerning this matter, and says:

> "The poem in question, and for which so many have claimed the authorship, was written here in Montreal when Gordon was on the staff of the Montreal Herald, and first appeared in the Sunday Sun, then issued from their office. I knew the author well; he was daily in my bookstore, and it was my privilege to see the original poem before the ink was quite dry. I might say that after his death we learned who he really was; his remains were buried in our St. Andrew's Society burial plot in Mount Royal cemetery, and an interesting burial service was conducted by the Rev. Dr. Robt. Campbell, of old St. Gabriel church (still hale and hearty, and who can confirm what I have written). The Sisters at Notre Dame Hospital kindly let us have the use of their chapel. He was a brilliant fellow, and, having resided here for some years up to his death, Montreal has best right to claim first hand knowledge of the now celebrated poem."

The poem was a kind of off-hand production. The writer was asked "to write something" about the Kaiser, and, happening to be in the proper mood, dashed off the poem in about half an hour, giving no time to reflection or polishing, just as many another newspaper man has produced, on the spur of the moment, an exceptionally creditable verse or article. Getting into the press, little regard is given to authorship, and these pieces travel far in the strange fortune of newspaper borrowing, like a leaf or seed of the wildwood. In this way a verse becomes famous and questions of authorship arise, but, in the poem referred to; there is enough evidence to prove the title of the Montreal journalist to its authorship.

PRAISE FOR THE MINISTER OF MILITIA.

SOMETIMES, a word of commendation comes from unexpected places. The Canadian Journal of Medicine and Surgery, representing one of the leading professions, and not being a party paper, has the following to say of Col. the Hon. Sam Hughes, which speaks for itself:

> "Loyalty and honor just now seem to compel Canada to take her part in the great crime of the centuries, but, fortunately, we Canadians can offer to the Honourable Minister of Militia the tribute of admiration, used in describing one of England's best (who lived when the world was younger), he had the three greatest attributes, "Fortitude, Valor and Decision." The Honourable Sam Hughes is not mistaking ignorance for courage, nor hysteria for loyalty. To Canadians, he stands out, not only as the man of the minute, but of the hour.
>
> "It seems to the medical men, who have to think so often of the future race of this country, that the Man at Valcartier must have thought also and deeply of the condition of this land, with its unfit left behind and its struggle against the white plague, and how carefully in the weeding out process he keeps his brains "packed in ice," as they say of Kitchener, and tries to save many a fine, loyal young man, but a very unfit little toy soldier, from certain death.
>
> "The Minister of Militia has shown that he knows not only war, but the loyalty in the hearts of Canadian women (for are they not his dearest own?) He may well be trusted to know when Jack Canuck is fit, and when his pluck and his grin are needed to cheer things up a little at the front. May Jack's be at least the paw of the old lion whose whack will mar the smile of 'Papa Wilhelm.'"

EDITORIAL NOTES.

AN IRISHMAN precipitated a riot in Leavenworth, Kan., by announcing that the Kaiser, after being told that it was impossible to get 50,000 reservists from the United States, requested 1,000 Irishmen and 100 barrels of whiskey.

IT IS stated that Germany sold, on August 13, two of her most modern and powerful cruisers, the Goeben and the Breslau, to Turkey, to escape capture. We are under the impression that this was a violation of international law, which prevents transfer of ships after war is declared.

WHAT are the horrors of war compared to flooding the Canadian public with Russian names?

You Don't Say.

(Toronto Telegram.)

No heed will be paid to Wilhelm's cries for mediation. What he needs is medication—and it is being prepared in bitter and heaping spoonfuls.

Get Ready Now.

(Lethbridge Herald.)

The Huns will be hungry next year. It will be part of the Canadian farmers' duty to feed them, so now is the time to get the land ready for the grain.

Where the Austrians Shone.

(Sarnia Observer.)

No soldier wore his uniform more gayly than did the Austrian; no soldier so won the hearts of the women as did the Viennese; no soldier danced so well, flirted so bravely, carried his sword and cape so gracefully; no soldier was so tremendously effective in a ballroom and on parade ground, and no soldier was so fast a sprinter on the home run when the first shot was fired.

World-Power or Downfall."

(New York Sun.)

Like Napoleon, the Kaiser has gambled desperately, splendidly, put all his fortunes on a single throw, and the dice have gone against him.

"The issue of Germany's next war must be world-power or downfall," wrote General von Bernhardi. Is it too much to believe that the dream of world-power was blasted on the banks of the Marne?

THE OLD GIRLS

By Walt Mason

When man grows old and muscle-bound, and crippled by the loads he's carried, it's pleasant then to look around, and see the girls he might have married. Some chance, that once conveyed a smart, prevented this or t'other wedding; ah, then he had a broken heart, and found this life but weary sledding. But now, grown old, he casts his gaze on many a dismal female relic, that he adored in other days, and thought enchanting and angelic. That matron with the shrewish tongue, who keeps her neighborhood excited—she was a peach when she was young, and once with her my troth was plighted. And that old maid who loves her cat, and has of singing birds a covey, and who has grown absurdly fat—ah, once I called her "Lovey Dovey!" And yonder suffragist so grim, whose purpose is poor man's abasement; long since I sang a lover's hymn, on summer eyes, beneath her casement! I thank the destiny that shaped my course when I was young and giddy! Ah me, the perils I escaped, when I pursued the maid and widdy! I see old sweethearts in the town, as here I raise my Ebenezer, and thank them that they turned me down, and handed me the ice cream freezer.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

ON THE WAY.

Editor Review,

Sir,—Canopus is more than half a million times the bulk of our sun. In fact the solar system is comparatively a poor affair. Man also is but a poor affair. The idea that the Earth was the centre of the universe and that creation was made for Man to play with is gone. The trash put up that Man had been made for the glory of God but that he and a woman by the name of Eve had spoiled God's plan "entirely" is a thing of the past. The glorification of those who handed down the former idea by divine command as claimed is a thing of the past. The prayer for peace as peace is on the scrap heap. We are at war—common every day war time savage killing of each other about something that between individuals would be a case for the division court. It takes a great house-cleaning to put things right. The world will emerge from what was left of its old clothes after the French Revolution. People will love honour (wow! wow!) for its own sake. Men will cease to be grafters. A big fertile country will be made to support somebody besides brokers and financial sharks. We will be like the Indian, ashamed to be rich while others are poor. We will not keep our piety and goodness in a glass case for fear it will get "broke." It will be better and stronger and more manly than that. We will not rely upon statutes and gaol to make people good but upon the overpowering sentiment of public opinion. We will not help men to place who we know are not fit for it. We will not betray the public good and then pray "Thy kngdom come."

Yours,
AND SO FORTH.

THE MINISTERS' LETTER.

Editor Review:

Dear Sir,—Our clergy have sent a letter to the faithful telling them that war is bad, but that, unfortunately, they have to back it up in some cases. Our clergy are good men, and they know what they are doing, and they are consistent. 'Faith without works is dead." (See Thess. 6-2.) In this case faith with works is dead, because the works we are doing are not consistent with their faith. If we haven't strength to back up our faith, the great Jehovah will just sit back and laugh at us. Our clergy are doing as near right as they can, and we must keep our powder dry and get good guns for war, for defensive war is now admitted to be right, and the only thing necessary is to say that any war is really defensive, and the trick is done. The scientific men come out ahead once more. They told us this before and said that faith would have to give way to it. That is true, but we can have as much faith as we like, all the same, and without faith there is no hope and no resurrection.

Yours truly,
N. C.

TO COMMAND CANADIANS.

Gen. Alderson Likely To Head Contingent at the Front.

LONDON, Sept. 28.—The Canadian Associated Press is reliably informed that the command of the Canadian contingent has been given to Major-Gen. Edwin Alfred Hervey Alderson, C.B. Gen. Alderson, who is in his 55th year, has led a notable career, and is credited with being a most popular officer. He commanded the mounted infantry in South Africa, and was several times mentioned in despatches.

Gen. Alderson has also served in the Boer campaigns of 1881 and 1882; the Nile expeditions of 1884-85 and commanded the field force in Mashonaland. From 1908 to 1912 he commanded the Poona division in India.

Did Bavarians Free Prisoners?

LONDON, Sept. 28. — The correspondent of a news agency at Ostend is responsible for the statement given out in London that a number of Bavarian soldiers are under arrest in Brussels charged with facilitating the escape of a large body of French prisoners from the Belgian capital. A committee is sitting to investigate the matter. The number of Frenchmen said to have gotten away has been placed at several thousand. The Bavarians are greatly incensed at the charges against them.

YOUR COUNTRY NEEDS YOU.

Fall In!

Reproduced from the London "Daily Chronicle."

What will you lack, sonny, what will you lack
When the girls line up the street,
Shouting their love to the lads come back
From the foe they rushed to beat?
Will you send a strangled cheer to the sky
And grin till your cheeks are red?
But what will you lack when your mate goes by
With a girl who cuts you dead?

Where will you look, sonny, where will you look
When your children yet to be
Clamour to learn of the part you took
In the War that kept men free?
Will you say it was naught to you if France
Stood up to her foe or bunked?
But where will you look when they give the glance
That tells you they know you funked?

How will you fare, sonny, how will you fare
In the far-off winter night,
When you sit by the fire in an old man's chair
And your neighbors talk of the fight?
Will you slink away, as it were from a blow,
Your old head shamed and bent?
Or say—I was not with the first to go,
But I went, thank God, I went?

Why do they call, sonny, why do they call
For men who are brave and strong?
Is it naught to you if your country fall,
And Right is smashed by Wrong?
Is it football still and the picture show,
The pub and the betting odds,
When your brothers stand to the tyrant's blow
And England's call is God's?

LATEST NEWS PARAGRAPHED

Mrs. John Condon, for more than half a century a resident of Hastings, died yesterday.

Despatches from Berlin, by way of The Hague, emphasize the heavy casualties among German officers, particularly those of high rank.

The German ship Ossa of 1,800 tons, bound from Portland, Ore., for Ipswich with a cargo of wheat and barley was captured by a British warship.

The town of Campbellford has placed an insurance of $1,000 each on the lives of the married men who have gone to the front with the first Canadian contingent.

An Amsterdam correspondent wires that Prince Oscar, fifth son of the Kaiser, has been obliged to enter a hospital in Berlin, because of an affection of the heart. The report emanates from sources thought to be reliable.

Two girl nurse graduates of a Paris training school and five Sisters were killed at the battle of Rheims, while aiding the wounded, according to reports just received. News of the sacrifice of life by nurses is coming in daily.

Destroy Nation But Preserve Art.

BORDEAUX, Sept. 28. — Meyer Greffe, a noted German professor of history and fine arts, has admonished the German soldiers to destroy the French nation but preserve its art. He advises extermination of the population but careful preservation of all objects d'art. These instructions are included in an article of peculiarly ferocious character in The Berliner Tageblatt.

AN ARISTOCRATIC THIEF

By F. A. MITCHEL

My husband had been appointed United States military attache at Berlin and had gone there some time before me in order to secure a place to live against my coming. I was on my way there from Paris, traveling on a first class railway coach. Beside me sat a man, and before him sat another man, the two being evidently traveling companions, for they were talking very earnestly in German, a language I did not understand. Directly before me was a vacant seat, on which I tossed my hand bag. This was very careless of me, for it contained all the money I had with me.

I had been up late nights in Paris and was very tired and sleepy. I fell into a doze and from a doze into a sound sleep. More than an hour passed before I awoke, and when I did I found that the man who had been seated beside me was the only other person except myself in the compartment. He had changed his seat to one opposite me next the window and was reading a periodical. Near him lay my bag, just where I had placed it. I opened it and looked for my pocketbook.

Now, I leave it to any woman if she on awakening from a slumber to find she had been robbed of money from a bag lying beside a man would not look up at him accusingly. The man's eyes were upon me, and my looks told him that I suspected him of stealing the money I had lost just as plainly as it could have been expressed in words. He looked frightened and said something to me in German, but he might as well have spoken in Sanskrit. Then he tried me in French. I can speak a little French, but can understand it scarcely at all. At any rate, I didn't catch what he had to say.

The man looked so cut up that I grew suspicious of him. But why he had not left the train with it while I was asleep I could only conjecture. Perhaps the train had not made a stop. He was not a cool thief by any means, for without my taking any action whatever he took out a roll of crisp bills and said to me in French:

"Combien?" ("How much?") which I understood was asking me the amount I had been robbed of. I held up one finger and said, "Mille francs," meaning that I had had 1,000 francs in my pocketbook. My money had been brand new, like the notes he held in his hand, and I did not doubt they were mine. I gathered that he preferred to return my money rather than have me call a guard at the next station and have him arrested. He counted the roll in his hand, and it amounted to exactly 1,000 francs. Then he handed it to me, saying something in French which I did not understand.

I was very glad to get my money back at all and especially so easily. When we reached the next station the thief looked at me anxiously and on seeing that I made no move to call any one to arrest him drew a long sigh of relief. This was the only stop we made till we reached Berlin, and when we rolled into the station and the coach door was opened by the guard the rascal jumped out and disappeared in a great hurry.

My husband had secured a house in the capital, had engaged servants and had everything ready not only for our comfort, but to enable us to entertain guests. Of course every one of the diplomatic corps must do more or less entertaining, and since I brought my husband a fortune and we were abundantly able to bear the expense we proposed to do our full share; but, of course, I must go through the preliminaries of being introduced at court.

All this had been attended to, and I was a full fledged member of Berlin society. The first important function I attended was a state ball at the palace. I was standing talking to a lady whose husband was a member of the diplomatic corps when I saw the emperor coming with a gentleman who was bedizened with decorations, the emperor laughing at something the latter was telling him. When they came near enough for me to distinguish their features the marrow froze in my bones. The man to whom the emperor was listening was the thief who had stolen, then returned, my money. I shrank away, but not in time. He saw me and the expression on his face denoted as much surprise as mine did consternation. Then he said something to the emperor, who looked at me with an expression of amused surprise.

Calling to a lady standing near me, the emperor and the thief talked to her, and it was evident that they were talking about me. Then the three approached me, and the lady, after making the required presentation, told me that the thief was Count Heinrich Schmieden, one of the emperor's most intimate friends. He had been telling his majesty of how a lady on a train had been robbed and how he rather than submit to arrest had paid over the amount stolen. Just as he had finished the story he espied me.

The matter was considered an admirable joke by the emperor and, indeed, by the count, who claimed that he had paid me the money not so much through fear of my having him arrested as the inconvenience I would be put to at not having any money for expenses. I doubted his gallantry, but gave him credit for it. The next morning my husband sent him a check for 1,000 francs.

The affair resulted in our receiving considerable attention from one of the most influential men in Berlin.

PRESERVING TOMATOES

The best way to can tomatoes whole, says a noted housewife, is simply to pack them, without peeling, into wide mouthed jars. Half fill the jars with cold water, put the jars into a large saucepan or washboiler with water to reach halfway up the jars. Bring the water to boiling point, boil half an hour, take out the jars, fill them to overflowing with boiling water and seal.

In this way you will get all the value from the tomatoes. You can do this after dinner, and you can do it while washing your dishes. This is a particularly nice way for those who pick the fruit from their own vines as it ripens. In a short time you will have a goodly stock on hand for a rainy day, and a can opened in winter will give you the full, fresh flavor of tomatoes from the vines.

When You Feel Drowsy.

Drowsiness during the day, if a person has slept well the night before, may be caused by indigestion. Often this is remedied by drinking something hot like cocoa or coffee. The brain needs a mild stimulant. Lassitude of the body is not always an indication of illness or laziness. A weak stomach is the primary cause for that draggy feeling in the morning.

Ironing Pongee.

To iron a natural colored pongee so as to preserve its beauty iron it only when it is perfectly dry and with an iron only moderately hot, as nothing scorches quite so easily as silk. Do not sprinkle pongee, as the water spots never iron out.

MILADY'S DRESS.

A new veil is caught into a velvet neckband decorated with rhinestone or cut steel.

Dancing caps of gold net over a wire frame with flower trimming are very coquettish and flattering.

A charming sleeve is simply a square of tulle fastened into the armhole and falling like a wing as far as the belt.

Puffed apron tunics of silk over plaited skirts of tulle and lace looped up with roses are a charming style for young girls' dancing frocks.

Shoes become more fanciful even for ordinary day wear. Certainly the part they play in the perfect toilet is very important.

Intricate Mechanism.

"I don't know how to take this chicken apart," declared the bride.

"Well, we tackled an automobile successfully," said the young husband. "We ought to be able to handle a small job like this. Where's the book of instructions?"—Kansas City Journal.

Up to Him.

"Won't you get me an automobile, dear?" said the young married woman.

"But the expense, wife!" replied the husband.

"Oh, you know you promised to keep nothing from me after we were married!"—Yonkers Statesman.

Publicity.

"Of course you don't care for cheap notoriety," said the man of ideals.

"My dear sir," rejoined Senator Sorghum, "there is no such thing as cheap notoriety nowadays. Advertising of every description costs something."—Washington Star.

A Case of Necessity.

"Do you write often to your husband when you go away for the summer?"

"Yes, I have to. He never gives me money enough at one time to last very long."—Detroit Free Press.

Spirited Conversation.

"Isn't it strange how music intoxicates you?" asked the cheerful idiot.

"Not at all," replied the boob. "It is written in bars, isn't it?"—Cincinnati Enquirer.

As Usual.

Bill—How did her singing strike you?

Jill—Oh, as usual, I was the innocent bystander.—Yonkers Statesman.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Delirium.

The cause that underlies a case of delirium must first be found, because the treatment will vary in accordance with it. Few of us are called on to deal with delirium tremens or with the delirium of starvation or with that terrible form known as acute delirious mania, which generally ends in death. But the delirium that accompanies typhoid fever, pneumonia or the acute infectious fevers of childhood is of common occurrence, and it is well to know that much can be done to prevent it or to bring relief after it has gone and until a doctor can be secured. Sedative treatment, such as a warm bath with cold applications to the head, will often ward off an attack, but when there is great prostration of strength stimulation is usually necessary. Delirium is always exhausting. See that the patient's strength is kept up as far as possible and never leave a delirious patient alone, even for a minute. There are too many cases of sick people falling from open windows.

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

FLATTERY is rather cheap, but, like some other cheap things, often immensely effective.

Taking advice is often quite as bad a habit as giving it.

You may safely believe what you hear if you are circumspect as to your listening.

When you find a rose without a thorn you are up against a byproduct of the milliner's art.

Being without fear may be a tribute to your courage or an evidence of your ignorance.

People who successfully restrain their curiosity are apt to inflame that of other people.

Little, but Strong.

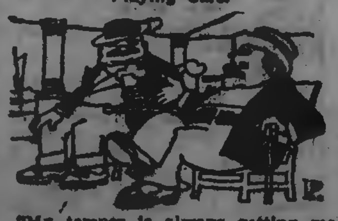
A postage stamp is such a mite,
So small you would not say
That it could carry heavy mail
So many miles away.
You stick it with a dainty dab
Upon your billet-doux,
And to the name addressed the stamp
Proceeds to see it through.

It doesn't weary of the task
Or loiter on the way
Or say that it will rest and do
The job some other day.
It picks the bulky letter up
And gayly sets it down
Without a particle of harm
In some far distant town.

It does not roar because it must
From gulf to ocean flit.
Three thousand miles are just the same
As half a league to it.
Nor does it on surroundings kick
Or beg a cleaner sheet.
The crumpled note is just the same
As one perfumed and neat.

It isn't always size that counts.
The little postage stamp
Does more exacting labor than
The biggest man in camp.
It's on the job from morn till night,
Forever on the fly,
And, as they say of cunning tots,
It's little, but, oh, my!

Playing Safe.



"My temper is always getting me into trouble."

"You should always count a hundred when angry."

"Do you do it?"

"Depends on the size of the man."

Different Peril.

"That boat will ride anything."

"It will, hey?"

"Yes."

"I'd like to see it ride a bucking broncho."

The Full Set.

She—Weren't you perfectly delighted when baby cut his first tooth?

He—Yes. I thought maybe he'd quit yelling then. But I found there were thirty-one more to follow.

Affair of the Heart.

"What is the matter with the duke?"

"He needs a change of air."

"From what I hear he needs a change of heiress."

QUEEN MARY AT WORK

Her Majesty Attends to the King's Correspondence and Helps Charity

No one anywhere is taking a more devoted part than Her Majesty Queen Mary. Her Majesty is president of the National Needlework Guild, and is using that organization to collect supplies of garments for women and children. Her Majesty is also using her influence to insure that relief work shall be centralized and prevent overlapping.

The war made many changes in the daily life of the Court, and the Queen is giving almost her whole time to the public service. Her Majesty relieved the King of the greater part of his personal correspondence and took entire charge of receiving and answering letters with the help of several secretaries. Both the King and Queen are kept more fully informed of the course of the war than their subjects, from whom many happenings, both on sea and land, must be kept dark in view of the necessity of preventing the enemy from obtaining information. But all the information the Government has of the progress of the whole course of the campaign is given daily to the King and Queen.

All state and official entertaining at the Palace has been suspended. The dinner hour at the Palace has been fixed half an hour later than the usual time to enable Their Majesties to get through as much work as possible before it, and it is quite a plain and simple meal. In this connection it is said that the Queen at once forbade the laying in of specially large supplies at the Palace at the outbreak of war, which happened at a time when the usual monthly orders for certain supplies in the way of tea, sugar, rice, etc., would be sent out in the ordinary way. None of the orders was increased, but on the contrary, in the case of many commodities, less than usual was actually ordered.

ABOUT STRASSBURG

Famous For Its Astronomical Clock and Wonderful Cathedral

Strassburg is an important spot in the theatre of war. After its capture the city was formally ceded to Germany by France in the war of 1870. It is of strategic value, being 25 miles east of Paris and 370 miles southwest of Berlin.

By far the most important building is the cathedral, which in its present form represents the activity of four centuries, although part of the crypt dates back as far as 1015.

It is considered one of the grandest churches on the European continent.

The tall spire rising from the western front reaches a height of 466 feet. It is richly embellished by statues and bas-reliefs. The screen of double tracery, of thirteenth century origin, is the work of Steinbach. The interior is majestic, with its vast dimensions and rich decorations.

In the south transept of the cathedral stands the remarkable astronomical clock, which was built in the fourteenth century, and renovated in 1839-42. It includes a perpetual calendar; the relative position and movements of the planets forming the solar system, and many automatic figures which operate at stated intervals.

The cathedral was severely damaged in the siege of 1870 as was, also, the library, another very important building. All traces of this havoc however, were removed.

The library was an old episcopal palace, built in the decade 1731-41. The books and manuscripts of the library were destroyed in 1870. Although many of them could not be replaced, books were sent to the library from all parts of Germany and it now has a collection of about 700,000 volumes.

Cleansing with mustard is said to remove the smell of fish from pots.

"Cells" and "Sells"

Consider these facts before you decide on your war-time advertising policy:

When a firm advertises a brand of merchandise it thereby pre-empts certain brain cells in the minds of a certain number of people.

Those cells, in each brain, store away the arguments in favor of that brand; and become factors in inducing their owner to purchase the advertised, branded merchandise.

Now, along comes War, with all its unsettling of business, all its disturbance of trade; and the manufacturer, faced with the apparent advisability of saving money, begins to consider whether advertising is one of the features on which he can retrench.

But let him cease advertising—and soon, very soon, the public will begin to waver and drift away to other brands. Stop the appeal to those brain cells, and soon, very soon, the cells will forswear their allegiance and become acquired by other manufacturers who make a fresh appeal to them.

The brain of every human being is in constant process of change. The cells are shifting, shifting, all the time. Ordinarily, by steady, persistent advertising, the manufacturer of a sound article is not only holding the brain cells his goods have won, but is surely, steadily adding to the number of his acquired cells—surely, steadily increasing his hold on the public mind.

Let him stop the advertising and the process of cell capture not only closes, but the cells he has been at such pains to win over, will become lost to him—perhaps forever.

Even a War scarcely excuses the unsound business policy which permits such a catastrophe. Even in war-time, it behooves every manufacturer to keep his advertising at full pressure.

GERMANS IN RETREAT

Russians Foil Their Attempt to Cross the River Nieman.

General Retreat of Teutons Towards Suwalki is in Progress, Says Official Despatch From Petrograd---All Communication With Przemysl Cut and Defence Fortress is Passive---Roumanians Busy.

PETROGRAD, Sept. 28.—The general staff yesterday gave out the following official statement:

"The German attempts to cross the river Nieman, near Drusenikl (Russian Poland) have been foiled by our fire. The German artillery has been unable to oppose our offensive movement near Sepotzkin. The German retreat towards the government of Suwalki has become general. The fortress of Ossowets continues to resist the German heavy siege artillery with success.

"The fights in Galicia have been marked by especial tenacity, particularly at a hill where the Hungarians were dislodged from three positions and withdrew in disorder. We have taken a whole battery and several hundred prisoners. The pursuit of the enemy continues.

"All communications with Przemysl are cut. The defence fortress there remains passive. Deserters said they heard that great troubles have been encountered in the garrison.

"The fords of the river Vislok are occupied by the Russians. The Austrian rear guards have fallen back towards Dobraiets."

An official communication issued from the headquarters of the general staff yesterday says that in the region of Druskenheiky, the Russian troops engaged the Germans on Sept. 25.

The Austrian army is now retiring westward, utilizing the railroads leading to Cracow. After defeating two regiments of Honoeds the Russians troops occupied Turka.

A Bucharest despatch to The Novoe Vremya says it is rumored that the first Roumanian army corps has been ordered to the Austrian frontier.

Przemysl Partly Occupied.

LONDON, Sept. 28. — "The Russians on Saturday occupied the greater part of the city of Przemysl (Galicia), according to a message from Vienna," says the Rome correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph Co. His despatch continues:

"The Russians approached the city from the southwest, forcing the Austrians to take shelter in the eastern forts, where the entire garrison is now concealed and preparing to make a final resistance. The situation fo the garrison is critical, as it is entirely surrounded.

"Russian troops are advancing from Grodek, on the Austrian positions, while the right wing continues to attack from the north. Troops are being poured into the City of Przemysl to press the attack from the southwest."

The Petrograd correspondent of The Daily Telegraph has forwarded the following semi-official statement regarding the operations in Russian Poland:

"The movement of German troops from East Prussia in the direction of Warsaw has come to nothing. In the government of Suwalki (Russian Poland) the Germans have suffered a serious repulse. The left flank of the Russian army has defeated the troops under the command of Gen. von Hinderburg, near Suwalki.

"At the same time our troops won a complete victory at Mariampol, and the attacking Germans were thrown back ten miles across the River Scheschupa with a loss of many guns and prisoners. On the right flank at the Nieman river the battle ended in success for us at Sredniki, where a German attempt to cross the river was repulsed with great loss."

AWAITING A PRETEXT.

Italy Not Ready Yet To Plunge Into the War.

LONDON, Sept. 28. — Notwithstanding Winston Spencer Churchill's statement of reasons why Italy should enter the war on the side of the allies it is known in authoritative quarters that Italy is not ready to act. Still there are reasons for believing that Italy, at the opportune time, will be found fighting with the allies.

Officially, the British Government is doing nothing, as it does not wish to place itself in the position of dragging Italy into the conflict. It is recognised that, at present, Italy's excuse would be territorial advantage, to be gained through Austria's weakened position. It is expected, however, that better justification will be afforded, and that then Italy will strike.

It is believed now that the chance of Turkey's participating in the war is remote.

ZEPPELINS SEEK FLEET.

Several Airships Trying To Find British Warships In Baltic.

LONDON, Sept. 28.—The flight of several Zeppelins over the Cattegat is reported from Copenhagen. It is suggested that they are seeking the location of a part of the British fleet, which is thought to have passed through the Skagerack, en route to the succor of the Russian fleet in the Baltic, believed to have been engaged with a superior German force.

The channel is heavily mined, and the danger of attack from German torpedo boats is imminent, but British commanders have often courted chance by disregarding such obstacles.

Hannes Kolehmaininen, world's champion distance runner, has arrived in New York from Finland.

EPIDEMIC CONFIRMED.

Vienna Doctors Establish Presence of Cholera Among the Wounded.

LONDON, Sept. 28. — A despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Co. from Rome says that a message received there from Vienna states that Government bacteriologists have definitely established the presence of Asiatic cholera, among the 70,000 wounded in the hospitals of Vienna.

It has been stated officially that an isolated case of cholera was discovered among Austrian soldiers who had returned wounded from Galicia, and unofficial advices received earlier from Vienna by way of Venice said that a total of nine cases of the disease had been discovered among the wounded soldiers. These cases, however, were reported from widely separated points.

Drunken Men in Charge of Horses

Saturday night was a record breaker for horses being driven by drunken men. Wm. Anderson and John Condon both pleaded guilty to the charge of being incapable of driving a horse with safety and were each fined two dollars and costs, or fifteen days.

Thos. Dickson, although he said that he had indulged in a few drinks, thought he was perfectly able to guide a horse. However, his condition was described by an officer, who said the horse was going along of its own accord with the lines hanging loosely over the dashboard. He was fined two and costs.

A Warning This Time.

Charles Simpson, Kenneth Downey and Chas. Hickey, all of Otonabee township, were charged with entering a store in the said township and taking some candies, gum, etc., to the value of two dollars. On the evidence given they were let go with a warning.

Charge of Vagrancy.

Mary Sherron, who hails from Toronto, and has relatives in Keene, was charged with vagrancy and not conducting herself properly. The case was remanded for further investigation.

A movement is afoot in Paris to change the reading of the moratorium so as to force Germans and Austrians to pay rent or leave.

VICTORY FOR JAPANESE

Fourteen Hour Battle Fought in Outskirts of Tsing Tau

TOKIO, Sept. 28.—It is officially announced that the Japanese have defeated the Germans in a stubborn battle lasting 14 hours in the outskirts of Tsingtau, the seat of government of the German leased possession of Kiaochau, China.

The Japanese casualties so far as ascertained are given at 312 killed and wounded.

According to the statement, the fight began on Sept. 26. German gunboats bombarded the position of the Japanese troops. Japanese aeroplanes proved effective in reconnoitring expeditions, and are reported to have escaped unharmed.

Japs Seize Railway Station.

WIEHAIEN, Sept. 28.—(Via Pekin.)—Two hundred Japanese entered Wiehsien Friday evening and occupied the railway station, capturing four Germans.

The Chinese troops encamped nearby are fraternizing with the Japanese. Railroad communication to the east and west of this town has been terminated.

Wieh-ien is an important city in the Chinese Province of Shantung, about fifty miles to the north of the German concession of Kiaochau, with which it is connected by railroad.

Peiho Taken From Germans.

LONDON, Sept. 28.—A despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Co. from Pekin says it is officially announced there that Peiho was occupied on Sept. 27 by a small Japanese detachment which repulsed 300 Germans.

PRESENT WAR A GREAT DIVIDE

World Cannot be the Same After This Great Struggle

The Charlotte Street Methodist Church was well filled last night to hear the Rev. R. G. Peever, B.D. Mr. Peever preached from the text found in Deuteronomy 30:19-20. There, the speaker began, are part of the words of Moses just before he finished the work of his life. They illustrate a great divide in the world's history. The word "divide" was explained by a description of the Great Divide in the table land of the Rockies where a little glacial stream divides, one branch going east to the Atlantic and the other going west to the Pacific. So there are great divides in other things. In history there are great periods, crises great struggles that divide it. He believed the present upheaval in Europe was such a crisis. We are standing on a great table land. The world cannot be the same again after this great struggle. There will be deeper depths to national morality and the universal uplift of mankind will be helped by it.

Moses and his people stood at a great divide. The life of the wilderness was on one side. Joshua was on the other leading them into the promised life of a promised land, a life which eventually was to lead them to the life of Jesus Christ. The scene was pathetic, dramatic and splendidly heroic for Moses was giving up his work and any scene in life like that was such. Moses' works mark him as being among the mightiest of men. He exhibited completeness of leadership and genius for statesmanship.

What should his message be, standing thus at a turning point in the world's history? The best thing possible to the heart of his people. You have it here in the text, That thou mayest love the Lord thy God, and that thou mayest obey His voice. If you deny God penalty will follow. That is the negative side, the other is to choose life that thou mayest live.

There is the same kind of turning point in the lives of the people of today. In your life today God's ways have not changed. God is bringing men by circumstances to the same position in which Israel stood. The greatest turning point was Jesus Christ on Calvary. The message of Him who was greater than Moses was a promise of forgiveness and salvation to every son and daughter of Adam's race. "Come unto Me all ye that are heavy laden," etc. "Seek ye first the Kingdom of God." It doesn't matter what kind of a house you live in so long as you follow the message. It can be splendidly heroic like that of Moses who made the message of God his rule in life.

COUNTY TEACHERS' CONVENTION TO HEAR DEAN PACKENHAM

At a meeting of the executive of the County of Peterborough Teachers' Institute on Saturday it was decided to hold the annual convention in this city on Thursday and Friday, November 12 and 13, in connection with the meeting of the city teachers. Dean Pakenham, of the faculty of education of the University of Toronto, will be the departmental lecturer and will address an evening meeting, as well as take part in the day sessions. The proposed convention in Toronto had to be abandoned, owing to the small number who wished to go there.

GERMANS FAIL IN FIERCEST BATTLE SINCE WAR BEGAN

In Effort to Bring Battle to an End Kaiser's Generals Throw Corps After Corps Against Allies, But Fail to Check Turning Movement ---Progress of Anglo-French Army Perceptible, Says Bulletin.

PARIS, Sept. 28. — A despatch from the battlefront says:

"Desperate attempts made by the Germans on the west end of the long line of battle to break through the allies' forces, which are engaged in a turning movement, have resulted in the most serious fighting which has taken place since the beginning of the campaign. After fighting without respite night and day, corps after corps of Germans were hurled against the flower of the French and British armies yesterday, only to be thrown back."

The official communication issued last night says:—

"It is confirmed that since the night of the 25th to the 26th and up to far into the day of the 27th the Germans have not ceased, night or day, to renew on the entire front attacks of unprecedented violence, with the determined purpose of trying to break through our lines.

"These attacks were made with a uniformity which denotes instructions from the highest command to seek the solution of the battle.

"Not only have they not been able to accomplish it, but during the action we have captured one flag, some cannons, many prisoners. The flag was taken from the enemy by the 24th Regiment of Colonial Infantry.

"All our army commanders make special mention of the fact that the morale of our troops, notwithstanding this uninterrupted struggle, continues to be excellent, and they themselves even have trouble to hold back the troops in their desire to rush on the enemy, who is sheltered in defensive positions."

The following official bulletin was issued yesterday afternoon:—

"First—On our left wing the battle has been continued with perceptible progress on our part. On the front between the Rivers Oise and Somme and on the north of the Somme from the Oise to Rheims very violent attacks by the Germans have been made at several points, some of them being at the point of the bayonet, but they were all repulsed. In many places the French and German trenches were not more than 100 metres apart.

"Second—In the centre from Rheims to Souain the Prussian Guard has undertaken unsuccessfully a vigorous offensive, being hurled back in the region of Berry-au-Bac (11 miles northeast of Rheims and about 25 miles east of Soissons) and Nogent l'Abesse (three miles due east of Rheims). From Souain the enemy yesterday morning made a successful attack between the highway leading from Sommepy to Chalons-sur-Marne and the line of the railway from St. Menehould to Vouziers. At the end of the day our troops had regained the ground they had lost.

"Between the region of Argonne and the Meuse the enemy has not manifested any activity. On the heights of the Meuse nothing new has developed. In the southern part of the Woevre district the Germans occupy a front which passes by St. Mihiel and to the northwest of Pont-a-Mousson.

"On our right wing in Lorraine, the Vosges and Alsace there has been no important change."

The infantry played an important part all along the line and pushed back the Germans for a considerable distance. All mention of the places of action or comment on the troop movements is forbidden under the severest penalties.

A son of Paul Doumer, former Speaker of the Chamber of Deputies, was killed in action near Nancy.

INFANTRY BEARS BRUNT IN HAND-TO-HAND CONFLICTS

ON THE BATTLEFIELD, Sept. 28.—(Via Paris.)—The infantry bore the brunt of the incessant fighting Saturday and Sunday, but the artillery of both armies continued throughout twenty-four hours to bombard each other's positions.

Hand-to-hand combats occurred at many points, and bayonets were used freely.

The French colonial infantry, most of whose men wear many medals for bravery displayed in colonial campaigns, was to the fore, and beside these men fought the black Senegalese troops, while along the line the British troops held an important point with the greatest determination.

The French troops showed more than their accustomed dash in attack, and everywhere acts of wonderful courage were performed. The cavalry also participated in the engagement at many points, the allies' horses having enjoyed a long rest, which enabled this arm of the service to distinguish itself. The famous Scots Greys, finding that the color of their horses offered a prominent mark for the German infantry, had dyed their mounts.

The famous French officer, Gen. Marquet, has met death on the field.

At Nubecourt, home of the parents of President Poincare, the Germans broke open the Poincare family vault, it is reported, and buried a number of their dead there. The Germans placarded the town of Valciennes, demanding that the mayors of neighboring communes furnish lists of the available supplies of clothing and food.

REV. FR. ROCHE'S SERMON AT CORNER STONE CEREMONY FOR NEW CHURCH IN EAST CITY

Bishop O'Brien Officiates at Ceremony, Which is Largely Attended

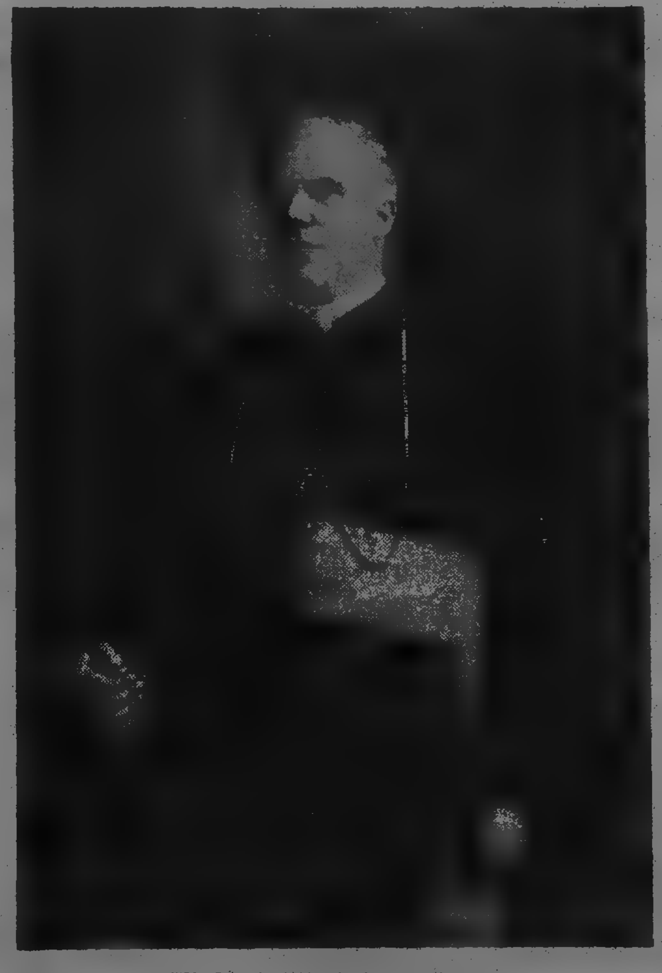
Another epoch in the history of the Catholic Church in this city has been opened, another milestone on the road of advancement has been passed, the corner stone of the new Church of the Immaculate Conception in East City has been laid. It has been seldom that citizens of Peterboro and vicinitg have been granted the opportunity of being present at the laying of a corner stone of a Catholic Church.

Yesterday an assemblage which embraced thousands of people witnessed the solemn and impressive ceremony, performed by Rght Rev. M. J. O'Brien, D.D..

The Catholic men and boys of the city met at St. Peter's School and marched to the new church where the latter immediately took up an allotted position and under the direction of Rev. Father Phelan, joined in singing the hymns "Oh Mother I could Weep for Mirth" and "Oh Sacred Heart." Bishop O'Brien dressed in his episcopal robes and attended by Monsignor Casey of Lindsay, Cery Rev. Dean McColl, Father Fitzpatrick, Father P. McGuire, Father M. McGure, Father J. J. O'Brien, Father McAuley, Father Cote, Father Leonard and several altar boys came from the House of Providence in procession and the ceremony was commenced. The Litany of the Saints was recited and as the choir chanted psalms, the stone was blessed and placed in position. It bore the inscription:

Revmus M. J. O'Brien
Episcopus Peterboroughensis
Posuit Die 27 September, 1914

At the close of the ceremony Bishop O'Brien gave the apostolic blessing.



HIS LORDSHIP BISHOP O'BRIEN

Who officiated at the laying of the corner stone of the Church of the Immaculate Conception.

The Sermon.

Rev. Father N. Roche, Superior of St. Michael's College of Toronto, delivered an exceedingly appropriate sermon in a voice that glowed with natural eloquence. His text was "Thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my church and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it. And I will give to thee the keys of the Kingdom of Heaven. And whatsoever thou shalt bind upon earth, it shall be bound also in Heaven and whatsoever thou shalt loose upon earth, it shall be loosed in Heaven.

The laying of a corner stone of a new church, the distinguished speaker began, is an interesting event because it is the occasion of another temple being dedicated to the service of God, another portion of the earth being set aside for the service of the Almighty. It is especially interesting because it is typical of another form by which Jesus Christ aids the living Church to propogate His work, the continual mission from Calvary to the consummation of the world. When He came on earth to save mankind He lived a natural life and because He was to redeem the world by death, He made a representative to take up His unfinished work and carry it through. Christ was all wise and all powerful, He possessed all wisdom and power omnipotent and had all resources at His command. In His infinite wisdom He chose one foundation, that was when He spoke the words of the text to St. Peter. On that day He laid the corner stone of the living imperishable church just as the corner stone of the Church of the Immaculate Conception was laid.

It was not rock of the earth He chose, but one He made. He did not go to the quarries but to the assemblage of men. He chose Simon changed his name to Peter and said "Thou art Peter and upon this rock I will build my church and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." He said more, "And I will give to thee the keys of the Kingdom of Heaven." Thus did Christ lay the corner stone of the living Church. The foundation was one formed after His own divine nature. It was satisfactory to Jesus Christ and was efficient for its purpose. He had said, "I will build a church" and thus he fulfilled his promise and He founded it on Peter, the only foundation of Christianity. The Church of God is made up of men and women; all races, not one and for all generations. It was made to resist the power of the world and made as Christ says through St. Paul "a perfect church." It is pleasing to God and satisfactory for the purpose destined.

The Church of God is made up of teaching power. "I have prayed for thee, that thy faith fail thee not and thou being once converted, confirm thy brethren." Thus it has the strength and stability of God. What other organization can withstand the effects of time? Works of nature and men perish but only one institution has stood for two thousand years, that is the institution founded on Peter, the Church of Christ. No organization could withstand assailants for that length of time unless the power of God was behind it. No organization no matter how nearly perfected by man, could show the same life, the same vitality. Little by little the works of man fade but there is one work that remained in days gone by and will remain in days to come, one institution that withstood, that is, the Church of Peter.

What a scene must have been enacted when Jesus Christ called Peter and spoke the words "Thou art Peter and upon this rock I will build my church!" He might have called John, His beloved disciple, or Paul, the disciple to the Gentile, but no, in His infinite wisdom He chose Peter and what God has done is well done. "I will give to thee the keys of the Kingdom of Heaven" He said and thus gave the power to Peter. He might have spoken those words to John or James or another man not of the apostolic band, but he did not. He chose Peter and Peter alone is the doorkeeper, he alone can open or close the gates of heaven. We read in the present war that when an army takes a city, the general seeks the mayor of the city and secures the keys of the city hall, the registrary office and treasury because the possession of these donates power. When Jesus Christ gave Peter the keys, He gave him the power, not power over a city hall or registrary office, however, but power to open or close the gates of heaven. To those whom Peter opens the gates, they are opened and to those whom Peter closes the gates, they are closed. Peter alone has charge of the Kingdom of God on earth and the Kingdom of Heaven, for Christ stated, "Whatsoever thou shalt bind upon earth, it shall be bound also in heaven and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth, it shall be loosed in heaven."

At another time Jesus said to Peter, "Peter, son of John, lovest thou Me more than these? He saith to him. Yea, Lord, thou knowest that I love thee. He saith to him: Feed my lambs. He saith to him again: Peter, son of John, lovest thou Me? He said to Him: Yea, Lord, thou knowest I love thee. He saith to him: Feed my lambs. He saith to him the third time: Peter, son of John, lovest thou Me? Peter was grieved because he had said to him the third time: Lovest thou Me? And he saith to him: Lord, thou knowest all things; thou knowest that I love thee. He saith to him: Feed my sheep" (John 21:15, 16, 17). By sheep, Jesus Christ meant the Bishops of His Church and by lambs, His faithful. Was he to feed them with wheat of the earth? No. He was to feed them with faith, truth and sound morality. These are the things that win the Kingdom of Heaven. Peter was commanded to lead the lambs and sheep to pastures of fatness of truth, faith and love. Thus was Peter made the unshakeable foundation of the Church of Christ, the key bearer of the Kingdom of Heaven and the pastor of all the faithful. He was the corner stone, well and truly laid, of a church which the gates of hell could not prevail against.

How nobly has Jesus Christ abided by His promise. The power behind the Church of Christ has not failed. What church other than the church founded on St. Peter could withstand such persecution as it did in its infancy. The persecutions of Nero, Maximin, Diocletian and many others failed to destroy it. The bark of Peter floated on a red sea of blood. The faithful were driven to the catacombs and sub-terranean caves where Christianity strived until in the end it was found that the powers of the world had failed, the apostate shouted "Galilean thou hast conquered."

When freedom was granted to the faithful, the church was assailed by those who claimed to be wiser than the Jesus Christ. The Arian and many other heresies sprung up but they have all failed, because they were not rooted on Peter. They had not divine life given them by Jesus Christ. Then when the migration of nations began we find St. Leo, St. Peter's successor, meeting the barbarians from the north and being victorious. At the time when the great Napoleon turned against the Church and made the Pope an exile he did not think that "the arms would fall from his men" yet history tells us that such was the case on the retreat from Moscow. Six hundred thousand of the finest soldiers ever arrayed on any battlefield were reduced in numbers to twenty thousand. The arms did fall from his men. The commander of the army at whose tread the people of the world today trembles, the German Kaiser, defied Pope Leo the thirteenth by refusing to go to Canossa but he later was glad to go to Canossa.

The Church of Christ has had other enemies. Those who have accused her of being non-progressive. It is in that, that the Church of Peter glories. How could Peter or any successor change the doctrines and constitutions of the Church of Christ when they were not made by man? There has been no revolutions for Jesus Christ founded it and it must ever remain the same. In other matters not pertaining to doctrines the Church of Peter has progressed. The world was shocked but a few days ago when it became known that the city of Louvain had been destroyed. The Cambridge and Oxford Universities immediately opened their doors to the masters and professors from Louvain, who are sons of the Church of Peter. Cambridge and Oxford were founded by such men. In the present days international arbitration as a means of settling disputes between nations instead of the sword is being agitated. That is not new, it was in force when the whole world was Catholc. The same thing is true of insurance and workingmen's compensation.

Great was St. Peter when Jesus Christ made him the foundation upon which His Church was built, presented him with the keys of the Kingdom of Heaven and appointed him pastor of the Living God. Great was St. Peter when he administered to the faithful in the catacombs. Great and noble was St. Peter and his two hundred and sixty successors each the rock upon which the Church of Rome stands. Great was St. Peter before the present generation came into the world and great will be St. Peter when the present generation is no more. Great is St. Peter in the Eternal City on the banks of the Tiber and great is St. Peter in the eyes of three hundred million Catholics of the world. Great was St. Peter before this present war began and although some men are asking what will come next, and others are saying that religion is doomed, we are certain that when all is over, great will be the Church founded on Peter by Jesus Christ.

Bishop O'Brien.

His Lordship Bishop O'Brien, D.D., spoke a few words at the close of the sermon, thanking the people for assembling in such large numbers. He referred to the work of the new Church of the Immaculate Conception will undoubtedly do, hoping that the three divine virtues, faith, hope and charity would be especially fostered. He urged his listeners to be charitable and love their neighbor, whom as Holy Scripture states is mankind of every description. The vast assemblage then brought the function to a close by singing "Holy God we Praise Thy Name."

Seven Belgian cities have been burned to date, and 114,500 persons driven from homes.

MR. BOWSER'S ILLS

They Are All to be Cured by Hosreback Riding

By M. QUAD

[Copyright, 1914, by Associated Literary Press.]

MRS. BOWSER stood looking out through the window the other evening as Mr. Bowser came from the office. There was a strange man with him, and they were in earnest conversation. He had a half guilty look on his face as he opened the door, and he seemed to want to be questioned, but the mystery was left unsolved until after dinner. Then she quietly asked:

"Well, what have you been buying this time?"

"Nothing at all," he replied.

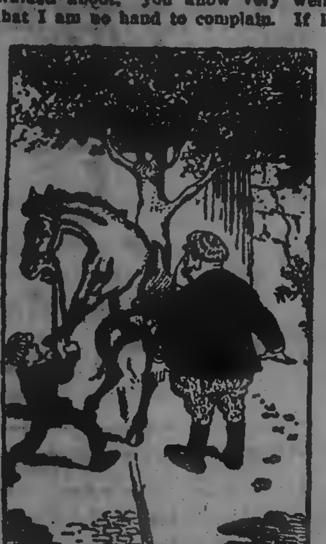
"Then you've got some scheme on foot?"

"There's no scheme about it. I have simply decided to do what any sensible man ought to do. When a man finds that he is the victim of a dozen ailments he ought to go at it and cure himself, oughtn't he?"

"Of course. But what are your ailments? Now and then you have a headache or you get a corn on your toe but your general health is excellent. It was only the other day that you were boasting how rugged you were."

He is Uncomplaining.

"My dear woman," he said as he walked about, "you know very well that I am no hand to complain. If I was dying I should say nothing about it till the last moment. I may have boasted of my health, but is it a husband's place to alarm his wife? You now force me to tell you that I have a dozen ailments at the present moment, any of which may prove fatal, but that I am going to make a heroic effort to live on. If you hadn't driven me into a corner I should have kept my secret."



"HE'S LIKE A LAMB, SIR."

"I see," she quietly observed as the family cat came downstairs and cocked her eye at Mr. Bowser. "Is it a tonic or what?"

"I have been recommended to try horseback riding, and this evening I make my first experiment."

"And you imagine you will joggle the complaints away? I think I see you bouncing around in the saddle and the stirrups flying."

"Joggle! Bounce!" he shouted as he turned on her with a gesture which scared the cat out of the room. "You'd be sarcastic if I lay dead in the house! A nice wife you are to encourage a dying husband. Why should I joggle or bounce about in the saddle?"

"You shouldn't," she answered. "However, if you are going to take your first ride this evening I hope you'll stick to the alley and that the horse is a gentle one. I haven't the slightest objection to your scheme. Indeed, I hope it will do you lots of good."

He Horsebacks.

She spoke so kindly that Mr. Bowser recovered his good nature, and twenty minutes later he was with the boy holding a horse in the alley. It was a soft, moonlight evening, and the unpaved alley was clear of vehicles and just the place for a gallop.

"Is this a gentle horse?" asked Mr. Bowser as he was all ready to get into the saddle.

"He's like a lamb, sir," replied the boy. "Excuse me, but you are trying to get up on the wrong side. That's better. If I was you I'd let him walk at first. Some folks are dizzy when they first move off."

Mr. Bowser had climbed into the saddle like a cow climbing over a fence, but as no one but the boy had seen him he didn't feel very bad about it. Mr. Bowser had been on the back of a horse but three times in his life, and he was no sooner up than he wished he was down. The boy got his feet in the stirrups for him and encouraged him with quiet words, and after the horse had walked up and down for five minutes confidence was restored. Then the boy said:

"This horse is one of the easiest lopers in the hull state, and if I was you I'd push him up a bit. When he starts to lope you'll think you are in a rocking cheer."

Mr. Bowser doubted it, but looking over the back fence he made out Mrs. Bowser standing at one of the rear windows. She had referred to "bounce" and "joggle" and felt that he was being tested. He drew a long breath uttered a silent prayer and chirped for the horse to strike into a lope. The horse obeyed. Had the rider caught the motion it would have been plain sailing, but he didn't catch it. There were a half a dozen bobs, three or four clutches at his mane, and Mr. Bowser rolled sideways out of the saddle and fell in a heap on the pile of ashes. It was a good boy and a sympathetic boy who had brought the horse around. He helped Mr. Bowser up, insisted that it was an accident that might have happened to the best rider on earth and in various ways encouraged him to try again. The fallen rider kicked at the ash heap and struck at the fence and was for giving it up, but the boy soothed him and made him understand that he would lose prestige if he failed to mount again.

He Comes to Grief.

"I intend to, of course," replied Mr. Bowser in defiant tones as he noticed Mrs. Bowser still at the window. "I don't claim to be much of a rider, but I'll get the hang of it in a minute. I think the horse stubbed his toe the other time. Look through that knothole in the fence, will you, and tell me what you see in my back yard?"

"De kitchen girl is sittin' on de ground and laughin' herself to death," reported the lad after a look.

"She is, eh? Sent out by my wife to spy on me. Well, let her giggle. I'll stick on this time if I have to have my legs tied under the saddle."

"Dat's de way to talk. When you git into de saddle jest move with the horse. All ready now."

Mr. Bowser had another climbing match, but in due time he found himself filling the saddle again. Prudence warned him to go slow, but when he thought of Mrs. Bowser and the cook he determined to run all risks. As he got a brace for his feet he struck the horse with his heel, and the animal started away on an easy canter. It was the rocking chair motion the boy had referred to, but Mr. Bowser didn't catch it. He found himself bobbing about and his feet out of the stirrups and before he knew what he was doing both heels struck the horse and set him off at full gallop. There was a yell that could have been heard half a mile away, and then the rider clutched the saddle, shut his eyes and bade goodby to things on earth—all except Mrs. Bowser. The horse set off down the alley with his mind full of wonder, but the wonder soon changed to alarm as his burden lurched about, and before he had gone two blocks he made a shy and a kick, and Mr. Bowser went rolling over the ground and brought up against a fence like a barrel of cider. It was a long time before the world returned to him. Then he opened his eyes to find Mrs. Bowser, the cook, the policeman, the boy and the workingman hovering over him.

He Goes to Bed.

"I think he's comin' to," he heard the policeman say, "and you can set it down that his neck is not broken. What on earth possessed him to ride a horse, ma'am?"

"He wanted exercise," he heard Mrs. Bowser reply.

"Well, we'll lug him home for you, of course, but it won't do no good. He'll keep right on making a donkey of himself till something drives him through a brick wall."

Mr. Bowser was lugged along the alley to his own back yard gate, his back gathering ashes at every step, and it was not until outsiders had retired that he sat up and said to Mrs. Bowser:

"Woman, I understand! I know who threw a club at the horse and jumped me out of the saddle! Hands off! I want no more of your help, and the cook is discharged on the spot. Follow me into the house. I want you to confess in writing to the attempted assassination, and then we will call in the lawyer and settle matters!"

"Yes, we will call in the lawyers and doctors, too," indignantly exclaimed Mrs. Bowser as she lost control of her temper. "While the lawyers are fixing up the papers I want the doctors to examine your head."

"My—my head?" he stammered.

"Yes. It is set on crooked, and when they have said so we will call in a riding master."

"A—a"—

"And ask him whether you ought to ride a horse or a picket fence!"

"Madam, by the beard"—

"Yes, I know, Mr. Bowser. I am now going to the library. If any one calls tell him that I cannot be interrupted. Good night, sir—good night."

And he went up to bed.

THE MARKETS

Latest Quotations in Grain, Dairy Products, Live Stock, etc.

CHICAGO, Sept. 26.—Sharp reductions of prices at Liverpool caused a decided setback today in the wheat market here despite general belief that to obtain war supplies to advantage the British Government had arbitrarily fixed the Liverpool quotations and otherwise interfered with conditions likely to affect trade. The close in Chicago was steady by 1⅛c to 1⅜c under last night. Other net losses were corn, ⅜c to ⅝c, and oats ⅛c to ⅜c to ⅜c to ½c. Provisions finished the same as last night to a shade lower.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 26.—Receipts were heavier and the market dull with heavy hedging sales and a big drop in prices at Liverpool, causing a considerable decline in wheat values here from the outset. Winnipeg wheat opened 1c to 1⅜c lower, oats ⅛c to ¼c lower, and flax ½c to ½c lower for October and November months. A slight rally was brought about on wheat, but it was short lived, little or no support being forthcoming and prices dropped again under opening figures. At closing there was quite a sharp upturn from low points. Wheat closed ⅝c to 1½c lower, and oats ⅜c to ½c down.

The cash situation has undergone a complete change from Friday, the demand for all grains being extremely dull and slow. Offerings were heavy. No. 1 and 2 northern wheat and No. 2 C.W. oats were the only grains for which there was an enquiry, exporters being the buyers.

Cash grains closed: Wheat, 1⅛c to 1⅜c lower; oats unchanged; barley, ½c higher, and flax 1c lower.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Sept. 26.—Export business in grain continues restricted by the many uncertainties of the shipping situation, and a week of little more than nominal business in the export trade closed quietly on Saturday. Fluctuations in the Winnipeg market at the moment can exert little influence one way or the other in the matter of new business until exporters are in a position to know whether the tonnage necessary to carry out forward engagements will be available.

Receipts of cheese at Montreal for the week ending Sept. 26 showed an improvement of about 2000 boxes over the previous week, but again the question of freights is limiting the amount of business that can be done. For the season to date receipts at Montreal are 116,000 boxes behind receipts for the same period a year ago. In butter the shortage as compared with last year amounts to about 63,000 packages. No important changes in prices have taken place in the last day or two.

MINNEAPOLIS GRAIN MARKET.

MINNEAPOLIS, Sept. 26.—Wheat—No. 1 hard, $1.09¾; No. 2 northern, $1.02¾ to $1.06¼; December, $1.08¾. Corn—No. 3 yellow, 73c to 74c. Oats—No. 3 white, 45c to 45¼c. Flour and bran unchanged.

DULUTH GRAIN MARKET.

DULUTH, Sept. 26.—Wheat—No. 1 hard, $1.08¾; No. 1 northern, $1.07¾; No. 2 northern, $1.04⅛; December, $1.07¾.

CHEESE MARKETS.

LONDON, Ont., Sept. 27.—Seven factories offered 1260 boxes of cheese, with no sales. Bidding ranged at from 14c to 14½c.

ST. HYACINTHE, Que., Sept. 27.—At the dairy board, Saturday, 400 packages of butter were sold at 28c, and 450 boxes of cheese at 14¼c.

BELLEVILLE, Ont., Sept. 27.—On the cheese board there were offered 1486 boxes of white and 210 of colored; 1058 were sold at 14¾c, and 540 at 14 13-16c. The balance were refused.

COWANSVILLE, Que., Sept. 27.—At a meeting of the Eastern Townships Dairymen's Association, Saturday, eleven factories offered 577 packages of butter. Two buyers were present. Ten factories sold at 25¾c.

Joan of Arc Unscathed.

PARIS, Sept. 28. — Ambassador Herrick comes in for high praise from George Berthoulat, editor of La Liberte, who describes Mr. Herrick as "an intelligent, vigilant sentinel of civilization at Paris."

Mr. Bertholuat says that the American Ambassador informed him that he saw on a trip to Rheims the statue of Joan of Arc which stands near the desecrated cathedral, standing untouched. The editor draws a brilliant picture from this happy omen and says that the Maid of Orleans will again save France — that she will be born anew.

German Women Mustn't Ogle.

LONDON, Sept. 28. — Along with other functions usurped by the German military government is that of dictating the personal tastes of its Gretchens and Huldas. The text of a proclamation issued by the war time governor of Stuttgart reads:

"It is rigorously forbidden for any woman to cast amorous glances at British and French prisoners."

German Regiment Annihilated.

BASLE, Sept. 28.—The 109th German Reserve Regiment was surrounded and annihilated near Altkirch, in Alsace, by French, under Gen. Pau, according to reports from that region. The Germans were ambushed moving toward the south under the protected of an armored train.

GENERAL SMITH-DORRIEN SAW MUCH FIGHTING

General Sir Horace Lockwood Smith-Dorrien, G.C.B., D.S.O., is well known to Canadians by repute, and to those who served in South Africa by personal acquaintance, for he was in command of the 19th Brigade, which included the first Canadian contingent and which rounded up Cronje and his men at Paardeberg.

He got his first command in 187[illegible] when but 18 years old, and has gone steadily ahead, one of the most brilliant of the "Kitchener men." He is 56 years old and has been in the army for 38 years.

He was described by the late Bennet Burleigh as "a fine type of the hard as nails,' well-trained, active, dependable British officer," and is known in the army as "one of the generals who has never made a mistake." He comes of a patriotic family, having two brothers in the army and two in the navy.

At the disastrous battle of Isandula, Zululand, in 1879, Smith-Dorrien was one of the few officers who, by his athletic powers as runner and swimmer, escaped the Zulu assegais, and lived to take part in the battle of Ulundi, when Cetewayo was finally disposed of. He was mentioned in despatches, and since then honors have fallen fast upon him. He was in the Egyptian expedition of 1882 in which year he raised and commanded a corps of mounted infantry and in 1885, with his mounted infantry, did good work at Suakin. In 1897-8 he served with the Frontier Field Force in India and won the D.S.O. Returning to Egypt in 1[illegible] he took part in the Nile expedition and was present at the battle of Khartoum, and in the subsequent operations in the Soudan.

One of the pluckiest actions performed in South Africa was his gallop to save the Gordon Highlanders at Goorakop, when his brigade was moving to attack the main Boer position. The Highlanders dashed down the hill impetuously, and General Smith-Dorrien, realizing their danger of being surrounded, galloped through a heavy fire across the enemy's front to turn them. He succeeded without injury and calmly returned to his position at the rear of the troops.

On November 6, 1901, he was appointed Adjutant-General in India, and during his six years' service in the East he added to his brilliant record by the invaluable services he rendered to the Indian Empire. He was appointed to the command of the Quetta Division in 1903 and vacated the post on November 30, 1907, having received a six months' extension of the usual tenure, and been promoted to Lieutenant-General. Returning from India, he took up the position of G.O.C. at Aldershot, which has rightly come to be regarded as the military red ribbon. In this distinguished command he succeeded Sir John French. From Aldershot he was transferred to the Southern command.

Canadian Senator Recalls Prophecy

Senator David, city clerk of Montreal, recalled in conversation with a reporter, a remarkable prophecy made in 1640 by a German monk named Hermann, which German as well as French papers have repeatedly published since the Franco-Prussian war of 1870-71.

When he was interested in a French newspaper in Montreal during the time of the war as a result of which Alsace and Lorraine were lost to France, the Senator published the prophecy in his paper. In short it was that France and Germany would meet in a tremendous strubgle early in the seventies (the prophecy was made in 1640). The monk further prophesied that France would be defeated, and that Paris would be besieged. The war would also mark the birth of a united Germany, and this as events showed, proved to be exactly the case.

In the subsequent course of his prophecy, the monk Hermann, after having reviewed political and economical conditions in Europe, declared that France and Germany would again meet in a terrific struggle, in which many of the other nations of Europe would participate. It was prophesied that hundreds of thousands of lives would be lost, and that France would be devastated by the war.

Paris would not again be bombarded, but would be set on fire, the monk said, after which the French people would rise up and annihilate their foes. The end of the war would see the disintegration of the Germanic Empire, the banishment of the Emperor Wilhelm, who would be the last of the Hohenzollerns to sit upon the throne of Germany, and the establishment of a peace to which practically all the nations of Europe would be signatories.

The Senator declared that recently he read in a French newspaper published in Paris that the German people were exceedingly superstitious regarding the Hermann prophecy and that even the Emperor, though ready for war at that time, feared to court a realization of the monk's prophetic vision.

The monk said that the second struggle between France and Germany would occur forty-three years after the first war.

You Never Can Tell.

Hicks—You never can tell about a woman.

Wicks—You shouldn't anyhow.—Boston Transcript.

The Voice of Experience.

"So you want to marry my daughter?" said Mr. Cummox.

"Yes," replied the young man. "I am sure she loves me."

"That isn't the consideration that most affects your prospect of future happ'ness. What you want to do is to find out whether her mother likes you."

Would Enjoy the Job.

One day Tommy accompanied his mother on a shopping expedition and, seeing a large candy man in a confectioner's window, he paused in front of it with a wistful look; then, turning away regretfully, said:

"Mamma, I could lick that fellow with both hands tied behind me."

MOTOR TRUCKS USED IN WAR

Subsidized by Governments and Requisitioned When They Are Needed

One of the most striking phases of the war is the revolution in transportation methods. In recent years Germany, France and England have systematically subsidized motor trucks on condition that they should be available for governmental use in case of need. In Germany, by complying with certain conditions, the purchaser of a motor truck received a subsidy of $1,000, to be applied on the purchase price, and $250 a year for upkeep for four years. These subsidized trucks must carry a load of 13,000 pounds, and haul a trailer besides, be capable of running ten miles an hour with full load, be able to climb a 14 per cent. grade, and be able to haul a second trailer if necessary. Eight hundred subsidized trucks were available up to January 1, 1912. Since then the number has been largely increased, and the Government has the power to requisition every motor vehicle in the Empire.

In France, the owner of a three-ton motor truck can get a Government subsidy of $600 and $200 a year for upkeep for three years, the Government having the right to take possession of all motor trucks.

Great Britain allows a subsidy of $40 to $60 and $75 a year for upkeep.

Austria-Hungary also subsidizes motor trucks and requisitions all that are needed.

The result is to make the armies of to-day more mobile than strategists of former generations ever dreamed of. Artillery is also, to a large extent, hauled by motors, especially the big guns. The French gave their artillery tractors an elaborate test in the last manoeuvres. These tractors are 35 horse-power, and are equipped with a winch and chain cable for pulling the gun out of the mud. They can carry a load of two and a half tons, and draw fifteen tons additional at a speed of fifteen miles an hour, and climb a grade of 10 per cent. with a full load. Then there are motor ambulances, kitchens, wireless outfits, armored motors, sleeping and office motors, and armored motor artillery.

Insincerity.

"Our civilization demands a greater or less degree of mendacity,' remarked the abstruse person. "We are constantly encountering some empty phrase, some conventional remark, which is absolutely devoid of sincerity."

"That's right," answered the book agent. "That's perfectly true. I am reminded of it every time I walk up to the front step where there is a doormat with the word 'welcome' on it."

JAKE DAUBERT HEADS THE NATIONAL LEAGUE SLUGGERS

Chicago, Sept. 28.—Jake Daubert is real batting leader of the National League, according to figures published here Saturday, and including the records of all games up to Thursday. The Brooklyn man has a percentage of .330, and though Erwin, Brooklyn, with .348, and Steele, Brooklyn, with .333, precede him, they have played in only twenty games each, to Daubert's 121. Brooklyn and New York lead in team batting with .272 and .262.

Ty Cobb's spurt has put him well in front in the American. The Detroit star is hitting .381. Next to him is Collins, Philadelphia, .344, and in club batting Philadelphia, with .270, and Detroit, with .255, are ahead.

Steve Evans, of Brooklyn, has batted himself into a tie with Bennie Kauff of Indianapolis, for the batting leadership of the Federal League. Each is hitting .361.

Williams, Rochester, with .326, leads in the International, with Onslow, Providence, .325; Platte, Providence, .321; Shean, Provdence, .319; Schultz, Rochester, .320; Fisher, Toronto, .314; Pipp, Rochester, .313; Jamieson, Buffalo, .313; Callahan, Newark, .313; Walsh, Rochester, .311, following. In team hitting, Providence, with .278, and Toronto, with .276, are on top. In home runs, Pipp, Rochester, and Jordan, Toronto, are ahead, with 14 each. In stolen bases Gilholley, Buffalo, sets the pace with 52. Pitcher honors go to Ruth, Providence, with 22 and 8; Mays, Providence, 22 and 8, and Bader, Buffalo, 15 and 6.

Mrs. Tomlin—Miss Cavanah, Mrs. Aylmer bye, to be played by Tuesday.

There will be a picnic lunch Wednesday 30th, at 12.45 sharp. A medal round will be played afterwards. It is hoped there will be a large attendance.

The Provencal Tongue.

Mistral, the great Provencal poet, has been likened to Robert Burns for the work he did. But Burns' task was child's play compared with Mistral's. The Scottish poet found his language fully grown and completely alive; Mistral had to create his means of expression. Provencal had lost every resemblance to a literary tongue, and the new poet-patriot had to mold it afresh, to recreate and to build up on the ruins left by the vineyard and the farm. "Our Provencal," said Mistral, "was a country lass, ragged and wild." She is now a wonderfully beautiful creature, but it is doubtful whether all the genius of Mistral can keep her alive. The educational reformer in France does not like such irregular beauty.—Chicago News.

A Word or Two For Adam.

Adam doubtless was a trifle crude.
Adam lacked a college education,
Probably his speech was often rude.
He deserved no lofty social station.
Adam wore no collar nor a shirt,
Adam's smile may seldom have been sunny.
But at least he never tried to flirt
With a girl who merely liked his money.

Adam had no taste at all for art.
Adam was a man of primal passions.
It appears that Adam from the start
Limited himself to vulgar fashions.
Adam was no statesman and no sage;
Adam preached no gospel to his brothers.
But he never ventured to engage
In a cunning scheme to swindle others.

Adam did but little to exalt.
Adam lacked ideals and ambition.
If it had not been for Adam's fault
No man would be going to perdition.
He was neither handsome nor refined,
And his manners doubtless were distressing.
But at least he never when he dined
Made them let him mix his salad dressing.

Prince Opposed Vandalism.

PARIS, Sept. 28.—In an article by Francis Thebault, art critic of The Temps, the assertion is made that the son of the Kaiser present in Rheims before the German evacuation of that city was opposed to the destruction of its incomparable cathedral. He quotes the prince as follows:

"The best proof I can give you of my desire to preserve the cathedral is that I intend to have my wounded placed there. To destroy it would be a crime which I would not commit for anything in the world."

Honest Answer.

The stories told of Snetzler, a famous Swiss organ builder, prove that he was a man of rare and incorruptible honesty. At one time the parish officers of a country church applied to Snetzler to examine their organ and make improvements in it.

"Gentlemen," said Snetzler after a careful examination of the instrument in question, "your organ be wort 1g00 just now. Vell, I vill spend you $500 on it, and it shall den be wort $250!"

Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN M. SMITH

THE FAD FIEND.

We find a fad and follow it,
Convinced, you may be sure,
That we have run across at last
For every ill a cure,
And, be it laying on of hands
Or eating once a day
Or only basking in the sun,
It carries us away.

The truth at last, the final word
That leaves no more to say,
Is now securely in our grasp.
We own it, come what may.
If it is chewing every bite
A thousand times or so,
We know, indeed, we must be right,
Because we know we know.

And how we pity simple souls
Who have not found the light,
Who struggle in the ancient way
And cannot get things right!
And so we wash our face with bran
Or have a skimmilk feast.
Though others may in bondage be,
Our set is free at least.

And so we follow up our fad,
So happy in the find,
Until another one appears,
And then we change our mind,
And we desert the one for which
Forsworn we were to die,
From blue grass switch to breakfast food,
And never blink an eye.

Might Alter Judgment.

"Is he what you would call a drinking man?"

"Depends on who was doing the calling."

"What difference would that make?"

"He might want to borrow money from the fellow."

Close Acquaintance.

"Yes, sir," said the eminent hunter, "I know African lions like a book. You can't tell me anything about them."

"How intimately do you know them?" yawned his friend.

"Well, one ate me up once."

Always Busy.

Kind Lady—But why do you beg? Can't you earn a living?

The Hobo—I dunno, ma'am.

Kind Lady—You don't know!

Hobo—No, ma'am. It keeps me so busy beggin' dat I ain't got no time ter try. See?

The Wrong Tack.

"But," argued the young man, "you know that two can live on what it costs to support one."

"That settles your case," growled her father. "Nobody fool enough to accept that statement could ever earn a living for one."

A Sense of Humor.

"Do you think women have a sense of humor?"

"Certainly," answered Miss Clever. "But we have to suppress it. No man would like to know how ridiculous he is when he is proposing to a girl."

The Spirit of the Season.

Comes the May with gentle fingers.
Softly touches she our hearts,
Rouses what of love there lingers,
Soothes the pains and heals the smarts.

Springs the blossoms to the branches.
Bursts the leaves from out the buds,
Drops the petals, avalanches,
Pours the perfumes out in floods.

Sing the birds in ringing chorus,
Wave the gleaming polished blades,
Whistle now the wild winds o'er us,
Blowing toward the grassy glades.

Comes the May with soft insistence,
Bearing balm in both her hands,
Breaking down our harsh resistance,
Binding us with subtle bands.

Horrid.

"Isn't this a beautiful photograph?"

"Do you like it?"

"Yes. Whose is it?"

"Mine."

"Yours? Who sat for it?"

Good Eve.

Suspecting as he stands alone
In every friend a plotter,
The sultan sizes up his throne
And plainly sees it totter.

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

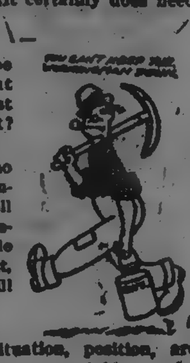
It is sometimes hard to understand how some people exist and still harder to understand why.

Not being able to see the point has saved many a man's self conceit plenty of hard jolts anyway.

About the only thing that ignorance has to regret is itself.

The man she didn't get is a paragon in the eyes of a married woman and a wretch in the eyes of a maiden lady.

Being strenuous may have its compensations, and it certainly does need them.



Wouldn't it be nice to have what we like and just keep on liking it?

A woman who keeps a man comfortable and well fed has something worth while to her credit, even if she will talk.

Occupation, situation, position, are all high sounding, respectable words, but it is good old work with wages in its train that buys the baby shoes.

Some people would rather be comfortable than smart. Happy is the man who is both.

The reason a man never marries a woman to reform her is because he prefers to be the subject.

GERMANY'S NAVAL CHIEF

Von Tirpitz Won His Own Way and Consequently is Not Popular

Grand Admiral of the German Navy as well as Minister of Marine for the Empire Alfred von Tirpitz is the rarest of all products made in Germany—an utterly self-built man. Even the noble "von" in his name was acquired after he achieved prominence. He was born plain Tirpitz of an untitled family at Kustrin-on Oder in Brandenburg 64 years ago.

His father thought him an unpromising lout. He was rawboned, uncouth of speech and gesture and in despair of doing anything with him on land the older Tirpitz put him aboard one of the few frigates comprising his country's navy when he was 16 years old. In 1870 France drove this handful of ships into hiding in the North Sea and kept them there. Von Tirpitz, then a lieutenant on one of these negligible vessels—so very negligible that England refused to recognize the Prussian flag upon the sea—made up his mind that Germany must become a great seapower if she was to retain her prestige among the nations.

It had taken Tirpitz four years to win the lieutenancy to which he saw hundreds of younger sons of the nobility succeed automatically by right of their noble birth. For that reason he has always hated the aristocracy and because he chooses untitled men for high office the aristocracy returns his dislike with interest.

Once a noble who had been snubbed by the Grosser Admiral complained to the Kaiser about him.

"He is an unendurable. It is impossible to have any dealing with him," said the scion of nobility.

"Well," answered the Kaiser sympathetically, "I find him difficult myself. But try to get along with him as well as you can. That's what I have to do."

Von Tirpitz once refused a high command to a distinguished officer with the remark: "You waltz too well to have good sea-legs. If a man wants to reach the bridge under my administration he must confine his dancing to the sailor's hornpipe." He rebuked another aspirant because his hands "were too white." Meeting two young naval officers at one of his wife's receptions he ordered them back to their ships. "You cannot afford to neglect serious duties to dance attendance on a frivolous woman," he remarked.

ADMIRAL VON TIRPITZ

Von Tirpitz is at his desk every morning at 7.30 and he requires that all reports for that day shall be before him at that time.

In the Admiralty he has a large room filled with models of battleships, cruisers, torpedo boats and submarines. He knows the name, tonnage, date of construction, displacement and details of armament of every battleship in the world. He can recite offhand the naval appropriations for the last fifteen years of every civilized nation. He has proved that he knows these things whenever he has gone before the Reichstag to ask for more money for the navy.

Germany's Grosser Admiral stands six feet two inches high. He has keen blue eyes and a heavy beard. He dislikes the English, yet he has had all his children educated in England.

HOW LOAN WAS RAISED

Germany's Boasted Patriotism Largely a Forced Product

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—German despatches point in prideful vein to the successful flotation of the five billion marks' war loan without outside assistance, but the methods employed are only now coming to hand.

It is learned that the Government attached 25 per cent. of all bank balances in the country, and the depositor was forced to subscribe to that extent to the war loan, whether he wished to do so or not.

It also appears that German merchants, at the direction of the Government, are liquidating their debts by investing the amount owed in the Government war loan at 5 per cent., placing this and interest thereon to the credit of the creditor, while at the same time notifying the creditor that it has been decided to discontinue doing business with such manufacturers who will not agree with this method of paying German debts.

W. H. Hill, Esq.,
Local Manager of the Dominion Guarantee & Accident Co., Peterborough, Ont.

Dear Sir:

Will you kindly convey to the Dominion Guarantee & Accident Company, my sincere thanks for the prompt and fair manner in which they settled my claim for indemnity as a result of my recent accident.

I desire specially to mention Mr. H. H. Bounter, the Claims Agent, whom I consider to be a gentleman admirably fitted for the position he holds. For, while he seems to never forget the interests of his company, his sympathy for the injured, and his manifest spirit of fair dealing, win for him both gratitude and confidence.

I wish also, through you, to express my thanks to your Local Solicitor, Mr. George Elliott, through whom I effected insurance in your company, who has proved himself to be an efficient Agent, and who has looked after the renewals, and other matters connected with my policy, faithfully and well.

With such officers on its staff as Bounter and Elliott, the Dominion Guarantee & Accident Company is sure to secure a large patronage from the insuring public.

I am, Sir,
Yours very truly,
G. H. HOWSON.

FUNERAL OF THE LATE R. E. WOOD

It was a very impressive service that was held in St. Paul's Church, this afternoon, the occasion being the funeral service of the late R. E. Wood. Rev. R. Pogue, assisted by Rev. H. J. Keith had charge of the services. Rev. Mr. Pogue gave a short comforting address, in which he outlined the sterling qualities of the deceased. He said he had been a very conscientious Christian worker, and the speaker gave some lessons one might draw from his life.

Judge Huycke on behalf of the board of management expressed the deep regret of the board in the loss they had sustained by the death of Mr. Wood. He spoke of his great devotion to his work.

The funeral was under Masonic auspices. The pall-bearers were Messrs. Harry Rush, T. A. S. Hay, E. A. Peck, E. H. D. Hall, H. C. Winch, and Dr. D. N. Carmichael. The following attended in their respective bodies: Peterborough Law Association, Board of Management of St. Paul's Church, Corinthian Lodge A.F. and A.M. Among the floral tributes were the following: Keystone, Corinthian Chapter No. 36 G. R. C.; Square and Compass, Corinthian Lodge, A.F. and A.M. No. 101; wreath, president and members Peterboro Club; gates ajar, law association; wreath, Board of Management St. Paul's Church; wreath, Dr. Knight and family, Kingston; cross, G. N. Gordon; wreath, Morning Musicale Club, and very many others.

A GENTLE GERMAN GOVERNESS.

An Englishmen residing in Ottawa has received a letter, dated September 14th, from relatives in England. In the course of it the following passages occurr:—

"The M——'s of G—— had a German governess for the children. The police called at G—— castle a few days ago and asked to have her sent out for a walk, as they wished to search her room. This they did, and found a number of bombs, maps, etc., concealed in her trunks and about the room, and they say other German governesses round Hereford have been doing the same thing.

Ministers Made Reference to the Premier's Death

At. St. John's Church on Sunday, Rev. Canon Davidson referred to the death of Sir James Whitney, as a great national loss. As a statesman of rugged honesty and determined purpose, he had done a great work, and for many years to come would exercise a healthy influence in the elevation of Canadian politics.

Special prayers were offered, and the hymn "Eternal Father" was sung for the Canadian volunteers, now on the ocean. The National Anthem was sung at both services.

It was announced that the Bishop of Kingston would conduct a parochial mission from October 20 to 25.

At George Street.

Rev. R. G. Peever, B.D., referred Sunday morning to the passing of Premier Whitney, and quoted the eulogy of Premier Borden on the life of Sir James. This was a very high estimate, as a statesman and leading Canadian.

Mr. Peever also addressed the parents in words appropriate to rally day, observed by the Sunday school, and at the afternoon session Mr. Hone, of the collegiate staff, spoke to one of the largest Sunday school gatherings in the history of the church.

Ministers Exchanged.

Rev. James Rollins and Rev. F. A. Conners exchanged pulpits Sunday evening, and at Park Street church Mr. Rollins gave an address of practical helpfulness and interest.

The congregation was again delighted with a solo by Mr. Lightheart, entitled Spirit of God, in which he displayed qualities which are rapidly bringing him to the front among local vocalists. Mr. Cyril Dovey presided at the organ and his assistance was much appreciated by the congregation.

Mr. Connors preached to a large congregation at St. Andrew's church, his subject being "The Power of the Gospel." The discourse and the music made a most interesting service.

St. James' Church.

Rally day was observed at St. James' church yesterday. Rev. J. G. Brown, addressing the Sunday school scholars in the afternoon and preaching to his former congregation at the evening service.

Large attendances were the order of the day, and all the services were bright and helpful.

GERMANY'S FOOD SUPPLY

An interesting question in the discussion of the European war is that in regard to Germany's food supply. Is she supplied with food enough for a long siege? Has she been storing supplies in preparation of the possibility of a situation in which she might be cut off from getting supplies for a considerable time?

A report on Germany's foreign trade for the first six months of the current year does not indicate any special preparations in this direction. For instance, the imports of agricultural products, alimentary and consumable article for the first six months of this year amounted to 3577 million marks, as compared with 3539 million marks in the same period of 1913, and 3535 million marks in the same period of 1912. Thus, there does not appear to have been any increase of importance in food imports.

The large amount of food that Germany imports for consumption is shown by these figures, imports for six months being 3577 million marks or $851,326,000 worth at the rate of $1,702,752,000 worth per year. In the year 1912, grain imports alone amounted to $284,518,298.

Of course during the war, Germany will not export any food or food products but the amount exported by her has been small as compared with her imports, amounting to about $428,400,000 per year. Her food supply will also be seriously handicapped by the fact that production will be seriously interfered with on account of the many men engaged in warfare.

Huge Modern Armies

The colossal armies being used the European struggle constitu easily a world's record. In no pr vious battle have more than 1,000,00 men met in combat, the battle Mukden, in the Russo-Japanese Wa hitherto the greatest battle of mod r times, seeming small in compariso with the fighters in the "Kaiser's War."

General Kuropatkin, who was supreme command of the Russia forces at Mukden, had at his disposa 400,000 men and 1,500 guns. The Japanese force, which was divide into four armies, amounted to 301,00 men. At the beginning of the en gagement each side extended alor a front of nearly fifty miles. Th battle lasted for nearly three week after which the Russians finally with drew with an estimated loss of n fewer than 97,000 men, while th Japanese casualties amounted t something between 40,000 and 50,00 of all ranks.

In the battle of Liao-Yang, fough in September, 1904, the estimated strength of the Russians amounted to 150,000, while that of the Japane was about 200,000. Here the Russian and Japanese losses in killed and wounded amounted to 12,000 and 17,000 men respectively.

The two greatest struggles of the Franco-Prussian War were Gravelotte and Sedan. In the former between 300,000 and 400,000 French and Germans were engaged, the German losses amounting to 25,000 and the French 19,000. At Sedan, about 150,000 French troops under Marshal MacMahon were engaged, and about 250,000 Germans, under the command of the King of Prussia. As a result of this battle, in which the carnage was awful, some 14,000 French were wounded and about 25,000 French prisoners were taken, besides 83,000 who had to surrender afterwards.

It is estimated that at the battle of Adrianople in 1913, 200,000 Turks 350,000 Bulgarians, and 50,000 Ser vians were engaged, a striking con trast to the historic Battle of Water loo, when the Duke of Wellington ha at his disposal less than 68,000 men while the French army was made u of 71,000 of all ranks.

The Empress Hotel.

A very artistic electric sign is being placed on the front of the new Empress Hotel. It takes the form of a large maple leaf, on top of which is a beaver. Across the maple leaf is the word Empress, it is very striking in appearance, and the design is very appropriate, being as it is purely Canadian.

The session and board of managers of St. Andrew's church, Cobourg, at a public meeting, agreed to the decision of their pastor, Major (Rev.) Wm. Beattie, to go to the front, he having been appointed chaplain of the second battalion, first brigade, of the Canadian contingent.

Lloyd George declared that when he asked for a $50,000,000 loan to Belgium he was offered $200,000,000.

AWAKENING OF RUSSIAN PEOPLE

Subjects of the Czar not Marking Time

The writer of the following article is a Russian, who has been living in Toronto for several years. He wishes to correct some of the popular mistakes regarding the great Slav people who are fighting with the champions of liberty in the present war.

One expression heare in the mouth of the educated people in Canada is: "We know too little of Russia." Indeed, this utterance is true. The reason why Russia was but little known in the life of the nations so long is that she was not eminently a commercial nation. Her commercial fleet carried a comparatively small quantity of the produce of the land. This vast area of land was for centuries inhabited by farmers, herdmen, fishermen and hunters. Another expression heard of Russia is that it is a land of prisons, of oppression and of ice and snow. This is perfectly true, but it is too indefinite a characteristic to give satisfaction to a scholarly and analytic mind.

The general impression made upon the mind of an impartal onlooker who knew Russia twenty years ago, but who has not been in touch with her since, is that since the Japanese war Russia has been in the throes of a revolution, of a civil war, and has been falling into one blunder after another. But this is only a proof that she begins to move. If you learn to walk no wonder if you stumble and fall at times; whereas if you never move you will never fall. If you are surrounded by well-wishers, those friends of yours will look with a benignant eye even if you assert your existence by your mistakes, for it is human to make errore.

To my mind I do not like the name Russia. I prefer to call her by her own name, Rus, pronounced Roos. Russia is a stupid Greek form of that name, and was introduced into life by Czar Alexis in the 17th century, to please some pundit, some pedantic Greek monk. Previous to that freak of Czar Alexis, Russia did not exist. It was Roos which existed since the 7th century, and by that name Axacof and many nationalists even today like to call their country.

However, Roos or Russia, the outside world knew the people only through the channel of officialdom. It is only today that the people begin to be conscious of their power and of their free will. Officialdom, although despotic, sometimes even crushing, helped to educate the people and raise them to a national consciousness. It is partly stupid to say that the Government was only selfish and despotic. Let us not forget the axiom of Montesquieu, who says: "Every nation has the form of government which they deserve." An honest critic cannot help saying that the Government of the Cars was very often ahead of the times, and forced on the people reforms, to keep apace with the century and progress of nations. I say this because it would be about time for the Western nations to know that it was not always the Government which hampered true progress and civilization—it was often the fanatic dark masses.

A Progressive Czar.

Those that approved of Czar Nicholas' initiative in founding or bringing to life the Tribunal of Hague, with its motto of "Justice before Force," will remember that to voice the need of an institution of the kind a man must be a child of his century and a pupil of nobler and more advanced minds. It may be that those who endorse Czar Nicholas' attitude to the council of Hague will be glad to remember that he is a pupil of Charles Heath, that cultured Englishman, who hated oppression and wars and who advocated the ideas of the brotherhood of Humanity. It is Charles Heath who taught Nicholas II. to love fishing and canoeing, and who taught him other still more useful things beside.

The writer has lived fourteen years under British rule, and finds it very felicitous that, as Charles Heath has helped to shape the character and taste of Russia's ruler, so now, may be, the British nation may help to shape the inclinations and the love of the Russian nation in the traditions of a just democracy and love of Justice above Force.

IN FIERCE FIGHTING ALLIES AGAIN CHECK GERMANS

GERMANS DROP BOMBS, MAY BESIEGE ANTWERP GEN. BOTHA'S SPEECH

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Sept. 29.—A despatch to the Reuter Telegram Co. from Capetown says: "In the course of a speech addressed to five thousand people at the town of Bank, in the Transvaal, General Louis Botha, premier of South Africa, emphasized the necessity of loyalty to the British Empire. Declaring that a policy of neutrality was absolute nonsense, he pointed out that if a German warship came to Durban and imposed a levy of five million pounds sterling on them, it would help people very little to say that they were neutral. General Botha said he was animated through sincere love of his people, and wished to put his position truly before them. There were only two courses open—first, loyalty and help; and second, disloyalty and treason. There was no middle course. The German tortoise, General Botha went on to say, had for once stuck its head too far out and was in grave danger of being trodden upon. He justified the exportation of South Africans to support the Imperial government. He said he had information regarding German ambitions concerning South Africa which would make the hair of his hearers stand on end. The fact of the matter was that the German Emperor wanted to go down to posterity as a second Napoleon. Incidentally he also wanted a place to send Germany's surplus population, and South Africa appealed to him as a suitable place. The speech was received by the Boers with vociferous cheers, and a resolution of confidence in General Botha was carrid by acclamation."

GALICIA ALMOST CLEAR OF THE ENEMY.

London, Sept. 29.—A Petrograd despatch to Reuter states that an army messenger has announced that the Russians have almost completely cleared Galicia of the enemy, who has taken refuge in the passes of the Carpathian mountains. The same source confirms reports of progressive destruction of the Austrian army. An eyewitness states that two German army corps took part in the battle of Jaroslau, and that the Russians had to take most of the enemy's trenches at the point of the bayonet.

CALM ON FRENCH BATTLE LINE.

Paris, Sept. 29.—A comparative calm on the French battle line yesterday, after Sunday's storm, shot and shell, was a surprise. It was supposed that the extreme violence of the German attack meant a determination to finish the campaign on the Aisne by breaking the allies' lines at all costs, and pressure, it was expected, would continue, especially on the allies' left, where the Germans had brought up reinforcements. The centre, however, was the only point seriously attacked, probably on the supposition that that line has been weakened to reinforce the left. The theory is that an armistice of four hours granted by the French for burying the dead, was not sufficient, and that the invaders needed the entire day to get rid of the bodies encumbering the trenches. Another theory is that a further shifting of troops is in progress, preparatory to a violent shock elsewhere, all efforts against the left having failed. The opinion prevalent here is that the Germans are losing valuable time, and the return of bad weather will perhaps find them still burrowed in the chalky clay of the Aisne district, and they will again be forced to uncover themselves by invading floods. The military operations in the extreme east of the Vosges and Alsace have been hindered by bad weather, as there is snow on the heights and floods in the valley. Both sides, however, are handicapped, and if the bad weather continues it will have the result of prolonging the campaign on this side of the Vosges and Ardennes region.

JAPS FORGING AHEAD.

Tokio, Sept. 29.—The official announcement concerning the progress of events in Kiao Chow is as follows: "Japanese forces during the day and night of Sept. 27 drove the enemy in the direction of Tsing Tau. The Japanese casualties were 150. The German losses are not known, but 50 men and four machine gune were captured. This action, which was speedier than anticipated, has accelerated the general attack. The fleet has attacked Iltis fort, effectively aided by the army."

GERMANS PLANNING SIEGE OF ANTWERP.

Rotterdam, Sept. 29.—Activity along the Belgian frontier indicates that the Germans are planning a siege of Antwerp within a few days. More than 25,000 men, German naval reserves, have been brought from the North Sea towns of Kiel and Hamburg to Brussels, being held in readiness to serve on an improvised German fleet should Antwerp and Ostend be taken. As a direct result of this move, Dutch authorities along the Scheldt have increased their watchfulness, for during a siege of Antwerp, England might like to send reinforcements through Dutch Scheldt, which would be a breach of neutrality, while, on the other hand, a German victory would bring the danger of an attempt on the part of Germany to use the mouth of the Scheldt as a base from which to attack the British naval forces in the North Sea.

ZEPPELINS DROP MORE BOMBS.

London, Sept. 29.—Zeppelins dropped more bombs at various points in Belgium to-day, badly damaging the convent at Deynze.

TSING TAU COMPLETELY INVESTED

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Peking, Sept. 29.—Germans in Kia Chow have evacuated the Waldersee line of defence before a strong force of Japanese, and Tsing-Tau is now completely invested.

A FISHERMAN'S HEROISM

A Story From the North Sea

A very fine act by the captain of a fishing steamer relieved the horror of one of the mine disasters caused by the German navy's warfare against non-combatants and neutrals. The steamer Runo, belonging to the Wilson line, was on a voyage from Hull to Archangel, with some 280 passengers, chiefly Russians, though some were Americans. On the day she left port she struck a mine and sank, with some loss of life. Three steam trawlers, the Silanion, Prince Victor and Straton, steamed up and rescued a large number of those who were struggling in the water.

As Skipper Wicks, of the Straton, was driving in among the wreckage, the look-out man forward sighted two mines ahead. "Look out, skipper; two mines ahead," he called. "Can't help it," shouted the skipper back. "It's risking lives to save lives. And he hazarded his ship to get alongside an overturned boat to which a dozen men and women were clinging. Even as they reached it, a woman with an infant in her arms released her hold and fell back into the water, but the chief engineer, James Rannard, fully clad, dived overboard, caught the woman, and, swimming on his back, supported her and the child until the crew could pass a line and pull them to safety. The work of rescue went on at a feverish rate, for more than two hundred people were saved before the Runo, which all along had been, as a seaman put it, standing on her head, gave a lurch and disappeared.

Gen. French's Birthday

LONDON, Sept. 29—Field Marshal Sir John French, commander-in-chief of the British expeditionary force, is spending his 62nd birthday in maintaining what his latest communication to the War Office describes as "a satisfactory situation."

A Paris despatch yesterday said of Sir John having arrived there on Saturday, and incidentally purchased $56 worth of groceries, probably for a "spread" yesterday.

Several German Attacks Repulsed

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Paris, Sept. 29—Official bulletin issued this afternoon says: "On our left wing, to the north of the Somme and between the Somme and the Oise, the enemy, both by day and night, delivered several attacks which have, however, been repulsed. To the north of the Aisne there has been no change. On the centre, in Champagne and to the east of the Argonne, the enemy has restricted his activities to heavy cannonading. Between the Argonne and the Meuse, there has been slight progress on the part of our troops, who are confronted by strongly organized positions. On the heights of the Meuse, in the Woevre district, and on our right wing, Lorraine and Vosges, there has been no notable modifications in the situation. We again took numerous prisoners during yesterday."

COLLISION IN NEW YORK

Followed by a Bad Fire — Traffic Tied up Several Hours

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

New York, Sept. 29.—A collision between a work train and a waste paper train in the subway in the Bronx section this morning was followed by fire and caused the biggest traffic congestion ever seen in New York. The fire raged fiercely for two hours and dense clouds of black smoke poured from the manholes.

London, Sept. 29. — The official news bureau announced today that the German cruiser Emden has sunk four British steamships and a collier.

C.P.R. PROPERTY CONFISCATED

VENICE, Sept. 29.—(Via Paris.)—The Austrian Government has confiscated the Canadian Pacific Railway Co.s' securities and money deposited in Vienna, it is reported, as well as the company's observation cars running on Austrian railroads. This has been done, it is said, as a consequence of the refusal of the company to pay the dividends of Austrian shareholders.

Italian newspapers at Trentin, Austria, have been forced to suspend publication. Italian residents are being kept under the closest surveillance.

ULSTER TO REPEAL BILL

Provisional Government Will Wait However Until War is Over

BELFAST, Ireland, Sept. 29.—Sir Edward H. Carson, leader of the Irish Unionist party, outlined the Ulster program of the future in addressing the Union counsil yesterday.

"I propose," he said, "when the war is over to summon a provisional government, and I propose that their first act should be to repeal the Home Rule Bill so far as Ulster is concerned. I propose in the same act to enact that it is the duty of the volunteers to see that no act or no attempt at an act under that bill should ever have effect in Ulster.

"Meanwhile let us throw ourselves as we are throwing ourselves wholeheartedly into the patriotic action that the time demands in supporting the Empire."

CUT OFF NURSES' HANDS

Thirteen Englishwomen Now in a London Hospital Says Matron

MONTREAL, Sept. 29.—Miss Hanson, daughter of Rev. Dr. Hanson, pastor of Erskine Presbyterian Church here, who returned from England a few days ago, has brought back information which she learned from a matron of a London hospital, that 13 English nurses serving at the front had their two hands cut off by German soldiers. The matron said that the nurses were being treated in the hospital with which she was connected.

Dr. Hanson gave currency to his daughter's information Sunday night from his pulpit, and said that he had not the slightest doubt as to its accuracy.

EVIDENCE OF GERMAN CRUELTY

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Guelph, Sept. 29.—James Pettit, of the York Road, received a letter to-day from his aunt in Stratford Terrace, Leeds, England. One paragraph reads: "We have in our house to care for a little Belgian girl, aged eight, who had both hands chopped off by German soldiers. Her younger brother was treated in the same way, so that he would never be able to handle a rifle."

AN IMMENSE THRONG AT LATE PREMIER'S FUNERAL

AUSTRIAN STABBED AT PORT HOPE

Port Hope, Sept. 29.—Two Austrians were drawn into an argument in a local hotel on Saturday evening and the result was that one was stabbed in the mouth. The injured man has been attending the weekly drill at the Drill Shed and his fellow countrymen jeered him for the same. The case comes up in Police Court on Thrusday and if the story as told by the plaintiff is correct, Col. Smart should have the offender sent to Fort Henry.

BIG FIRE IN NEW BRUNSWICK

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

St. Stephen, N. B., Sept. 29—Clark Bros.' new shoe factory and several dwellings were destroyed this morning. The loss is estimated at thirty-five thousand dollars.

COLLEGES RE-OPEN

Many Students From Here Return to Hard Grind

Toronto, Sept. 29.—Above three thousand five hundred students have already registered at the University of Toronto, and the erstwhile quiet lawns and pathways of the grounds are once more overrun with eager-eyed and limber-legged youth. But, notwithstanding the activities of everybody, students and professors find time to prepare themselves for the possible coming of a German. Several companies spend some hours every day drilling in the quadrangle of the south residence. The voice of Prof. Malcolm Wallace, which can be so gentle in the classroom, resounds in commanding tones as he calls "Quick march!" "Left wheel," and his military bearing is a fine example to his company.

These companies are day by day becoming more efficient; the enthusiasm displayed by students is proof of the latent fighting spirit which the war has stirred to action. But their motto is: "Defence, not Defiance."

At 3 o'clock this afternoon, the President will deliver the opening address to the students in Convocation Hall. This is the last day for the completion of registration in person for the session. Lectures begin at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning.

Indications point to a lean year in the number of law students registering at Osgoode Hall. It is stated that the chief cause of this is the small demand at present for students in the offices, many of them not being able to obtain remuneration for their services.

Among the local students who left today were Messrs. Angus Richardson, R. Kirn and S. Sheehy for S. P. S. Misses C. Park and A. A. Whalley, Messrs. Gordon Mathews and Meredith Huycke for University College. Messrs. R. Scott and S. Y. Walsh for Toronto Medical College, and Mr. R. Sheehy for Royal College of Dental Surgeons.

HASTING'S MAN SHOT HIMSELF

Belleville, Sept. 29.—Henry Logan, who resided in the northern part of Hastings County at New Carlow, committed suicide by shooting himself. Logan was employed at the Corundum Mines at Burgess, and it was noticed that he was suffering apparently from a fit of melancholia. He carried a rifle around with him most of the time, but it was not surmised that he would be likely to end his own life with it. He was working in the rock cut and Richard Edwards was standing not more than eight feet from him when he deliberately pickel up the weapon and fired a bullet through his brain. An inquest was not considered necessary.

Special Train Takes Funeral Party to Morrisburg.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Toronto, Sept. 29.—The casket containing the remains of Sir James Whitney was closed this morning at 8.45, and, in the presence of an immense throng of sympathetic friends, was borne out of the legislative chamber in Queen's Park and conveyed to St. James' cathedral. All the late premier's colleagues in the cabinet were pallbearers. They were headed in the funeral procession by Sir John Gibson, and after them came Sir Lomer Gouin, representing Quebec; Hon. Robt. Rogers, Hon. Frank Cochrane, Hon. W. T. White, Hon. J. D. Reid and Hon. Dr. Roche, representing the Dominion government, and a host of judicial, scholastic and political notables. Large delegations from Conservative associations followed the carriages, and thousands lined the route of the procession. At the church, Bishop Sweeny and Canon Plumptre conducted services, after which the remains were taken to the Union station, where a special train carried the funeral party to Morrisburg.

The deputation of local men who attended the last sad rites in Toronto in connection with Sir James Whitney's death were; Messrs. Jas. Kendry, T. E. Bradburn, E. A. Peck and Mayor Buller.

Mr. R. J. Sodon is the local representative at the Morisburg final obsequies.

BRUSSELS BEING STRENGTHENED

Germans Are Afraid of a Surprise From Belgian Forces

ANTWERP, Sept. 29. — A report brought from Brussels Sunday says: It is certain, at present, that the Germans are taking all precautions to defend the ground foot by foot, and to avert the risk either of surprise or of an enveloping movement by our troops seeking to surround their garrison in Brussels. The latter is in constant contact with the German army posted before Antwerp. Brussels constitutes for the Germans a sort of entrenched camp. Important works of defence have been completed all around the town. Numerous roads and bridges have been mined, and there are not a few clever traps. Thus, between Berchafste, Agathe, and Grand Bigard, after having excavated the highway to a great depth, the Germans have placed in the excavations over three hundred barrels without tops, which are covered with branches and earth. One can well conceive what would be the effect of a cavalry charge in this spot. Luckily the commanders of the Belgian army are quite well aware of these goings-on on the part of the Germans.

The people of Brussels are looking forward not without dismay to the approach of winter. The stoppage of commerce and industry is complete, and the working classes, whose little savings were exhausted long ago, owe their existence to the humanitarian work of the municipal councils and private philanthropists, the carrying out of which will perhaps avert revolts, popular risings and the pillage of shops.

SIR CHARLES JOHNSTON NEW LORD MAYOR OF LONDON

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Sept. 29.—Sir Charles Johnston was to-day elected lord mayor of London for the term of one year, beginning Nov. 9. Because of the war, there is every probability that the annual pageant on Nov. 9 will be abandoned, and it is probable the great banquet in Guild Hall, which annually marks the installation of a new lord mayor, will also be omitted.

PETERBOROUGH, TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 29, 1914

A TRIBUTE TO THE LATE SIR JAMES PLINY WHITNEY.

OWING TO THE FACT that the Toronto Globe supports opposite political principles from the Review, there is usually not much agreement between us, but it would be a poor newspaper that could not rise above party on occasion and deliver an independent opinion. To-day the body of the late Sir James Whitney is being borne to its last resting place, at a time when the people of the country he served so well, are divided between regret at their great loss and anxiety over the titanic struggle being waged in Europe. On the death of Ontario's Premier, the Globe published an editorial on the late Sir James Whitney worthy of note for its fair estimation of the man whom it vigorously opposed in life. Coming from the source it does, we thought it well to reproduce, on the day of the funeral, the Globe's estimate of a man who filled with distinction the highest post in Ontario politics.

The Premier of Ontario is dead. The end came amid the strain and stress of a world-shaking war, in the events of which Sir James Whitney took the keenest interest. To Britain in this supreme struggle his thoughts constantly turned while life lasted. For almost a year Sir James had fought against the illness which has at last put a period to the grim conflict. For a time after his return from New York there was hope that he might live on into serene old age by withdrawing from public life. That hope was quenched when Sir James insisted on going back to his desk, and when, at what he believed to be the call of duty, he took part in the recent provincial general election and spoke at a great meeting in Massey Hall. Laboring under deep emotion, he thanked the people of Ontario for the sympathy manifested for him by political friends and opponents alike. In this, his last important public utterance, Sir James said: "I feel that my words are lame and halting, not equal or fit or apt, in which to express the thought that comes surging through my consciousness at the present time. Coming back, my friends, as I have, by God's mercy, from the shadow of the Dark Valley, I am constrained, nay, compelled, to express the thanks I owe to the people of Ontario. They have given me an opportunity, I think I may say, of being of some service, and they have given me their confidence in full measure—in full measure, heaped up, pressed down, shaken together, and running over—and as long as my renewed health and strength are vouchsafed to me, I shall be at their disposal, and endeavor to give them the same faithful service as I have in the past. And I thank you, my good friends, no matter what your political feelings may be, who have come here to-night, and with a heart filled to overflowing I say, may God bless you every one."

And now he is gone into that Dark Valley from the shadow of which he so recently emerged. Full of years—three score and ten—but until recently with almost no abatement of vigor; full of honors, alike from the common people of his native province; from Parliament, in which his word was law, and from his King; respected even by those who neither loved him nor followed him, he has passed into the great beyond, his public career unspoiled by slow decline, his name unstained by dishonour or by the petty jealousies that haunt the steps of those who rise from low estate to high position.

Sir James Whitney was neither a great statesman nor a shrewd and manipulating politician. He made no pretence of being the one. He would scorn to be classed with the other. Instead, he was "a plain, blunt man," who never tried to conceal his thoughts or feelings either from his associates and friends or from his opponents and the public. To his own hurt, sometimes he expressed his undisguised contempt or intolerance for new ideas or proposals. There was no finesse or cunning in his method. Indeed, his strength in resisting the intrigues of office-hunters and the pressure of concession-seekers was in his intolerant attitude and his unmistakable plainness of speech. This lack of the politician's artifice, while it frequently disconcerted his colleagues and angered his more eager followers, was by the man in the street "counted to him for righteousness."

In his political sympathies Sir James Whitney seemed to many observers to be a contradiction. Of Liberal lineage, and socially thoroughly democratic, his natural instincts as revealed during his public career were plainly those of a Conservative. His sudden impulses might at times lead him to break with tradition, but in the warp and woof of his thinking there was no thread of radicalism. He distrusted the new social program alike in politics, in economics, and in the industrial order. His ultimate support of the public ownership and operation of the Hydro-electric power opportunities in Ontario was the result rather of reaction from the campaign methods of the private power monopolists than of any original sympathy with the socialization of public services.

Among the Governmental achievements under his Premiership, the one conspicuous item was the reorganization of the Provincial University and its establishment on a greatly improved financial basis. He found the University handicapped in its administration, and its resources hopelessly inadequate to its barest necessities. Not a university man himself, it stands to his credit that throughout his entire leadership of the Legislature he not only approved the highest ideals of university service as they were presented to him, but he also exercised himself that those ideals might be realized. In this thing he had to stand against the indifference, if not the active opposition, which was not always kept out of view, among his own political supporters. He appreciated the fact that education is fundamental in the building up of a democracy, and that the starving of the Provincial University is educational suicide. In the earlier years he did not appreciate either how far in the rear the University of Toronto had fallen or how gigantic the task its new program involved. But he never turned back. To the very last he kept his mind open to the ever enlarging appeals. His hope was that he might see the University of Toronto take its rightful place, in the adequacy of its equipment, in the educational power of its teaching staff, and in its vital and civilizing influences on public life, with the great world-centres of culture and research. Even in the minutest details of administration, it was Premier Whitney's desire that the Provincial University be kept wholly free from blight of partisan interference, and that its staff should be outside the reach of political patronage. In this thing his desire has been fulfilled.

It is a significant commentary on the ironies of what is called "practical politics" that the achievement in which neither the party nor the party-heeler has been considered, is the one public service which stands out conspicuously and undeniably to the credit of the Whitney Government. In almost every other thing, the "practical politician" left his tarnishing mark. The University was the Prime Minister's own task. How sincere and positive his interest was, is suggested by the splendid University residence erected on the grounds through the generous donation of his brother, Mr. E. C. Whitney, of Ottawa, a life-long Liberal, who, despite their emphatic political disagreements, was more than a brother to Sir James throughout his entire public career.

In the controversies of politics, it was inevitable that the conflicts between Sir James Whitney and the Globe should at times be sharp and strong. Neither felt under necessity to "temper the wind to the shorn lamb." Not long before the end it was his own testimony that "no blow was ever struck below the belt." In the very largest of all his public services as Prime Minister—the reorganization of the University, and the Provincial ownership and control of Hydro-electric power opportunities—he had, in Parliament and out of it, the Globe's direct and indirect support.

To Lady Whitney and the bereaved family circle, and to the personal friends and political followers of the dead leader, the Globe desires to extend sincerest sympathy. Sir James Whitney made large and effective use of his life. He fought a good fight. He kept the faith as he saw it. The Province of Ontario does well to pay high honor to its first Prime Minister to die in office. He passes on the laurel undisgraced

GERMANY STANDS CONDEMNED.

WE DESIRE to draw attention to a letter to the Editor published in another column. The writer of this letter is a prominent resident of a very large American city. He is a highly cultured man, capable of dissecting political questions and opinions, and so his attitude of hostility to Britain shows that it must be founded aside from the natural inclinations of race, on very biased and incorrect material, if his statement is an honest opinion. But his statement of the case, erroneous as it is, no doubt represents the position of the majority of pro-Germans in this country and in the United States.

In the first place he denies that the Kaiser was the instigator of this war. Of course this is partly true. Alone, the Kaiser could not possibly be a menace to Europe, but the Kaiser, as head of the Militarist Party in Germany, dominates that country and its foreign policy. This party is in Germany the war party, which keeps alive military traditions and ambitions, and on it, with the Kaiser at its head, devolves the responsibility for the war. Recall what the Krupp scandal revealed a year or so ago. Here you have the Krupp millionaires, owning large steel works, making armaments and munitions of war for the German government. They also own two of the largest and most influential daily newspapers in Germany. Through these papers they preach loyalty, patriotism and the necessity of preparing for war. They justify the huge expenditures for military and naval purposes by proclaiming the danger of England to German trade and prestige. Britain, these papers assert, is a menace to Germany. They also tell how France is preparing for war, and the deluded people, knowing nothing of the real state of interlocking interests, throw up their caps shout for the Kaiser, and pay the heavy bills. The German government is supported in its war program, Krupp factories get the contracts, the Krupp shareholders get big dividends, and a small section of steel workers get good wages. Thus the spirit of war was maintained, and, Germany getting stronger with each passing year, the Kaiser became more intolerant, haughty and convinced of his divine right to dominate the world. His statement that Germany wants a place in the sun, is the cause of all this titanic struggle for armaments which has of late years oppressed Europe. Being well prepared for war, Germany seized the present occasion as a favourable opportunity to strike. The White Paper correspondence shows that Germany made a cat's paw of Austria, and when the latter country was open to negotiate, Germany was resolute for war. We cannot go into the details of this here. They have already been inquired into, written about and criticized. The American press is also well acquainted with them, so that there is no doubt that, had Germany been amenable to negotiation, war would have been averted.

As to the religious element, that enters into the struggle only in a distant manner. More than a third of Germany's population is Catholic, and, as to a choice between Russian and Austrian domination of the Balkans, the latter country is not to be preferred. Germany was certainly not eager to fight the combination against which she is now waging war. She thought the British Empire was divided and had its hands tied. She did not expect Belgium to fight. She said Russia has the troops, we have the speed, and expected to crush France first, then Russia. After that she would be free to cope with Britain. How any man in his senses can honestly think otherwise is a mystery to us.

Then, the writer insinuates that Britain was involved for selfish motives. As to the morality of the nations in entering the contest, it is a patent and remarkable fact concerning those of German sympathies, that they make no apology for the violation of Belgium's neutrality. They forget the scandalous offer made to Britain by Germany to keep Britain out of the contest, and also that Germany refused Britain's offer to cut down expenditure for armaments a couple of years ago. Germany was absolutely devoid of any principles of morality in bringing on this war. No German with any pretence of honesty whatever should mention morality or question the motives of the other warring nations, in face of Germany's ruthless procedure. No argument can justify it, and the silence on these points by German sympathizers is the best proof that the charge against Germany is unanswerable. The American press, having really no affiliations in this contest, and having examined the evidence, have almost universally praised Sir Edward Grey, justified Great Britain, and emphatically condemned Germany. But in condemning Germany they have exhonerated the German people, that is, they blame the Militarist Party in Germany, of which the Kaiser is the head, as the source and centre of all this strife. That is a condemnation, which has not yet been answered, of the Kaiser as the instigator of this terrible war. It can be admitted—it cannot be disproved.

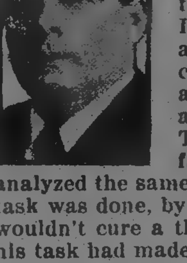
The Kaiser's Investments.

(Montreal Herald.)

Seeing that they deliberately planned this war, the huge investments of the Kaiser and his personal friends in Canadian real estate is a fine testimonial to the stability of this country, war or no war.

MIND CURE

By Walt Mason



Said the learned apothecary, as he handed me his pills, "These will make you blithe and merry, they will cure all human ills. They will kill the microbes buzzin' in your vitals and your head, if you'll only take a dozen just before you go to bed." So I took them for the glanders, which had held me for a spell, for the mumps and yaller janders, and they made me sound and well. Oh, those pills I recommended, till I saw their sales advance, and their merits I defended every time I had a chance. Then the able druggist perished and a new one took the store, and the pills I loved and cherished weren't compounded any more. Then a sample pill I carried to an analyst of fame, and around his study tarried while he analyzed the same. And his laughter made him totter when his task was done, by jing; "this is made of flour and water, and it wouldn't cure a thing!" Thus the man of science lilted, for his task had made him gay; and I humbled felt and wilted, as I took the pill away. Just the same, those pills had cured me, changed my health from bad to good, as the pharmacist assured me, on his honor, that they would!

A GERMAN-AMERICAN GIVES HIS VIEWS ON WAR

In a Letter to Resident of Peterborough

A resident of Peterborough has received a letter from a German-American which sets forth the kind of argument being advanced by pro-Germans to prejudice the public mind against the cause of Britain and her allies. We have received permission to reproduce below that part of the letter dealing with Germany's position in the European war. It is interesting as showing the point of view of pro-Germans in America. Our opinion concerning the argument advanced will be found in the editorial columns.

I have read your interesting letter with great care and fully share your horror at this terrible war and its terrible consequences, present and to come, only I am very sorry and sad to see that your mind also has been poisoned against Germany as so many others have been in Canada and this country, by the false and insidious English assertions as to the originator of the war—the German Emperor—I never was very much in sympathy with the Kaiser and did not like his high talking in former years, but it is absolutely false that he instigated the war and men like Barry Pain and others ought to be ashamed of themselves in their souls to make such accusations against an innocent man, when the least little bit of conscience ought to have made them realize that they talk of a matter the inside of which they could not possibly understand; they probably think they are right in their high sounding phrases, but how would you feel if somebody would accuse you of some great wrong—only on hearsay — without knowing the real inside of it?

The real inside of the origin of this war is this: The Panslavistic party in Russia (including the white clergy of their Orthodox Church which is jealous of the Roman Catholic Church) wants to have the domineering influence on the Balkan Peninsula (the populaton being mostly of slav race — and partly Roman Catholic) and imagined or thought that Austria were in their way — which is quite possible, but is not Austrian civilization better than Russian half civilization? Therefore they used the Austrian demand on Servia for satisfaction for the murder of the Archduke Francis Ferdinand as a pretext for bringing the matter to a point considering the moment favorable, Russia having prepared for war a long time and being in alliance with France, also having prepared for war since a long time to take revenge for 1870, and England being bound to them by the Entente and being jealous of German trade and shipping, which they had felt a thorn in their flesh a long time. On the other side Austria weakly prepared for war and her ally Germany by necessity prepared for war in consequence of the open preparations of Russia, France and England, and that more than doubtful ally, Italy. Is it thinkable that under such circumstances that Germany should have been eager for the war? Is it not more than probable that the eagerness was on the other side? and that each of them thought the moment favorable for gaining their aims? I can understand the logic of the aims of Russia and France, but I cannot understand England's aim—that is the morality of it—the aim being simply to destroy Germany's commerce and shipping, for what? Nothing but mere selfishness and they are barefaced enough to make false statements and accusations against Germany, poisoning thereby the minds of all those people who are unable to understand the real origin of the war; Germany has kept peace these 44 years—the Emperor since he came to the throne 26 years ago — but what did the other powers do? France in Morocco, Italy in Tripoli, Russia in centre Asia and China, Japan, and England, the Boar War — forgetting the Transvaal gold mines; Egypt, to get that country under their control; China, the opium war; all very moral and useful wars?

And now England accuses Germany of provoking this war and wants to crush her militarism as a foe to civilization! Look at the map and see Germany surrounded by jealous and hostile nations and say whether she does not need a strong and well prepared army? Does not England herself have a big army and the biggest navy in the world? for what purpose? but to insure her supremacy everywhere;truly if anybody is to be punished for bringing on this horrid war it should be the high-minded statesmen of old England, who place Protestant Enlgand in alliance with Catholic France and Oriental Catholic Russia, against the only big Protestant country or the continent! The very thought of it makes me shudder.

JOHN STOWE'S REWARD.

The Beggar Historian Got Royal Permission to Solicit Alms.

James I. on March 8, 1603, granted letters patent under the great seal to John Stowe, London's great historian, authorizing him to beg. The letters patent of James I. authorized Stowe to collect the voluntary contributions of the people. The letter recites that:

"Whereas, Our loving subject, John Stowe, a very aged and worthy member of our city of London, this five and forty years hath to his great charge and with neglect of his ordinary means of maintenance, for the general good as well of posterity as of the present age, compiled and published diverse necessary books and chronicles, and therefore we, in recompense of his labors and for the encouragement to the like, have in our royal inclination been pleased to grant letters patent under our great seal of England, dated March 8, 1603, thereby authorizing him to collect among our loving subjects their voluntary contributions and kind gratuities."

John Stowe died on April 5, 1605, and was buried in the parish Church of St. Andrew Undershaft, where his monument, erected by his widow, is still to be seen.—London Stray Stories.

A Journalist Bought Suez.

The journalist is often the man behind the statesman, but he seldom gets the credit. Who was it that induced Mr. Disraeli to buy the Suez canal shares which have proved so abundantly good an investment, with dividends that are represented not only by money, though even from that point of view it is the best investment that a state has ever made? Fleet street knows and honors the name of Mr. Frederick Greenwood both for that reason and for many another. But how many outside the world of journalism realize that but for Mr. Greenwood the Suez canal shares would probably have been purchased by a rival continental power? The question was one among those put in a "general intelligence" examination paper a little time back at a certain school. Only one boy was able to answer it correctly, and he was the son of the prime minister.—London Chronicle.

SEALED TENDERS addressed to the undersigned, and endorsed "Tender for Electric Passenger and Freight Elevators, Langevin Block, Ottawa, Ont.," will be received at this office until 4.00 P.M. on Friday, October 9, 1914, for the installation of three (3) standard passenger and one (1) standard freight elevators, in the Langevin Block, Ottawa, Ont.

Plans, specifications and form of contract can be seen and forms of tender obtained on application to this Department, at the offices of Mr. Thos. Hastings, Chief of Works, Postal Station "F", Toronto, Ont., and Mr. R. L. Deschamps, Superintendent of Public Buildings, Montreal, Que.

Persons tendering are notified that tenders will not be considered unless made on the printed forms supplied, and signed with their actual signatures, stating their occupations and places of residence. In the case of firms, the actual signature, the nature of the occupation and place of residence of each member of the firm must be given.

Each tender must be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a chartered bank, payable to the Honourable the Minister of Public Works, equal to ten per cent. (10 per cent.) of the amount of the tender, which will be forfeited if the person tendering decline to enter into a contract when called upon to do so, or fail to complete the work contracted for. If the tender be not accepted the cheque will be returned.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

The Man She Married

A Story Told at a Ladies' Luncheon Party

By F. A. MITCHEL

A number of married ladies were at luncheon, and the hostess proposed that each give an account of how it came about that she married her husband. In order to set the ball a-rolling, she gave her own experience first. She had met the man she married at a dinner party. They were sitting side by side, and he upset a glass of red wine over a white silk dress she wore for the first time. At the moment of the accident she was recounting an incident, and simply applying her napkin to the saturated spot she went on with her recital as though nothing had happened. The man, who realized that he had ruined the dress and could not with propriety offer to replace it, was so much pleased with her consideration for his feelings that he finally asked her to marry him.

The next narration was that of a lady who met the man she married at a horse race. At the luncheon hour the hamper containing the refreshments was brought from the boot of the coach in which the party had gone to the races, and one of the gentlemen opening a bottle of champagne shut his eyes when the pop came, and the cork hit the narrator in the face. The man was so distressed at what he had done that to make up for it he married her.

"Come, Mrs. Dorrance," said the hostess after several such romances had been recounted, "give us your experience. I am quite sure the ladies will be pleased to hear it."

Mrs. Dorrance, being urged by the others, finally consented.

"I was traveling abroad," she began, "on my way from Thun to Paris. These barbarous people over there refused to check my trunk farther than Berne. On arrival at Berne I tried to find the trunk and failed. A gentleman noticing my distress asked if he could be of service to me, and when I told him what was the matter he went with me to the other end of the station, where we found a man slowly wheeling a truck. On the truck was my trunk. The gentleman who was with me spoke French fluently. I don't know what he said, but he succeeded in getting the trunk to the train a minute before it started."

"I, too, met my husband while traveling abroad," said one of the ladies, sipping her wine.

"Oh, I didn't marry that gentleman," Mrs. Dorrance proceeded. "He was going east and I west. I thanked him for the service he had done me and made a rush for the train that was just starting. All the doors were locked, and I very foolishly stepped on to the footboard. In a few moments the train was going so fast that I dare not jump off, and I couldn't get into the compartment. I was clinging to a brass rod intended for persons to help them into the coach. A gentleman in the compartment reached out and tried to drag me inside through the window.

"I was more fleshy then than I am now, and the effort was a failure. I shall never forget the disappointed look on his face when he gave up trying to lift me."

"How lovely!" remarked a lady. "Was he dark or light?"

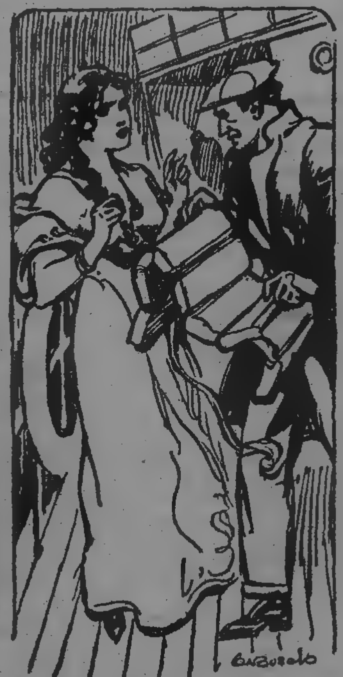
"I was too frightened to notice."

"But you did afterward."

"I never saw him again."

"Do! Go on."

"There are several compartments in



HE SNATCHED MY LIFE PRESERVER.

those foreign coaches. A gentleman got out through a window at the front end of the car I was on and made his way toward me. I felt a strong arm about my waist—oh, how relieved I felt!—and glancing upward looked into one of the finest, bravest faces I ever saw in a man."

"I have heard that Mr. Dorrance is very handsome," remarked one of the ladies, sotto voce, to another.

"The gentleman," continued the speaker, "held on to me, encouraging me with a deep, sonorous voice that did not indicate the slightest fear or excitement, and somehow, under his protecting care, I felt perfectly safe. We clung there together till the train had passed over about ten miles, when we reached a station. I got into the compartment to which I was clinging, and my preserver returned to his own. I did not see him again till the train reached Dijon, when he handed out a fat woman and five children, disappearing with them in the station. He was evidently married."

"How unfortunate!" exclaimed several ladies at once.

"Two romances nipped in the bud."

"I pursued my journey to Paris and thence to London, where I attempted to engage passage on the next steamer to sail for New York. Every room was taken, and I must be at home within ten days to attend the wedding of my dearest friend, for whom I was to be bridesmaid. So the day the steamer sailed I went aboard, trusting that some passenger might miss reaching the steamer on time or something like that, but when I went to the purser after we were off he told me there was not a vacant room, not even a vacant berth in the ship.

"A gentleman was standing at the purser's window waiting till I had got through with my questions and, hearing what I said and seeing my disappointment, raised his hat, not with the flourish of a parvenu, but to the manner born, and with a sympathetic expression in his glorious eyes said:

"'Will you do me the honor to accept my stateroom?'

"Of course I told him I wouldn't think of incommoding him and all that, but he insisted, and when the purser told him that one of the officers on the upper deck would for a consideration, give up his room to him I accepted the sacrifice."

"This is going to be delightful," was whispered from one lady to another.

"I was seasick and didn't leave my room till one night—there was a dense fog—I lay listening to the whistle repeat 'toot-toot' every few moments I heard a crash and felt the ship careen. I knew at once that there had been a collision and, springing up, put on what I could find, seized a life preserver and ran on deck. One of the first persons I met was the gentleman who had so kindly given up his room to me."

"Ah, he saved you! I have always heard you married a brave man!"

"He did no such thing. He snatched my life preserver and ran away with it."

"Oh, dear! How disappointing!"

"I made my way to one of the boats. An officer was superintending its loading, keeping the men back and putting in the women and children. The man who had taken my life preserver, crazed with fear, tried to force his way into the boat, and the officer was obliged to threaten to shoot him to keep him away.

"The boat was filled before I could get into it, and I was obliged to seek safety in another direction. There were not boats enough for half those on board, and before I could get a place in one the last had been lowered and pulled away from the ship.

"Oh, that awful night! I looked about for something to float me—for the vessel was rapidly sinking—but could get only a steamer chair. It seemed to me not that the vessel was sinking, but that the water was rising to engulf me. Slowly it came up like a hungry monster stealing upon its prey; then suddenly the bow pitched, the stern rose, and I was engulfed in the cold black ocean.

"When I came up I was still clinging to the steamer chair. But I knew it would not serve me long, for I was rapidly becoming benumbed with the cold. I was losing consciousness when I felt a hand seize my arm and I was dragged on to an improvised raft. Then I felt a rope being placed around my body and knew that I was being lashed to my support. But there was no one on it with me. Presently I felt a pair of lips pressed against mine. I opened my eyes and saw a man's face. He had fiery red hair. That's all I gathered of his appearance—his hair was very red. Then I felt my raft slightly lightened. I knew that a man had pulled me on to the raft, and, since it would not bear two, he had got off into the water. I lost consciousness with the knowledge that he had given his life for mine."

"Poor fellow!" remarked the hostess.

"The wireless telegraph had called for help, and I was picked up by a boat from a steamer that had come to our rescue. As I was carried on to the deck from the boat who should I see standing with his hands in his pockets looking at me but"—

"Your preserver?"

"The red headed man. He saw me and blushed. Coming to me, he said, 'I beg your pardon for what I did.'

"'What do you mean?' I asked.

"'The kiss. I didn't expect to ever see you again.'

"'I know you didn't. You expected to give your life for mine. Come here.'

"He came to me shrinkingly as a child expecting a whipping. I threw my arms about his neck and cried with my lips against his."

"Ladies," said the hostess, the speaker having finished, "we don't need to ask who is Mr. Dorrance. It's plain enough."

The story teller did not deny the fact, and the party broke up.

"That was a very affecting story of Mrs. Dorrance's," said a lady to another.

"Very. But what a pity it was that he had a red head!"

Hotter Than Our Sun.

Scientific research shows that the sun has a temperature of 4,950 degrees; Aldebaran, that beautiful star in Taurus, 5,150 degrees; the polar star, 5,200 degrees, and the dog star Sirius, 7,500 degrees. This goes to show that the sun is undoubtedly one of the coldest of the stars. It also is evidence that the absurdly low temperatures of the earth which living things here consider hot are, as compared with the heavenly bodies, regions of frigidity. Even the electric furnace, with its 3,500 degrees of heat, is as ice compared with temperatures in the dog star and the others.

A Wise Arab.

Joseph Abou, an Arabian doctor of great fame in scientific matters, upon being asked to solve a difficult problem candidly confessed that he had no knowledge whatever of the subject.

"How is this?" said the man who had put the problem to him. "Does not the caliph pay you for your knowledge?"

"Certainly," answered the doctor. "He pays me for my knowledge, for all his treasures, wonderful as they are, would not be enough to pay me for my ignorance."

CHATHAM, ONT., April 3rd, 1913.

"Some two years ago, I was a great sufferer from Indigestion. One day my eye caught a billboard of "Fruit-a-tives" and I said to myself "if Fruit-a-tives will build me up like that, it is good enough for me". I bought some. After taking these wonderful tablets for only three weeks, I found myself wonderfully improved. In a short time longer, I cured myself entirely. My case was no light one, either, Gas would often form in my stomach and I was in daily fear that it would get around my heart and kill me. "Fruit-a-tives" is the only remedy for Indigestion".

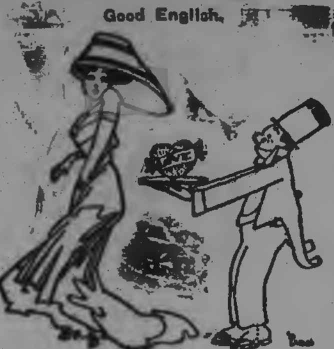
Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN M. SMITH

Good English.



"I offer you my love. Can you return it?"

"Oh, yes, with pleasure. I have no use for it."

Disciplined.

When you and I were young, lad,
And life was all untried,
When good was good and bad was bad
And there was naught beside,
As happy as the nestlings are,
We laughed and cried and worked
And raided mother's cooky jar,
And when we could we shirked.

But you and I are changed, lad.
Life's page shows blot on blot.
The good we find is oft half bad,
And bad with good is shot.
We see the mingling of the streams
Of hate and love and truth
And sadly mourn the vanished dreams,
The light and faith of youth.

The Repeaters.

"We must do something to cure the divorce evil."

"Is it an evil?"

"What would you call it?"

"It's a habit with some folks."

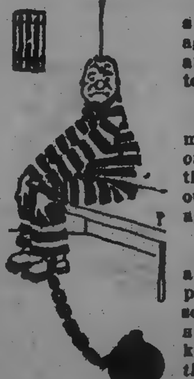
PERT PARAGRAPHS.

Money is good for many things, but it doesn't help a bad disposition much.

You can forgive a bore for anything except making you hate yourself.

Some men think that a good job falls far short of being better than none.

Temperament without money can get no action on itself.



The old, old story is told again every time anybody is found to stand for it.

The man who makes a business of recreation is the most worn-out creature imaginable.

An umbrella is a bit of personal property that sometimes makes a business of keeping lent all the year.

There is no danger of kidnaping becoming fashionable if it can be shown to be unprofitable.

It is often as hard to understand why some men butt in as it is undesirable to have them do so.

Being lazy is extremely uncomfortable for those who aren't.

Being satisfied is all right provided you are the satisfied one.

Her chatter is only used as an evidence that a pretty girl is around.

The Swastika.

It is interesting to know the meaning of the sign of the swastika so often made into pins and badges. It runs thus: "By this sign may all blessings attend thy footsteps. May the four winds from the four corners of the earth blow gently upon thee. May they ever bring thee good luck and prosperity. May thy life be long and joyful and may perfect peace find thee at last."

For the Children

Prince Henry of England In Scottish Costume.

Prince Henry of England, third son of King George V., has just completed his first term as a student at Eton college. He is now fourteen years old, and a handsome lad he is. When he went to Eton last fall he received no favors, although his royal parents did their best to have an exception made in his case. Their desires, however, did not prevail, and the young prince was treated as any of the sons of dukes, marquises, lords and commoners. He had to make tea, run errands and even black boots for the older scholars, as is the time immemorial custom at Eton. It is to the young prince's credit that he performed his duties cheerfully and won the friendship of his comrades. He is known simply as "Henry" to his more intimate friends, while with the general run of students (he being in the low class) he was addressed as "Scug." This shows that there is very little room for snobbery in Eton college.

Intelligent Savages.

It is a common matter for people to speak of savages as though they had no brain. A scientist lecturing recently in London was one of a party to Torres strait, and he found that the head measurement of the natives was just about the same as that of the average junior college man in civilized countries.

In the interior of Borneo the scientists came across a savage tribe who live in houses 100 feet long, raised on twenty foot poles, with chambers for each family and a long corridor where the community life was carried on.

These dwellings proved beyond question that the natives have a keen sense of the value of air and cleanliness and their kindly social relations that they had a highly developed sense of brotherhood.

Riddles.

Why would a woman lose her religion if she changed her sex? Because she would be a he then (heathen).

My first is a point, my second a span. In my whole often ends the greatness of man. Dotage.

Why can you never buy a new chronometer? Because it must always be a second hand one.

What word is that to which if you add a syllable it will be shorter? Short (short-er).

Why is it better to be burned than to have your head cut off? Because a hot steak is better than a cold chop.

Curious Facts About Diamonds.

A file cannot scratch a real diamond, but will quickly spoil an imitation. A sapphire is the next hardest stone to a diamond and is a better test than a file.

Thrust a diamond stone into a bowl of water and the stone will glitter through the liquid, but an imitation stone loses all its brilliancy under water.

Place one drop of water upon the face of a diamond and touch it with the point of a pencil. The drop will keep its globular form and the stone remain dry. If the brilliant is an imitation the water at once spreads out.
